The modern boot lace is anything but a luxury. It is nearly always just too long or a little too short, and, although made flat, it soon becomes curled with a little wear. In the old days laces were made of calfskin, and nearly every farmer was an expert. He would cut a disk of leather three or four inches in diameter, stick the point of a sharp knife blade in a board, place the thumb nail the thickness of a match from it and quickly draw the string through the opening, the perimeter being reduced the thickness of a match at every measure of the circumference. Then the square string was rolled between the sole of the shoe and the floor till perfectly round, after which it was greased with tallow. Such a lace would last for months. Round laces are now made of fiber, but their shine soon wears off, giving them a much worn appearance.

How to Enjoy Whist.

"How can one learn to enjoy the game of whist?"—Aspirant.

Get yourself roped into a game as partner to some one who helped Hoyle write his book. The other two players must also be experts. Start in pleasantly to enliven the game with a few well chosen anecdotes, now and then making the wrong play. After your partner has slapped your ears and sworn at you and put the black curse on you and all your ancestry and called you a fool a few times you will awake to the real joy of the gentle and intellectual game. We have tried this several times, but not at frequent intervals, and we can guarantee its efficacy.—Chicago News.

Rossini's Watch.

In 1824 Charles X. presented Rossini, the composer, with a repeating watch, studded with diamonds, and playing two of Rossini's melodies. Nobody in Bologna could clean the watch, so it was sent in the care of the tenor, Fabiano, to Paris, where it was destroyed in a fire. Pilvee, the watchmaker, thereupon made a second watch, the exact counterpart of the first, except that the diamonds were false, and Rossini, who never discovered this pious fraud, wore the trinket all his life. On his death it passed to a relative, whose son sold it to an Englishman. It is said to contain an excellent portrait in enamel of Rossini as he was in 1824.

English and French Husbands.

When an English wife has hysterics her husband is immediately bored and goes to his club or else he says: "You are not very well, my dear. Shall I send for a doctor?" The Frenchman, au contraire, has hysterics too. The Frenchman may fight with his wife, love her, hate her, kiss her or kill her, but indifferent to her, superior to her, never!—Pol de Leon in London World.

The Truth of It.

Teacher—Johnny, can you define for us the difference between "caution" and "cowardice?" Johnny — Yessum. When you're scart to go out on a boat and stay home for fear it'll sink and the boat comes in all right, it's "cowardice." Teacher — Well? Johnny — And if you're scart and stay home and the boat does sink, then it's "caution."

THE TYRANNY OF CLOTHES.

Eve the Only Woman on Record Who Dressed as She Pleased.

Clothes and all their little accessories are without doubt the invention of the devil.

The other day I was at a garden party, and there I realized, as perhaps never before, writes Mrs. John Lane in The Fortnightly Review, the appalling nature of the top hat. In towns one accept it as one does motor omnibuses and traction engines, but when it meanders among trees, and does the polite with sloppy ices and tea that spills its way to its destination, one's soul cries out against it. The Achilles heel of a man is his hat. He must guard that as he does his reputation, for it is at once his strength and his weakness. It would hurt an archbishop less in the eyes of the public to commit a crime than to wear his hat on the back of his sacred head.

It is the aim of all human creatures to look alike. If it were not so each would dress as he pleased. As it is we spend half our life trying to look like everybody else. To be conspicuous is nearly a crime, and for this reason we so frantically pursue the fashions.

Eve is probably the only woman on record who could dress just as she pleased, and for that reason she is the only woman we know of since the world began, who had leisure to cultivate her mind.

To think of the amount of time a woman wastes on her clothes? Why, if men were to spend as much time at their tailors or buying their neckties the world's work would never be done. When one looks back on one's life—one's feminine life—it is melancholy to realize how much of one's troubles are owing to one's clothes.

I remember the despairing cry of a woman looking hopelessly through her wardrobe: "I should have been a better woman if I had been born with feathers!" How well I knew just what she meant! She was examining disconsolately a shabby white satin dress—the kind of satin that betrays its plebeian cotton origin. "I wish I were a guinea hen with respectable speckled feathers!" she cried, as she gave a discouraged slam to the wardrobe door. "Then I wouldn't use up three-quarters of my intellect getting the wrong things cheap!"

Sunday clothes are the most tyrannical in the world! It takes a heroic woman to go to church in anything but her best. Sub-consciousness is the precious faculty bestowed on a privileged few of hearing the sermon, and at the same time studying the hats. I have known a tulle dress—the sweetest and most innocent-looking thing in the world—go out on an icy cold winter night—would go, you know!—and kill the girl inside.

I assure those feminine pioneers who clamor for their rights that above everything else they should demand an equality of pockets. Try to imagine a man doing his errands with a purse, handkerchief, and shopping list in one hand, the tail of his skirt in the other, his umbrella under one arm, meanwhile making an effort to keep his head clear for business problems, and at the same time keeping a wary eye out for motors. He couldn't do it! If the worthy ladies who have so much enthusiasm, and who will interrupt our great orators while they are busy being eloquent, would only demand a law requiring every woman to have sixteen pockets, what a splendid service they would do their bothered sex.

Once I met a man who was lured from the joys of Piccadilly, just as he stood, in frock coat and top hat, to a rural retreat, five miles from a railway station. "Good-bye," he said, in an impolite burst of rapture. "I fear my soul has not been in harmony with nature." "Don't blame your soul," said I, as we shook hands; "your soul was all right, but you had on the wrong hat."

Yes, when one comes to [illegible] it, men, too, are the [illegible] of clothes. Question the taste of a man's necktie or his gloves, and see him writhe. Say you don't like the color of his new suit, and you rouse the slumbering lion. Have you ever, in the pursuit of your social studies, fastened your eyes on a man's boots? It causes a man unexplained suffering.

Is not every woman in the clutches of a little private serpent who urges her to want the things she oughtn't to have? It is all that is left to her of the Garden of Eden except Adam, and, really, the less said about Adam the better.

The only solace I have in the tyranny under which I languish is that Adam languishes also. I rejoice to watch him struggle into a pair of tight new gloves. I was so pleased the other day at a dinner party when Adam came bashfully down in a dress coat and shepherd's plaid trousers—the guardian angel who had packed his kit bag having been a little absent-minded.

And yet, after all's said and done, Eve is to blame. There is no getting over that. But how she has suffered ever since! Consider the tragedy of every milliner's bill, and the awful moment when she has to confess to Adam! If she had only let that apple alone!

Sir William Crookes' Work.

Sir William Crookes, who has discovered a process of extracting nitric acid from the atmosphere, is a celebrated British scientist, who also is the discoverer of the "tube" that is the basis of Roentgen's rays. He was born in London seventy-five years ago and in his youth took a course in the Royal College of Chemistry. At the age of 22 he was appointed superintendent of the Radcliffe observatory at Oxford. Prof. Crookes is the inventor of the otheoscope, and he discovered the new metal thallium while examining the residue from a sulphuric acid works.

The Real Sufferer.

Mrs. Hatterson—My husband has had a very severe attack of indigestion.

Mrs. Catterson—Did he suffer very much?

Mrs. Hatterson—Yes; almost as much as I did.

THE LOOMS OF INDIA.

Wonderful Work That Has Been Done By the Natives—Almost Impalpable Tissues of Muslin.

The manufacture of cotton in India dates back to its earliest history. There are allusions to it connected with India in the Bible. In old Sanskrit records mention is made of it being used in India nearly 3,000 years ago. At the time of Alexander's invasion of India the dress of the Hindoos was described as consisting largely of calicoes, pure white or having figures. Among the imports into Europe during the first century, enumerated by the elder Pliny, muslins and calicoes from India are described as of superior quality.

Perhaps the earliest notice of cotton is by Herodotus, about 450 B.C., who speaks of the trees of India bearing as their fruit fleeces more delicate and beautiful than those of sheep and of the Indians using them for the manufacture of cloth. From India cotton cloth was gradually introduced into Greece, Egypt and Sicily before the Christian era. Cotton awnings were used in the theatre at the Apollinarian games, and Caesar afterward covered the Roman forum with them, as also the sacred way from his own house to the Capitolian hill, which is said to have appeared more wonderful than the gladiatorial exhibition itself.

The cotton fabrics of the Hindoos have been excelled in fineness and excellence only by the productions of the most perfect machines of modern times. By these people were made the fine muslins known to the Greeks by a name which referred to their coming from the borders of the Ganges.

The City of Calicut, on the Malabar coast, which, with Surat, was an ancient cotton mart for the supply of the more western nations of Asia, gave its name to the variety of the fabric known as "calico." Some qualities of these were "so fine that one could hardly feel them in the hand, and the thread when spun is scarcely discernible." Dacca, once a considerable and wealthy city, lying to the northeast of Calcutta, sent out from its looms in the early centuries those wonderful tissues of fine muslins made from a staple too short to be woven by any machinery, named on account of their fineness "Abrawan," or "flowing water," "Shabman," or "evening dew."

Even after the advent of the English in India there is an instance recorded regarding the fineness of a piece of muslin twenty yards long and one-quarter yard wide, weighing only fourteen ounces. With the rudest of implements the Hindoo women spun those almost impalpable threads and wove fabrics that for fineness of quality have never been successfully imitated elsewhere. With the decay of the native Hindoo courts, the chief customers, the demand ceased, and the manufacture has entirely stopped. Dacca to-day exhibits little more than a ruin.

Weaving in India divides itself into two branches—hand loom and power loom weaving. The proportion of hand loom made cloth to power loom is fully two to one—that is, there is about twice as much hand loom cloth made in India as there is power loom made cloth.

The native hand loom is a most primitive affair. The Indian hand loom as it now is is the same as it was some thirty centuries ago. The old English fly shuttle hand loom of a century ago is ages in advance of the hand loom now in general use by the native weavers throughout India. Of course there are a number of fly shuttle looms in successful use in certain localities — for instance, those now in the mission schools, first introduced by the Danish or German Lutheran missionaries in Madras, and though in some instances they have met with a certain degree of success, yet they have not succeeded in inducing the native weaver to take to the "fly shuttle" in the same businesslike way as was done in Europe and in America in the days of our grandparents.

The power loom can make cloth, if not possibly better, certainly cheaper, than the hand loom, but on account of the disability under which manufacture labors in India the power loom is not worked to its full productive capacity.

Outside competition and advancement in the art of weaving will eventually force the improvement of the Indian power loom weaver and with the coming of that condition will witness the beginning of the end of the hand loom industry. It is claimed by the more conservative that it is perhaps well that India should keep to the hand looms, but this is the same economic question that has so often arisen in other and more advanced nations. America and European countries have had to face it before now, and as they have solved it, so may India.—New York Herald.

The Island of Jersey.

There was a time when a reverend bishop always walked from France to Jersey on a plank. This sounds somewhat like a modern Blondin performance, and one could imagine the crowd that would assemble to witness such a feat. In reality it was an event of common occurrence during the sixth century. Existing documents relative to the monastery of Mont St. Michel, in Normandy, reveal the fact that the island was separated from the French district of Coutances by a narrow stream only and that the stream was bridged by a single plank. The inhabitants of Jersey were compelled to keep this plank in good repair, for it was used by the bishop of the diocese when he made his periodical visits to that portion of his flock, and the worthy prelate desired to make the crossing in safety. In the year 709 and again in the year 824 there were seismic disturbances, called by ancient writers "cataclysms," which submerged towns and forests on the French coast, thus widening the stretch of water and making the separation of Jersey more complete.—London Standard.

CROSS-EYES.

As soon as any child shows the least symptom of cross-eyes it should be taken to an eyesight specialist. This will apply if the child is only one year old. The parents should never be told to "wait and see if the child will outgrow it." The result of such neglect is that the child generally becomes blind in one eye, and after a few years of non-use the eye can never be used for sight again, even if it is partially straightened by an operation. Eyes thus operated on never mate well together. Exercises, for the two eyes when the child is young, combined with a careful correction by glasses, will generally straighten the eyes and save the sight of both. Children as young as two years have been fitted with complete success. We make a specialty of children's eyes. Consultation free.

Belleville As She Will Be In A.D. 2000

LADIES OF ST. ANDREW'S LITERARY GUILD FURNISHED AMUSING ENTERTAINMENT LAST NIGHT.

Despite the inclement weather last night, there was a good-sized audience in St. Andrew's Church lecture room to hear the Ladies of the Literary Guild in their amusing entertainment entitled, "Civic affairs in Belleville as they will be at the dawn of the 21st century." As may be surmised, the dramatis personae were a Lady Mayoress and the City Fathers—or Mothers—this matter is rather confusing. Anyhow, there was a City Council, and the members were all ladies. It was noteworthy that there was very little unnecessary talking, and in this respect the ladies set a fine example to the male aldermen of the present day. Previous to the "City Council" meeting, there was an enjoyable programme of vocal and instrumental numbers.

Col. Ponton was chairman, as the pastor, Rev. R. S. Laidlaw, was absent from the city.

Mrs. (Col.) Campbell played a brilliant piano solo; Mrs. Ransford (nee Ponton) sang "Douglas Gordon," in fine style; Mr. V. Doyle sang "Sweet Nancy," and for an encore "The Sweetest Flower that Grows," and Mr. K. Taylor sang "Long Live the King." This completed the musical part of the programme, and the members of the Council were ushered in and took their seats.

Mrs. (Col.) Ponton was Mayoress and wore as the insignia of office a large chain, much more massive in appearance than that used by Mayor Sulman. The Lady Councillors were all attired in gowns appropriately trimmed, and on their heads reposed "mortar boards."

Miss Marjorie Waters was Clerk and opened the Council proceedings somewhat after the style of opening a High Court.

The Mayoress announced that, as this was the final meeting of the Council, she would give a brief synopsis of the many things that had been accomplished during the year past. The synopsis showed that each department was headed by a specialist, the convenor of the Parks Committee being a botanist; the convenor of the Sanitary department, a doctor, etc. The various chairmen of the Council committees, called convenors, were then called upon and each in turn read a paper of considerable length, dealing with matters which came under their supervision. The papers showed that much thought and time had been spent in their preparation.

Miss Bessie Waters, convener of the Sanitary Committee, reported that the death rate was lower than in former years, owing to a perfect system of sewage, and the passage of a by-law compelling every person in the city to take a bath at least once a day.

Mrs. E. Fairfield, convener of the Electrical Committee, presented a report which showed that electrical appliances were used for almost everything, there even being electrical moving sidewalks. All communication was by means of electrical appliances, and there was now no such thing as waiting weeks to get a letter from the post office.

Miss Maggie Keith, convener of the Church and Charity Committee, referred to the fact that denominationalism had been done away with; all citizens were worshipping in one building, and people were brought to church by various electrical machines. A prohibition enactment existed over the whole Dominion, and all was peaceful.

Miss Wardrope presented her report as convener of Roads and Industries. This showed that all the principal thoroughfares of the city had been properly paved and there was no tearing up of streets. Factories of great magnitude were in existence, and a most valuable dry dock had recently been discovered at a place that was once called Kingston.

Mrs. T. Shanks, convener of the Fire and Inundation Committee, presented a report which showed that buildings were so constructed that there was scarcely ever a fire. Air motors were used if a fire occurred in a very high building, and these air motors were supplied with chemicals, which extinguished the blaze.

Miss C. Urquhart, convener of the Educational Committee, reported that all Boards of Education were done away with, and the members superannuated. No clergymen, architects or newspaper men were needed nowadays in connection with school matters. It was found necessary to make a sweeping change as, about 100 years ago, owing to a cumbersome Board, it was sometimes three months before a meeting was held, owing to lack of a quorum.

Mrs. (Rev.) R. S. Laidlaw was convener of Parks and Public Amusements. Her paper showed that Massassaga Park had been improved; that Zwick's island gravel was not being placed upon the street, but the island had been beautified and made a lovely park. Quinte Park, formerly known as Victoria Park, was a delight to all. Under an Act of Parliament all railways were compelled to build their lines two miles away from the bay front.

Mrs. W. Cochrane was the convener of the Complaints Committee, and her paper stated that all complaints had been satisfactorily settled. The electric lights had not given satisfaction, but this had been remedied. Food inspection had also been greatly improved and was well looked after.

After Ald. Burrows had spoken a few words of a congratulatory nature in reference to the papers, and ex-Mayor Johnson had supplemented the remarks, the proceedings were closed by Ald. Burrows singing "Rule Britannia" and the assembly singing the National Anthem.

"The Message of the Church to the World."

ELOQUENT ADDRESS BY REV. J. P. WILSON IN BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

The dedicatory services in connection with the new Baptist church were continued last evening. A fair congregation was present, and the principal speaker was Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Bridge St. Church, who spoke on "The Message of the Church to the World." Rev. Mr. Wilson's address was conceded by those who heard it to be an ideal one. The term church, in modern parlance, he said, meant an organized discipleship of those loyal to Jesus Christ. The speaker dealt with the fact that the church must be missionary in its aims, or it forfeited the right to exist. The primary object of the Christian missionary church should be to elevate the individual and thereby raise his status of civilization. Rev. Mr. Wilson's address was listened to with deep attention. The Bridge St. quartette sang, with deep sympathy and fine taste, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

The regular church prayer meeting will be held to-night, and on Thursday evening Rev. A. H. Drumm, of John St. church, will speak on "The Message of the Church to the Nation."

York Loan Matters

PROSECUTION OF JOSEPH PHILLIPS SEEMS TO BE IN A MUDDLE.

Toronto, March 12. — Realizing on the assets of the York County Loan and Savings Company and the prosecution of the president, Joseph Phillips, are found by the Attorney-General's Department to be propositions that are meeting with widely different results.

The precise instructions that were to be followed during the investigation of the charges against Phillips in the Police Court have plainly not had the desired result. When the piles of folios of evidence were sent over to the County Crown Attorney, Mr. H. L. Drayton, he and the chairman of the Sessions found the enquiry to be of the blunderbuss kind. All sorts of matters were touched upon, but none were made sufficiently final to permit specific charges to be made. The result was that the numerous witnesses had to be re-examined at wearisome length before the grand jury, and, of course, under circumstances not as favorable as under a magistrate.

The outcome of the matter may be the arraignment of Phillips on charges other than those upon which he was committed from the Police Court. The time that has elapsed finds many of the witnesses scattered, and keeping in touch with them is no small matter. In order to ensure their attendance when wanted Mr. Drayton is said to have had some of them under subpoena a month before court opened.

A Pleasing Function

An interesting and delightful reception was tendered Mrs. John Williams, the President of the "Y" W. C. T. U., by the members of that society yesterday afternoon. The reception was held at the home of Miss Lucy Holton, one of the vice-presidents of the society. The proceedings were opened by the usual devotional exercises. Vocal music was rendered by Miss Holton and Miss Frances Ridley, and several reports of the various branches of the society's work were read and discussed. An interesting address was given by Mrs. Williams, describing some incidents and scenes in connection with her recent trip to Jamaica. Toward the close of the programme, Miss E. Farley read an address to Mrs. Williams, expressing the thankfulness of the members of the "Y" for her safe return home and also their pleasure at having her with them again. An informal tea was served and the kindness and attention of Mrs. Holton and Miss Holton was much appreciated.

The Railways and The Water Front.

MR. MIKEL CLAIMS THE CREDIT FOR INDUCING MESSRS. MACKENZIE & MANN TO INCLUDE BELLEVILLE IN THEIR SURVEY.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I have been asked to give some information to the public re the proposed extension of the Canadian Northern Railway and the C.P.R. through Belleville.

The Canadian Northern road map, which has been approved, shows the line coming from Toronto east along the lake front to a point a few miles west of Trenton, then northeasterly to Ottawa, passing about four miles to the north of Belleville. I succeeded in getting an interview with Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann, who own the controlling interests in that railway, and laid before them the advantages to their railway of coming to Belleville and from here continuing to Ottawa. They both appeared favorably impressed with the proposition and intimated that if it would not affect the general line disadvantageously, and involve too difficult and expensive engineering problems, there was a likelihood of it being adopted. They mentioned reasons why it was important to have strong help from Belleville before the Railway Committee. Mr. Mackenzie suggested a bonus from Belleville, mentioning that Edmonton had given them $30,000 to enter that city. He also said they were thinking of running their line still further north of Belleville. I replied that a bonus was out of the question, and that the C.P.R. was coming through the city without a bonus. He replied "You are not so sure of that, as the C.P.R. have no charter for that line." From the above it will be apparent that it is not absolutely certain that Belleville need fear that either of these railroads will disturb the water front. It may be that it is better in the interests of the city to do without additional railways than have the water front disturbed, and if the citizens so conclude these railways can find a course a few miles to the north of Belleville. It may be noted that the whole water front of Toronto is traversed with railway tracks, and, while it no doubt occasions difficulties, they seem to get along with it. A meeting of representatives from the municipalities from Belleville to Whitby was recently held at Bowmanville, to consider the route of these railways, which I attended, and there was not a word from any of the representatives in opposition to the crossing of the water fronts by these railways.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

The plot of "Shadows of the Past," Lincoln J. Carter's great emotional play, which makes it appearance at the Carman next Monday, March 18, hinges on a point of law—the question of the guardianship of a minor. Lincoln J. Carter sprung a big surprise when he produced "Shadows of the Past" at his theatre in Chicago, the Criterion, this season. The flattering press comments and the enthusiastic receptiion given it during its Chicago run, together with the big business it has done so far this season, leads Mr. Carter to reasonably believe that "Shadows of the Past" will make its place as the legitimate successor of the great emotional plays of the past generation.

Died In Campbellford

Mr. Charles Smith, miller, of the village of Campbellford, who was known to many in this city, died on Monday. Deceased was 68 years of age and had been for many years one of the prominent citizens of that thriving town. He was for years a member of the Council and had been Mayor of the town. Deceased was a prominent member of the Masonic craft, under whose auspices he will be buried. Mrs. Smith has been dead for some time. A family survives.

Bowel Troubles

Liver pills, cathartics, mineral waters, often make Constipation worse. They merely irritate the bowels and force them to move—stop taking purgatives and the bowels become "tight" again.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the one certain cure for Constipation because their action is upon the liver, "Fruit-a-tives" are a liver tonic. They stimulate the secretions of bile by the liver, this bile causes the bowels to move in the natural, regular way and completely cures Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives are fruit juices with tonics and antiseptics added. In "Fruit-a-tives" one atom of bitter replaces one atom of sweet in the fruit juices, forming a new compound, which is many times more active, medicinally, than the fruit juices could possibly be. 50c. a box—$2.50 for 6 boxes. CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Cattle Steady, Hogs Easier in U. S. Markets.

Toronto Live Stock.

Toronto, March 12.—Receipts of live stock at the city market since Tuesday, as reported by the railways, were 60 car loads composed of 925 cattle, 541 hogs, 346 sheep and 154 calves.

The quality of fat cattle was much the same as has been coming for some time, a few good to choice lots and many unfinished.

Exporters.

A few light exporters were offered and bought for butchers' purposes at $5.25 per cwt. Bulls for export sold at $3.75 to $4.50 per cwt.

Butchers.

There was a good demand for butchers' cattle.

Maybee & McDonell sold 3 light exporters, 1250 lbs each, for butchers' purpose at $5.25, and Maybee, Wilson & Hall sold 12 picked butchers', 1140 lbs each, at $5.10, which was the top for cattle of butcher weight. Choice picked lots, $4.70 to $5; fair to good, $4.40 to $4.70; medium butchers' and good cows sold at $3.75 to $4.20; fair to good cows at $3.30 to $3.60; canners and common rough butchers' at $1.50 to $3 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

There were none offered, at least there were none reported as being on sale as such, altho there were many sold as fat that ought to have gone back to the farmer to finish.

Milch Cows.

About 40 milkers and springers sold at $30 to $55 each, and one was reported as being sold at $60.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves were plentiful, that is there was a large number of dairy "bobs," which caused the general price to be quoted lower, but a choice, well finished new milk fed calf would bring as high a price as has been quoted this winter. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Export ewes sold at $4.73 to $5.25, rams at $3.50 to $4.50 per cwt., lambs of good quality $6.50 to $7.25, common lambs $5.50 to $6.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted selects at $6.80 and lights and fats at $6.55.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 12.—Cattle active and firm; prices unchanged. Veals, receipts, 100 head; active and 25c lower; $4.25 to $9.25. Hogs, receipts, 1400 head; fairly active; pigs, steady; others 5c to 10c lower; heavy and mixed, $7.35; yorkers, $7.35 to $7.40. Sheep and lambs, receipts, 2000 head; active; lambs, $5 to $8.20, a few $8.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, March 12.—Cattle—Receipts, about 4000; market steady; plain to best steers, $4.25 to $6.85; heifers, $2.65 to $5.25; cows, $3.25 to $5; bulls, $3.25 to $4.60; calves, $2.50 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $2.90 to $5.25.

Hogs—Receipts, about 21,000; market 5c lower; choice, heavy, shipping, $6.95 to $6.97½; light butchers, $6.95 to $6.97½; light, mixed, $6.90 to $6.95; choice, light, $6.95 to $7; packing, $6.50 to $6.95; pigs, $4.50 to $6.80; bulk of sales, $6.90 to $6.95.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, about 15,000; market steady to strong; sheep, $3.25 to $6.25; yearlings, $6 to $6.75; lambs, $7 to $7.85.

Rather Soupy.

Stubb—That barber told me a remarkable yarn while he was shaving me. He said one day he shaved the "ossified man" from the museum, and sparks of fire leaped from the razor.

Penn—Hm! Did you swallow the yarn?

Stubb—No, confound it, I swallowed the lather!—Detroit Tribune.

An Important Question.

While little Christabel and her yet smaller sister were playing her mother was announcing to grandma, "Our neighbor, Mrs. P., has a new baby."

Instantly Christabel turned in eager excitement.

Simply Swallow.

MANY EAT AS THOUGH THEY WERE BLIND AND THEIR TONGUES CUT OUT.

Dyspepsia is built on confidence—too much confidence in the ability of your stomach to digest anything and everything you put into it.

In this age we have developed speed in every line of action, and we have also developed speed in mastication.

We don't take time to eat right, and sometimes we do not eat the right kind of food. Sometimes we carry our business to our meals and as a result eat mechanically. We eat as though we were blind and our tongues cut out. We simply swallow.

The result is that the food we eat is half chewed, and lies like a lump of lead on the stomach.

You may deny to yourself that you abuse your stomach, but when you get a bloaty feeling, you can't deny you've got it.

When you get brash, eructations burning sensations, bloating, aversion to food, loss of appetite, belching and other kindred ailments, there is not much use asking yourself, for the time being, why you suffer. The fact is you've got these ailments and the question of the hour is how to get rid of them at once, so that at your next meal you may be able to sit down and look at your meal straight in the face—with a keen appetite and a smile, and enjoy thoroughly everything you eat.

Just one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest an ordinary meal, without the help of the stomach. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. The strongest stomach couldn't do the work any better than one of these wonderful little Tablets can do it.

Each tablet contains the strongest digestive agents it is possible to obtain.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a patent medicine. We come out and say just what is in them—hydrastis, golden seal, lactose and aseptic pepsin. They are recommended by 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada.

And they are recommended by everyone who uses them—they can't help it, for they immediately invigorate the stomach by letting it take a rest, they strengthen the gastric juice and cause the appetite to become keen and regular.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will surely destroy dyspepsia, brash, belching, that "lump of lead" feeling, burning sensations, indigestion, loss of appetite, and aversion to food.

Have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets handy where you can take one or two after each meal. Then you will know what a blessing it is to have a good appetite and to get all the good possible out of everything you eat. You'll feel rosy and sweet. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth, 50c.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 85 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SHIP BLOWN TO PIECES

Eighty Sailors Killed and Hundreds Injured.

Great Battleship At Toulon Was Full of Explosives—Was Caused By Bursting of Torpedo—Rear Admiral Injured—Captain Among the Dead—Rescuers Unable to Approach.

Toulon, France, March 13.—The powder magazine on board the French battleship Jena blew up yesterday afternoon, resulting in the death of Capt. Adigard, her commander; Capt. Vernier, chief of staff of the Mediterranean squadron, and eighty bluejackets, and frightfully injuring Rear Admiral Manceron and hundreds of other men.

Naval circles are aghast at the catastrophe, and the public is stunned, coming as it does so soon after the loss of French submarine boat Lutin, in which sixteen men perished.

Practically the entire afterpart of the Jena was blown to pieces. The bodies of the victims were hurled through the air by a succession of explosions, and the panic-stricken workmen at the arsenal fled from the dock for their lives.

Scores of the men on board the Jena jumped either overboard or to the stone quays, and sustained serious injuries.

Cause of Accident.

The primary cause of the accident was the explosion of a torpedo. Why this instrument exploded is unknown, but the powder magazines of the Jena were set on fire and their contents, in exploding, ruined one of the finest vessels in the French navy.

The Jena had just undergone a final inspection of her hull and machinery. The latter had been completely overhauled preparatory to her joining the squadron to-morrow.

The crew was at its full strength, being composed of the rear admiral, twenty-four other officers and 630 men.

The magazines had been replenished recently and contained many tons of both smokeless and black powder, as well as a number of charges for torpedoes.

The crew of the Jena had just finished their midday meal, and had dispersed to various parts of the vessel. Most of the men were engaged in work connected with the approaching departure of the warship, but quite a large party had been detailed to attend a lecture which was being given forward.

The first detonation was extremely violent and shook the vessel fore and aft. It was followed by other shocks. The crew were thrown into a condition of panic. They rushed wildly hither and thither about the deck.

The men forward, who had been attending the lecture, clambered over the bulwarks and jumped down, some of them to the deck, and others to the stone quay. Many of these sustained fatal injuries.

In Blinding Smoke.

The hundreds of men below were enshrouded in blinding smoke, and, while they groped their way toward the exits, suffocating fumes caused many of them to fall unconscious.

In the meantime, the explosions had become more frequent, and the entire afterpart of the Jena caught fire. Shells and charges in the magazines continued to burst and masses of metal were hurled into the air, to fall everywhere about the decks and the arsenal.

These flying missiles demolished the torpedo shed, the engine works and the pumphouse nearby, and were a menace to the lives of those who made their way toward the ill-fated battleship to begin the work of rescue. Despite the danger, many heroic efforts were made to render assistance, but for the most part in vain. The Jena was aflame, which prevented approach.

Those who escaped death suffered severe injuries, and, becoming temporary insane, rushed frantically about the vicinity of the drydock until they fell exhausted.

Then, amidst clouds of dense smoke, the search for the dead and wounded was begun. The lower decks were littered with shattered and torn bodies, while the surrounding water was dotted with human fragments.

It will be impossible to ascertain the exact number of killed and wounded until to-morrow, when a roll-call will be held, many of the men having been completely blown to pieces, while others were incinerated.

The fire is practically now out, and, as soon as the battleship is free of the fumes, probably some time tonight, the work of bringing out the bodies will begin.

Kidnappers Demand $1,000.

New York, March 13.—Kidnappers written to a New York detective agency, apparently from some point in Canada, threatening to kill 4-year-old Horace N. Marvin, jr., of Kitts Hammock, Deleware, if $1,000 in gold is not paid to them at once.

This is the second letter from the alleged kidnappers, the first, which was received yesterday, demanding the payment at some obscure point in Canada.

Baby Immigrant Dies On Train.

Montreal, March 13.—Lewis Chittender has applied for a burial permit for his baby boy, which died on a train while coming from Halifax. The father says his wife and five children were exposed on the steamer Virginia more than two hours, and that an accident to the train prevented him from getting the child to a doctor in time.

Mob Held Up Car.

Louisville, Ky., March 13.—One of the eight cars sent out by the street railway company yesterday was held up by a mob of 200 persons. After a fight with the police on board, three arrests were made, and the car proceeded down town with several windows shattered. The suburban service has not been resumed.

AIDING YANKEE INDUSTRY.

Scotch Criticism of the Iron and Steel Bounties.

London, March 13.—Commenting on the revision of the Canadian tariff The Glasgow Herald refers to the "highly favored" iron and steel industry, and says:

"We see American capital and enterprise being applied to the production of commodities in Canada, and with the aid of bounties the Dominion Government pitting those commodities against the products of British capital and enterprise." Americans are not deterred, but stimulated to renewed efforts by the new directions of the anti-dumping clause of 1904, which The Herald hints is likely to be canceled.

Holds Up Canada As Warning.

London, March 13.—(C. A. P.)—Opposing the motion against Sunday trading in the House of Lords, Lord Lansdowne objected to any haste, remarking they had object lessons in attempts made by France and Canada to deal with the question.

Belgians and Dutch In Pact.

Brussels, March 13.—The Belgian and Dutch commissioners are drawing up the terms of a cordial understanding, amounting practically to an alliance, between the two countries.

Two Members Ill At Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 13.—Dr. Stockton, M.P., St. John, and George Grant, M.P., North Ontario, are ill.

Ex-President Dead.

Paris, March 13.—M. Casimir-Perier, ex-President of France, died suddenly at 11 o'clock Monday night of embolism of the heart, at his residence on the Rue Nitet here. The ex-President had not been well for two or three days, but it was supposed he was suffering from influenza. At about 5 o'clock Monday, an abrupt prostration occurred, the ex-President was taken to bed, Dr. Landousy was called in and the patient was given morphine injections. He did not respond to treatment and his death followed.

The Cabinet yesterday decided on a national funeral, but the family of the dead statesman declined the honor, in deference to his expressed wishes.

General Worried Odessa.

Odessa, March 13.—It developed yesterday that the recent transfer of Gen. Neplueff, commander of the fortress at Sevastopol, was due to the inhabitants of that city, who sent a petition, as their nerves were becoming shattered through the danger which they incurred whenever the commandant appeared in public.

Two attempts to kill the commandant failed, but many citizens were killed and wounded. Whenever he appeared in public there was a public scurry for shelter.

Promoters of Private Bills Must Adhere to Publicity Rules--Dates on Which Municipal Elections May Be Held--University to Get No More Grants For Some Years--Sitting With Closed Doors.

Toronto, March 14.—At the opening of the Legislature yesterday Mr. W. H. Hoyle (North Ontario), chairman of the Standing Orders Committee, took occasion to make the significant announcement that gross irregularities were being found day by day in petitions and private bills presented to his committee. "Promoters," declared Mr. Hoyle, "systematically disregard the regulations of the House regarding time of fyling and publicity of private bills." This should, in Mr. Hoyle's opinion, be penalized by the Government. Mr. Hoyle added that the irregularities were usually those of the legal fraternity. At the morning session five important bills had to be laid aside because they did not fulfill the requirements.

"I am thankful the chairman has called attention to this matter," observed the Prime Minister, Hon. J. P. Whitney. "It is well known that great laxity has long existed among those who promote private legislation. Some country lawyer, like I was, comes along and appeals to his member. He is told he has failed to comply with the regulations. 'Oh, well,' he declares 'get it through any old way,' and so it goes along. The greatest possible publicity should be given to all private bills that every imaginable interest affected may be assured of due consideration. It may as well be distinctly understood that this wholesome rule cannot be set aside."

Mr. Preston Takes His Seat.

Hon. J. P. Whitney and Dr. Smellie (Fort William) amid enthusiastic Government applause introduced Mr. W. A. Preston, to whom the courts recently awarded the Port Arthur seat. Mr. Preston sits on the end seat of the rear row to the right of the speaker.

Mr. P. H. Bowyer (East Kent) introduced a bill amending the Liquor License Act. At present only a license holder or his employes are liable to penalty for selling, giving or supplying liquor to minors. The amendment is designed to cover all persons, excepting parent, guardian or physician.

Another clause is amended by Mr. Bowyer's bill, making it necessary for any clubs under a Dominion charter desiring a license to obtain the same from the Provincial Secretary, instead of from the local license commissioners as at present.

Mr. McDougal (Ottawa) introduced bills to give a fixed assessment to a new Ottawa hotel and to validate a debenture bylaw of the Ottawa separate school board, which is slightly irregular.

It was private members' day and the second reading of several local measures was proceeded with.

Land Titles Bill Scotched.

Hon. Mr. Whitney killed the bill of Mr. Ferguson (Grenville) to amend the Land Titles Act, in short order. "There is little in it to commend it to public approbation," was his laconic comment.

In moving the second reading of his bill to amend the Municipal Act, which gives the municipality power by bylaw to fix the last Monday in November for elections, Mr. T. H. Preston (Brant) read a number of letters he had received from various municipal authorities in favor of the measure.

Hon. Mr. Whitney did not concur in the referendum idea in the measure. It was a question that should be treated in a manly and virile fashion, because, after all, it was a mere matter of administration.

Hon. Col. Matheson said that the chief objection was in the fact that, under the altered conditions, the representatives of the people would not be responsible to the people from the 1st of December until the end of the year.

Hon. Mr. Graham was not at one with the Prime Minister in conceiving that there were many weighty reasons for a change in the date. The holiday season interfered with the elections at present. The question was whether the date should be set a little before the close of the year, or a little after, say the first Monday in February.

The bill was referred to the municipal committee.

University Grants to Cease.

When the House went into committee on the Prime Minister's bill to amend the university act by giving its authorities the right to borrow monies with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council Hon. Mr. Whitney made the significant announcement that the Government would make no further grants to the university for a number of years.

Hon. Mr. Mackay renewed the Opposition objection to the system of determining the amount to go to the university from the receipts from succession duties. Mr. Mackay said he had heard it said that the Board of Governors transacted business behind closed doors and that the press were not admitted. He wanted to know if this were so.

Hon. Mr. Whitney said he couldn't tell if this were correct or not. Enquiry would be made.

Mr. Mackay thought the matter was important. If the Board of Governors barred the door he was in direct opposition to letting them handle a dollar of the public money. All these matters should see the light of day.

Mr. Whitney thought it was unfair of Mr. Mackay to assume that it was true. He should first investigate and find out if it were so.

Hon. Col. Matheson said the strength of the present financial arrangement was that it threw the university governors on their own resources.

New Normal Schools.

In reply to questions from Mr. Munro (Oxford) Hon. Dr. Reaume said the contracts for the four new normal schools had been let to Mr. S. F. Witham, of Brantford. The prices were: Peterboro $53,800; Stratford $52,050; Hamilton $52,050, and North Bay $54,200. The contractor could not in any way distribute, assign or sublet the contract.

Replying to Mr. McColg (West Kent) the Prime Minister said the Government had not yet considered the matter of granting financial assistance to municipalities affected with smallpox.

The concluding hours of the session were devoted to the estimates for colonization roads. At 3.30 to-day General Booth, of the Salvation Army will be a guest at the Legislature.

TITLED CONVICT IN QUOD.

Lord Nevill Charged With Stealing Jewellery From Pawnbroker.

London, March 14.—Lord William Nevill, fourth son of the Marquis of Abergavenny, is in the hands of the authorities again, and yesterday was remanded at a police court, charged with stealing jewellery by means of a trick.

Lord Nevill was sentenced to five years penal servitude at the Old Bailey, Feb. 15, 1898, for fraud in connection with a promissory note, the prosecutor being Capt. Spencer Clay, who in 1904 married Pauline, daughter of William Waldorf Astor.

In the present case Lord Nevill is charged with stealing a bag containing $2,000 worth of pearl and diamond jewellery, by exchanging it for a similar box, which, when opened, was found to contain two pieces of coal wrapped in tissue paper.

According to the testimony, Lord Nevill pawned articles of jewellery at different times, and subsequently requested the pawnbroker to take the jewels to his house with a new contract covering all the transactions.

After the contract had been signed, Lord Nevill produced a green leather box, in which the pawnbroker placed the jewels, tied up and sealed the box; Lord Nevill then diverted the pawnbroker's attention to a bureau in another part of the room.

The man turned away for a moment to examine the bureau, and Lord Nevill shortly afterward joined his visitor and handed him a box which the pawnbroker supposed contained the jewellery.

On examining it a couple of months later, however, he found that it had been changed while his back was turned.

Lord Nevill was remanded in $25,000 bail.

EARL GREY TO SPEAK.

Will Deliver an Address at the National Peace Congress.

New York, March 14.—Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the public dinner, April 17, which is to close the National Peace Congress. Other speakers will be President Roosevelt, President Gompers, Baron D'Estournelles de Constant, of France; W. T. Stead, the English editor; and Sir Robert Cranston, Lord Provost of Edinburgh.

Two Boys Drowned.

Alvinston, March 14.—Charlie, 18-year-old son of Mrs. Archibald McKellar, and Milton, 16-year-old son of James Wallis, were drowned in the river here yesterday morning. They, with a companion, were crossing on the ice, when one of the boys went through the ice, and the other, in trying to rescue him, went in also, and both were drowned before the third boy could do anything to help them.

What become of the proposal we once heard mooted in the Board of Education, to establish school savings banks in this city? A School Trustee in Guelph lately brought up the question in that city, and pointed out that he had attended a meeting in Toronto, where the children have $60,000 in the bank.

The system is that the child brings his savings to school every Monday morning, which he hands to his teacher, who enters the amount in the cash book and pass book. The money is then deposited in a bank, to be drawn whenever the child desires. The Toronto people were enthusiastic over the matter. Some of the most prominent business men in Toronto were connected with the institution. It is claimed that the school savings bank tends to teach the children the value of money, a little bit of education that will hurt none of them.

Mr. Fowler explains in the Toronto News that he was only giving notice and not making a threat when in the House of Commons he told the Ministerial party that unless its members left his private affairs alone he would expose the "wine, women and graft" doings of some of its leaders. The distinction in such a case is rather fine for the non-parliamentary mind to grasp. The non-parliamentary mind, however, says the Montreal Gazette is capable of understanding that since the issuing of Mr. Fowler's statement he has been left alone, at any rate by the steadfast Ministerialists.

There seems to be a well-grounded belief, both in Great Britain and Canada, that the grand old man, Lord Strathcona will soon be retired from the office of high commissioner at London and that Sir Frederick Borden will take his place. There are those who think the Government would be improved and strengthened if Sir Frederick Borden ceased to be enrolled among its members. There are not many, however, who would choose to see Lord Strathcona recalled for the sake of such a change. In the general estimation of the people of Great Britain, says the Montreal Gazette, the status of the high commissionership has been raised by its present occupant, and this country would not stand to gain by the unnecessary replacement by another of Lord Strathcona.

SOME ADVICE FOR "RALPH CONNOR."

(Ottawa Citizen.)

"Ralph Connor" will enhance his reputation by keeping out of politics. His sweeping denunciation of politicians on Sunday was as untrue and unfair as could come from the lips of a man suffering from a complication of wounded vanity and inexperience. Politics is a strenuous game and the exigencies of policy often force even the best men into false positions, but on the whole there are many men of high principle among the leaders of parties on both sides of politics, both in the federal and provincial fields. Those who know the best and the worst workings of the political arena know this; also how difficult it is for those engaged in an active public life to keep themselves above suspicion at all times. For an irritated young man in the antiseptic atmosphere of the pulpit to undertake to talk down to those who are working out the destinies of this great young country on what are, after all, fairly straight and broad lines, may not be an impertinence, but, so far as it throws light on his own mental calibre, is an indiscretion.

The rolling mills management have a cheery tale to tell these days. Business, they say, is exceeding their expectations, and the outlook at present is such as to cause them the liveliest satisfaction. The demand for their horseshoes keeps them hustling at top speed, and then cannot be fully met. The Belleville rolling mills bids fair to divide honors with the Belleville Hardware Company as a firm justified in stamping "Nulli Secundus" on its goods. The rolling mills, it may be interesting to note, now employs a staff of 350 men. Which, as the poet would say, is going some.

LAID IN THE TOMB.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF LATE MR. THOS. WILLS WERE LARGELY ATTENDED THIS AFTERNOON.

The remains of the late Lieut.-Col. Wills, J. P., ex-M.P.P., were this afternoon consigned to the tomb. Many citizens of all classes were in attendance at the obsequies, showing that the deceased, in life, was held in high esteem. At 2.30 the cortege left the family residence, Church St., and proceeded to St. Thomas' church, where the impressive burial services of the Anglican Church were conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean Beamish. The services were fully choral. Upon the casket were a number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The interment took place at the Belleville cemetery. The bearers were, Messrs. C. M. Stork, Wm. Johnson, S. Masson, E. F. Milburn, F. M. Clarke, and B. Mallory.

A Boer Relic.

Trooper Mulloy, of Winchester, who has been a visitor to this city, has just added another to his collection of relics secured during the Boer war. This time it is a small fragment of bullet of irregular flat shape about three-sixteenths of an inch across, with sharp, ragged edges, which was removed from his forehead a few days ago. It was "contributed," the Trooper states, on July 16th, 1900, by a Boer rifle under the command of General Botha, but he was not aware of its presence until a couple of weeks ago, when his forehead became inflamed and his physician began a search for the cause. Trooper Mulloy is uncertain whether this fragment is traceable to the wound which took away his sight or was merely the fragment of one of the many bullets which splintered on the rock, against the side of which he and his comrade were steadying their rifles.

He had no coat upon his back,
But had one on his tongue,
And Rocky Mountain Tea, it's said
Kept him from being hung.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

THE ANT.

Facts About One of Nature's Most Industrious Creatures.

When spring comes with all its wealth of opening buds and new flowers, the ant is preparing for a season of profitable industry.

It comes out of its winter quarters and locates a new home where it can store away, during the summer months, the sustenance for the long winter days.

Just as industrious as the ant—but in a different way, are the countless infinitesimal germs which burrow into the scalp and eat away at the roots of the hair.

As they burrow away Dandruff forms, and if the germs are not all killed, Baldness results.

Newbro's Herpicide is the only known remedy which kills the germs. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. B. McKeown, special agent.

England "Waking Up."

Yesterday a good many Canadian newspapers servile to the anti-British sources of their news, among them some printed in Montreal and pretending to speak for the party of Imperialism, says the Montreal Witness, published a story which had been faked-up by a New York Herald man, and which appeared in them under such grotesque headlines as "England is now waking up," or "England wakes up," "Wave of reform in business spreading," and so forth, as if poor old England were the effete country which it has all along pleased our neighbors to regard her. What is pitiful is to see the Canadian people imbibing such false and hateful sentiments through channels that ought to be free from them. As a matter of fact England for generations has taken the lead in the majority of inventions and business ventures, and she leads the world in the building of ships and the manufacture of woollens and cottons and many other lines. She has always been learning, she is learning now, she will need to learn in the future, but she did a billion dollars' worth of oversea trade last year, the first time a nation's oversea trade amounted to that much in the history of the world. That does not look as if she was only rubbing her eyes just now. Such write-ups as that of the New York Herald are made for silly United States consumption. They are contemptible to Canadians who know anything, and the wonder is that Canadian editors should adopt them and their spirit as their own. If it be thinking Imperially to despise and slander the land from which we have sprung let us be saved from it, and let us still love and respect the brave old Mother Country.

Boys vs. Girls.

(St. Catharines Star.)

A New York theatrical manager, says an exchange, who employed a large number of boys in his office, gave orders the other day for the dismissal of every one of them, and the engagement of girls to take their places.

His reason was simple and strong, "I have grown tired of the laziness, inefficiency and impudence of these cubs."

The sentiment of the New York man is shared to a large extent by many others throughout the country. Not only in offices where boys are employed, but in shops where they are present as apprentices, employers are annoyed at the unreliability of the average boy. So great is the dissatisfaction with the juvenile element of the male persuasion that in the lighter trades girls are being admitted as apprentices. The trouble with the boys of the period is that they look upon the positions as "jobs," which are not to be regarded as permanent, but as stepping stones to something better. They have thus little or no interest in the work, and what they do is done perfunctorally.

It isn't the nature of the boy's work, but the way he does it, which tries him out before his master. Every one of Napoleon's soldiers thought he carried a marshal's baton in his knapsack, and he fought the better for this ambition. Every lad mailing letters, running errands, answering the bell, doing the elementary work of the trades, has the potentialities of headship in him.

The lazy, "sassy," shirking, cigarette-smoking boys, don't realize this. They idle and they wax impudent. If they are fortunate enough not to be "fired," they wonder why they are not promoted.

Why He Gave the Money

The Hamilton, Ohio, Y. M. C. A. received a bequest of $150,000 from Mr. D. L. Howell, whose death occurred a month ago. He had never manifested any particular interest in the association, but dropped into it one day and saw the younger boys, between 12 and 17 at work and play and it occurred to him that there was something worth while in it. Then he enquired around and finding that others were of the same mind, took the most practical way to help it along. A few months ago, when in apparent good health, he called the Secretary to his office and told him he was about to rewrite his will, and was very anxious to leave his money to the institute which could give the greatest help to the city. He had thoroughly investigated the principles and methods of the Young Men's Christian Association, and it appealed to him, to use his own words, "As an organization for the people and not for a class or particular crowd." He had investigated all other local institutions, and decided that through the Association his purposes could best be carried out.

INGENIOUS WAYS OF GETTING MONEY WITHOUT WORKING FOR IT.

(London Globe.)

It is really astounding what a large number of people there are who will take infinite pains to avoid work. And the queer part of it is, that they really give themselves much trouble in their attempts to obtain a living without laboring at any fixed task.

Not long ago a novel trick was practiced by a man going about the streets of London, but it seems impossible to think that he made much out of it unless there are an abnormal number of exceedingly foolish people in existence. Passing a man casually he would glance at his back and say, "Beg your pardon, sir, but there's a lot of white stuff on your shoulders." Those who were particular about their personal appearance would thank the man and ask him to wipe it off, accompanying the request with a tip. Of course, it is unnecessary to say that there never was anything white on the back of the man addressed, and that it was solely for the purpose of getting the tip that the kind workingman took an interest in the stranger's toilet.

A much more lucrative trick was reported by a London daily some time ago. According to this statement a well-dressed gentleman sauntered about the streets of Sydney, New South Wales, stopping a passerby every now and then in order to ask him for a "fill of tobacco, as he had left his pouch at home. Not many smokers would refuse such a request when made by a respectable stranger, and would bid him fill his pipe and be welcome. As soon as the generous stranger was out of sight the borrower would transfer the tobacco from the pipe to a capacious pouch he carried. When he had collected a pound or two he would sell it to a tobacconist.

Another dodge worked on lively looking gentlemen is that well worn device which might be termed the trick pipe fake. As the victim hurried along a crowded street he notices a man who is smoking a big meerschaum pipe. That is to say, he would notice him if he were looking, but as he is in a hurry the chances are that he does not, and he is therefore surprised when he collides with the man, who lets the pipe fall to the ground, which breaks in several pieces. Of course, the owner of the "valuable" pipe raises a great lamentation over his loss, and calls on heaven to witness the clumsiness of the victim. The former says that it is all the fault of the latter, and loudly demands compensation while tenderly picking up the pieces. He accepts the proffered monetary solatium with the remark that the pipe was worth far more, and then goes up a side street to fix the "merschaum" ready for someone else. This trick used to bring in quite a decent amount, but it has become so well known that it is seldom tried nowadays.

In Glasgow there used to be a respectable looking old man who was reputed to make a living out of postage stamps. He frequented the better class of cheap lodging houses, and dressed neatly though poorly. He had a simple, but apparently very successful, method of working. He was always writing in answer to advertisements; after having sent off several letters he would hear of another place likely to suit him, so of course he applied for it at once. Unfortunately, when the letter was written, he found that he had no stamp, that he had used the last one, and that he had no money to buy another. If he delayed writing the situation would be filled, but if he wrote at once he would be sure to get the place. What hard lines! And he had been out of work for weeks and had now come to the end of his tether. Of course those who did not know him felt sorry for this unfortunate state of affairs, and would give him a stamp or the price of one. It seldom happened that he was refused, as the more lucky men in the place would generally give him the penny. Under favorable conditions he would carry two or three bogus letters and get several pennies. Sometimes he would take his stand near a post office, looking ruefully at the letter after going through all his pockets, with the result that some charitable woman who was passing would ask his trouble and give him a penny or twopence on hearing his tale. It was said that he had admitted making as much as five shillings a day by this means.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

IS HE IN CANADA?

SEARCH FOR LOST MARVIN BOY CONTINUES.

New York, March 13.— Detectives from this city left hurriedly for Detroit, Mich., and Windsor, Canada, yesterday, on clues furnished by a man who signed himself with the sobriquet of a notorious criminal to the whereabouts of four-year-old Horace Marvin, who is supposed to have been kidnapped from his home near Dover, Del., some days ago.

The man who has promised the delivery of the child upon the payment of a reward has signed himself in two letters, written from Windsor, as "Big W." This is the name of the underworld for a negro criminal, whose picture is in the Rogues' Gallery. His letters, which were written on the stationery of the British-American Hotel of Windsor, were addressed to Samuel Sheldon, formerly a detective sergeant, but who is now conducting a detective agency. The man's object in writing to Sheldon appears to have been that he was willing to trust the former detective sergeant to live up to any agreement that might be made regarding the return of the kidnapped boy. The fact that the boy has been reported to have been seen under the guardianship of a negro woman lends strength to the claim of "Big W." that he knows the whereabouts of the boy and can deliver him.

Children Gagged.

AND THEIR LIPS SEALED UP WITH STICKING PLASTER.

Lynn, Mass., March 13.—The School Committee met this evening and listened to serious charges against supervisory teachers in the Eastern Avenue Training School. It was openly charged that Normal School graduates under supervision were guilty of sealing the children's lips with sticking plaster, placing stockings over their mouths and applying green soap as a remedy for talking.

About three hundred indignant fathers and mothers were present to press the charges of abuse of pupils.

Irving Wellman, fifteen, declared a sticking plaster was placed tightly over his lips by a teacher, who wet it with her own lips, and when taking it off cut it with a pair of scissors and picked the smaller pieces off with her finger nails.

Clarence M. Strickland, fourteen was punished by use of a black stocking fastened tightly over his mouth. This caused much difficulty in breathing. The same stocking was used on each pupil.

William O'Donnell, eleven, did not answer a question to the satisfaction of his teacher and was taken into the dressing-room, seized and shaken, after which he was thrown on a sofa and sat upon. The teacher then forced half a cake of green soap into his mouth.

Helen Thompson, thirteen, had her arms tied behind her, her feet tied to the desk and her head fastened to the desk by rags.

Device Which Stops Train At Any Point

WILL ACT THOUGH ENGINEER IS ASLEEP OR HAS DROPPED DEAD.

"What is most needed to-day is an invention that can be placed in the cab of an engine and which will take the place of the engineer when he falls asleep or drops dead."

This statement appearing in a Chicago paper just after a terrible railway accident four years ago set Dr. W. S. Filley, a Toledo dentist, to working on a device which would fill this necessity. Judging from the successful tests to which his invention was subjected on a D. U. R. shore line car between Detroit and Wyandotte, his three years of effort have been crowned with success, says the Detroit Free Press in the presence of two veteran engineers of the Wabash railway. Sheriff James D. Burns and two newspaper representatives, while the car was bowling along at the rate of forty miles an hour, Dr. Filley set the device so that it would stop the car at a point a mile distant. The motorman then left his post and took a seat in the rear of the car. When the mile was nearly traversed the car suddenly began to slacken its speed and within a distance of 200 feet it was completely stopped.

Again while the car was speeding down a steep grade at the rate of fifty-five miles an hour, the air brakes which are controlled by the device, were suddenly turned on and the car stopped in 270 feet.

So simple is the invention it can easily be understood by the veriest layman. If an engine or electric car leaves its starting point with orders to pass another on a switch or siding fifteen miles away, a pointer as set at the fifteen mile mark on a graded scale. Another pointer registers the distance which the car has traversed as it speeds along. When the car comes within a quarter mile of the place where it is to stop, a bell rings and a lever drops down. It is then the engineer's or motorman's duty to pull another lever which prevents the automatic device from working and to stop the engine of his own accord. If he does not, the automatic device acts and stops the engine at the place for which it had been set.

Dr. Filley claims that in actual tests the device will not vary six inches in a hundred miles.

Every time that the car is stopped by the automatic device, the stoppage is registered on the machine. When the engineer or motorman arrives at his destination, it is up to him to explain these marks and why he did not stop the car himself instead of allowing the machine to do it. Another part of the machine registers the number of times that the car stops, the number of miles that it traverses and backs up — in fact forms a complete record of the trip.

Still another part of the invention registers an alarm whenever the air pressure gets below that required. Should the air pressure at any time fail, an alarm is sounded all through the train to warn the passengers.

So confident is Dr. Filley of the unfailing accuracy of his invention that he recently offered to allow the officials of a Pennsylvania railroad to bind him in the cab of an engine fifteen miles away from an open draw, to set the device so that it would stop at that distance and then start the locomotive under a full head of steam.

N. W. Kester and John Wagner both engineers of fast express trains on the Wabash railway, were on the car while the device was being tested. Both declared it was one of the most important inventions of recent years. "Had this been invented twenty years ago, hundreds of lives and millions of dollars worth of property might have been saved," declared Mr. Kester.

MASSASSAGA.

Miss Madge Hubbs has been called to the bedside of her sister at the Channel, who is very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Adams spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Simmons.

Mr. G. Huff was a guest of his friend, Mrs. Williams, of Big Island, last Sunday.

Miss Bertie Seeley, of Wallbridge is visiting friends here.

Mr. J. Simmons slipped on the ice on Saturday last wrenching his knee. Mrs. Carrie Howatson also received a heavy fall on the sidewalk in Belleville.

The body of the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Anderson which died in Belleville on March 10th, was interred in Simmons' burying ground on Monday last.

TUFTSVILLE.

Miss A. Harris, of Bannockburn, is the guest of Mrs. A. W. Andrews.

Rev. F. J. Clarke, of Cordova, spent a few days in our midst. His mother returned home with him for a visit.

On the 5th inst. about fifty-two of the neighbors met at Mr. Albert Eggleton's residence, on the eve of his departure for his new home in the Northwest. A most sumptuous oyster supper was served by the ladies. After all had partaken of the repast, Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton and Miss Mabel were called to the floor. A splendid address was read to them by Mr. A. W. Andrews and Mr. Geo. Eggleton then presented Mr. Eggleton with a beautiful pipe, Mrs. Eggleton with a lovely silver fruit basket, and Master Bertie Andrews presented Miss Mabel with a splendid morocco covered Bible. Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton both made a suitable reply. Then there were speeches made by several, expressing their sorrow at parting with an old neighbor. There were songs and recitations, after which they all sang "God be with you till we meet again." We all join in wishing them a safe journey to their new home. Then on Friday evening the young people, about sixty in number, met at the above home and presented the two young men with a souvenir pin each and a pair of cuff links.

Mr. Arthur Juby has moved on the farm lately occupied by Albert Eggleton.

Mr. Herbert Juby was married on the 27th of February to Miss Bertha Craig, of Huntingdon, by the Rev. R. Byers, at the Rectory, Stirling. The young couple were attended by Mr. P. Eggleton and Miss Mabel Wilson. The happy couple took the train for Peterboro, amidst a shower of rice and good wishes. They intend to reside in our midst.

Mr. Harry Juby has returned from Kingston, after spending a couple of months at the dairy school there.

How Birds' Nests Are Made Round.

The little abandoned nest had fallen from the tree. The nature student lifted it from the ground.

"How round it is," he said. "No cup rim could be rounder. Don't you wonder how the bird, with neither rule nor compass, can make her nest so round? Well, she does it easily. She builds the nest about her breast, turning round and round in it, and its circular character comes spontaneously and inevitably. The circle is found everywhere in the buildings of the lower animals. The straight line, on the other hand, they can never achieve."

Vulgar Fractions.

Everything that Bobby learned at school he endeavored to apply in his daily life and walk. When his mother asked him if one of his new friends was an only child Bobby looked wise and triumphant.

"He's got just one sister," said Bobby. "He tried to catch me when he told me he had two half sisters, but I guess I know enough fractions for that!"

The Reason For It.

"No," said the imbittered person, "when I want financial assistance I go to strangers. I do not ask friends or relatives."

"Well," answered the logical man, "maybe that's the best way. Friends and relatives are in a position to keep posted on a man's record."

Man's Love For Woman.

"If a man loves a woman for her looks he will love her for five years. If he loves her mind he will love her for ten years. If he loves her ways he will love her forever." And every woman believes when she marries that her lover loves her ways.

TIMELY TOPICS.

WHEN EARLY MARCH SEEMS MIDDLE MAY.

(James Whitcomb Riley.)

When country roads begin to thaw
In mottled spots of damp and dust,
And fences by the margin draw
Along the frosty crust
Their graphic silhouettes, I say
The spring is coming round this way.

When morning-time is bright with sun
And keen with wind, and both confuse
The dancing, glancing eyes of one
With tears that ooze and ooze—
And nose-tips weep as well as they,
The spring is coming round this way.

When suddenly some shadow-bird
Goes wavering beneath the gaze,
And through the hedge the moan is heard
Of kine that fain would graze
In grasses now, I smile and say
The spring is coming round this way.

When knotted horse-tails are untied,
And teamsters whistle here and there,
And clumsy mitts are laid aside
And chopper's hands are bare,
And chips are thick where children play,
The spring is coming round this way.

When through the twigs the farmer tramps,
And troughs are chunked beneath the trees,
And fragrant hints of sugar-camps
Astray in every breeze—
When early March seems middle May,
The spring is coming round this way.

When coughs are changed to laughs, and when
Our frowns melt into smiles of glee
And all our blood thaws out again
In streams of ecstasy,
And poets wreak their roundelay,
The spring is coming round this way.

Patrons of some of the telephone exchanges in Minnesota have been informed from headquarters that the practice of listening to conversations not intended for them uses up local batteries prematurely. The plan is ingenious, but the report does not tell whether or not it is effectual.

Children, don't play with stray cats or dogs. It is dangerous and sometimes fatal to your health. A Long Island dispatch notes the death of a young girl from diphtheria, the disease having been communicated to her by a stray cat which she picked up and took home. Some years ago at the same place a mother and her four children died from diphtheria contracted from a cat. Cats are frequently carriers of contagious and infectious diseases. This has been demonstrated beyond doubt. Children play with the animals during sickness or convalescence and they are allowed to roam over the neighborhood.

PANIC IN A THEATRE.

Many People Crushed But No Fatalities—Comedian Saves Day.

Chicago, March 14.—A despatch from Newport, Ky., says that between 400 and 500 persons, principally women and children, in a state of panic, when lightning struck the Grand Theatre here Tuesday night, were quieted and many were saved from death by the presence of mind of a comedian performing on the stage. As it was, scores of women and children were crushed underfoot. While the performance was in progress there was a rush for the exits. Wailing women, screaming children and shouting men aroused the crowd to an excited frenzy.

In the midst of the whole panic Albert Dashington, a comedian, appeared on the stage with a candle in his hand and began making jokes on the thunderbolt and subsequent darkness. His words soon pacified the audience.

Some Notes on "Origins."

"Humpty Dumpty Sat on a Wall," etc., has come down to us from the days of King John. "The Babes In the Wood" dates from the fifteenth century, being founded upon facts, an old house near Wayland Wood, Norfolk, having the whole story in carvings on a mantelpiece. "Little Jack Horner," "Little Miss Muffett," "Old Mother Hubbard," "Mother Goose" and "Goosey, Goosey Gander," are each traceable to the sixteenth century. "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat, Where Have You Been?" belongs to the reign of Queen Elizabeth. "Three Blind Mice" first appeared in a music book dated 1609. "A Froggie Would a-Wooing Go" was licensed to be sung as far back as 1650. "Boys and Girls Come Out to Play" and "Lucy Locket Lost Her Pocket" both hail from the period of Charles II. And last of all, "Cinderella," "Jack the Giant Killer," "Bluebeard" and "Tom Thumb" were published by their author, Charles Perrault, in the year 1697.—London Notes and Queries.

Plain Words.

Freeman, the historian, it was said, was apt to grow irritable over matters of intellectual difference. One day he was at the Macmillans' when the conversation turned upon the subject of Ireland. Mr. Macmillan said that, for his part, he was in favor of granting autonomy.

Whereupon Freeman began to growl at the use of a Greek word.

"Why, can't you speak English," demanded he, "and say home rule instead of speaking Greek, which you don't know?"

One of the guests flushed with anger and ventured to reprove Freeman, calling his attention to the respect due their host and at the same time paying tribute to Mr. Macmillan's remarkable abilities. But, although Freeman did not apologize in so many words, he smoothed the matter over by a humorous repetition of his criticism. Later some one mentioned gout. "There you go again!" exclaimed Freeman. "Why can't we call it toe woe?"

Prey of the Sparrow Hawk.

The sparrow hawk almost invariably catches a flying bird for its meal, even striking down birds as large as the wood pigeon, though usually going no higher than a blackbird. If it does not exactly swoop like the larger hawks, yet it must have conditions of chase of its own choosing. That is why the small birds usually mob it with impunity when they are numerous enough to bewilder it. Once, however, I saw a sparrow hawk that had been molested for some minutes by a perfect cloud of green finches dart among them and secure a victim. One day I had one of these birds pointed out as the one which a few days earlier had come close to the house toward dusk and caught a bat on the wing. That, however, is a very unusual meal.—London News.

The Good Little Cent.

A popular clergyman had just closed a successful religious campaign. A great many pennies had been put in the offering, and his attention was called to this. One night he held up a silver dollar and a copper penny and gave a conversation held by the two coins. "You poor little red cent, you; you don't amount to anything. I'd hate to be you," said the big dollar. "I know I'm not very big," replied the cent, "but the children like me, and I can buy a good many things." "Huh, you can't buy anything at all!" said the dollar. "Just look at me, big and bright and shiny. I can buy a whole lot more than you can." "Maybe so," said the little red cent meekly, "but I go to church a heap oftener than you do anyway."

Calhoun and Randolph.

When John C. Calhoun became vice president of the United States and consequently president of the senate he announced that he had not the authority to call the senators to order for words spoken in debate, as he regarded each senator as an ambassador from a sovereign state. The eccentric John Randolph of Virginia took advantage of Mr. Calhoun's ruling to abuse him personally. One day he began a tirade by saying, "Mr. Speaker—I mean Mr. President of the Senate and Would Be President of the United States, which God in his infinite mercy avert!"

Liverpool, March 13.—Liverpool and London cables are easier at 11c to 12¼c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9½c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 13.—The prospects of a heavy Easter trade played but a small part in the business done at the East End Abattoir this morning, and thruout the day the demand for the best class of stock was not an yioo inviting, but it was generally recognized that the inclement weather and the evident determination of sellers to hold back for the actual Easter rush were factors in the medium sales transacted.

Cattle—Arrivals, 325, with quality fair to good. Quotations were from 2½c to 5c per lb., according to quality. A few milch cows were offered at prices of $25 to $50 each.

Sheep and Lambs—Arrivals, 20 head in all; quality good; prices were quoted at 4½c to 5c for sheep and 6½c to 7c per lb. for lambs.

Calves—Arrivals were 1100, with quality ranging from poor to good. Quotations had a downward tendency, and from $1 to $5 was demanded, but only fair sales. A few large and fat calves brought an advance over the latter figure.

Receipts of hogs were 1000, for which the demand was fair, and prices were unchanged, with sales of selected stock at $7.15 to $7.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 13.—Cattle, quiet and steady; prices, unchanged.

DROVE OVER EMBANKMENT.

Woodstock Constable Killed While Looking For Escaped Prisoner.

Woodstock, March 14.—While in search of an escaped convict from Woodstock jail early yesterday morning, Police Constable Archie Pow, of this city, was thrown from the rig in which he was driving by the conveyance going over an embankment, and instantly killed.

Pow left here at midnight with Turnkey Forbes of the jail for Ingersoll, in an endeavor to locate a prisoner, A. E. Forbes, who escaped during the evening. The night was intensely dark, and at Beachville the horses left the road, capsizing the buggy.

Verdict In Hockey Case.

Cornwall, March 14.—A coroner's jury returned a verdict last night that "Owen McCourt came to his death by a blow from a hockey stick in the hands of Charles Masson during a game in the Victoria Rink, on March 6."

The jury further declared there was no justification by personal provocation for the blow, although there was no evidence of any ill-feeling between McCourt and Masson.

The jury recommended that an act be passed by the Legislative Assembly whereby "players and spectators engaging in or encouraging roughness or foul play in the game of hockey be severely punished."

How Dolls Are Made.

Many big things are needed to make a small doll. She has her beginning in a great trough, where workmen knead up into a dingy paste old cardboard, even old gloves, old rags and gum tragacanth. They are great brawny fellows, these men, naked to the waist, wearing leathern aprons. In an adjoining room the paste is poured into molds for the busts, the arms, the legs of dolls innumerable. There is a special machine for stamping out the hands. I should not like to confess how long I stood in front of it, fascinated by the steady stream of queer little hands that fell ceaselessly from the iron monster. It was awful, uncanny, hypnotizing. Indeed, the whole sight was grim and monstrous. The low factory rooms were misty with steam and lit by strange, red glowing fires. Always the great steel machines pulsed and changed, and through the mist sweaty giants of men went to and fro with heaps of little greenish arms and legs until you began to think that some new Herod had killed all the little people in the world.—Everybody's.

Napoleon Trusted His Omens.

Napoleon always had an unlimited trust in his presentiments. When the news came to him that one of the Nile river boats, the name of which was L'Italie, had been wrecked and the crew put to death he gave up all hope of ever completing his conquest of Italy by annexation. Napoleon believed that the stars exercised an occult influence over human destinies. When General Rapp, at one time his aid-de-camp, returned from the siege of Dantsic he found the emperor gazing with concentrated attention at the heavens. "Look there!" shouted the emperor. "It is my star! The fiery red one, almost as large as the moon! It is before you now, and, ah, how brilliant! It has never abandoned me for a single instant. I see it on all great occasions. It commands me to go forward; it is my sign of good fortune, and where it leads I will follow."

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

his hand [illegible] up to his ears. He cursed his imagination, he cursed Don Q., he cursed his wife, but in his heart of hearts he wished he had let sleeping dogs lie.

He remembered a hundred tales of the fierce chief, each one of which made him shudder. For Don Q. was a man of a strange, warped sense of humor, and scarcely one of the legends attached to his name but glowed with lurid manifestations of this quality. Besides, the bandit appeared to be omniscient. None ever lived to carry him false news twice. But true information was paid for with terrific lavishness.

Don Q.'s plan was laid out very subtly, and with a minute precision of detail, for his fierce heart dwelt in a frail body, and he proposed to go down single-handed to smite his enemy.

When all was ready he called up Robledo and Gaspar to the cave.

"My children," he said, in his silkiest tones, "there is one under the mountains with whom it is necessary that I should deal, the governor of the prison of Castelleno."

A flicker of excitement lit up the dark eyes of the men, but the chief raised his delicate yellow hand.

"I have nothing yet for you to do save to secure the quiet of my musings. You will bring my food as usual day by day. I lay no command of silence upon you, but for no reason whatever—you heed me, Robledo?—for no reason whatever am I to be called forth until you see me again."

The men touched their tongues and eyes.

"That is well. Keep your oath in mind," advised Don Q. "For the story of what I am about to carry out will be told in the posadas of Spain by your children's children."

After this the quiet of death fell upon the cave. The band believed the chief to be still there, for he certainly had not passed by the sentries, who rigorously kept the only known entrance to the valley.

Don Q. had left the Boca de Lobo by an entrance known to none but himself. In a lonely gorge he found waiting for him, tied amongst some high scrub, a horse saddled and bridled in semi-military fashion. During four days, whether riding downwards by devious and little-known paths, or cooking his meal at sunset, or lurking in a thicket to watch the passing of a couple of guardias civiles, or dozing the dark hours through rolled in his cloak, the vision always before his eyes took the form of the shapely ears of the governor of the prison of Castelleno.

He was engaged upon a fantastic exploit. The difficulty of entering the governor's presence might in itself have seemed insurmountable; but almost as Don Q. uttered the words of the threat a plan formed in his mind.

It was evening. On the roof of the prison beside a cluster of potted palms a couple of reclining chairs had been placed in the best position to catch the cool airs from the mountains.

In one Dona Catalina yawned and fanned herself languidly, while the governor sat smoking cigarettes in the moody silence that day by day was growing upon him. Now and again he lifted his eyes and gazed across the white town and the tillage surrounding it.

"Again! O, my Hugo, you stare at the mountains and finger your ears as if Don Q. could stretch his long talons across from his cave and pull them off!" she laughed again with an abandon of enjoyment that came near to breaking down the restraint Don Hugo had placed upon his temper.

"Not precisely. But I admit that sight of the sierra reminded me of your foolish visit up there, and naturally of that robber's most insolent message," he replied with an air of loftiness. "This has forced me to take special steps with a view to setting an end to his career. A conclave of the principal personages of Castelleno and the neighborhood is to be held in the great hall presently. An extraordinary expedition will then be sent up against him. I will probably lead it myself—"

The senora rose from her seat and curtseyed deeply and derisively.

"I shall be doubly anxious about your ears then, my beloved! Don Q. is a man of his word. "But, see, your guests begin to arrive."

Spaniards, in spite of their reserve, are moved to excitement upon any subject which touches them nearly. The caballeros of the district no less than the citizens of the town appeared to find in Don Q. a tonic far from conducive to calmness. However, his reputation stood with the poor; the rich, whom he sent empty away, bore him much ill will. The room resounded with tales of the mysterious brigand. Each man could supply a different anecdote of his annoying, if not terrible, exploits, some of which dated back a score of years, some of yesterday, but almost all stamped with that distorted humor which commonly bit too deep for laughter.

Then Don Hugo, rising in his place, referred to the crowning offence of which the brigand had been guilty. He told, in fact, with certain expedient deviations from historic accuracy, the tale of his wife's journey into the mountains. That so beautiful a woman should have been kidnapped and half frightened to death stirred the ready Spanish chivalry, and when Don Hugo declared himself ready to administer an oath of membership to a society of vengeance, the idea was greeted with acclamation, and was about to be carried into effect when a servant disturbed the meeting.

A captain of the civil guard was in waiting below, charged to speak without delay to the governor on a matter of the highest importance.

"You will be good enough to request Capt. del Pino to rest himself for a few minutes," returned Don Hugo impatiently.

"Pardon, excellency, he bade me present this." The man held out a card upon which some sentences were written.

The governor glanced at it and uttered an exclamation.

"Senors, Capt. del Pino comes from Madrid upon business connected with Don Q."

A slender man in the uniform of the civil guard was already bowing in the doorway. His long blue cloak hung behind his shoulders, and, as he raised his head, covered with dark curling hair, the assembly saw that he bore stains, not only of travel, but of misadventure by the way. His brow was bandaged, and a spatter of blood showed on his cheek.

"My business is pressing, excellency. Can I see you alone?" he said, in a low tone, which, however, carried an imperious echo.

"You have a mission connected with—" began the governor pleasantly.

"Pardon me," interrupted the courtly captain, "a secret mission, intrusted to me by the highest authority in Madrid."

"As to that you will never guess the purpose for which we are gathered here to-night."

"A matter of some responsibility and difficulty?" Del Pino's tone and gracious movement of the head were in the nature of a general compliment to the ability and position of those present.

"You may speak freely. We—my friends and I—are agreed on that subject." Don Hugo waved his hand largely. "Your mission then concerns—"

"A certain gentleman well known, not only in these parts, but throughout the whole of Spain, a certain Don Q.," added the captain quietly.

"Come, come, Senor Capitan! We have less respect for the one-eared brigand of the Boca de Lobo," laughed the governor, too busy in lighting a cigarette to notice a sudden contraction of del Pino's features. "That vulture of the rocks has troubled us too long. We were, precisely when you arrived, arranging to make an end of him."

"No doubt your plan would be successful, though it was said, in Madrid, that he had defied capture for some 20 years already, and that a score or so expeditions sent out against him had failed," observed del Pino, with a shrug of his shoulders. "He must be a remarkable personage. I was the more gratified, therefore, at receiving orders from headquarters to come down and deal specially with a man of such interesting antecedents."

"Can you bring yourself to conceive the last crime the fellow has committed, senor?" Don Hugo took advantage of a pause. "He had the arrogance to kidnap my own wife in the last fortnight!"

"He held her at ransom, of course?"

"No, no; not precisely," stuttered Don Hugo. "He released her—after a few hours."

"That was surely considerate."

"Far from it! The reason of his action is obvious. I wonder it does not strike you, senor."

Del Pino gazed for an instant at the governor's air of self-complacent ruffling and shook his head.

"You must forgive my dullness, excellency. I cannot imagine the reason."

"The ruffian was afraid to do otherwise! Naturally, on discovering the Condessa's identity, he permitted her to return home. He knows my reputation, Senor Capitan! But"—with a frown—"I cannot forgive his treatment of my wife; he terrified her with shocking threats."

Del Pino's face altered. A twist, it might have been of derision or incredulity, deepened the corners of his mouth. "Of personal ill-treatment? Surely not!"

"His threat was directed against me. I must explain. It is well known that the brute has but one ear. I mentioned the fact openly. He appears to resent this, and swore to be revenged on me by depriving me of both of mine."

"Horrible!" Del Pino caressed his own ears meditatively. "Horrible!" he murmured. "To be without one ear would be a sufficient humiliation; but to lose both, and by the hand of an enemy, would be a mortification scarcely to be survived."

"Fortunately, none of us need fear anything of the kind," interrupted Don Hugo brusquely. "We have decided to make away with this miserable hill thief. He has been too long at large. I myself am about to lead an expedition into the sierra with that object."

"It is now hardly necessary," observed del Pino, with an accentuation of his gentle politeness.

"What, do you propose to replace me, senor?" asked Don Hugo, with heat.

"Replace you? No, excellency, that would be impossible! But, by good luck, I may have forestalled you."

"I fail to catch your meaning, senor," said Don Hugo, but half mollified.

"It is that I had the honor to kill Don Q. yesterday."

A profound silence of a few seconds followed this announcement.

"You killed Don Q. yesterday?" the governor almost shouted.

"Yes, excellency, and I shall be glad to have a receipt for the body," went on del Pino immovably, "according to the regulations of my corps."

The tension of the last couple of weeks was lifted from the spirit of Don Hugo. In the enthusiasm of his relief he flung his arms round the stonily unresponsive del Pino, and embraced him effusively on both cheeks.

"Accept our congratulations, senor. Gentlemen, let us drink to the health of this paladin, Capt. del Pino!"

Del Pino's glass was filled; no one observed that he left it untouched. But he professed himself overwhelmed by their approbation; his success, he begged them to believe, was a mere matter of luck. He explained that, wishing to see the region of Don Q.'s exploits, he had left the train when approaching the mountains and ridden the remainder of the way. Thus he came by chance upon the brigand and shot him down.

"And now I would request his excellency to come with me to the cell in which the body has been placed, for the purpose of identifying it," he wound up.

"By all means. Let us go without delay."

Don Hugo led the way from the room.

"You say the body is in a cell, senor? Why put a dead body in a cell?" he asked laughingly, as they went down the corridor.

The captain of the civil guard smiled slightly.

"From all that is said of Don Q., excellency, I thought it well to turn the key even on his corpse."

The governor stopped as they passed a stairway leading upward.

"My wife is on the roof—I will tell her."

"Pardon, excellency, make sure of him first."

They descended to the level of the ordinary cells, then lower to those more remote and secured dungeons reserved for the worst criminals.

"No, no, excellency, allow me to show you the way. The cell is already lit," del Pino's voice was heard to say as the door shut behind them.

A quarter of an hour passed but the effervescence of excitement had not yet subsided in the assembly room, when the door opened and a figure stood upon the threshold. It was not that of the governor nor of del Pino.

"Don Q.!" a shout of astonishment went up.

"At your service, senores. Be silent, I pray you"—a small, commanding hand rose from the cloak. "Be silent and remain seated. Remember, you have to deal with a man who is equally ready to die to-night or 10 years hence. Also, if I may remind you, of a man who has never been known to neglect a precaution."

"Where is the governor?"

"Safe, senores, in a cell of his own prison, and with him is the body of a vile footpad, nicknamed El Duques, whose methods have brought discredit upon my profession, and whom I have at length punished. I undertook the function properly appertaining to the helpless executive. Late yesterday I killed El Duques."

"But del Pino—have you killed him also?"

"He is no more, senores, I regret to inform you." Don Q. laughed sibilantly. "But do not implore his loss, for, with the exception of his well-curled wig and his hat of the civil guard, he survives in me."

"You passed yourself off as Capt. del Pino of the civil guard? But how could you impose upon any one with the body? The corpse was the corpse, you tell us, of El Duques."

"I will explain, senores. A razor passed over the skull, a little coloring on the eyelids, the refinement bestowed by the purging hand of death converted it into a poor caricature of—myself." Don Q. raised his sombrero, and from the doublings of the cloak shot up the lean scraggy neck, the bald-browed malignant face, the aspect of a vulture paraphrased into human likeness.

"One word more, senores. This Don Hugo committed a crime. It became necessary that I should come down from my sierra to deal with him. He made before you this evening a statement, that he has made before the public. He said that Don Q. was poorer than the meanest ass in Spain—I give you his exact words, senores—for he carried but one ear. Sit still!" His livid-lidded eyes flickered ominously upon them. "Behold, senores, one, two," he touched his ears one after the other with the hand that was not engaged in holding a pistol. "You can now as honorable men bear witness that you have yourselves counted the ears of Don Q., and that he possesses both. You will have the goodness to count those of the governor of the prison of Castelleno—presently."

The door was softly and suddenly shut and the lock clicked. Immediately an indescribable uproar broke out.

The Condessa, from her chair, on the house-top, heard it and sprang to her feet, for in the moonlight before her stood a figure she had seen dimly half a month earlier across the smoke and flame of a fire. She recoiled with a cry.

"Fear nothing, beautiful senora," said the soft, hissing voice. "I come but to tell you that I have kept my word."

"What have you done?" she cried trembling.

"I have had a little interview with Don Hugo."

The lady shrieked. "His ears?"

"Will decorate my modest museum up in the mountains. But he will be, believe me, for a time at least, a better husband."

THE DARK BROTHERS OF THE CIVIL GUARD.

The name of Don Quebranta-huesos spelled despair to the civil guards of Spain. Time after time he had foiled their best-laid schemes. Yet it must be owned that he was a fair and even an appreciative enemy. He had been heard to say more than once that, but for the existence of the guardia civile he would, in one of his black moods, have taken his own life from sheer ennui.

He was wont to add that he owed a debt to none in the world, save only to the guardia civile and the ibex of the sierra. For the ibex lured sportsmen to travel up into the solitudes of the mountains, where now and again they were captured by Don Q.'s scouts and held to ransom; while the civil guard kept alive his interest in preserving his own life, since they were always trying to take it.

The guardia civile is a picked corps of military police, who possess a manual containing one of the most remarkable and noble codes of regulations the world has ever seen. Part I opens with the following sentence: "Honor must be the chief object of the civil guard, and it must be preserved spotless and intact." The outcome of such a code as this, added to a gather-

The Potato.

The common potato was at the time of the discovery of America in cultivation from Chile, to which it is indigenous, along the greater part of the Andes as far north as to New Granada. It was introduced from Quito into Spain about 1580 under the name of "papa," which in Spanish it still bears. From Spain it found its way to Italy, where it became known as "tartuffalo," and thence was carried to Mons, in Belgium, by one of the attendants of the pope's legate to that country. In 1588 it was sent by Philippe de Sivry, governor of Mons, to the botanist, De L'Ecluse, professor at the University of Leyden, who in 1601 published the first good description of it under the name of "Papas peruanorum," and stated that it had then spread throughout Germany. Recommended in France by Caspar Bauhin, the culture of the tuber rapidly extended in 1592 throughout Franche Comte, the Vosges and Burgundy. But the belief becoming prevalent that it caused leprosy and fever, it underwent an ordeal of persecution from which it did not recover until three-quarters of a century afterward.

Sailors' Side Lines.

"Every sailor has a side line," he said. "Many an old shellback makes more out of his side line than out of punching sails and chewing ropes. Watch 'em come aboard for a long voyage. Here's one with a camera, plates and developer. He'll snapshot spouting whales, icebergs, porpoises, wrecks, anything of interest that turns up, for such pictures sell to magazines and newspapers, and he'll photograph his mates at so much a head. Here's a man with $5 worth of fine wool. He'll knit it all up into ladies' shawls during the voyage. With his skillful work he'll change it into $50 worth of wool. The tattooed chap has a chunk of ivory. He'll carve it into little ships. He's very handy that way. The bow legged feller darns stockings and patches clothes. The cross eyed one shaves and hair cuts. As for me, I run a lottery."

Colors and Seamstresses.

The seamstress, passing her needle through and through the fabric on her lap, said:

"I love to sew white. I love to sew green too. Pinks are easy. So are most of the clear, pale tints. But black! But red! But shepherd's plaid!"

She threw back her head in horror.

"Bright red, when you sew it, inflames your vision, it angers you, it makes you nervous. Black strains the eyes out of your head, the stitches in it are so hard to see. Black is a depressing color too. But worst of all is that combination of black and white called shepherd's plaid. Work on shepherd's plaid an hour or two and the black and white squares will dance under your eyes like living things. Polka dots dance, too," she ended. "They polka; hence the name."

The Childish Voice Too Much.

A good story is told of Signor Foli, the famous basso. Once upon a time he was singing "The Raft," when a childish voice from somewhere in the stalls suddenly piped in and attempted to organize an impromptu duet. Unfortunately the next line of the song was: "Hark! What sound is that which breaks upon mine ear?" This so tickled the fancy of the great vocalist that he burst into a hearty fit of laughter and left the platform, followed by the pianist. Twice they came back and attempted the song, and finally they had to give it up in despair, much to the amusement of the audience.

Many Kinds of Days In One.

A mean solar day is the average or mean of all the apparent solar days in a year. Mean solar time is that shown by a well regulated clock or watch, while apparent solar time is that shown by a well constructed sun dial. The difference between the two at any time is the equation of time and may amount to sixteen minutes and twenty-one seconds. The astronomical day begins at noon and the civil day at the preceding midnight. The sidereal and mean solar days are both invariable, but one day of the latter is equal to 1 day 3 minutes and 56.555 seconds of the former.

A Safe Perch.

At the crowded downtown corner the frightened pedestrians were scurrying out of the way of street cars, automobiles, delivery wagons and policemen on horseback.

"Gosh," exclaimed the window washer, looking down on them from his perch on the narrow ledge of a fifteen story window, "I'm glad I ain't in that crowd!"

Almost as Good as Art.

Small Edith was visiting in the country for the first time.

"What do you think of our rural scenery, dear?" asked her grandmother.

"Oh, it isn't so bad!" replied Edith. "It looks almost as natural as real theater scenery."—Chicago News.

BROWN SUGAR AGAIN.

May Come Into Fashion Once More Owing to the Pure Food Law.

What will the housewife say when she asks her grocer for his best sugar and is shown a scoop of the yellowish brownish sweet such as her grandmother used to buy? You can almost hear her shriek of awe as she is told that this is the best sugar in the house. You can imagine her surprise when the grocer quotes the brown sugar to her at 6½ cents a pound and the "old fashioned" white sugar at 5 cents.

For brown sugar is now the proper thing. Whoever does not know this is ignorant of the rulings on the food law. The crystal-like sugar we have been eating is adulterated. All of this pretty white sugar, whether granulated, powdered or in loaves, has been bleached by a chemical process which the interpreters of the food law have seen fit to condemn.

It is learned that there is no such thing as pure white sugar; that sugar to be pure must be brown. The bleaching process consists in submitting the pure sugar to a treatment of mineral bluing. By this and other processes a great deal of the natural sweetness is extracted from the sugar, and it is often further adulterated by the addition of insoluble substances, such as marble dust.

Confectioners have even made so bold as to advertise marble dust for the very purpose of adulteration, and it is regrettable to say there was a demand that well repaid the advertiser for his expense and his daring. It is even claimed that sand is used in white sugar for the purpose of increasing its weight and bulk.

There is a foreign substance, called ultramarine, remaining in the process of manufacture which is often added to white sugar to give it the requisite blue tinge. Whatever the result of the commission's permanent rulings, we have been taught that white sugar is impure, and brown sugar will come into style again.—What to Eat.

Oddities of Diamond Imports.

It is a somewhat remarkable fact that the diamond trade is limited to so few American ports of entry. As compared with New York's importations of nearly $24,000,000, Chicago imported direct only $132,583 worth in this class, San Francisco slightly less, and the only other port which showed figures of appreciable interest was Newport, with $11,728. Similarly with uncut and unset stones, which come in free. New York's total of over $10,000,000 finds Boston and Baltimore pressing close for second place with less than $5,000 apiece. Philadelphia's direct importations are only one-fourth of this latter total and Chicago's only half of Philadelphia's. The only other place in the whole list of ports of entry which reported uncut diamonds for free entry was the little border town of Paso del Norte, Tex., which owned up to $34 worth of stones on which free entry was claimed because of being uncut.—Argonaut.

The Road to Fame.

"Zangwill," said a magazine editor, "entered literature by the back stairs. Instead of submitting his first story to the magazine, he had it printed in pamphlet form and sold it on the news stands at a cent a copy. He made out of it $150. Now, had this story been submitted to me I should undoubtedly have rejected it.

"Zangwill has turned to plays because he doesn't think there is much in books. Once I heard him say bitterly: 'If you are blessed with talent, great industry and conceit, it is possible by dint of slaving day and night for years during the flower of your youth to attain fame infinitely less widespread than a prizefighter's.'"—New York Press.

Crude Printing In Tibet.

Great printing works are established at Nartang, in Tibet. A correspondent says: "There are thousands and thousands of blocks at Nartang, comprising matter in type equivalent to numerous different volumes. Each wooden block is about twenty-four inches long by twelve inches wide, one face having carved upon it a complete page of lettering. The method of printing is primitive in the extreme and consists of laying the paper on a flat surface and levering the block upon it with a long handle much as the village blacksmith works his bellows."

Jack London as a Cook.

Jack London's recipe for the cooking of wild duck is so simple that it just misses attaining the distinction of being the easiest cooking formula known. "Stuff the duck with a bunch of celery or spread the interior of the carcass liberally with celery salt. Then roast for fourteen minutes." If you are duly exact about following this rule your duck will be blood rare, and if you will do nothing to it save dust it with salt and paprika it will simply melt in the mouth.—Miles Bradford in Bohemian.

Disappearance of the Ne'er-do-well.

In the English village of twenty-five or thirty years ago there used to be a number of half employed people, many of whom, as far as our own recollection goes, belonged to the class of amusing "ne'er-do-wells." Under modern circumstances these seem to have been almost completely eliminated from country life.—Country Life.

Australian Defense.

Six years ago each state had a force, naval and military, that at any rate contained the germs of efficiency, and defense was being studied by the several governments with vigor and determination. Since federation was accomplished we have sunk lower and lower, until our defense force is a mockery.—Sydney Herald.

A NATION'S STRENGTH.

What builds a nation's pillars high
And its foundations strong?
What makes it mighty to defy
The foes that round it throng?

It is not gold. Its kingdoms grand
Go down in battle's shock;
Its gates are laid on sinking sand,
Not on abiding rock.

Is it the sword? Ask the red dust
Of empires passed away.
The blood has turned their stones to rust,
Their glory to decay.

And is it pride? Ah, that bright crown
Has seemed to nations sweet!
But God has struck its luster down
In ashes at his feet.

Not gold, but only man, can make
A people great and strong;
Men who for truth and honor's sake
Stand fast and suffer long.

Brave men, who work while others sleep,
Who dare while others fly—
They build a nation's pillars deep
And lift them to the sky.
—Emerson.

VICTORIA CROSS.

Heroes of the British Army Who Are to Be Remembered.

The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the decoration of the Victoria Cross being delivered to the representatives of the undermentioned officers and men who fell in the performance of acts of valor, and with reference to whom it was notified on various dates in the London Gazette that they would have been recommended to her late Majesty for the Victoria Cross had they survived. The acts of bravery are recounted in the London Gazette, and, briefly, were as follows:

Private Edward Spence, 42nd Regiment, at attack of the Fort of Ruhya, April 15, 1858, volunteered with Lance-Corporal Thompson to assist in rescuing the body of an officer. Private Spence dauntlessly placed himself in an exposed position so as to cover the party bearing away the body.

Ensign Everard Aloysius Lisle Phillips, of the 11th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, performed many gallant deeds during the siege of Delhi; wounded three times; killed in streets, September 18, 1859.

Lieutenant T. Melvill, 24th Foot; efforts to save the Queen's Color at Isandlwanha, 1879.

Lieutenant N. J. A. Coghill, 24th Foot; efforts to save a brother officer's life, Isandlwanha, 1879.

Trooper F. W. Baxter, Bulawayo Field Force; dismounted and gave his horse to wounded comrade when closely pursued, April 22, 1896.

Lieutenant H. L. S. MacLean, Indian Staff Corps; heroism in rescuing comrade at Vama Kili, Upper Surat, 1897.

A Very Great Laird.

Lord Breadalbane, who has just been appointed Keeper of the Privy Seal of Scotland, is a very great laird indeed, says M. A. P., owning miles and miles of the most exquisite scenery, populous with red, roe and fallow deer of Perthshire and Argyllshire, and living most of the year among his "ain fowk." Yet he is democratic in his notions and very "approachable." Taymouth Castle is often thrown open to the public, and the noble owner is fond of acting as anonymous cicerone. On one such occasion a departing tourist heard a whistle behind him, and turning beheld the Marquis running after him waving a gamp, which was returned with a hearty, "Hey, man, you've left your umbrella."

Lord Breadalbane is a Knight of the Garter, but he has two other decorations which are in a sense even more distinguished. One of these is the medal of the Royal Humane Society, conferred on him for saving the life of a servant at the imminent risk of his own, and the other is the Swedish Order of the Seraphim, conferred on him by King Oscar four years ago in acknowledgment of his princely hospitalities to Prince Gustavus Adolphus when his Royal Highness came over to marry Princess Margaret of Connaught. This was a remarkable honor, for this ancient and exclusive order had never before been conferred on any non-Royal British subject. Lord Breadalbane is Colonel of the Black Watch and holds office in a dozen volunteer regiments. From 1893 to 1895 he was Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

An Ideal Citizen.

The ideal citizen is the man who believes that all men are brothers and the nation is merely an extension of his family, to be loved, respected and cared for accordingly. Such a man attends personally to all civic duties with which he deems himself charged. Those which are within his own control he would no more trust to his inferiors than he would leave the education of his children to kitchen servants. The public demands upon his time, thought and money come upon him suddenly, and often they find him ill prepared, but he nerves himself to the inevitable, knowing that in the village, state and nation any mistake or neglect upon his part must impose a penalty sooner or later upon those whom he loves.—John Habberton.

The Ostrich's Mistake.

A trained ostrich recently disconcerted its exhibitor at a music hall by continually endeavoring to break away from all restraint and to climb over the footlights into the orchestra. The widely advertised act came to a sudden end, and the professor emerged from behind the curtain and apologized for the actions of his pet in about these words:

"Lydies and gentlemen, Hi ham very sorry to disappoint you this hevening. We are compelled to cease our hengagement until the management hengages a new horchestra leader. The one at present hemployed 'ere 'as no 'air on top of 'is 'eah, and my bird takes it for a hegg."

THE ROARIN' GAME.

Perhaps It Was Brought Into Scotland by the Flemish Migration In the Sixteenth Century.

The Scottish people regard the history of curling seriously, as a chapter of interest and importance in the history of the nation. They claim that no other game so well illustrates the national character or tends so much to the healthy development of physical, mental and social qualities. They regard it as a valuable institution of civilized life, and trace its origin back four centuries, but it was only about the middle of the eighteenth century that it began to take on the dignity of a truly national game. During the last seventy-five years it has spread among all the English-speaking people in climates where winter bestows the necessary conditions of ice. The great bonspiels of Scotland draw 50,000 people on the lochs, and in Canada, where the climate is favorable, curling devotees are numbered by tens of thousands.

The game was originally played with rough bowlders. The smooth rounding of the stone occurred at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and the stones now used are polished works of art made of granite, and the twisting motion employed gives them a drawing power on corrugated ice of from three to four feet on either side of the ice, as determined by the in-turn out outturn given in delivery. The variety and precision of the modern game place it in the rank of a science. Curling has taken a firm hold upon its votaries, and has drawn around it a delightful literature of narrative, poetry and anecdote.

The history of curling is given in large volumes, in which the etymology, history and literature of the game have been treated exhaustively. A cold climate and man's inherent tendency to throw stones make the foundation of the game, but its origin, like other origins, is uncertain. Though the game has been scientifically developed in Scotland, it had its origin probably in the Netherlands, which have had a great influence on the arts and industries of Great Britain. Many of the terms used in the game point to the Low Countries as the place where it originated. It was probably brought over to Scotland by the emigrant Flemings in the sixteenth century, and from that time its development as a game of science has been the work of Scotchmen of all professions.

The ministry is especially well represented in the history of the game. In Scotland the laird and the minister encourage this innocent and exhilarating pastime for the sake of its many moral and social influences. Curling is a manly sport; the associations of the game are honorable, and it has been noted that the character of curlers in public and professional life is kind and honest.

The first type of stone used was the kutting stone, without handles, with a hollow or notch for the finger and thumb of the player and probably thrown for a part of the course; they weighed from five to twenty-five pounds, and were generally picked from the channels of the streams, whence the old name of channel stones. The ancient game resembled quoits, and the stone bore the name of kuting or quoiting stone. Specimens of the old quoiting stones are preserved, some of them dating back to the year 1600.

The second type of curling stone was a rough block with a handle attached. Stones of this type were often unshapely, but the handle gave more power to the player, and many of these stones weigh as much as 75 and 85 pounds. One, called the Jubilee stone, weighs 117 pounds, and was used by three generations of the same family. There was no regulation weight, and the stones had an individuality of their own. Many of them are preserved in the Scottish museums and club collections, and some bear names suggestive of their history, structure or shape, as Black [illegible], the Doctor, the Town Clerk, the Bailey, the Grey Hen, the Goose, the Girdle, the Grey Mare, and the Bible. There were giants in those days, and stories are told of strong players hurling a 75-pound stone across a mile of loch ice.

The third type of stone is the rounded and polished stone, which possesses a capacity not possessed by the old irregular shaped stones. The inventor of the circular curling stone is a great unknown. The stones of modern days differ in character, lacking the individuality of the irregular stones of olden times, on corrugated ice they give a precision and a variety to the game unknown before.

There have been changes from time to time in the distances and relative measurements of the rink of ice on which the stones are played.

The Cab Horse Won.

A gentleman who was anxious to catch a train hailed a hansom, gave instructions as to his destination and jumped in, but the horse made terribly slow progress, and the "fare" was afraid that he would miss his train.

"Look here, cabby," he said, "can't you make your gee-gee go faster? I must catch the 3.45."

The cabman winked knowingly.

"Yes, sir, he can go faster," was the reply, "but it's like this: Yer see; my horse is an old racer, and the best way for you to make him go faster is for you to bet me half a crown he won't catch the 3.45. That'll put him on his mettle, and he'll fly like the wind."

The horse did it.—London Express.

Pruning House Plants.

With soft wooded plants this can hardly be overdone for securing good shapes. Long legged, spindling things are hardly ever attractive or desirable. The bush form, close and compact from the ground up, is what we want.

Tuberous Begonias.

Begonias of the tuberous class that were kept in pots over winter may be started up, giving them fresh soil a little later; those out of soil to be potted. Seed may be sown to make flowering plants for use late in summer.

A Woman May Be Happy Even Though She Be An Old Maid

It is not such a dreadful calamity to be an "old maid." It is much better than to marry where there is not deep and abiding love.

The general opinion among girls of to-day seems to be that the life of an old maid is a distinctly unenviable one, and, therefore, to be avoided at all costs. They shudder at the bare thought of being "left on the shelf" and ending their days without having realized the natural ambition of most women, i. e., to have a home of their own. The dread of remaining a spinster is, in fact, so great in their minds as to actually lead some of them to marry a man just for the sake of changing their name and showing their friends that they have not failed to win something in the great matrimonial market.

One does not know whether to upbraid such girls for their foolishness or pity them on account of the great unhappiness which is bound to follow their marriages. For a girl who allows the fear of becoming an old maid to urge her into marrying the first man who asks her hand, irrespective of all other considerations, will assuredly live to rue the day she became a bride. The life of the sourest old spinster in the kingdom would, in nine cases out of ten, be preferable to hers.

But the sensible girl who is in danger of being "left on the shelf" will look around her and notice the happy lives which old maids lead nowadays. The term "old maid" does not cause them the slightest unhappiness. They are not disappointed women who, having failed to win a husband, pass their time in lamenting that fact, or saying disagreeable or nasty things about more fortunate female friends and the sterner sex. Instead, they just come to the philosophical conclusion that they are not of the marrying sort, to use a phrase common among spinsters, and settle down to enjoy life by helping others to do the same.

In fact, there is a charm about the life of an old maid which very few other women experience. She has such peculiar advantages of becoming a pleasant and entertaining person, and all the little happinesses which she obtains lead her to forget what may have been a little reverse in a love affair years ago.

And if she lacks the love and care of a husband she is more than recompensed by the love of other relatives, which she wins on account of her goodness and kindness of heart. As a happy old maid once remarked: "I feel sometimes as if I loved everybody and everybody loved me. I am the recipient of many secrets, and I hope I have fulfilled the compliment once passed on me by one boy cousin to another, who said that I was not a bit pretty, but someone to love and someone to trust."

How could an old maid possibly be unhappy under such circumstances?

Tim Hurst's Baseball Troubles.

At the close of that memorable season when Tim Hurst managed the Browns for Von der Ahe he laid over in Philadelphia on his way to his home up the state, and while in the Quaker City he told his daily experiences while running the Mound City club.

"My Mondays," said Timothy, "were devoted to telling the St. Louis sporting editors how I was going to win the pennant the next year. Tuesdays I would be kept busy denying to the club owners that I had ever made any such statements. Wednesdays I would be explaining to the newspapers why we weren't winning games. Thursdays I would be fighting with Chris to keep him from fining the players all the money they had coming to them. Fridays I would generally be busy all day getting the terms of pitchers that no batter could hit."

"And on Saturdays?"

"On Saturdays I would spend the day signing players that couldn't hit any kind of pitching."

Paint and Ocean Travel.

"The worst feature of ocean travel is never mentioned in steamship company prospectuses or in books of travel," said a returned tourist. "It is not seasickness, for only a few are taken that way in the ocean greyhounds that neither rock nor pitch. It is not the narrow quarters or the inferior cooking or the tipping habit. It is paint. There is always wet paint on an ocean steamer, and there is never a sign on it to warn passengers. The modern sailor is a painter, constantly wielding the brush, always painting some part of the ship or other. There is hardly a passenger on an ocean liner that does not land from a voyage with some article of apparel damaged by paint. A sailor told me once that every ship is entirely repainted inside and out at least three times a year. The work goes on constantly in port and on the sea, and the passenger never can escape."

Lightning Flashes.

Lightning flashes in a storm are found by an English observer to be much less irregular in period than they appear. Such storms have usually two foci, sometimes three, from which the flashes radiate, and the discharges from each come at regular intervals. The apparent irregularity is due to the varying rates of the different centers. In one storm noticed the two foci were about a mile and a half apart, and in an hour the northern center emitted thirty flashes at intervals of fifteen, thirty, forty-five, sixty and ninety seconds, and the southern center gave sixteen flashes at intervals of seventeen, thirty-four and fifty-one seconds. Another unexplained observation is that just before each great flash there is a momentary faint lighting up of the sky in the stormy region.

It Made a Difference.

An excited man rushed into a lawyer's office and without any preliminary burst out, "Has a husband a right to open his wife's letters?" "Certainly, sir, certainly," was the reply. "Open all you please." "Well, here is a letter my wife has written to your wife and asked me to deliver. I think there's something unpleasant in it about me. I wish you'd open it and if there is just burn it." "Humph! Does my wife know your wife is going to write to her?" "Yes." "And if my wife doesn't get this letter she'll soon find it out, won't she?" "Of course." "On second thoughts," said the lawyer thoughtfully, "I believe there is a legal finding to the effect that it is a criminal offense to open a wife's letters. I couldn't take the risk, sir; indeed, I couldn't."

Echo Verses.

Echo verses were sometimes used effectively for epigrams and squibs. Thus a critic once wrote:

I'd fain praise your poem. But, tell me, how is it
When I cry out "exquisite" echo cries "quiz it?"

And when in 1831 Paganini was drawing crowds to the opera house at extravagant prices the Times printed the following lines:

What are they who pay three guineas
To hear a tune of Paganini's?
Echo—Pack o' ninnies!

—London Graphic.

Youthful Misinformation.

Among the answers to questions at a recent school examination were the following interesting examples of youthful misinformation: "Gross ignorance is 144 times as bad as just ordinary ignorance." "Anchorite, an old fashioned hermit sort of a fellow who has anchored hisself to one place." "The liver is an infernal organ." "Vacuum is nothing with the air sucked out of it put up in a pickle bottle. It is very hard to get."

Only Two In Office.

A man in a certain township was elected constable. The members of the family were much elated and could scarcely contain themselves with their newly acquired civic honors. At last one of the smaller children said to the wife, "Ma, are we all constables?" The mother replied: "Gwan, child! Nobody's constable but me and your pa!"

The Real Cause.

Tommy—What was you bawlin' about last night?

Willie—W'y, when paw and me got home from fishin' maw didn't have supper ready, and I whimpered about it, and paw licked me.

"And he licked you jis' fer whimperin'?"

"Naw; because supper wasn't ready."

Patience is the support of weakness; impatience is the ruin of strength.—Colton.

ALL ABOUT A BOOK.

Trouble In Store For the One Who Threw It Out of the Window.

"Will you please take that book out of this seat?"

"What for?"

"I'd like to sit down here."

"Plenty of other seats in this car, are there not?"

"Yes, sir, but this happens to be the one I want."

"Just so."

(Pause.)

"Will you take that book out of this seat?"

"No, sir."

"You will not?"

"I will not."

"I think it's hoggish for a man to pile his baggage on the seat alongside of him."

"I don't care a continental what you think."

(Another pause.)

"Once more, will you take that book out of this seat?"

"Once more, sir, no."

"Then I'll throw it out of the window."

"I advise you not to do it."

"So?"

"Yes. You might get yourself into trouble."

By the way of reply the irate passenger picked up the offending book and hurled it through the open window.

"Now, sir," he demanded, "what are you going to do about it?"

"Nothing. The book isn't mine."

"Whose is it?"

"I think it belongs to that husky looking fellow in the other end of the car who seems to be coming back to look for it."—Chicago Tribune.

Well Meant, But—

The puzzle department of London Truth recently had a competition on examples of unintentionally funny paragraphs. Here are a few of the specimens sent in: "We regret to announce the death at Cairo of Sir A. B. Smith, his London physician having recommended a warmer climate." In a discussion on the dress of the clergy a nonconformist minister declared, "As for me, I will wear no clothes to distinguish me from my fellow men." This came under the "In Memoriam" column: "In loving memory of ——, beloved wife of ——, who died ——. This is inserted by her sorrowed daughters. 'What is home without a mother?' 'Peace, perfect peace.'" "For sale, a handsome St. Bernard puppy; six months old; clean and healthy; will eat anything; very fond of children. Apply X., office of this paper." Seen in a newspaper cutting some years ago. The following newspaper advertisement appeared in a morning newspaper: "Wanted, a gentleman to undertake the sale of a patent medicine. The advertiser guarantees that it will be profitable to the undertaker."

More Thorough.

Bobby had gone to Canada to visit his English aunt and was trying to be on his best behavior all the time, but at luncheon when his aunt asked him if he would like some curried chicken he was speechless with surprise.

"What is the matter, Bobby?" asked his aunt. "Don't you like curried chicken?"

"I don't know," answered Bobby. "We don't curry ours. We pick them."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Thrilling Repast.

"Lady," began the wanderer, "kin I chop some wood fur you?"

"No, thank you," replied the up to date housewife. "We cook and heat entirely by electricity."

"Nothin' I kin do to git a bite to eat?"

"Yes. If you care to peel the shocks from the electric wires I'll allow you to eat the currents."—Harper's Weekly.

Panic.

"You don't look well this morning, old chap," said the tragedian.

"No," replied the comedian. "I was the victim of a fire panic last night."

"What! When?"

"Oh, the panic struck me when I heard I was going to be fired, but I found this morning it was a false alarm."—Philadelphia Press.

The Mouse and the Lion.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.

"My dear," said Grace Seward as she crossed the wide hotel veranda, "who do you think has come?"

Marion Page looked up brightly from the book she was reading. "The king of Patagonia," she suggested.

"Nonsense, Marion! Don't be silly! This is really somebody out of the ordinary—a real social lion! I give you three guesses. Take the first."

"But I'm no good at guessing," protested Marion. "You'll have to tell me."

"Well, then, hold your breath! It's Burton Sturgis!"

"Burton Sturgis!" repeated Marion slowly.

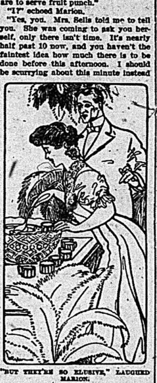
"Isn't that a sensation?" cried Miss Seward, sinking into a chair at Marion's side, with a swish of beruffled skirts. "Fancy such a great explorer, writer and statesman as he is choosing to stop at Windmere for a day! I've always been taught to suppose that such people avoided hotels in the height of the season, haven't you? But it seems he lived some place near here when he was a boy, and he wants to stop and see it on his way through. I suppose famous people always want to visit the haunts of their early life, don't they? And Mrs. Barrington-Sells happens to know him, so she's going to give a tea for him in one of the hotel cottages this afternoon."

"A tea?"

"Yes, a tea. You might know she'd never let a lion escape. It's in the Farquhar cottage, I believe, and you are to serve fruit punch."

"I?" echoed Marion.

"Yes, you. Mrs. Sells told me to tell you. She was coming to ask you herself, only there isn't time. It's nearly half past 10 now, and you haven't the faintest idea how much there is to be done before this afternoon. I should be scurrying about this minute instead of sitting here talking. There are oceans of people to be invited—all Mrs. Sells' friends—and the cottage to be put in order, and the decorations—we've simply robbed the flower beds. And Mrs. Sells wants to know if you won't take the trap this morning and get her some ferns and trailing vines. There are a lot up the road by Benders'. You know the way. I'd come with you, but I have to fill the vases and half a dozen other things."



"BUT THEY'RE SO ELUSIVE," LAUGHED MARION.

She skipped down the veranda steps and then paused. "What are you going to wear?" she asked.

"Mercy," laughed Marion, "I haven't had time to decide!"

"Well, then, I hope you'll choose your gray silk mull. It's perfectly fascinating. You look like a dear little mouse in it. I'm going to grace the occasion in pale blue. That's not a pun." And Miss Seward rushed across the lawn with the same impetuosity with which she had arrived.

A few moments later Marion drove briskly along the road, a scissors and garden knife on the seat beside her.

"To think," she mused, "that he should come today!"

For two years past Burton Sturgis had stood to her for an ideal, a hero to whom she had meted out a generous share of girlish hero worship. His books occupied a favorite corner of her bookshelf, and a picture of him, cut from a current magazine, was tucked away in a drawer of her desk. She had known that it was possible that she should some day meet him. Still she had not thought that it would be as soon as this. Indeed, she might have known him before had she made the effort to do so, but Grace Seward's description of her as a mouse suited her exactly.

"I'm afraid it doesn't take a gray gown to make me one either," she mourned as she stood cutting the vines, the sunlight glinting on her soft hair. "I'm not a bit good at gushing, like the other girls."

"A mere mouse," she repeated to herself that afternoon as she sat in a fern embowered corner of the tiny reception room behind a huge cut glass bowl filled with pineapple lemonade and its attendant sherbet cups and plates of delicate wafers. Beyond, in the drawing room, was a swirl of pink and white and blue, a mass of fluffy gowns and pretty wearers, and in the center of them the portly figure and triumphant face of Mrs. Barrington-Sells. Beside her, immaculate in white flannels, stood Burton Sturgis, a tall, thin man with a commanding profile and dark hair lightly touched with gray.

"He's just as I imagined he would be," murmured Marion, "even to the little bored look that settles around his eyes and the quick way he has of throwing back his head."

Every now and then a group of girls would drift up to her table with little exclamations and thrills of laughter. "Oh, thank you, Miss Page! How cool and delicious! Oh, girls, isn't Burton Sturgis fascinating, and aren't his books too lovely for anything? Let's go back and talk to him again." And the group would break away from Marion and return to the ring that surrounded the great man. From time to time Marion caught snatches of their feminine chatter. "Your charming books, Mr. Sturgis! Adorable! Quaint! Delicious!"

Presently Mrs. Sells broke away from her circle and waddled up to Marion with Burton Sturgis in tow.

"My dear," she wheezed, "let me present Mr. Sturgis. Mr. Sturgis, Miss Page. See that he has enough, Marion," and, playfully waving her pudgy hand at them, she went back to her other guests.

"It is a thirsty day," said Burton Sturgis, taking the sherbet cup that Marion held out to him. "Do you think you could manage to put in another cherry, Miss Page? I'm awfully fond of cherries."

"But they're so elusive," laughed Marion. "They always seem to slip out of the ladle. I just think I've caught one, and then it gets away."

"It's like the small boy and the minnow," agreed Burton Sturgis, his bored look giving place to a smile. "There! You've missed it again!" as a refractory cherry with a little splash sank to the bottom of the bowl.

"I doubt if you could do as well!" cried Marion.

"What do you bet?" he said boyishly.

"Two wafers and half a macaroon."

"Done!" He seized the ladle and was in the midst of an excited dipping when Mrs. Sells came toward him like a ship under full sail.

"They're calling for you, Mr. Sturgis," she said, "and this room is too small to hold them all. We shall be mobbed if we don't hurry."

He put down the ladle with a regretful look. "I suppose I'll have to, then," he said and followed her with lagging steps.

Marion leaned her chin on her hand and looked after him. Her moment of moments was over. She had met her idol face to face, and not one word had she spoken of all that his personality and work had meant to her in the past two years. A flush passed across her face. "I might at least have told him that I had read his books," she said to herself, "but it's too late now. I've had my chance and lost it. What a little stupid he must think me if he thinks of me at all!"

Then the line of chattering guests began to thin. One by one they were departing. Mrs. Barrington-Sells' round face was lit with contentment. It had been a most successful afternoon.

"Even she had something to say to him," thought Marion disconsolately. There was a quick step at her side. She looked up. It was Burton Sturgis.

"Well, that's over!" he cried, with a shrug of delight. "And, heavens, but I'm glad to be back in this corner with you! Do you know, Miss Page, you're the only girl this afternoon who hasn't said 'Quaint, lovely, charming and delicious!' I'd like another cherry, please. And will you do me a favor?"

"Delighted," cried Marion gayly.

"I've decided to stay over another day, and there's a place near here I'd like to show you if you'd care to see it. Will you come driving with me tomorrow?"

For an instant his eyes held hers. Understanding, humor, camaraderie and a something deeper than all these passed between them.

"I should be glad to," said Marion.

High Priced Elections.

A century ago elections in England were costly affairs. In one case half a million pounds was spent on one election alone. This was the great contest for Yorkshire, in which the candidates were Viscount Milton, the Hon. Henry Lascelles and Mr. Wilberforce. Wilberforce won at a cost of £58,000, "with every resource of the most rigid economy and great voluntary assistance in labor."

Mrs. Fanny Kemble tells us of another Yorkshire contest, where the money seems to have been spent just as freely. Mrs. Wentworth Beaumont is the heroine. "She, then a very old lady, drove in her traveling carriage to Downing street and, demanding to see the prime minister, with whom she was well acquainted, accosted him thus: 'Well, my lord, are you quite determined to make your man stand for our seat?' 'Yes, Mrs. Beaumont, I think quite determined.' 'Very well,' replied the lady. 'I am on my way down to Yorkshire with £80,000 in the carriage for my man. Try and do better than that.'"—London Chronicle.

PROCRASTINATION.

Many people imagine that they can gain something by putting off wearing glasses for a few years longer than usual. They never gain, but always lose. Their glasses at 60 will be just as strong as if they had received benefit at an earlier period, and headaches and neurasthenia in their varied forms might have been spared the sufferer. People after forty often have an array of nervous symptoms, which are attributed to various causes, sometimes to "crankiness." A large part of these symptoms are due to eyestrain, caused by not wearing glasses in time, or by the ones they are wearing not being correct, to relieve the strain. It is generally considered an easy matter to fit glasses for ordinary failing sight, but this is a great mistake. It is not simply the glasses that make the print plain that will relieve nerve and muscle strain. These very often increase the trouble. Consultation free.

Fine Crowd at the Second Carnival.

LIST OF THOSE WHO DRESSED—THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The second masquerade carnival of the season took place last evening at the skating arena and was a decided success. The attendance, whilst by no means as large as the first event, was, nevertheless, good and, as Manager Arnott stated, much better than he anticipated. There were many in costume, and some of the costumes were clever in design and of rich materials. Considering that the temperature had been rather high during the past two days, the ice was in fair condition. Whilst it was somewhat soft it was free from water. In addition to the skaters there were many spectators, who appeared to enjoy the spectacle.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Three ladies were selected as judges, namely, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. S. Masson and Mrs. C. M. Stork. Their task was by no means either the easiest or pleasantest to perform. Their decisions, however, seemed to give satisfaction to disinterested people. Those who were fortunate enough to secure the prizes were as follows:

LADIES.

First — Miss Allen, as Newspaper Girl.

Second — Miss Isa Moore, as Indian Princess.

Third — Miss Vera Borbridge, as Fortune Teller.

GENTLEMEN.

First — J. C. Armitage, as John Bull.

Second — M. Sprague, as Louis Red Indian.

Third — Mr. Fennell, as a Lady of 1850.

GIRLS.

Myrtle Davison, as Butterfly.

Miss Coughlin, as Maid of Erin.

BOYS.

Murdock and William Paterson, as two Picanninnies of Kentucky.

Most original costume, lady, Miss Lottie Walton, as Sis Hopkins. Gentleman, Mr. Morley Stork, as a St. Agnes' School Girl.

Following is a list, as complete as could be obtained, of those in costume and the characters they represented:

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

How they Sized Things Up in Lindsay.

The Lindsay Post says: On ice of the toughest and stickiest variety, covered with slush and water, upon which fast hockey was an impossibility, and before a rink jammed from floor to rafters with excited spectators, the Stratford Midgets clinched their right to the junior championship by defeating Lindsay Midgets last night 4-1, half time score 2-1, on Lindsay ice, thus winning the round 14 goals to 6. They also get a nifty silver mug—the Cosby Cup—which has been resting in Port Hope for the last year.

It was a heart-breaking game all through, and the tough ice was the principal cause of several little scrimmages that ensued. The westerners won, but they had little the better of the argument last night. However, they won the championship fairly and if the fates ruled against the Lindsay Midgets it is a little satisfaction to know they favored a team who play a clean, gentlemanly game.

The play, although sluggish at times, was always strenuous and very closely contested, and—the awful ice was the cause—developed into a rough-house exhibition, finally winding up in a chopping contest that was disgraceful, to say the least of it. No more effectual way could be devised to kill the fine old game in Lindsay. The action of Randal, right wing of the Midgets, in hitting and attempting to trip the referee was entirely unwarranted and unsportsmanlike. True, the referee—Norman Rule, of Collingwood — did not officiate in a capable manner, but incapacity is no excuse for the assault made upon him.

SPORTING NOTES.

The fast Trenton team, which plays here to-morrow night, will be opposed by the best bunch of amateurs that can be gotten together in this city. The Trenton lads have not yet been beaten this season, but there may be a different story to tell after to-morrow night.

The Stanley Cup trustee says the Wanderers must play the Kenoras in Kenora and not Winnipeg. That is providing Kenoras are defenders.

It is a question if there is another family in the world that could put a hockey team in the field that could defeat the Smith brothers, of Ottawa. There are seven of them, and counting the elder Smith, who was also a hockey player, as spare, they could make it interesting for any team in any league. How would this line-up look in a hockey game?:

Goal—George Smith.
Point—Dan Smith.
Cover-point—Jack Smith.
Rover—Willie Smith.
Centre—Harry Smith.
Left wing—Tommy Smith.
Right wing—Alf. Smith.
Seven of them, and all brothers.

Mr. Smith, the boys' father, has arranged to take the boys on a tour of the west, next season, and will play in all the large cities in which a hockey team is located.

Lindsay Curling Club went to church in a body last Sunday and listened to a sermon from their chaplain, Rev. C. H. Marsh. In the course of his sermon the chaplain said: "Some games, especially curling, supply a grand tonic for those confined in shop or office many hours daily. It dispels all injurious tendencies and invigorates and refreshes the body as well as the mind. The game teaches the player many useful lessons, and in particular to give his whole thought and energy to the thing before him. That is grand training for the young. It trains the eye to deliver the stone properly, it trains the hand to impart the right weight and direction when putting the stone away, and to sweep clean and stop when told. Obedience is a grand thing in these days, when we find in our Parliament some who refuse to stand in the presence of the King's representative. Woe be to the curler who refuses to do what his skip tells him, or who sits down when told to sweep a stone. It has been said that British battles have been won on the cricket fields, and the curling rinks of Canada may have much to do with the development of that aggressive industrial and commercial energy which is making of Canada a great and prosperous nation.

The Berlin pros. beat the Wanderers 9 to 8 last night, and the Dutchmen's chests are sticking out like flour barrels to-day.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

A fine example of the scene painter's art is disclosed in the third act of "Shadows of the Past," which will be introduced to local theatregoers on the night of Monday next. It shows a bit of old Bruges in a walled garden and rose embowered cottage, with a view of the square beyond and high topped bell tower so famous in history. By a strange coincidence, Mr. Buhler, the artist who executed the painting of this very scene, was at the time located in Bruges and so has been able to add a touch of local coloring not to be copied from the hard outlines of photogravures. Indeed the very cottage which the spectator sees in this scene, is reproduced from memory as the one in which Mr. Buhler himself lived in while in the picturesque old Belgian city.

COMIC OPERA COMING.

Helen Byron, the star of the comic opera, who will sing "Sergeant Kitty" at the opera house on Wednesday, March 20th, made her first hit in Canada as leading woman in stock in Toronto. She has always been most popular with the ladies, and in "Sergeant Kitty" wherever she is seen it is but a renewal of this admiration, for Miss Byron is a woman's woman. She has surrounded herself with an excellent cast and a most comely chorus, and the entire production offers one of the best things now in the comic opera field.

$200,000 FOR TELEPHONES.

Alberta Thus Disposes of a Surplus—$365,675 For Education.

Edmonton, Alta., March 14.—The estimates were brought down in the House yesterday and passed with little opposition. They indicate that Alberta will spend $2,763,974.18 during 1907 and from Jan. 1, 1908, to the passage of estimates at next session, $400,000 is the amount called for by the Departments.

In the estimates are Civil Government, $1,555,000; Legislation, $34,000; Administration of Justice, $345,722.68; Public Works, $1,293,000; Education, $365,675; Agriculture, $345,576.56; Hospitals $34,500; Miscellaneous, $99,950.

The revenue during 1907, the Premier stated, would be approximately $200,000 greater than the receipts, but the Government proposed to expend out of current account $200,000 on construction of telephones in Alberta, consequently the accounts will practically balance at close of year.

In delivering his budget speech the Premier gave a brief resume of work done by the Government during past year. The total output of butter was $479,977, of which $292,977 was from Government creameries and the balance from private companies. The traveling dairies has been a very important assistance in the higher education of the farmers. The outlook was for a great expansion in dairying.

FOUND DYING IN RAVINE.

Mysterious Death of a Young Girl In Toronto.

Toronto, March 14.—Maggie Wilson, a 19-year-old girl, was found dying in the Rosedale Ravine yesterday morning about 9.30 o'clock.

Mr. Jas. Murray and a party of friends were riding along the ravine drive, and as they neared the Huntley Street bridge, noticed a body lying beside the road. Examination showed that the young woman was still alive, though unconscious. She was removed to the General Hospital in the police ambulance but died before she arrived there.

After about an hour's enquiry the police discovered the relatives of the dead girl. She spent last evening with her mother, and her brother accompanied her to her employer's residence. He left her at the gate, but was not sure that she entered the house. Her movements after that time are not known, but early yesterday morning her mother received an enquiry as to why she was not at work.

A bottle of carbolic acid was afterwards found, which it has been proved the deceased purchased, but there is no evidence of her having taken any. The affair is wrapt in mystery and an inquest will be held. It is stated the girl had been threatened several times.

New C. P. R. Steamers.

Montreal, March 14.—The Canadian Pacific has practically decided to build two new steamers for the Atlantic service, to take the places of the Empress of Ireland and Empress of Britain, which, it is understood, will be transferred to provide a faster and better service on the Pacific.

This would release two of the present Empresses from the China and Japan line, and it is proposed to put these on the Australia and New Zealand route.

The new vessels, it is reported, will 20 knots an hour—possibly 22 or 23. This will mean a great development in the north Atlantic.

Tugboat Sinks; Five Drowned.

Pittsburg, March 14.—The tow boat Cruiser, one of the largest in the coal shipping trade on the Ohio River, is reported to have gone down near Zwickley, about 20 miles down the river from this city. Five of the crew are reported drowned.

Boy Kills Baby Brother.

Fannystelle, Man., March 14.—The seven-year-old son of, F. W. Beattie, while playing with a gun in the absence of his parents, shot and killed his three-year-old brother.

An ounce of contentment is more beneficial to a woman's complexion than a pound of cosmetics.

McINTOSH BROS.

WAS WHITE INNOCENT?

Abe Hummel Gives Some Startling Evidence.

Says Thaw Tried to Convict White of Wrongdoing by Bullying Evelyn—Swears She Accused Thaw of Beating Her — Damaging Testimony Hurts the Defence — Case May Reach Jury on 27th March.

New York, March 14.—James Clinch Smith, Stanford White's brother-in-law, was called again as a witness in the Thaw trial yesterday morning. Mr. Smith was tardy in arriving and Mr. Jerome summoned Abraham Hummel to the stand. Hummel had scarcely taken his seat when Smith put in his appearance. Therefore Hummel was temporarily excused and Smith took his place.

Hummel had answered two questions put to him by the district attorney, He said he knew Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, and saw her in the office on Oct. 27, 1903, following her return from Europe. Mr. Smith was questioned by Mr. Delmas for the defence, having been recalled to testify as to the cablegram he received from District Attorney Jerome early in February, summoning him to return to this country.

Mr. Smith said he did not have either the original of the cablegram or a copy. Mr. Jerome offered a letter-press copy, but Mr. Delmas refused to accept this. "As I remember the message," said Mr. Smith, "it read, 'Your evidence most important. Your attendance desired.'"

Mr. Smith said he returned on Feb. 17 last, and met Assistant District Attorney Garvan on the 19th. Mr. Smith said he had reduced to writing his conversation with Thaw on the Madison Square Roof Garden, and had showed the memoranda to his counsel and to Mr. Garvan. They both said it was good. Mr. Smith was excused and Abraham Hummel once more took the stand.

Mrs. Thaw's Statements.

"Did Mrs. Thaw tell you that Thaw wanted to injure White and put him in the penitentiary, and that Thaw had begged her time and time again to swear to documents he had prepared, involving White, and charging that he had drugged and ruined her; and that Thaw had beaten her because she would not sign the papers?" asked Mr. Jerome.

Mr. Delmas interposed to ask Hummel, if at the time of the conversation with Miss Nesbit, he was acting as her legal adviser and attorney.

"I was acting only for Stanford White," replied the witness.

Evidence Vastly Important.

"The material issue here," argued Mr. Jerome, "is whether Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told Thaw the story in Paris that she told on the witness stand. If I can show that the woman under solemnity of an oath absolutely denied that she told Thaw any such story; that she repelled his demands that she should sign papers making such false charges against White; that Thaw was so angered at her refusal he beat her; stripped her naked and beat her; these are the things which must have weight with the jury as to whether she told Thaw the story which is said to have driven him insane and which has been the basis of the theory of experts that this defendant is insane."

Swore White Was Innocent.

"Stanford White did not drug me," she said, "Stanford White did not touch me." She withstood Thaw's lashings and beatings because the story which Thaw wanted her to swear to was not true. Stanford White never harmed her.

"If I can show not only that she told this, but that she later swore to it in a paper the contents of which she well knew, I submit it bears strongly on the truth of her statement that she told this story to Thaw in Paris, and that it unbalanced his mind."

The court adjourned at the close of the morning session until to-day in order to allow counsel time to look up the authorities in reference to the hypothetical question it is proposed to put to the scientists. It is expected that the case will reach the jury on March 27.

Repeal Travelers' Tax.

Victoria, B. C., March 14.—Ontario commercial travelers will not hereafter be compelled to pay a tax on their business visits to British Columbia. The Legislature yesterday repealed the law save against travelers of liquor and cigar firms. It means a loss of $20,000 yearly to the province.

The Legislature has also reduced real and personalty tax to three-fifths of one per cent., or a total this year of $125,000. Promise is also made to put an early end to direct taxation.

Played With Matches.

Quebec, March 14.—A young child named Jean Bureau, four years old, was burned to death at St. George de Beauce, the result of being left alone in the house of his parents and playing with matches.

The mother of the child went out to the stable. On her return she found the little one's clothing in a blaze, and though she rushed to the rescue, burning her hands severely in attempting a rescue, the child died from the effect of its injuries.

Stopped U. S. Steamer.

Managua, Nicaragua, March 14.—The American steamer City of Para, having on board one thousand rifles destined for Amapala, Honduras, was recently overhauled by a Nicaraguan gunboat, which seized the rifles The steamer was permitted to proceed to her destination.

Bad Wreck In Transvaal.

Johannesburg, Transvaal, March 14.—Adam Jameson, M. D., ex-Commissioner of Lands, was killed with 12 other persons early yesterday morning in the wreck of a train at Alkamar, on the Delagoa line, due to a washout. Eleven persons were injured.

115 SAILORS STILL MISSING.

Entire Town of Toulon In Mourning —Searching For Bodies.

Toulon, March 14.—Minister of Marine Thomson arrived here yesterday from Paris. The roll of the battleship Jena, on which the disastrous explosions occurred Tuesday, was immediately called, and 407 men replied to their names. Those of the crew who are uninjured are quartered temporarily in the naval barracks. Twenty-four officers and engineers are also reported to be safe, and besides, there are 44 of the crew lying in the hospitals seriously injured. As the officers and crew numbered 630, it will thus be seen that 155 are not accounted for. But the naval authorities consider it most probable that a large number of those have sought refuge with relatives or friends in Toulon.

Entire Town In Mourning.

The entire town is in deepest mourning. Crowds are gathered at the gates of the arsenal and docks awaiting the announcement of the names of the dead. Hundreds of despatches asking for details of the disaster have reached naval headquarters here.

The Minister of Marine upon his arrival here consulted with the port admiral, after which he proceeded to the scene of the disaster. All around the Missiessy drydock were strewn pieces of shells, and the store sheds and other buildings were pierced in many places. Cordons of troops were drawn up on the quays near the hull of the Jena, where relay parties searched for bodies. Fire hose played all night on the unsubmerged portions of the battleship, whose interior had been completely flooded.

The afterpart of the battleship is destroyed. The officers' cabins are in ruin. One of the officers who escaped said Admiral Manceron owed his life to the fact that the port holes of his cabin were open, thus permitting the suffocating gases to escape.

Forty-One Have Turned Up.

Later, forty-one of the missing men turned up, leaving 114 apparently unaccounted for or killed. Touching scenes were witnessed at the gates of the arsenal.

TRAIN WENT INTO RIVER.

Flood Carried Bridge Away—Three Men Were Drowned.

Pittsburg, March 14.—Three men drowned, a railroad bridge washed away, a county bridge in danger of following the railroad bridge into the Allegheny River, and an engine and five freight cars in the water, are the first results of the rapid rise during the night of Deer Creek, near Harmarsville, Pa., on the West Pennsylvania Railroad.

The dead:—J. B. Mikesell, engineer, 28 years old, Allegheny; W. J. Cantwell, firemen, 25 years, Darlington, Pa.; J. M. Johns, brakeman, 25 years, Freeport, Pa.

About 4.50 o'clock yesterday morning a freight train entered on the bridge, but had not got further than the second pier when it suddenly gave way. Before the engineer, fireman or a brakeman on the front part of the train could realize what had happened the bridge went down, carrying the engine, trainmen and five freight cars with it.

So rapidly had Deer Creek risen during the night that it had attained a height of 16 feet instead of the normal, from 4 to 6 feet. So great, too, was the force of the current that one of the five freight cars, heavily loaded, was carried down the creek over a quarter of a mile. The fireman, engineer and brakeman were dragged into the roaring current and drowned.

Use Reason

CURE PILES PRIVATELY AT HOME WITHOUT PAIN OR OPERATION.

TRIAL PACKAGE MAILED FREE.

The result of an irritated membrane cannot be cured with a knife, but by removing the cause of the irritation.

What is a more natural cure than a strong and yet healing balm which will bring life back to the deadened tissues? This is the action of the Pyramid Pile Cure. The little suppositories melt away into the feverish membrane, heal the ulcers, remove the inflammation and swelling and bring back the rectum to its normal condition.

This result is effected painlessly and without the loss of a moment's time from your daily duties. The treatment is applied at home, in the privacy of your own room. The remedy is our own preparation and our name is the guarantee of its genuineness.

Thousands of cases similar to the following might be cited to prove our claims.

"I tried the sample of your cure you sent to me. I used it and then bought a 50 cent box. The results were immediate and surprising to me, I assure you, I had been to a dozen of the best doctors and paid much money to them with no results whatever. I had this affliction for 20 years, I was in a hospital for a long time, and I left it physically broken down. I owe you a debt of gratitude. I believe that piles would be banished from humanity and become an unknown thing, were every one afflicted with them to but spend from 50c to $1.00 for Pyramid Pile Cure. Its speedy action also makes it extremely favorable for impatient people. I am yours sincerely, George H. Bartlett, Mattapan, Mass."

No matter how badly you suffer from Piles, we want to cure you. If you will try a free package to prove its merits yourself, we will gladly send it to your name and address at once. We will leave it to you to decide whether you can afford to discontinue the treatment. Pyramid Drug Co., 84 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

All druggists sell the Pyramid Pile Cure, just the same as the sample, at 50 cents per box.

EXPORT NIAGARA POWER

No Limit Placed on Companies by Federal Government.

Will Not Be Required to First Cater to Home Demand—Contrary to Ontario's Wish—Hon. A. B. Aylesworth Says Waste Would Be Criminal—Mr. Haggart Asks Interesting Question.

Ottawa, March 14.—The House spent three hours out of four yesterday afternoon in committee upon Mr. Aylesworth's bill to regulate the export of Niagara power. Almost the entire discussion was carried on by the Conservative members from Ontario, and there was a general desire to know what expression of opinion had been secured from the Provincial Government. Mr. Aylesworth seemed reluctant to produce the correspondence, but in reply to a request from R. L. Borden, read to the House this delphic utterance from Ontario's Premier.

Omitting address and signature, the letter read as follows:

"My colleagues and I find it very difficult to say anything definite with reference to your bill regulating the exportation of electric power.

"Under agreements with three companies we are entitled to have utilized in Canada when called for one-half the power developed by them.

"Should any agreement be made with the United States, affording the quantity of power to be developed on the Canadian side of the Niagara River, or should one or more of a number of other contingencies, occur, our position would be a very complicated one indeed.

"Some arrangements with reference to the quantities to be exported, and the regulations and conditions of exportation under the approval of the Provincial Government would be necessary and might be the means of avoiding some of the possible complications.

"No doubt great care would be necessary in working out any provision of this kind."

To Limit Expenditure.

The first Government business taken up was Mr. Aylesworth's bill respecting the exportation of electric power. Section four was amended so as to transfer the licensing power from the Minister of Customs to the Governor-in-Council.

Hon. John Haggart asked what authority the Federal Government would have to permit exportation of Niagara power if the same was forbidden by the Ontario Government, who owned the land upon which the power was generated.

Mr. Aylesworth said that he had given the matter no thought. He presumed any land-owner could resist a trespass.

Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln and Niagara) proposed an amendment limiting the quantity to be exported by any licensee to the amount which he is actually using in Canada, and requiring that there should always be retained in Canada a surplus of 25,000 horse-power.

Mr. Aylesworth opposed this. At Niagara the power companies would generate 400,000 horse-power. The Canadian market, in his opinion, amounted to only 40,000. But double that estimate, and why let the remaining 320,000 horse-power go to waste? That surely would not benefit Canada. It would be sheer, criminal waste. These vast power componies had made their great investments having in view the American market.

Vest In Railway Commission.

R. L. Borden asked if this Government had communicated with the Ontario Government. Mr. Aylesworth answered in the affirmative.

Mr. Borden criticized the bill generally. After all, the governor in council was a political body. Every year the most important functions of Parliament were given up to the Cabinet. He suggested that the powers under this bill should be vested in the Railway Commission. That Commission should be organized and called the Public Utilities Commission.

Mr. Aylesworth could not understand why the members of the Opposition accused his bill of promoting export. It put some restriction at least upon exportation; at present there was no restriction whatever.

The Lancaster amendment was defeated. The bill then went through committee and was reported substantially without amendment.

Woman Hurt At Dowie's Bier.

Chicago, March 14.—Rachel Fisher, 26 years of age, was seriously injured yesterday in the crowd of persons who thronged around the bier of John Alexander Dowie at Zion City, in the hope of being cured of their ailments.

Miss Fisher, who is suffering from locomoter ataxia, kissed the hem of the shroud and, believing she was cured, tried to walk. She fell down a flight of stairs and was seriously bruised.

Two Thousand Homeless.

Milan, Italy, March 14.—About 2,000 peasants were rendered homeless at Borsano yesterday by a fire, which destroyed many houses.

The only building left standing in the section was the church, the bell of which continued ringing for help until the last moment, which the peasants considered to be a miracle.

Finds Man Dead In His Barn.

London, March 14.—Jeremiah Moore found the body of Samuel Sheppard under hay in his barn yesterday. It is believed Sheppard died from heart failure while sleeping over night in the barn, on his way to the home of Mr. Winter, for whom he worked last fall.

Six Killed by Bomb.

Kharkov, Russia, March 14.—While the police were searching the rooms occupied by a student yesterday, a bomb exploded, killing an officer of the gendarmerie, three policemen and two civilians. Six other persons were injured.

Delmas Scores Another Point

Abe Hummel Not Allowed to Produce Mrs. Thaw's Affidavit

He Makes Damaging Statement--Says Evelyn Nesbit Lied to Her Husband--Lawyers Dispute All Morning as to How Much Hummel May Tell--She Refused to Make Criminal Charge Against White.

New York, March 15.—When the Thaw trial opened yesterday morning Abraham Hummel was recalled to the stand.

Delphin M. Delmas immediately began his argument in reply to District Attorney Jerome as to the admissibility of the evidence Hummel has to offer regarding an affidavit Evelyn Nesbit is said to have made. In this affidavit, the district attorney stated Wednesday, Miss Nesbit asserted that Thaw had beaten her when she refused to sign papers charging White with her ruin, and swore that the charge against White was not true. In his argument Mr. Delmas said: "We still contend that this witness was acting as attorney to this girl. It is not for him, by his word, to deny that such a relation existed. However, we will reserve that objection."

Appeals to Jury.

Mr. Delmas then turned to the admissibility of evidence contradicting the statements of a witness made out of court. He said he had not objected to Mr. Jerome's address Wednesday, as he trusted "to the fair-mindedness of the jury, which is my only protection."

Mr. Delmas finally asked that the court rule out Hummel's testimony as improper and having no bearing on the case.

The judge upheld the contention of Mr. Delmas.

A Long Question.

After repeating to Dr. Flint the same question which Mr. Delmas put to the experts for the defence and having him say that Thaw was sane, on the basis of the facts therein, District Attorney Jerome had read to the witness the prosecution's hypothetical qeustion, which contains some 15,000 words and which required one hour and eighteen minutes in the reading, Dr. Flint again said, without qualifications, that Thaw knew his act was wrong and is therefore liable for murder in the first degree under the statutes of the State of New York.

Jerome's statement that the taking of evidence would be concluded by to-night has been abandoned, and those concerned in the case again look to April 1 as the earliest date for closing the long drawn out trial.

Damaging Assertion.

Abraham Hummel was on the stand again yesterday. Before Delmas could object to a question put to him by Jerome, the witness got into the record the statement that Evelyn Nesbit told him that she had informed Harry Thaw in Paris in 1903 that Stanford White positively did not harm her.

Delmas at first moved to have the question and answer stricken out from the record, but, when the district attorney seemed about to consent, the chief counsel for the defence insisted that the answer stand.

Hummel's further testimony was halted until Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw can again take the stand to testify as to whether or not Hummel was acting as her attorney when she made the statements to him which were afterwards embodied in the affidavit.

Both Jerome and Delmas were irritable yesterday and had frequent clashes. The strain of the trial is palpably telling on everyone connected with it.

It was reported last night that Jerome himself may be called to the witness stand in sur-rebuttal by the defence. The purpose, it is said, is to question him as to certain actions lying against Abraham Hummel, who was a witness yesterday.

Throng at Dowie's Funeral.

Chicago, March 15.—John Alexander Dowie was buried yesterday in Lakemound Cemetery, Zion City.

A small portion of the magnificent choir that formerly officiated in Zion City Tabernacle sang several hymns.

The body of Dowie was arrayed in the white robe he had worn since he assumed the title of "first apostle of the Christian Catholic Church."

The funeral cortege was attended by hundreds of members of the church and, when the body was lying in state, a constant stream of visitors called.

Scores sought to be cured of disease by touching the hem of Dowie's robe.

Britain Being Robbed.

London, March 15.—(C. A. P.)—The Illustrated London News says that Canada's excellent land and enterprising advertisements will doubtless tend still further to diminish Great Britain's agricultural population, and after a time leave nothing at home but the very young, very old, or very stupid and unenterprising sections of the rural dwellers.

Novelist Praises Canada.

London, March 15.—(C. A. P.)—Three hundred Salvation Army emigrants left Euston Station for Canada yesterday. Rider Haggard addressed them on their departure, and said, at any rate, they were going to a land where every man could rise who put his back into the work.

Hanged in Cell by a Towel.

Plattsburg, N. Y., March 15.—Michael Yeadow, serving a life sentence at Clinton Prison for murder, who recently killed a fellow convict, hanged himself with a towel Wednesday night rather than undergo trial for his last crime.

Bigamist Gets Two Years.

Montreal, March 15.—Swartzward, the New Haven, Conn., man, who married the dining-room cashier of the Queen's Hotel, while having a wife and five children in New Haven, was sentenced to two years imprisonment yesterday.

NOT ENOUGH FOR ONTARIO.

Interests of Province Threatened—Aylesworth's Figures Wrong.

Toronto, March 15.—"I think a Minister dealing with a matter of such international importance—one on which a treaty is pending—should be better informed."

So said Hon. Adam Beck yesterday morning, discussing the bill in the Dominion Parliament regulating the export of electric power, and having special reference to the reported statement of Hon. A. B. Aylesworth that the demand in Canada was only about one-tenth of the 400,000 horse-power being developed on this side of Niagara Falls.

Ontario's Big Needs.

"I cannot understand why he should make it," continued Mr. Beck. "The Hydro-Electric Power Commission at this very moment has applications from the districts dependent upon Niagara Falls for the supply of their electrical energy for over 100,000 horse-power. I firmly believe that the City of Toronto alone, within five years, providing the price is reasonable, will require the whole of the amount mentioned by Mr. Aylesworth as covering the present demand in Canada, viz., of 400,000 horse-power. According to present agreements the companies must have available for use in Ontario when requested 200,000 horse-power."

Available on Demand.

Mr. Beck added that the question hinged on whether the Dominion Government adopted the recommendation of the International Waterways Commission and enters into a treaty to limit the amount of water taken for power purposes. Unless the companies were instructed he feared the Americans would get the benefit of the power generated.

"The proposed treaty," concluded Mr. Beck, "should provide that all the power exported should be available in Ontario upon demand."

HUDSON BAY RAILWAY.

Hon. Frank Oliver Says Government Considered the Matter Urgent.

Ottawa, March 15.—The following announcement was made by Hon. Mr. Oliver yesterday:

"The Government is fully convinced of the propriety of giving the Northwest an additional railway outlet by way of Hudson Bay at the earliest possible date. The Government believes that with the increase in production of the West, now in progress, such an additional outlet will be urgently needed as soon as a railway can be built, even if it were commenced at once.

"At the same time it realizes that public opinion throughout Canada could scarcely be expected at the moment, in view of the great obligations already incurred in connection with railway enterprises, to sanction the additional obligation that would be incurred by providing immediately for the construction of a railway to Hudson Bay, unless special provision were made to meet that obligation.

"It believes, however, there will be no objection from any quarter if the funds accruing from the disposal of pre-emptions in the three prairie provinces, under the terms of the proposed land bill, shall be considered as a provision in place of the land grant stated in the act, to meet the burden upon the credit of the Dominion as a whole, that must be assumed at an early date—if not immediately—if a railway is to be in operation to Hudson Bay in time to meet the urgent need that is now in plain sight for an additional and shorter railway route from the prairies to tide water."

An ounce of contentment is more beneficial to a woman's complexion than a pound of cosmetics.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Board of Trade discussed gas and water last night. Naturally, perhaps, a little wind crept into the discussion.

The moral which sticks out of last night's discussion re municipal utilities appears to be that Bellevilians are still ruled by the same apathy in regard to civic affairs that has always characterized them. We heard considerable last night about the new gas holder, which is to cost between $14,000 and $16,000, and some people are today saying the Council should not have ordered the expenditure of such a large amount of money without appealing to the ratepayers. This contention we are not going to combat, but why was not objection made at the time? The matter was reported in The Intelligencer when the recommendation, made by the Gas committee, passed the Council. It does not redound to the credit of business men, such as compose the Board of Trade, that they waited for the best part of a year before they filed objections, especially as the work has been going on in the meantime.

133

The fact of the matter is that more real interest in civic affairs, on the part of the citizens at large, is needed. The Council is elected to look after the city's affairs, but the various chairmen have private affairs of their own to attend to, and cannot be expected to give their whole time, without emolument, to matters which concern them no more than they concern other ratepayers. The Council and Committee meetings are public; there is nothing done underhand, and this newspaper believes that the Mayor and Aldermen, every man of them, would welcome—heartily welcome — greater public interest in civic affairs, were such shown.

The Board of Trade has taken a step in the right direction by its action of last night; perhaps if such action had been taken a year or two ago things might not have been in such a chaotic state to-day. The saying is as old as Job's turkey that people get just the kind of government they deserve, and this rule holds good in everything, from petticoat government up. Let us hope that, now the Board of Trade has put its hand to the plough it will not turn back, but continue to take a live interest in municipal matters, which concern its members' own pockets and those of their fellow-citizens. The weightier affairs of life, such as the extraction of sunbeams from cucumbers, can safely be left to larger and more important bodies.

TIMELY RHYMES.

They're dusting off the ice cream signs
And soon they will appear,
The open waists are now displayed
For spring is drawing near,
And down there on the market
The fountain soon will play
For summer, glorious summer
Is speeding on its way.

The gay and festive robin soon
On every lot we'll see;
The autos will make the farmer's horse
Endeavor to climb a tree.
'Twould seem that everything is fixed
To give dull care a bunt—
But what will we do if the railways run
Down there on the water front?

A Newark (N. J.) man serving on a jury was found to be wanted on an old charge and was promptly arrested. Does this incident throw any light on the efforts of most men to escape jury service?

This seems to be a fine example of faith gone astray: Richard Fisher, twenty-six years of age, was seriously injured in the crowd of persons who thronged around the bier of John Alexander Dowie, at Zion City, in the hope of being cured of their ailments. Miss Fisher, suffering from locomotor ataxia, kissed the hem of the shroud, and believing she was cured, tried to walk. She fell down a flight of stairs and was seriously bruised.

LAURIER'S ABJECT BACKDOWN.

Hamilton Herald (Ind. Liberal.)

For months the Government press has been gloating over the prospect of the drubbing which Foster, Fowler, Bennett and Lefurgey were going to get when the insurance report came up for discussion in the House. They were going to be shown up, their wings would be clipped, all their future criticisms discounted; they would be placed before the country as thoroughly discredited men. But—oh, most lame and impotent conclusion! — the Premier meekly announces that really there is nothing in the report which reflects upon any member of parliament so seriously as to call for action by the House. Fowler's threat has proved sufficient to silence the Government and its supporters. One can imagine the suppressed rage of those shackled politicians. Their prey is just before them—and they cannot strike. After preparing fiery orations in denunciation of the wickedness of those Conservative members, they suddenly find themselves muzzled. This episode will probably do more to lower the reputation of the Dominion Parliament than has anything that has happened since confederation. It is the first time that a government and its supporters have been cowed and silenced by a threat that if they dare to do their duty the private vices of some of them will be exposed.

IN OLDEN TIMES.

People Were Content to Take Things Easier Than Now.

If our forefathers could behold the modern locomotive, automobiles and electric cars, they would hold up their hands in astonishment.

The stage coach was fast enough then—people were more content to take things easy.

They used to be satisfied with any sort of a hair lotion that came along—if it did not prevent Baldness they thought it was because Baldness could not be prevented.

It's different now. People know that germs cause Baldness and that Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ, thus curing Dandruff and preventing Baldness.

The Message of the Church to the Nation

FINE ADDRESS BY REV. A. H. DRUMM IN THE BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

The dedicatory services in connection with the new Baptist Church were continued last evening, the feature being an address by Rev. A. H. Drumm, pastor of John St. Presbyterian Church, on "The Message of the Church to the Nation." Rev. Mr. Drumm was in his best form, and had many interesting things to say. Some people, he said, thought the Church had no message for the nation; they said "let the church attend to its own business, and let politics alone." To such people he would say: "Did not the Saviour bring a message to the nation when He came? What nobler or better example can the Church to-day find than that set by the Saviour of mankind?" The greatest asset of the State, Rev. Mr. Drumm said, was its men. It was often asked, "How much is a man worth?" and the answer was generally so many hundreds or thousands or, perhaps, millions of dollars. That was wrong. A man was worth, not what he received from the state, but what the state received from him in the way of service to his country and his fellow-man. Therefore the message of the church to the nation was this: "Make laws (and enforce them) that will make men, and not unmake them; that will prevent the rumshop and the gambling hell and the house of ill-fame from ruining our young men; make laws that will prevent child labor, and that will provide for fair dealing between capital and labor. When these things came to pass, he believed, we could look for an ideal condition of affairs, but not before.

The choir sang an anthem, "Not Ashamed of Christ," the duet being taken by the Misses Leslie.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

"Shadows of the Past," which comes to the Carman on Monday next, is Lincoln J. Carter's latest effort in the field of artistic drama and from the flattering press comments and public approval, bids fair to eclipse all of his previous record breaking plays. There is much to be said about this play that is good and nothing too laudatory can be spoken of for its intrinsic value. A beautiful array of scenery, coupled with an exceptionally fine cast, leads us to believe that this will be one of the best attractions that will appear here this year.

"SERGEANT KITTY."

Helen Byron, the star of the company that is to present the above military comic opera at the opera house on Wednesday, March 20, says that if she were not a Californian she would be a Canadian and although she owes her birth to the former it was in the latter that she made her first lasting success. She was for a long time leading lady in stock in Toronto and has many warm admirers all through Ontario. "Sergeant Kitty" is a bright opera with a most amusing plot and Miss Byron has in James McElhern and Tom Hadaway two comedians that know how to get all the fun out of it.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

What Canada Owes to Conservatives.

The Dominion Premier "hopes" that by 1911 the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will be completed. That gives a clear five years of construction from the date of starting, the term that the C.P.R. took in building.

Since that world celebrated feat, carried out under Conservative rule, our Liberal friends have developed more confidence than they showed before. The Liberal leaders of the early eighties scoffed at the idea of building the C.P.R. from sea to sea in ten years, which were the terms of the contract. Mr. Mackenzie declared it would take the "whole resources of the British Empire" to do it; and that Canada would surely be bankrupted in the attempt. Mr. Blake was of the same opinion. He called it absurd to build a through line all at once. He gave the alternative proposal to carry it forward as a colonization road, say at the rate of ten miles a year, as the state of the revenue justified, and to join the "magnificent water stretches" by "little bits of railway."

This view was endorsed by the Mr. Laurier of that day, as an ex-Cabinet Minister. Had those gentlemen remained in power holding such views where would Canada be to-day? The C.P.R. would not have been built as a great national enterprise. The impetus which it gave to national development would perhaps not have been felt as yet, under such a timorous, straggling, dawdling policy.

It is to the old Conservative party under such men as Macdonald, Tupper, Tilley and Pope, that the country owes the tremendous leap that bridged the chasm between doubt and uncertainty and the wonderful prosperity which is here to-day. It was that glorious example of patriotic devotion, foresight and intelligent grasp of Canadian needs, that enables Sir Wilfrid Laurier to undertake another line with the confidence that he does, and predict its accomplishment as to time.

ICE TROTTING.

Good Races on the Harbor Yesterday.

Ice races were held yesterday afternoon, on the harbor, and although but two events were pulled off they furnished excellent sport. A large number of spectators were present, and took a lively interest in the proceedings. The track, which was kite-shaped, was laid out in the harbor west of Victoria park, near the western shore. Whilst no measurement was taken it was nearly half a mile around the circuit. Whilst the purses were by no means large, there were five entries in one event, and four in the other. In the named event the race for first place between Major Hamburg, owned by Mr. H. Ashley, of Foxboro, and Lucy C., owned by Mr. J. Smith, of this city, was a good contest, and it took five heats to decide the winner.

In class B. four heats were run, and the winner, Whirlwind, owned by Mr. C. Row, of this city, exhibited good speed, and the owner was heartily congratulated on the result.

Mr. I. A. Jenkins, who had just returned home from Montreal, was selected as the starter, and proved to be the right man in the right place. The judges were Messrs. J. Polkey, Trenton; J. Hurst and Geo. Boil, of this city. Summary;

Named Race—

Major Hamburg, H. Ashley, Foxboro	1	2	1	2	1
Lucy C., J. Smith, Belleville	2	1	2	1	2
Joe Mowat, A. Weese, Rossmore	4	3	3	3	3

SPORTING NOTES.

There will be fine ice for the hockey match to-night. The two Armstrong lads, who will play for Trenton, are said to be two coming stars. Belleville's best amateur team will be on the ice.

Thirteen hundred spectators witnessed the junior final at Lindsay. The gate receipts amounted to over $500.

Harold Armstrong was on the Peterboro teams that won the junior and intermediate O.H.A. finals and a member of the Marlboros senior O.H.A. champions. To finish up he played with Smith's Falls last year, when they captured the championship of the Federal League.

Thurlow Lady Dead.

Miss Sarah R. Patterson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Patterson, residing in the 7th concession of Thurlow, died this morning. Deceased, who was 20 years of age, had been ill for two years from stomach trouble. Miss Patterson was a young lady possessed of a lovable disposition, and endeared herself to all who knew her. She was a member of the Methodist church. In addition to the parents, one sister, Mrs. Darch, of Tyendinaga, and two brothers, J. E., of St. Thomas, and Wm., at home, survive.

DISTRICT MEETING HELD IN THIS CITY YESTERDAY — D.D.G.M.'s APPOINTED.

The district meeting of the Canadian Order of Oddfellows, held here yesterday afternoon and evening, was attended by some 50 delegates. Bro. J. S. Tice, D.D.G.M., of Brighton district, presided at the first session.

At the afternoon session the principal business was appointing committees and hearing reports, the latter being encouraging.

In the evening Bro. J. W. Boyd, D.D.G.M., of Belleville, took the chair and gave an interesting address.

Mayor Sulman and Ald. Ackerman were introduced and given the honors of the order, after which the Mayor welcomed the delegates to the city and hoped that the district would make Belleville its permanent meeting place. Ald. Ackerman followed, also welcoming the delegates.

Bro. B. F. Butler read an address of welcome from the local lodge.

Bro. J. S. Tice replied to the welcomes given by the Mayor and Ald. Ackerman.

In the election which ensued, Bro. Tice was elected D.D.G.M. for Brighton district, and Bro. J. W. Boyd for Belleville district.

At the conclusion of the business the visiting delegates were entertained and a pleasant hour spent in speech-making and songs. The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

U. S. Pensions

Local parties (if there are any) drawing a pension from the U. S. Government will no doubt be pleased to learn that an increase has been granted them by a recent Act passed by the Senate and House of Representatives there. Those now drawing pensions and who are over 62 years of age will receive $12 per month, if 70 years $15 per month, if 75 years or over $20 per month. To receive the additional benefits application must be made to the Commissioner of Pensions.

SELECTIONS

THE SPOTS ON THE SUN.

They Point to the Inevitable Doom of the Whole World.

The observatory on Mount Wilson, California, and the electric laboratory at the foot of the mountain in Pasadena, working together, have lately succeeded in throwing a very interesting light on the nature and meaning of sun spots.

We may as well make up our minds to reckon the sun spots in, on a very generous scale, when we cast up the chances of the future for our planet. Earthquakes and volcanic eruptions spasmodically devastate limited regions of the earth's surface, but the sun spots, with the exceeding slowness and inevitable sureness of the mills of the gods, bring onward the doom of the whole world.

This is apparent from the fact revealed by experiments with the electric furnace that the peculiarities of the light emitted by sun spots are explicable only by the lowered temperature of the spots and from the further fact that these same peculiarities exist in the light of certain stars, which for a variety of reasons are believed to be more advanced in age and cooler than our sun. The inference is unavoidable that sun spots must be considered as forerunners of the general loss of the sun's power of radiation. He is yet close to the noon point, probably a little past it, and henceforth, as his afternoon declines, sun spots will become more and more numerous and greater and greater in area, or else the cooling process now manifested by their presence will assume a more general form, affecting the whole of the solar disk. And as this progresses the vivifying heat will be withdrawn from the earth, with consequences which we can regard with academical equanimity only because, measured by the span of human life, they must be so remote.

A problem affecting the more immediate future is that of the manner in which a sun passes through the various steps of obscuration. It is disquieting to watch the behavior of some of the stars a little more advanced than the sun in age.

We should hope that the sun will never imitate, for instance, Betelgeuse, one of his older and larger brothers, for Betelgeuse undergoes, several times in a century, changes of radiation which would quickly put the earth out of commission as a fighting planet if they occurred in the sun.—New York American.

The English Channel Tunnel.

To run a grave national risk for the sake of protecting some thousands of tourists from the very transient discomforts of seasickness would indeed be the climax of dementia. For through goods traffic the tunnel might be of advantage to the continental farmer and manufacturer. In view of the prohibitive foreign tariffs it would be of little use to British trade. We cannot abandon British insularity because some distinguished soldier has asserted that the channel tunnel could be easily defended against 200,000 by fifty. On military grounds a bridge across the channel would be preferable from every point of view to a tunnel under the water. No coup de main could secure a bridge against the action of the British navy. Modern engineering skill is certainly equal to the construction of such a bridge.—Ignotus in National Review.

The Golden Riddle.

M. Capel, an alchemist of Pomet, in France, who has long been trying to manufacture gold, met with an unfortunate accident just when he believed that he had solved the golden riddle. He called his wife and three children into his laboratory and showed them what appeared to be a nugget of gold. He was explaining to them the process he had used when he inadvertently pushed a basin containing some gunpowder too near a lamp. A terrific explosion followed, blowing up the entire laboratory and leaving it a heap of ruins. Neighbors recovered the shattered bodies of the alchemist, his wife and three children. The wife was able to speak, but died on her way to the hospital.

Careless Elevator Operators.

A reckless habit of many elevator operators is that of neglecting to use their control levers at the end of the runs, depending upon the automatics at top and bottom. The practice is a growing one and is fraught with danger, especially on the down runs and to plunger machines on the up runs. Operators have been observed frequently to start an express car down and then entirely let go of the control lever. The best automatic cutoff device is subject to possible disarrangement by the sliding of stops, jumping of rope or other slight mishap, and operators should be disciplined into the proper use of the control at both end landings.—R. P. Bolton in Engineering Magazine.

Alpine Tunnels.

More Swiss tunnels through the Alps are being projected. That of the Splugen, from Coire to Chiavenna, is now in a forward state. The estimates and plans are now in the hands of the members of the federal chambers. The extreme length of the proposed line is about fifty miles, while that of the tunnel itself is only about fifteen miles. The cost of construction would be about five millions. The time would be about eight years. Another project is that for a tunnel through Todi mountain in connection with the question of the Greina and the Loetschberg railway.

3 CHILDREN WHO WERE COVERED WITH SORES

Wonderful Zam-Buk Triumph!

Every mother knows with what rapidity sores, ringworm, ulcers, etc., spread from child to child. In Montreal recently most of the public schools were visited by an epidemic of itch in this way. A child is afflicted with scalp sores, itch or ringworm. In the course of play, one child puts on another's hat. In this way, or in a hundred and one more which children make possible, the infection spreads and sometimes a whole family is affected. Mr. J. C. Bates, of Burk's Falls says:—"My three children were all broken out with sores on face, hands and feet. Their condition was pitiable; and although I tried various ointments and salves the sores continued to spread.

"One day I saw a report telling how beneficial Zam-Buk was for skin diseases, ulcers, etc. I got a supply of the balm and applied it to the children's sores. Almost immediately they got relief, and the sores began to heal. Although the skin disease had defied all the salves I had previously tried, in one week Zam-Buk overcame the trouble, and to-day the children have not a pimple or spot or mark of disease on their skin. For this grand result I have Zam-Buk to thank."

Private Ownership.

Before a great fire of logs in Helicon Hall, the seat of his utopian colony, Upton Sinclair one snowy night talked of the injustice of the private ownership of land:

"A tramp was one day strolling through a wood that belonged to the Duke of Norfolk. The duke happened to meet him and said:

"'Do you know you're walking on my land?'

"'Your land?' said the tramp. 'Well, I've got no land of my own, so I'm obliged to walk on somebody's. Where, though, did you get this land?'

"'I got it from my ancestors,' said the duke.

"'And where did they get it from?' went on the tramp.

"'From their ancestors,' said the duke.

"'And where did their ancestors get it from?'

"'They fought for it.'

"'Come on, then,' said the tramp fiercely as he pulled off his coat, 'and I'll fight you for it.'

"But the duke, hastily retreating, declined to accept this fair offer."—Washington Star.

His Brilliant Idea.

"Why is it," she asked shortly after the wedding, "that you don't care to skate any more? You were so fond of it before we were married."

"I wasn't fond of it, my dear. To tell you the truth, I made a martyr of myself for your sake. I knew you enjoyed it so that I felt as if I had to"—

"Thought I enjoyed it? Heavens, I was a martyr too. I thought if I didn't go and be tortured you'd take some other girl, and"—

"Say, Fanny, I believe it would be a fine thing if every girl and boy could be locked up the minute they became engaged and kept behind bars till the day of their marriage."—Chicago Record-Herald.

When Man Is Unambitious.

Fred—There are times when I care nothing for riches—when I could not so much as put forth a hand to receive millions.

Kittie—Indeed! That must be when you are tired of the world and its struggles and vanities—when your soul yearns for higher and nobler things. Is it not?

"N-no; you are wrong."

"Then, when is it?"

"When I'm sleeping."—Tit-Bits.

Merely His Guess.

"Haven't you anything smaller?" asked the druggist when the customer handed him a $100 bill.

"Yes, but I don't believe you'd want it."

"Why not?"

"It's a piece of court plaster that I got in a barber shop and have been using all morning."—Chicago Record-Herald.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A SIMPLE MOTHER.

"I'm wearied of the whirl," quoth she,
"Henceforth the simple life for me.
Methinks it would be very wise
To take my breakfast ere I rise—
Of coffee just a single cup."
(N.B.—Her mother brought it up!)

"And when I'm dressed," thus spoke the maid,
"I'll hie me to the elm tree's shade,
And with a book there I will find
Sweet rest and comfort for the mind,"
And so in sylvan shade she read,
(N.B.—Her mother made her bed.)

"A dainty lunch will suit me best—
Salad with oil of Lucca dressed;
No steaming soup, not heavy roast,
But broiled spring chicken served on toast."
She ate it all and found it good.
(N.B.—Her mother cooked the food!)

Then when the day at last was spent,
Her mind was filled with sweet content;
She donned a dainty gown of white,
With rosy ribbons all bedight,
And looked as fair as any rose,
(N.B.—Her mother ironed her clothes.)

"I love the simple life," quoth she:
"My heart from care is ever free:
A good night's rest I'll have I know,
For prompt at nine to bed I'll go."
True to her word, retired she then
(N.B.—Her mother worked till ten.)

A practical illustration of the evils of confetti throwing was afforded in the case of a recent wedding at Herkimer. The bridal pair were followed by their friends to the station and the usual showers of rice confetti, etc., took place. One piece of confetti lodged in the groom's eye and nearly blinded him. When he got on the train he extracted the little piece of colored paper and supposed his trouble was over. It appears, however, that the moisture of the eye absorbed some of the coloring matter used on the confetti, which is poisonous. The optic soon began to swell, a physician was summoned, and the young man was confined to the house for a number of days, the sight of the eye being saved, however. All this for a bit of fun.

WOMAN'S WORLD

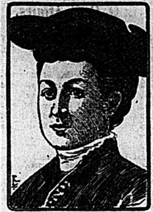
MRS. MARY QUACKENBOS.

She Is a Special Assistant United States District Attorney.

Mrs. Mary Grace Quackenbos, one of New York's best known woman lawyers, holds the responsible position of special assistant United States district attorney, to which she was appointed by Henry L. Stimson, United States district attorney.

Mrs. Quackenbos is the first woman who has attained so important a position in the legal profession. Her energy and thoroughness in investigating peonage cases in the lumber and turpentine camps of the south, which had come to her notice as representative of the People's Law firm, brought to her the recognition of the United States district attorney.

Mrs. Quackenbos' rise in the profession of law has been remarkable. Admitted to the bar in July, 1904, she has in the short space of time since then figured in several celebrated cases. Perhaps the best known of these was the case of Mrs. Antoinette Tolla, murderess, of Kingsland, N. J., whom she saved from the gallows. On March 9, 1905, three days before Mrs. Tolla was to hang, Mrs. Quackenbos, after an untiring week's effort, induced the board of pardons of New Jersey to commute this death penalty to seven and a half years' imprisonment.



MRS. MARY GRACE QUACKENBOS.

Mrs. Quackenbos has devoted her attention chiefly to the philanthropic side of the law, having been first connected with the Legal Aid society and later with the People's Law firm, a concern interested in the securing of legal rights for the unfortunate. Because of her humane and unselfish work there are many among the unfortunate poor who have cause to remember Mrs. Quackenbos with great gratitude for the generous services she has rendered both as attorney and as friend.—New York World.

Treatment of Clothes.

A bit of real lace often will contribute greatly to the style of a frock, and it is an excellent plan to rip any lace trimming from garments before they are thrown aside.

No matter how badly soiled, every scrap of lace is worth saving. And this applies to the imitation as well as to the real, for if there is only sufficient to trim a stock collar it may be used for that purpose very conveniently and effectively on some future occasion, and as lace does not occupy a great deal of space and is not so popular with moths as are many other materials it may be easily preserved.

You ought to save all the pieces of velvet, if they are not hopelessly soiled, always remembering, however, to brush them thoroughly first and then roll them around a cylinder.

This same treatment should be accorded to ribbons, silks or satin as well, for if they are worth keeping at all they are worth keeping in good condition.

Eternal vigilance is the only salvation of gloves. Never wear a pair that has even the smallest tear or lacks a single button. In their most decrepit days they must neither be rolled into a ball nor squeezed into a shapeless wad, and be sure to give a sufficiently large size, for not only does a glove that is too small disfigure the hand, but its period of usefulness is certain to be brief.

A net veil that has the misfortune to get caught out of doors in a storm is not necessarily a ruined veil, for by carefully detaching it from the hat, in order not to tear the mesh, and then pinning it over a pillow the impromptu bath will sometimes prove rather a blessing than otherwise, and the original stiffness will be renewed.

Chiffon veils stand considerable rough usage, and the black ones will sometimes survive a season of almost continuous wear if only they are not folded over when damp.—New York American.

The Wife's Influence.

Every married woman, no matter how limited her life may seem, no matter how shut up she may be in the nursery or the kitchen, has a means of contact with the great world in the man who goes out into it—has a means of influence on it through him. Seen or unseen, it is there. The man who is happy in his home carries the atmosphere of it with him. He is himself more in touch with others because of it. In this day and age, when so many women are seeking scope for their powers in arts and professions and business careers, there are some who realize that in their marriage there is the very widest scope—women who put the enthusiasm, the brain power, the artistic perception, the clear sighted effort into their profession as wives and mothers, mistresses of households. These are the women who use their brains and their souls to love with, as well as their hearts, and who wield an extraordinarily far reaching power, all the greater because that power is the last thing they are thinking of or seek to attain. That intangible thing that we call the spirit of the home walks abroad with every member of it. The "nice" children in school gravitate instantly toward the children of that household, gravitate toward the house itself, because there is something there that they need.—Mary Stewart Cutting in Harper's Bazar.

The Dishcloth.

The dishcloth in many homes is a breeding place for microbes and contains more disease germs than almost anything else of the same size. Many diseases are in a large measure caused by filthy dish rags, contaminated water and impure air. The cheesecloth bags that sugar is sold in make good dishcloths and towels for wiping dishes. It is a good plan to have two sets for constant use. Those in use should be washed every morning in warm water, with soda, ammonia or washing powder, then rinsed and hung in the air to dry while the other set is in use. Besides this, it is well to wash each time after using and to boil them once a week. Keep your dish rags clean, sunned and aired if you value the health of your family.

Putting In Sleeves.

To sew in sleeves take your tape measure and measure one inch back of shoulder seam, fold the arm scye together at this point and place inside sleeve seam at the opposite point of fold. After the sleeves of a waist are sewed in and the seam bound or finished in some way, turn the seam so it rests up against the waist instead of down on the sleeve and tack it to the shoulder seam to keep it in this position. You will be surprised to notice what an improvement this makes in the set of the upper part of your sleeves.

The Dado Is Economical.

Nothing is more economical in wall decoration than a dado, according to Wall Paper News. As the lower part of the walls become soiled more quickly than the upper, a room can often be freshened simply by renewing the dado without touching the upper walls. Another advantage of the dado is that it gives a room a comfortable and furnished appearance without the addition of a lot of furniture. This is particularly true of a hall or stairway where there is a lot of space that needs breaking up.

Bags For Clothes.

When you are making dust bags to slip over your prettiest dresses, make blue ones for your white things. White will yellow. There's no denying that. Many a pretty party dress, hung away for a little while, has yellowed on the hooks until it is a far cry from the pretty, fresh bit of daintiness it was at first. But a blue bag—one of the deeper china blues is a good depth of color to get—makes a mighty good ounce of prevention.

Gathers.

In putting in gathered sleeves, sunbonnet crowns or any work you wish gathers to be even use two threads, one where the seam will be and the other one-fourth of an inch inside first. Remove second thread after sewing, or you can use machine to gather by making tension very loose and drawing up threads. By using second thread it does away with the ugly little plaits so often seen in gathers.

Moods.

Can one help having the "blues?" Can one help having a bad temper? Certainly. Moods are as subject to the will as any mental faculty, asserts a woman writer. The difference between the successful, popular woman and the woman who by her disagreeableness drives every one from her is simply the power of the former to control her moods and her temper.

To Keep Washing Soda.

It is advisable to keep soda in a jar covered with a lid, especially if the atmosphere of the room is dry, as soda exposed to dry air effloresces, yields some of its water to crystallization, leaving a white powder, which is therefore stronger than washing soda and is injurious to certain kinds of clothes.

Cheap Silence Cloth.

An economical yet serviceable silence cloth, without which no dining room is complete, is made from two or more thicknesses of old sheeting quilted together and bound with wide tape. A sheet of wadding may be added to give greater thickness.

If one knows how to crochet, it is much better to make a rug for the bathroom than to buy one. These rugs are much liked, maybe made to match the room, wash splendidly and are not difficult to make.

Every woman is at heart the happier for a pocket. A pocket is a woman's right. She has as much reason to demand it as a vote, and it would be far more useful to most of us.—Lady's Pictorial.

The butter with the least amount of water in it is the most economical to buy. More money is paid for it, but it goes further.

She is a very wise girl who knows enough not to pretend to know too much.—Chicago News.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

ing halo of tradition, has produced a body of men well equipped in every sense of the word, splendidly disciplined, only to be matched by the famous Irish constabulary.

Unless you have traveled through some of the despoblados, the desert tracts of Spain, or in the lonely sierra, it is hard fully to understand the duties and the qaulities of a civil guard. He holds a roving commission to patrol the highways and mountain passes, and always works with a comrade, for the wild roads owe their safety to his presence. Don Q. had defied them year after year, setting at nought their efforts, baffling their plans by acuteness of brain and a perfectly systematized intelligence department.

Ultimately after the visit paid by the brigand to Don Hugo, a sum, which in some eyes took on the form of a fabulous fortune, was put on the head of Don Q.

At this time, among his numerous foes was counted one, perhaps the most inveterate of them all, of whom Don Q. knew nothing. Manuelo Moruno was a member of the civil guard, as was his brother, Gregorio. They were very silent men, and, after the custom of their corps, they worked together.

A chance allusion to the ears of the governor of the prison of Castelleno, flung in mockery at Manuelo, with a gibe, that he and Gregorio should try their hand at capturing the mysterious brigand who had for so long checkmated every plot formed against him, planted a seed in the heart of the elder Moruno that soon usurped his whole thoughts.

Therefore a certain amount of interest was awakened at the headquarters of that tercio of the civil guard to which the brothers belonged, when they requested leave of absence for an indefinite term.

"You want an unusual favor, Manuelo," the commandant said to the elder, "I will see what I can do for you both. You are good men at your work, though a trifle heavy-handed."

Later a month was conceded.

"It is not enough," said Manuelo. "We will take no leave, senor."

The officer looked thoughtful.

"May I inquire where you propose to spend your leave?" he asked, after a pause.

Manuelo's face grew more somber.

"Gregorio and I have given the years of our manhood to the honor of the guardia civile. If we cannot have leave without words spoken, we stay—that is all, senor."

"Is it true, then, that you would go to the sierra? Have you a plan?" The officer put the question almost in a whisper.

"There is a saying in my birthplace—'A loose tongue cuts the throat,' senor.'"

"True. He of the sierra hears everything," the commandante said, half to himself.

"I wonder if you realize the difficulty. No one has ever got the better of—him."

"We have made a vow," returned Manuelo rigidly.

The sporting instinct awoke in the commandante and sent a glow through his veins. It rested with him to slip the dogs on the wildcat.

"Go," he said; "and may the saints go with you."

The plan formed by the Morunos was such a one as might have been expected from men of their character. After many discussions they decided that the chance of success lay in one direction only. By no attempt from the outside could they ever hope to reach the wary and terrible Don Q. They resolved, therefore, to make the desperate venture of following him deep into his unascertained hiding places in the sierra and there to gain accurate and first-hand knowledge of his habits, with, perhaps, some measure of his confidence. In a word, they were going to turn brigands and enroll themselves amongst the sequestradores who owed him allegiance.

Two days later there arrived at a small village not far from Castelleno a couple of unshaven, savage-looking men. In a safe place they had buried their passports. It is necessary in Spain for every man who goes any distance from his home to carry a passport. If he is found without it the carcel is his portion till he can make matters straight. A couple of guardias civiles came upon the pair, the inevitable question was asked, and, as they were without papers the brothers were arrested and taken off to the lockup, in much the same way that they themselves had frequently arrested suspicious travelers.

Sullenly the two brothers marched to the village carcel, and, once within the doors, they felt the first step that was to lead them to Don Q. had been taken.

The next night the lockup was thrown into confusion when it was discovered that the prisoners had escaped. Thorough to the smallest details, or perhaps reverting to the tendencies of earlier days, Gregorio had stunned the man who took them their evening mess of pottage. A hue and cry was immediately raised after them, but the two brothers had fled beyond pursuit into the sierra.

From one obscure hand to another, by ways too devious to follow, the new aspirants for enrolment in the robber gang gradually drifted into the presence of Don. Q.

The ever-chilly chief, huddled as usual in his cloak, was sitting beside his fire when the men were brought into his presence.

"Gaspar, take these fellows away and make the usual examination," said the chief, "I hope for your own sakes, that you will fulfill our requirements," he added to the brothers.

"We do not understand," Manuelo said stolidly.

Don Q. passed a slow glance over the two fine, well-set-up fingers.

"By the way," he began in his soft way, that somehow sounded so deadly to his hearers, "you are, you say, newly from Malaga. There is a point upon which you can perhaps enlighten me. Is it true that the chest measurement for enlistment in the civil guard has been raised half an inch?"

The two black-haired men kept their expression of impassive dulness.

"We are poor men," answered Manuelo, "and when we see a pair of guardias civiles we hide in the bushes or the rocks. I do not know. And you, brother?" he turned towards Gregorio.

"I heard that a recruit must now measure 32 inches round the chest if he desires to be of the corps."

Don Q. considered Gregorio's reply.

"Gaspar," he said, "I can take no more applicants into our band under 33-inch measurement of the chest. The height can remain the same;" then seeing a look of surprise come into the eyes of Manuelo, he added:

"If these men do not happen to reach the standard you will know what to do with them. Did any tell you on your way here that those unfit to be counted amongst our number are also unfit to—leave us?"

"We were told."

With that the Morunos were led from the cave, still wearing their air of dulness and uninterest, to be measured beside the fires in the valley below. Then to each was given a slip of paper, and they were led back to the presence of the chief.

"You may speak, Gaspar," said Don Q.

"Their heights are 5 feet 10 and 5 feet 9, their chests measure 37 and 36 inches, lord."

"Good. And now," Don Q. looked at Manuelo, "let me have a short history of your lives."

"We are sons of one mother, born at a birth. Our name Forjado. They call me Miguel and my brother they call Miguelito. Our father was a contrabandisto. He is dead. The guardias civiles—on whom be curses—shot him when we were children. A month ago we were running a cargo over the sierra on mule back. The guardias civiles prepared an ambush. They fired on us from behind the rocks. We fought with them and escaped, but Miguelito killed one. They had recognized us, so we fled. We entered Bechivo without papers, we were put in the carcel. There we met certain men who told us of the ladron en grande, the great sequestradore, Don Q.

"We decided to seek refuge in the sierra. There was a stone in the courtyard. Miguelito has been a poacher. He crept up behind the guard, who brought our puchero. He may or may not be dead. We are here."

Thus it was that the two brothers gained admission to the ranks of the brigands. Without faltering they took the oath of fidelity and returned with Gaspar to the valley.

The days passed on; the Morunos—though it neither affected nor weakened their resolve—felt something very akin to deep respect grow up in their minds for the iron-handed, inexorable man, who, in spite of his fragile frame, held in abject subjection a bevy of the vilest characters in Spain. The courage of Don Q. was so abnormal, his indifference to death and to danger so absolute, that he compelled the unwilling admiration of the brothers.

It was clearly impossible to attack him among his men, and though the Morunos discussed over and over again the plan of stealing up to the cave by night, and taking their chance of escape after the deed they had come to do was done, they were cast back and deterred by rumors and stories that passed from mouth round the fires.

Manuelo listened and pondered these things.

"I would buy his life with mine, Gregorio, as thou knowest," the elder brother said; "but he is crafty as the devil. The cave is secure by reason of his craft. We must wait."

But the weeks drifted by, and the grip of winter closed more and more harshly upon the mountains, the robbers built themselves chozas, and, for the rest, shivered round the fires.

On a certain bitter evening in December, Manuelo, with Gaspar, was summoned to the cave. Although Manuelo had no premonition of it, he was about to utter a few words which in the end brought on that opportunity of dealing hand to hand with Don Q. which he had almost begun to despair of finding.

Don Q. spoke vaguely of an errand to the Sierra Segura and desired to find a messenger acquainted with the region. The Sierra Segura is that part of the mountain range which runs across the province of Murcia, and Manuelo had patrolled it from pass to plain during most of the years of his service in the civil guards.

For that very reason he denied all knowledge of it, and proclaimed himself as having been born and bred in Catalonia.

"It is unfortunate," remarked the chief regretfully, "but the matter, though important, can be delayed. Meanwhile, Gaspar you must go down to-morrow in the early morning to the hut of the carbonero, Tomas. I have promised him a reward for information; but you shall give it to his wife for he is a spendthrift. Miguel goes with you. Leave me, my children."

A day later Manuelo again found himself in the cave.

"Miguel," asked Don Q., "do you ever go to confession?"

A slight change passed across the man's dark face.

"No, lord," he said stubbornly, for the question somehow made him uncomfortable.

"That is a pity," returned the chief, "death is never very far from one of your profession, Miguel. It is as well to be prepared; is it not?"

"Yes, lord": Manuelo had hard work to retain his impassive aspect. The chance so long hoped for was come at last.

"I intend to go down to the little monastery of San Pedro. The fathers are very holy men, and now and again they sing masses, at my expense, for the souls of those who have perished in the mountains. I have chosen you, Miguel, for you are a man of a sober habit, not given to gambling as are some about the fires. You will now have time to prepare yourself for confession. It is sad, as I myself know, after receiving absolution of the good father, when one remembers some little peccadillo, such as the name of a man one has been forced to kill in the way of business. And, as I should never dream of detaining a priest as captive, your opportunities may be few and far between. Make the most of this one. You may die, Miguel, before the next. Quien sabe?"

Manuelo left the presence of the chief filled with strong joy. At last fortune had come over to the side of himself and his brother. He sought Gregorio at the earliest possible moment with the news.

"Gracias a Dios," answered the younger man; "we now have him between finger and thumb."

"You must steal away from the valley to-night, brother, when the sentries change, as we have always planned. Take my rifle; it is surer than yours. Strike the bridle path three miles eastward of the monastery, where the lagoon lies in the valley. Conceal yourself about the track. I go afoot; the enemy rides. His figure will show clear against the water. You must shoot, Gregorio, and at the echo I will spring upon him."

"I will shoot, brother; my eye is sure. Fear nothing."

The night and the day which the Morunos believed were destined to be the last Don Q. should spend on earth slipped away. Each brother in his own mind rehearsed over and over again the part he had to play in the coming tragedy. But events were fated to occur for which they had made no provision.

The moon, that was almost at the full, climbed up clear of the mountain summits before the party of two set out. They left the barren crags, patched with snow, behind them and entered upon a region of wild and desert character.

The brothers had in their time taken so many prisoners that Manuelo, as he walked beside the stirrup of Don Q., considered their task practically accomplished, and even found time to regret that so able and resourceful a man as the brigand chief should have passed his life elsewhere than in the ranks of the force to which he himself belonged.

Mile after mile was traversed. The lagoon, with its deadly watcher lying in wait, was now no great distance ahead. A jutting mountain flank here thrust its bulk between them and the moonlight. Don Q. drew rein before they entered the shadow.

"We need a lantern, Miguel," he said. "See you those two boulders leaning one against the other. Creep in between them and, to the right hand side you will find a lantern and matches. Kindle the lantern; it will light our path through the darkness."

Manuelo bent down and crawled into the opening. His heels were just disappearing when a sound like a choked cry came from the interior of the cavity, followed by a curse and the sound of savage fighting.

Don Q. nodded his head at the noise and began to dismount in his leisurely fashion.

"Have you secured him, my children?"

"Yes, lord."

"Then pull him out into the moonlight."

The order was obeyed and Manuelo, bound and black with rage, was placed before the chief.

"You are a very clever man, my good Manuelo Moruno," Don Q. began in his soft, sneering voice, "too clever. I should have thought, to commit the gross blunder of denying all knowledge of Murcia with a strong Murcian burr on your tongue. That pretty fable of having been born and bred in Catalonia should have been supported by the use of a few bastard French words. Thus you might have played your part very creditably. As it is I am told that the wife of Tomas, the carbonero, to whose hut I sent you yesterday, made the sign of the cross when she saw your dark face at her door. She is a Murcian and she recognized you, as I expected."

Manuelo stood silent.

"And Gregorio, where is he?" continued the chief.

"He at least has escaped you," burst out Manuelo.

"So? We shall see. I do not remember giving him permission to leave the valley. Yet he left it last night; and at this moment, good Manuelo, he lies above the path beside the lagoon watching for us. We will not keep him waiting. I have been told he is a sure shot. We will test his aim. Put this traitor on the mule, my children."

Manuelo was lifted into the saddle, a noose slipped round his ankles was secured beneath the belly of the mule, a gag was thrust between his teeth, and when he was bound and helpless, Don Q. with his own hands artistically arranged the folds of a cloak about his shoulders.

So the journey was resumed.

"I understand, Manuelo," went on the soft voice of Don Q., "that you and your brother have been ambitious of meeting me alone in some solitary spot. Is it not so? You are about to have your desire. Gregorio will mistake you for me. He will remember the heavy blood money that is upon my head, and will send his bullet straight. The result may surprise him a little, but in this world it is never wise to count upon results."

The progress of the mule, regulated by the pace of the terrible man who walked so delicately behind it, was slow, and before the spread of water with the moon shining upon it came into view. Manuelo had plenty of time to realize his position.

Not far ahead Gregorio was waiting, with his rifle on his knee, ready to fire, not dreaming that the muffled figure on the mule was not Don Q., but his own brother.

If only he could make some sign of warning whereby Gregorio might escape the cruel vengeance of the chief!

To be continued.

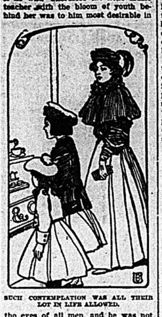
The Discovery of His Kingdom.

By LOUISE J. STRONG.

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.

She gave him a cheery greeting as she passed, which Deardorf returned with stiff embarrassment. Women always embarrassed him, which fact had been construed into a dislike of the sex, thus accounting for his bachelorhood.

No one would have believed that he lounged on the veranda solely that he might watch her down the street. Much less would any one have imagined that every time he looked into her candid womanly eyes his lonely, unmated man soul clamored for the home and companionship he saw therein. He had not learned that this kingdom in woman's eyes is discernible only to the king to whom it is given to possess if he will. Therefore the little music teacher with the bloom of youth behind her was to him most desirable in the eyes of all men, and he was not surprised, only startled to the stopping of his heart, at what he overheard from a couple of young men behind him.



SUCH CONTEMPLATION WAS ALL THEIR LOT IN LIFE ALLOWED.

"She will make him a sweet little wife—the lucky dog!" one exclaimed.

"The sweetest in the world," the other assented. "And there's nothing for the rest of us but hunting wedding presents. Come on."

They went their way, and with strangely blurred vision he stumbled up the stairs and through the gloom of the hall to his rooms at the end. Her door was opposite, and as he fumbled with his key he glanced across furtively with an old sense of guilt for the accustomed thrill that shook him. It was as if she were already the wife of another, and, closing his door with emphasis, he turned on the light and set about packing his minerals, telling himself that he would move immediately—that there was neither sense nor reason in his staying in this dingy place where his poverty, long a thing of the past, had at first stranded him; no reason, except that, catlike, he clung to the place as home, and—yes, he would acknowledge it—because she was there. He frowned and essayed a nonchalant whistle when he caught himself, as usual, straining his ears for the sound of her footsteps. It was time that he went.

But subsequent reflection persuaded him that his departure at this juncture might be connected with her marriage and excite comment. He felt that he must remain until the "lucky dog" had carried her away, and—he blushed painfully at the thought—he must procure the inevitable wedding present if he would not be conspicuous.

Then followed strenuous days and sleepless nights of vain endeavor to decide upon something, with bitter reviling of the custom which forbade his presenting her with a goodly check in lieu of an article which would probably be but an unwelcome duplicate. He hunted the shops and stores, confusing himself uselessly with the multitude and variety of their wares. He grew thin and heavy eyed under the burden, thereby arousing in her an anxious solicitude he was too absorbed to perceive. In despair he sought advice of the office boy.

"Billy," he asked that versatile young person, "what would you give to a lady for a wedding present?"

"Aw, that's easy! Something she'd like, of course," Billy said airily. Then he explained: "I mean, sir, something you've heard her say she'd like. That's the only kind o' present worth having, only folks won't give 'em. I've tried it, a-hinting and a-hinting what I want Christmuses and birthdays, and I always get some old thing I wouldn't take if I could help it," Billy sniffed.

That seemed an eminently sensible suggestion to Deardorf, and he presented a grateful dollar to Billy for the idea, realizing when he came to make application of it that the only object of which he had any knowledge concerning her desires was undoubtedly questionable regarded as a wedding present. Still, according to Billy's decision, it would be a pleasure to her.

He had one day chanced upon her standing behind two little girls who were engrossed in the contemplation of an entrancing toy tea set in a shop window. It was obvious that such contemplation was all their lot in life allowed, and she was fingering her slim purse doubtfully, with moist eyes.

"I was wondering if I might not give it to them for the sake of a lonely little girl whose one desire in life was a vain longing for a tiny tea set," she said as he stopped.

"Let me," he begged, expanding under the influence of her impulsive confidence.

After some insistence she yielded. They took the amazed children inside, and she examined and extolled each small article with a delight that equaled theirs.

"We do not all put away childish things with years," she said when they were outside. "I love the wee things yet, and some time"—she smiled defiantly—"some time, when I can and not feel it a wicked extravagance, I am going to have my childish heart's desire. I am so sure that you will not laugh at me that I will invite you in to my first tea party."

He thanked her gravely, understanding and sympathizing entirely. Did he not carry in his pocket a wonderful carnelian "taw" in memory of the ungratified longing of the boy he used to be? He had been waiting for the Christmas opportunity to gratify her innocent desire, reveling in imagination in the intimacy of her promised hospitality. Now he had put away his day dream with a sigh and extinguished a dim hope that had glimmered feebly.

But it remained that he must make the wedding present, and finally, being confident of her perfect sincerity, he ignored obtruding doubts as to appropriateness and procured a fairylike tea set worthy the possession of a princess, which, being unequal to presenting it personally, he left at her door with his card one evening, just escaping her as she came up the stairs.

And then, when it was done, he for the first time considered his offering from the probable viewpoint of the prospective bridegroom and her friends, and the utter absurdity of it overwhelmed him. With shame he decided that after such a piece of idiocy there was nothing for him but flight, and he was tossing things helter skelter into his suit case when he heard her crossing the hall.

He looked about desperately for a way of escape, then dragged himself unwillingly to the door at her rap.

"I have only this moment realized how preposterous my unfortunate selection is for a wedding present," he stammered abjectly as she entered.

"Oh!" The glow on her face faded. "How stupid of me! I ought to have known there was a mistake, and I have opened the box." She set it upon the table.

He shook his head dismally. "There is no mistake. I beg your pardon. I—I"—

"But there must be a mistake! They left the package at my door," she said, a little sharply.

"I left it myself. I meant it for a wedding present, but I see how"—His voice failed again.

She regarded his woebegone face intently for a moment. "Very well. I will take it down." Her cheeks were glowing and her eyes sparkling with mischief. "When I found the package I thought you had somehow discovered that today is my birthday and had kindly remembered my childish longing, but if it is a wedding present it must go to Miss Bessie, who is soon to be married."

He sat down heavily and stared at her.

"You see, one must be married to receive a wedding present," she explained demurely, her color flaming under his gaze.

The tangle suddenly straightened, he sprang up. "Yes," he assented, still looking into her eyes, where by a flash of inspiration he had seen his kingdom, himself crowned king. He plunged forward across the table and seized her hands, asserting boldly, "It is a wedding present—your wedding present, Alma, dear, for you are going to be married immediately."

For answer she murmured tearfully and happily, "Oh, Morris, we will have tea in the darling little cups our first evening at home!"

Ripened Romance.

On the occasion of the ninetieth birthday of Dr. Martineau, who preached in Liverpool for many years, Sir Henry Roscoe, the English chemist, congratulated him on attaining such a fine old age. The distinguished clergyman said that he had been overwhelmed with congratulations and that he was working through the letters he had received.

"By degrees," he said, "I shall answer them all.

"One of the most remarkable," Dr. Martineau continued, "was from a lady, the only person who addressed me as 'Dear James.' I had not seen her since we were boy and girl together in Norwich. She is one of the daughters of Dr. Rigby in that city. My friends used to joke me as a young man about Miss Jane Rigby, and I received their chaff pleasantly. I believed her long since dead; and now comes this letter to remind me of her existence and her friendly recollection of me."

The old minister paused an instant, then added, with a tremulous smile, "She is now also in her ninetieth year."

A Weak Heart.

"They tell me Bad Bill's dead," said Alkali Ike. "Is that right?"

"Sure," replied Cactus Cal; "shot plumb through the heart."

"Well, I ain't surprised then. His heart always was weak."—Philadelphia Press.

The World's First Story.

It is probable that the first story in the world was a ghost story.—London Telegraph.

TIRED AND SICK
YET MUST WORK

"Man may work from sun to sun but woman's work is never done."

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo and often suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, comes as a blessing. When the spirits are depressed, the head and back aches, there are dragging-down pains, nervousness, sleeplessness, and reluctance to go anywhere, these are only symptoms which unless heeded, are soon followed by the worst forms of Female Complaints.

MRS. AUG. LYON

keeps the feminine organism in a strong and healthy condition. It cures Inflammation, Ulceration, displacements, and organic troubles. In preparing for child-birth and to carry women safely through the Change of Life it is most efficient.

Mrs. Augustus Lyon, of East Earl, Pa., writes:—Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—"For a long time I suffered from female troubles and had all kinds of aches and pains in the lower part of back and sides, I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following the advice which you gave me I feel like a new woman and I cannot praise your medicine too highly."

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of her vast volume of experience she probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

White Oak.

The average growth in white oak is only about four one-hundredths of an inch a year.

Young Spiders' Webs.

Leuenhoek says that 4,000,000 webs, spun by young spiders when they first begin to use the spinneret, are not, if twisted together, as great in diameter as a hair from a human head.

Dwarf Hudson.

The most noted dwarf was Jeffery Hudson, born in 1619. At the age of eight he was eighteen inches high and was served upon the table as a cold pie as a present to Charles I. At the age of thirty he began to grow and reached the height of three feet nine inches. He lived to be sixty-three and died in prison.

Goldfish.

Goldfish are of Chinese origin. They were originally found in a large lake near Mount Tsientsing and were first brought to Europe in the seventeenth century. The first in France came as a present to Mme. de Pompadour.

The Largest Room.

The largest room without columns is said to be in a solid concrete building of the mosque at Lucknow, India. It is 162 feet long, 54 wide and 53 high. The timber mold was left a year for the concrete to set, and the building, erected in 1784, is still unimpaired.

Executions In Denmark.

Capital punishment in Denmark is executed publicly with an ax. If several are to be decapitated on the same date, one is not present while another is executed.

Incense Parties.

"Incense parties" were a common feature of old Japan. Each of the guests had a little furnace, a small wooden box packed with sand. On the top of this was a small charcoal fire. Each woman in turn burned some incense, and the others had to guess what it was. After every burning the windows were thrown open, and the room was cleared for the next experiment.

Parsley.

Parsley was eaten by the ladies of ancient Rome as a cleanser of the breath, and honey boiled in aniseed and wine were also used for the same purpose.

Highest Lighthouses.

The highest lighthouses are the Bartholdi statue of Liberty in New York harbor, which is 151 feet, besides a pedestal of 155 feet; one at Genoa, Italy, 218 feet in height, and Cape Hatteras light, which is 189 feet.

Bookselling.

Bookselling is the most healthy trade. A bookseller loses on an average only four and one-half days yearly by illness, while a mason or miller loses nine days.

Imitation Pearls.

Imitation pearls were manufactured in Egypt at least fifteen centuries before our era, say some authorities, and the manufacture seems to have remained stationary there for a long time. The manufacture of a false pearl at Rome goes back to the period when the taste for fine pearls became general, and Pliny indicates this in the most precise manner.

Costly Wine.

In 1858 $570 a bottle was paid for some wine recovered in 1814 from a wreck in the Scheldt. The wine had been bottled in 1778.

Welsh Rabbit.

Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a little cayenne in one-half pint of milk. At the boiling point add one pound of grated cheese. When a smooth paste is formed, cover toasted bread with the cheese and serve hot.

A Lac of Rupees.

A lac of rupees means 100,000 rupees. As the rupee varies in value, there is no fixed sum equivalent to a lac. At the nominal value of a rupee, 50 cents, a lac would mean $50,000.

Where Angels Fear to Tread.

A company of young American tourists visited the home of Beethoven in Bonn and were unrestrained in their expressions of wonder, admiration and approval of the room where the master had lived and worked. They asked many questions about Beethoven, and finally one young lady seated herself at his piano and proceeded, with true American confidence, to play the "Moonlight Sonata," Beethoven's own work, in his own room, on his own piano. Such an interesting combination!

The old caretaker stood there, stern and silent. When the performance was over the young lady turned to the old man and said:

"I suppose many musicians have been here and have played on this instrument?"

"Paderewski was here once, madame"—

"Ah!" she sighed.

"But," continued the faithful guardian, "when some one urged him to play on Beethoven's piano he said, 'No; I am not worthy.'"

Legend of the Sparrows.

The Greek church people of Russia regard swallows as being sacred birds, but kill sparrows whenever the opportunity affords. They declare that the swallows ministered to Jesus while he was hanging on the cross, but that the sparrows tore his flesh and did their best to pluck out his eyes. On this account they say that the sparrows' legs are invisibly bound, which causes their gait to be a succession of painful hops. In this way is the sparrow doomed to move about until the day of judgment.

Dog as Friend and Food.

The Germans love the dog. They look after his health; they provide him bathing establishments furnished with every modern comfort — hot and cold water, vapor douches, friction; they appreciate his character, his fidelity, his frankness, and they regard him as food; they like him as a friend and as victuals. In Prussia alone in one quarter 520 dogs were recently killed for food.

Women Warriors.

Women in China have the privilege of fighting in the wars. In the rebellion of 1850 women did as much fighting as men. At Nankin in 1853 about 500,000 women from various parts of the country were formed into brigades of 13,000 each under female officers. Of these soldiers 10,000 were picked women, drilled and garrisoned in the city.

Plaster of Paris.

When plaster of paris is used for mending cracks in plastering, mix it with vinegar instead of water. It will be more easily worked with.

Human Faced Clock.

A clock with a human face is the work of a clockmaker in St. Petersburg. The hands are pivoted on the nose. At midnight the eyes close and the mouth yawns. About 2 in the morning the mouth emits a gentle snore. This is done by means of a phonograph in the interior.

Where Titles Are Secure.

There are no known pretenders to Asiatic or African thrones, titles or authority for the very simple reason that in those continents it has been for long years customary to decapitate a pretender in testimony of the better title of his successful rival.

Ancient Rome's Wall.

In the time of Augustus Rome was entirely surrounded by a high wall which was twenty miles in circumference.

Wouldn't Dance Upside Down.

A young lady rushed into a drug store and asked for some floor wax. The clerk told her they had no floor wax, but had some sealing wax. She replied, "We are going to give a dance and want to wax the floor, not the ceiling."

The undertaker never would get some people if they could live until they acquired wisdom. — Brownsville (Tex.) Herald.

Intemperate Habits Increase the Liability To Consumption.

The susceptibility of people to tuberculosis is just about trebled by intemperate habits. This is the estimate of scientific men.

The disease is not caught as you catch scarlet fever or smallpox, but by germs from dried sputum getting into the lungs. If our bodies are strong and healthy the germs are resisted successfully by the operation of nature; if weakened and depleted, the germ will make headway, and death is inevitable, unless proper methods of cure are followed. Temperance lectures could well make use of these facts.

Neglected colds are also a prolific source of consumption, as they leave the lungs in a peculiarly receptive condition for the tubercular germ. A simple remedy, which is said to break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable, can be obtained from any good prescription druggist at small cost: Take one-half ounce Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), two ounces of Glycerine and eight ounces of good Whisky. Shake well and take in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

To avoid substitution, it is best to purchase the ingredients and prepare the mixture yourself. The Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) should be purchased in the original half-ounce vials, which are securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario, plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) which are put out under similar names and style of package. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea and never effect the desired result.

Toronto Live Stock.

Toornto, March 14.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market since last Tuesday as reported by the railways were 126 car loads, composed of 2,002 cattle, 1,200 hogs, 488 sheep and lambs with 185 calves.

Exporters.

Several loads of light exporters were on sale, which sold from $5 to $5.25 per cwt., and one lot of 13 choice, 1230 lbs. each, sold at $5.35 per cwt. Exports bulls sold at $3.75 to $4.35 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots, $4.85 to $5, and a few brought $5.25, but altho they were bought for butcher purposes they were really light exporters. Loads of good sold at $4.50 to $4.80; medium, $4.25 to $4.50; good cows, $3.75 to $4.15; common cows, $2.75 to $3.50; canners, $1.50 to $2; bulls, $2.50 to $4.

Milch Cows.

Well up to one hundred cows were on sale on Wednesday and Thursday. The demand from Montreal having eased off, and the large offerings together had the effect of causing a slump of about $10 per head in prices, causing many drovers to drop profits on other stock. The bulk sold at $30 to $45 each, altho quite a few were bought at higher prices on Wednesday, as will be seen by sales given below. Several cows sold at $50, $55, and one cow sold up to $64. But all of these best cows would have brought $10 per head more one week ago.

Veal Calves.

Out of nearly 200 veal calves offered there was not one prime quality new milk-fed calf in the whole bunch. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt., and the latter price was high when quality is considered. A prime calf would easily bring $7.25 to $7.50, but there were none of this class on the market.

Sheep and Lambs.

The quality of the bulk of the lambs was far from being good, the bulk of them being rams, had to be sold at a lower price. Picked ewes and wethers are worth $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt., but they are scarce. Wesley Dunn reports prices as follows: Export ewes, $4.75 to $5.25; rams and cull sheep, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $6.50 to $7.25; common lambs, $5.50 to $6 per cwt.

Hogs.

Selects sold at $6.80 to $6.85; lights and fats at $6.55 to $6.60 per cwt.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 14.—Cattle—Receipts, light; good demand and steady; prime steers, $5.60 to $6; shipping, $5 to $5.50.

Veals—Receipts, 200 head; active and 25c lower; $4.25 to $9.

Hogs—Receipts, 1700 head; active and a shade lower; heavy, mixed, yorkers and pigs, $7.35; roughs, $6.50 to $6.55; stags, $4.75 to $5.50.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 5000 head; steady; sheep, active; lambs, slow; lambs, $5 to $8.10; yearlings, $6.75 to $7; wethers, $6 to $6.25; ewes, $4.75 to $5.50; sheep, mixed, $3 to $6.50.

ATTACKS LAND BILL.

Mr. Greenway Opposes Restoration of Pre-Emption Rights.

Ottawa, March 15.—Mr. Oliver yesterday moved for a second reading of his bill to amend the acts respecting public lands. The bill covers 52 printed pages. The salient feature is section 27, restoring pre-emption rights, so that a settler may acquire a second homestead, and in some cases it would appear, a third homestead also.

The first speech against the bill come from Mr. Greenway (Liberal, Manitoba). The bill passed in 1892, providing for a second homestead had been injurious to the West, he said. He was astonished to learn now that a third homestead would be granted those who had made their entries prior to 1889. He believed that with a 160-acres of land any man could settle down and acquire a competence.

"I can think of nothing more detrimental to the interests of the people of Western Canada, especially to the Province of Manitoba, and the eastern part of Saskatchewan, than to put upon the statute book a law like this."

Belong to the Country.

Mr. Foster drew attention to the fact that the criticisms of Mr. Greenway were not replied to by any member on the Government side of the House. It was pointed out to Mr. Oliver that it was a cheap business for a Minister under modern conditions to reflect as he had done on a statesman who made the most they could out of conditions thirty years ago. These lands belonged to the whole country but under the bill only a favored portion could get the benefit of the gift, and these were the settlers who had received a gift of 100 acres of land. Magnificent opportunities were opened up by the bill for political manipulation and corrupt deals.

Premier Wants Information.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier criticized the course of the members who had attacked the measure on its second reading, but yet had not divided the House upon it. The principle of the bill was simple that of giving preference to the people now in the West over all newcomers. He would express no view on the question. His desire was to hear members from the West discuss the measure in detail.

R. L. Borden said that the speech of the First Minister showed that he had already made up his mind on the pre-emption clause of the bill. He should advocate making land records open to public examination, especially in regard to timber limits. They should be sold only by public competition.

Offspring born of mothers under twenty years old do not have as good chance of healthy life as those born of mothers over thirty.

A Formidable Drum.

John Ziska, the one eyed chief of the Hussites, ordered in his will that his skin should be tanned and made into a drum. "The noise which my skin will make," said he, "will frighten away all our enemies and put them to flight."

Painting the Forth Bridge.

The Forth bridge receives a new coat of paint every three years, and one-third is done each year, so that the painters are continually at work. Besides the painting every part of the structure is carefully examined and loose or defective rivets removed and new ones put in their place.

Reciprocity.

"No," snapped the sharp faced woman at the door. "I ain't got no food fur you, an' I ain't got no old clo'es. Now git!"

"Lady," replied Harvard Hasben, "I could repay you well. Give me a square meal and I'll give you a few lessons in grammar."

They Have the Grand Manner.

"You have a distinguished company," remarked old MacShoddeigh, who was the first to make his appearance at a select dinner given by his city friend.

"Distinguished!" said the host. "They are the waiters. Very few of the guests have arrived."—Tit-Bits.

WOMEN DOG THIEVES.

Pets Stolen on London Streets and Afterward Disposed Of.

Dog thieves have been very busy recently in the neighborhood of Oxford street, Regent street, and Piccadilly.

The police believe that there is an expert and highly-organized gang at work. The ordinary dog thief with his sack for small dogs and a stout piece of rope for the larger ones is always at work; but recent losses point to a more daring method of appropriation. It is believed that many of the thefts of smaller dogs are committed by women. They hang about on the outskirts of crowds of ladies looking into the shop windows, and the small terrier is snapped up and either concealed under the cloak or the thief hails a passing hansom. As the female thieves are invariably well dressed, the fact that they have a more or less protesting small dog under their arm occasions no comment.

Of the larger types, collies and poodles are the most sought after by the dog thieves, because they seem to be more easily handled by strangers, and because they always command a good market on the Continent, especially in France. The smaller dogs have various fates. They may be "faked" to some extent and sent down to "Club Row," in Shoreditch, where there is a regular dog market every Sunday market, and where ten or fifteen shillings can easily be obtained for a good terrier, the purchaser, of course, having to run the risk that the dog is stolen and may be claimed. Another method of disposing of them is through the medium of various papers, and a third resort is to hold them to ransom. This last method is by far the most profitable way of realizing, but it requires to be carefully carried through.

To show the extent to which dog stealing is carried on, it may be mentioned that at Vine Street Police Office there were recently eight notices offering rewards for "lost" (the polite way of putting "stolen") dogs, and at Marlborough street and all the other west-end offices a correspondingly large number. The rewards offered ranged from a minimum of £1 up to £20.—London Daily Mail.

Whistler's Magic With the Brush.

Whistler was a whimsical genius even as an art coach, and Mr. Cyrus Cuneo gives with pen and pencil in the November number of "The Pall Mall Magazine," some interesting reminiscences of the way in which "The Master" used to touch up a student's drawing into a burlesque or a masterpiece, according to his humor.

We all crowded around breathlessly watching his every movement; this was certainly a treat never to be forgotten. Intense interest was depicted on our eager and pleased faces, and I am sure we all inwardly felt horribly elated and a great pity for those of our fellow students who were not present.

There stood frail little Whistler staring at the model as though she were a ghost; open eyes and mouth, working on the palette, he held his breath, then, slowly extending his arm, and gently but firmly drawing the brush along the canvas, he uttered a deep sigh, almost a puff of relief, ending with the finish of the stroke. This painful process was repeated at almost every touch, and was exceedingly comical. It was marvelous though, to see the transformation he wrought; from an ordinary study he changed it to a canvas containing all the qualities of a great master.

As the time went on uneasiness prevailed; we shifted from one foot to the other, leant on each other's shoulders, and exchanged glances of sympathy with the model, who was lifting first one leg, then the other, in a wild endeavor to get the blood to circulate, making horrible faces as she looked at the clock. (Whistler would only have women models, never men.) This had not the slightest effect on Whistler, who became more and more excited, his strokes more energetic, and the white lock reared itself defiantly in his disheveled hair.

With a louder puff than any that had preceded it, Whistler suddenly laid down his brushes, saying, I think that's better."

We surged around the picture, and several laughing offers were made for it; but the lucky possessor carried it off triumphantly, for I am sure that up to the last moment he had expected Whistler to say: "I'd better take this with me."

London's Dinner Hour.

A momentous change has been decreed in the habits of London society, initiated by the King, says a note in the society columns of a London paper. His Majesty disapproved of the tendency to make the dinner hour later and later and has decreed that hereafter the fashionable dinner hour shall be from 6.30 to 7.30. Before this change was instituted society dined from 8 to 9. The new dinner hour, which is a return to earlier manners, is welcomed by everybody. It will benefit the theatres, which have lost many patrons through the late dinner hour, and it will also send more people to the restaurants for supper. People who dined at 8 o'clock were not always inclined for supper afterward and could not reach the theatre before the middle of the performance.

London's Juggernauts.

Horse drawn vehicles still hold pride of place in the list of London's juggernauts despite the popular impression that the various forms of motors hold the lead. A return supplied by the Home Secretary for the past month shows that the accidents numbered 3,058, with personal injuries in 968 cases and 28 deaths, of which 23 were caused by horse drawn vehicles. The following is a summary of the return: Horse drawn vehicles, 602; electric tram cars, 129; motor cars and cycles, 155; motor omnibuses, 95.—London Express.

CONSUMPTION

MAINLY CAUSED BY CHRONIC COLDS AND HANGING-ON COUGHS.

Mr. J. S. McKeown, our well-known druggist has given a good deal of time to the study of consumption, and finds that comparatively few cases are hereditary.

Mostly all are caused by neglected coughs and colds, which gradually weaken the whole pulmonary system, and before people realize it there is a diseased spot in one lung; spitting blood soon follows and eventually a collapse.

Such an unnecessary end, such a pity, for all could have been so different. We know of hundreds of cases where our wonderful cod liver preparation, Vinol, has saved a young and valuable life, which without it would have been sacrificed. We have letters from people who were given up to die, and who positively state that Vinol, and Vinol alone, saved their lives when all else had failed to help them.

Vinol is able to cure hanging-on colds and stubborn coughs, because it is the most perfect preparation of cod liver oil ever compounded: it contains no oil or grease to upset the delicate stomach, yet it does contain every one of the fifty-odd medicinal curative elements actually taken from fresh cods' livers, and we freely and publicly state that we will supply all the Vinol we think necessary to cure any case of chronic coughs, hanging-on colds or weak and debilitated conditions of Belleville people, and pay for the medicine ourselves if it fails to give satisfactory results.

How can we express our faith in Vinol more emphatically? J. S. McKeown, druggist.

About the Limit.

A newly married couple came in a hotel where we were resting and asked how much it would cost to get two bowls of boiled rice and milk and were informed that the price was 15 cents per portion. The groom pulled a small package wrapped in a bit of newspaper from his pocket and, opening it, displayed about a double handful of rice, which he said they had gathered from their clothing after the shower which followed the early morning wedding. He inquired how much would be deducted if they furnished their own rice and upon being informed that no allowance could be made became indignant and remarked that they would wait until they reached home for their dinner rather than submit to such unfair dealing and left the place. The proprietor said that the young man owned one of the best farms in the town and had established quite a famous reputation locally for economy, although that is not exactly the way he expressed it.—Forest and Stream.

Lowell Got His Whacks.

In his volume on the practice of diplomacy John W. Foster relates an illuminating anecdote concerning James Russell Lowell when he was our minister at Madrid. At a royal reception Minister Lowell, in plain evening dress, was preceded up the palace stairway by a minister from Central America, gorgeously appareled, wearing a jeweled sword, who was saluted at each landing by the magnificent halberdier with a heavy whack of the battle ax on the marble pavement. As Mr. Lowell wore no insignia of office, he received no attention. At last, his patriotic blood boiling, he addressed the halberdier in excellent Spanish, "Do you know who I am?" "I don't." "Well," said Mr. Lowell, "I am the minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America, the greatest nation on earth, and if you don't whack the next time I pass you I will forget you at Christmas!" And the halberdier whacked thereafter as directed.

Child Cynics.

A London writer exclaims at thinking "there is really nothing to account for the extraordinary critical mood which the modern child has developed in regard to toyland." The modern child will simply not make believe. Little boys and girls alike become sticklers for the "correct thing," and if the build of a steamship or a motor car, the cut of a doll's frock or the mysteries the eye does not usually see are not "just like" the real thing there is trouble. It is said that toy makers have even now to employ scientific experts and French milliners if they hope to pass the critical eyes of the "new child." The fact is the modern child is born a cynic and a sated little darling. It has no emotions, no desires save to destroy and be lived and breathed for by necessary parents.

Romance of a Necklace.

Some years ago an old Frenchwoman died in a poor part of Dublin, and her little effects were put up for auction. Among other odds and ends was a necklace of dirty looking green stones, which did not attract much attention. However, a shrewd pair of dealers thought there might be "money in it," and decided on purchasing, clubbing together £5 for the purpose. On taking it to a well known jeweler he promptly offered £1,500, which sum they refused and sold the necklace of purest emeralds for £7,000 in London, where Lord Rosebery on his marriage purchased it for something like £20,000. The old Frenchwoman's mother had been attached to the court of France, and the emeralds had once formed part of the crown jewels.—London Answers.

"Well, Harry, what are you doing nowadays?"

"Writing for the press."

"Thankless sort of work, ain't it?"

"Bless your heart, no! 'Bout everything I write is returned with thanks."

PROCRASTINATION.

Many people imagine that they can gain something by putting off wearing glasses for a few years longer than usual. They never gain, but always lose. Their glasses at 60 will be just as strong as if they had received benefit at an earlier period, and headaches and neurasthenia in their varied forms might have been spared the sufferer. People after forty often have an array of nervous symptoms, which are attributed to various causes, sometimes to "crankiness." A large part of these symptoms are due to eyestrain, caused by not wearing glasses in time, or by the ones they are wearing not being correct, to relieve the strain. It is generally considered an easy matter to fit glasses for ordinary failing sight, but this is a great mistake. It is not simply the glasses that make the print plain that will relieve nerve and muscle strain. These very often increase the trouble. Consultation free.

Long Session Of Board Of Trade.

City's Utilities Under Discussion--Some Interesting Matters Brought Out--Ex-Mayor Johnson Claims He Was Misrepresented By the Press--Deputation Appointed to Interview Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the Council Chamber last evening, and the attendance was large, owing, no doubt, to the notices sent out detailing the matters to be discussed, namely, city utilities, the Gas and Water departments, and the reconsidering of the resolution re the Canadian Northern Railway entering the city. The session lasted until after midnight.

Among those present were:

Messrs. H. C. Hunt, J. W. London, T. Blackburn, J. Rabbits, F. Dolan, ar., W. B. Deacon, W. J. Diamond, H. Greenleaf, F. S. Deacon, J. Wallace, W. N. Ponton, J. A. Kerr, F. S. Clarke, J. P. Wims, S. Robertson, J. W. Johnson, A. McGie, Dr. Clinton, J. S. McKeown, F. Quick, J. McBride, F. Wallbridge, S. E. Lennox, Mayor Sulman, Ald. Ackerman, Ald. Green, H. Carre, L. B. Cooper, O. S. Hicks, G. Wallbridge, J. C. Moynes, Ald. Panter, Ald. Marsh, E. P. Frederick, W. C. Mikel, J. H. Moon, J. A. McFee, F. C. Clarke, S. A. Spangenberg and J. Roblin.

In the absence of the President, Mr. R. J. Graham, who was ill, Col. Ponton, vice-president, occupied the chair.

The first matter taken up was that of sending a representative to the conference at Madoc on the 15th. It was to meet G.T.R. officials in reference to extending a railway line from Madoc village to Eldorado.

The Mayor stated that Ald. Butler would be a representative from the City Council, and his expenses would, no doubt, be paid.

A motion prevailed that Col. Ponton be a delegate from the Board of Trade and his expenses be paid.

THE GAS DEPARTMENT.

Mr. F. S. Deacon said that the question of gas, and the present condition of that department in this city, was a matter that was engaging the attention of the citizens and it had been placed on the order paper for discussion.

Ald. Green said there was but one desire in the minds of all citizens, namely, the success of the gas department. It was impossible at the present time to obtain the kind of information that the Committee or Council desired in this matter. The books had been placed in the hands of the auditors. They had given a financial statement but it was not an official audit. Some members of the Gas Committee had visited other places where the gas plant was owned by the municipality. In Brockville, one of the places visited, it was shown that last year there was a gross profit of $14,000 and that $6,000 of liabilities had been paid off. The works at Brockville cost about the same as those at Belleville, namely about $90,000. The manager of the local Gas department had resigned, and the committee had, from a number of applications for the position, selected Mr. Thos. Gardner, who was highly recommended by Mr. Pearson, a former lessee of the works. Mr. Gardner was conversant with the plant in all of its aspects. The Alderman referred to the fact that mains had been extended about the city and a change had been made in the plant, whereby gas is made from coal instead of oil. The total indebtedness now is $90,000. The financial report for the past year does not show what the Council would like to show. The Committee is desirous of getting upon a proper basis in reference to this important matter, and the co-operation of all citizens is earnestly desired.

Ex-Mayor Johnson said he deemed it his duty to write a letter to the press in reference to the important matter of the gas department. The Committee had recommended to the Council some suggestions which appeared in his communication. He had suggested that the funds should pass through the City Treasurer, and that was recommended. The dropping of the sale of fixtures was a move in the right direction. His suggestion that a daily record be kept of the amount of gas that is obtained from the raw material, had been recommended to the Council. The speaker detailed the circumstances that led to the leasing of the works to Mr Pearson by the Gas Company, and their subsequent sale to the city. Mr. Pearson had no competitor, and he charged $2.25 per 1000 for gas. When the Gas company took the works back from Mr. Pearson he (the speaker) was instrumental in having the price of gas lowered to $1.70 per thousand. Mr. Pearson could do nothing else but make money on account of the excessive price he received for gas. Mr. Pearson subsequently got the contract for street lighting by electricity, and the result was that he injured or crippled the Gas company by taking from it many of its best consumers. The ultimate result was that the stock was sold. Look at the condition of the Gas department to-day. Would any person be willing to give 7 cents on the dollar for it? He thought not. We had a good electric plant at the gas works, but it was not used and he never saw any reason assigned why there had been a change of manufacturing gas from coal instead of oil. The electric plant and the oil plant are simply rotting to-day He predicted when the Trenton Electric lighting concern came in, that this city was too small to have two lighting concerns within its borders, and that there would be trouble, and such was the case. He believed there were as good mechanics in the city as Mr. Gardner was, although he was a good man. What will Mr. Gardner have to do to earn his $1,100 per annum when the works are properly running? Messrs. Sullivan and Middleton were good makers of gas. He suggested that Mr. Gardner be made manager of the gas and also the water department.

Ald. Green, in replying, said that there was not room to have the Gas department office in the City Building without making some improvements, and it was hoped, by having an office up town, to reach out for business.

In answer to an enquiry from Col. Ponton, Ald. Green said that there was no official auditors' report; it was simply a financial statement.

Col. Ponton said that some $40,000 had been expended, without the ratepayers having a voice in the matter. This he did not think was right.

Mr. Johnson said he saw from the papers that a new gas holder, costing $14,000, was to be put up, and $500 paid to Mr. English to superintend the work. If this was correct, why was it necessary to pay such a sum to a superintendent, or why was a new holder necessary?

Ald. Green said there was a complaint that there were not gas holders enough, owing to the increase in the use of gas. There was no official of the city competent to superintend the construction of a new gas holder, and the committee thought that a competent man should be employed and thought they were making an excellent bargain in securing Mr. English to superintend the building of the holder.

Mr. Johnson thought that Mr. Gardner could superintend the erection of the gas holder.

Ald. Green said the tender was let last fall and Mr. English suggested as superintendent, when they did not know that there would be any change in the management of the Gas department.

Mayor Sulman said there was no binding agreement with Mr. English, and he (the speaker) had no doubt but that Mr. Gardner would yet superintend the construction of the gas holder.

Mr. A. McGie thought there would be better results in the future in the Gas department than there had been in the past few years.

Mr. Hunt said what the citizens wanted was gas as cheap as possible.

Mr F. S. Deacon asked if the change of making gas from coal instead of oil had proved more satisfactory.

Ald. Green said the change had been made chiefly through the efforts of ex-Mayor Graham. There seemed to be more profits, too, from the by-products of coal. Tar was a very valuable product. He could not, off-hand, tell the difference in price of manufacturing gas from coal or oil.

Ald. Panter said the secret of the matter was that the Gas department had not been properly managed, but the committee intended this year to do all in its power to make the Gas department pay.

Mr. Jas. Rabbitts had hoped to have gas cheaper this year, as he had virtually been so promised, but it did not look as if this result would be reached.

Mr. W. B. Deacon said the Gas department had evidently been very poorly managed. It was a move in the right direction that another manager was being secured. The Gas department, he had no doubt, would pay if properly managed. He suggested that a manager be secured who could manage both the Gas and Water departments.

Mr. Wims thought there was no reason why one man could not manage the two departments. The Gas Committee were to be congratulated upon the manner in which they had taken up this matter.

The chairman stated that the discussion had brought out several matters not generally known, and good might result.

THE WATERWORKS.

Mayor Sulman stated that the chairman of the Waterworks department had informed him that the financial statement for the past year was of a satisfactory character. At the pump house everything is kept in the very best condition.

In answer to a question, the Mayor said that since the works had been secured by the city an extra $10,000 debenture had been issued, which was needed to make extensions, etc.

Mr. Lennox said the Mayor had stated there was a clear profit. When would we have clear water to drink? It was rather fishy at present.

Col. Ponton asked if there was to be an additional increase in debentures for a new engine or pump.

The Mayor said the pumps would, no doubt, have to be replaced in a year or two, and the cost would probably be $10,000.

No further discussion took place upon this matter.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

Col. Ponton, after reading the motion which was passed at a recent meeting of the Board relating to a deputation going to the Minister of Railways about the Canadian Northern Railway, said he did not see why the matter should be reconsidered, as it was in no wise committal, only a recommendation to refer the matter to the Minister of Railways.

Ald. Marsh asked what was the object of passing the resolution.

Col. Ponton said that Toronto had taken similar action, and the result was that the C.N.R. enters Toronto by way of the Don valley instead of by way of the water front. We want this railway in the best location.

Mr. Wims said the G.T.R. was not giving Belleville good service, as any person who handles freight knew.

Mr. Johnson said he had been misrepresented by the newspapers when they stated that he said that the G.T.R. was giving good service. He had simply asked the question if that railway was not giving good service. He wanted the railway, or any other railway, but he also wanted to preserve the park and the water front. The speaker took occasion to refer to Mr. Mikel's letter re the C.N.R., and also to the fact that the City Clerk and Solicitor appeared to be the city's representative at gatherings outside the city. The Mayor or Aldermen should be the city's representative, not any of its officials.

Mayor Sulman — "I delegated Mr. Mikel to take my place, as I had another engagement out of the city the day this matter was discussed by certain municipalities which were interested."

Mr. Mikel replied to Mr. Johnson at considerable length, detailing his connection with the matter and why he attended before Messrs Mackenzie & Mann, who are constructing the C.N.R. He thought a committee might be named to interview these gentlemen in reference to the route.

After some further discussion a motion prevailed that Messrs. R. J. Graham, W. N. Ponton and the Mayor be a delegation from the Board to interview the promoters in reference to the route of the railway.

The Board then adjourned.

Trustee Board of St. Andrew's Church.

The Trustee board of St. Andrew's church, which was reduced to four through the deaths of the late John Bell, K. C., Judge Lazier and Robt. Thomson, and the resignation of Lt.-Col. Biggar, has again been reorganized at the full number of eight, in accordance with the statute and is now constituted as follows: Col. W. N. Ponton, chairman; D. M. Waters, treasurer; R. E. Lazier, secretary; D. R. Leavens, J. A. Laidlaw, Col. S. S. Lazier, A. Gillen, and Col. T. Stewart.

Foreign Secretary Grey Pays Tribute to Davis for Jamaica Incident.

London, March 15.—The incident involving Governor Swettenham of Jamaica and Rear-Admiral Davis, U. S. N., at the time of the Kingston earthquake, was brought up in the House of Commons yesterday in a hypothetical question by Jesse Collings, Liberal-Unionist, member for the Berdesley division of Birmingham, who was in Kingston at the time of the disaster.

The question brought out from Foreign Secretary Grey a hearty tribute to the American admiral.

Mr. Collings asked if it was in accordance with international law and international etiquette for an admiral of a foreign country to land an armed force in a British colony without the permission of the governor. The Foreign Secretary, in reply, said:

"No, and I may add that no such rights were claimed in the incident referred to. What I am convinced of is that while, in the presence of such a catastrophe, there was a certain amount of misunderstanding, the American admiral was inspired by single-minded motives and a desire to relieve suffering. Any other construction placed on his action is most unworthy and untrue."

Mr. Collings then asked if the fact did not demand that, in opposition to the governor, armed troops were landed when there was no cause or warrant for such action, but the Foreign Secretary said:

"According to my information, the questions conveys a statement, which is not borne out by facts."

The Foreign Secretary's tribute to Rear-Admiral Davis was heartily cheered.

Hogs—Receipts, about 20,000; market strong to 5c higher; choice heavy shipping, $6.92½ to $6.97½; light butchers', $6.85 to $6.92½; light mixed, $6.85 to $6.95; choice light, $6.90 to $6.95; packing, $6.50 to $6.87½; pigs, $4.50 to $6.50; bulk of sales, $6.85 to $6.90.

Sheep—Receipts, about 13,000; market steady; sheep, $5.25 to $6.25; lambs, $7 to $8.00.

New York Fog Bound.

New York, March 15.—Shipping in the harbor and the bay was badly hampered yesterday by a dense fog.

The ferry line to South Brooklyn was temporarily abandoned, and other ferries were badly delayed.

Traffic on many of the railroads, on which thousands of commuters travel to this city, was much delayed, and those arriving in Jersey City were subjected to further annoyance, while the pilots of the ferry boats crossing the river to New York groped about.

Ocean liners are hours overdue.

Quebec Parliament Closes.

Quebec, March 15.—The third session of the 11th Parliament of the Province of Quebec, was prorogued at 3.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by Lieut.-Gov. Jette, with the usual ceremonies.

MAKE RAILWAYS PAY

Property Should Be Taxed at Its Cash Value.

Mr. Bowyer Says Existing Mileage Tax Is Not Fair—Should Assist the Municipalities More—Colonization Roads—To Increase Agricultural Grants — Congratulatory Speeches On State of Budget.

Toronto, March 15.—Yesterday's session of the Legislature witnessed a continuance of the budget debate, which monopolized both afternoon and evening sittings. An interesting feature occurred during the afternoon when the House adjourned for an hour to receive General William Booth, head of the Salvation Army, who addressed the members from the speakers throne, alluding to the work of the Army generally and its immigration policy, in which the legislators are interested, in particular. On motion of Hon. J. P. Whitney, the Prime Minister, and Hon. G. P. Graham, the leader of the Opposition, he was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

The feature of the budget debate was the address of Mr. P. H. Bowyer (Conservative of East Kent), who took issue with the Government on the question of railway taxation. Mr. Bowyer claimed that the taxation of these corporations should be increased to its "just and proper proportions." He was assured of consideration of his protest by the Government. Mr. Bowyer claimed that the existing mileage tax was not a fair one. He urged that a provincial board of assessors be appointed to assess all railway property wherever they found it, including rolling stock, and upon that amount a rate on the dollar should be levied, that rate to be the average rate of municipal taxation throughout the Province. Of the sum collected not less than 75 per cent. should be returned to the municipalities.

Colonization Roads.

Hon. Dr. Reaume introduced a Government bill "respecting colonization roads." It provides machinery whereby the municipal councils in the organized districts may—as under the Good Roads Act applying to counties—initiate proceedings towards securing colonization roads. Provision is made for this, the idea being that the councils and the Government shall act in unity, the former contributing a portion of the cost in money or labor, the Government being authorized to pay not less than one-third and not more than two-thirds. The conditions in the sections so desiring to help themselves would, of course, decide the amount of the Government grant. The measure does not mean the abandonment of the present policy of building and extending main colonization roads by direct Government grant, but will, it is hoped, induce the construction in many sections of branch roads.

Hon. Mr. Matheson, for Hon. Mr. Foy, who was absent, introduced a bill to amend the Surveys Act. The changes are largely technical and not of importance.

On motion of Hon. Col. Matheson the name of Mr. W. A. Preston, the new member for Port Arthur, was added to the Public Accounts, Municipal, and Fish and Game committees.

Resumes Budget Debate.

Mr. Sam Clarke (Northumberland) resumed the budget debate. He congratulated the Government on its great surplus and sound financial statement, but claimed some credit for the previous Ross regime, which, he said, had laid the foundation for the present prosperity. Mr. Clarke also complained of the administration of the license laws in Toronto, and charged that sufficient was not spent by the agricultural department.

Mr. P. H. Bowyer (East Kent) who spoke in the evening, made a striking address. After brief congratulatory words on the splendid financial success of sound Government he launched into a telling criticism of railway taxation. He believed the railways should be made to pay their fair share of municipal taxation, which they did not do at present. The Government had acted wisely last year in increasing their assessment, but it was still far short of what it should be. He asked that railway property be taxed the same as other property, namely at its actual cash value.

Agricultural Grants.

Mr. A. B. McCoig (West Kent) followed and endorsed the position taken by his county colleague. He declared Mr. Bowyer to be a Government supporter who stood by his pledges and lived up to the platform set by the Government before it attained office. Mr. McCoig asked for increased agricultural grants.

Mr. F. G. McDiarmid (West Elgin) followed in a splendid address setting forth the great progress that the Province had made under the Whitney regime and praised the Government for its liberality to the public schools and its conservation of the Gillies mining limit for the public weal.

Col. Atkinson (Norfolk) moved the adjournment of the debate.

Trains Crash In Fog.

New York, March 15.—One man was seriously injured and more than a dozen others were slightly hurt in a head-on collision between trains on the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad during the fog yesterday.

London Is Anxious.

Montreal, March 15.—The Star's London cable says that there is anxiety over Canada's attitude in the colonial conference, caused by a rumor that Laurier is not going to attend.

Not True.

Ottawa, March 15.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday to Mr. Bourassa, denied the reports from London that he would join with Premiers Deakin and Ward in bringing about the institution of an Imperial council.

TWO FATAL ACCIDENTS.

Man Killed by Falling Tree—Fractious Colt Causes Fatal Injuries.

Kingston, March 15.—Exra Palmatier, of Harlowe, is dead from internal injuries caused by fractious colt. His leg was crushed between his sleigh and the barn.

At Halleford, James T. Babcock, sawmill owner, was struck by a falling tree he had cut, and died a few hours later from his injuries, leaving a wife and ten children.

Was Case of Suicide.

Toronto, March 15.—Coroner Cotton's jury returned a verdict yesterday afternoon that Margaret Wilson, the young girl found dying under the Huntley street bridge Wednesday morning, came to her death by poisoning by carbolic acid bought and administered by herself.

An interesting feature of the case was the sending of the stomach of deceased to the university to be photographed for the British museum.

"The case," said Dr. Johnson, who made the postmortem, "was a most peculiar one. This girl apparently had nothing to eat for at least ten hours. The acid she took—fifteen teaspoonfuls — absolutely burned the walls of the stomach, nothing but a white paste remaining."

Orange Lodge Officers.

Orangeville, March 15.—Wm. Essery, D.G.M., was last night elected grand master of the Grand Orange Lodge for Ontario West, and Harry Lovelock of Toronto was elected deputy grand master.

The other officers are: associate deputy Com., Fred Dane; chaplain, Rev. M. Rowe, London; treasurer, John Hewitt, Toronto; secretary, Wm. Lee, Toronto; assistant secretary, Wm. Fitzgerald, Toronto; lecturer, J. D. Banting, Cookstown; director of ceremonies, Jos. Thompson, Toronto; auditors, Henry Taylor, Aurora, and A. W. Wright, St. Catharines.

The next place of meeting will be Mount Forest, which defeated Barrie in a close vote.

Hyman Didn't Resign.

Ottawa, March 15.—The committee on privileges and elections yesterday morning declared that Hon. Mr. Hyman's resignation as member for London was not valid, in that it had not been properly witnessed. This makes a bye-election unnecessary.

Chinese Kill Missionaries.

Shanghai, March 15.—It is reported from Chinese sources that a Wesleyan mission has been destroyed at Ningpo, and that the missionaries were killed.

Who Said Dinner?

Uh! xx! ?--?! !x! !

!!!x--!--Cranky and ?!x--! Because !--!--x! Don't Digest x?!--

There are many people who can see nothing good in a doughnut except the hole. For them there is nothing in this world but calamity. Their greatest trouble is to have to eat three times a day. The stomach is in rebellion, and this is immediately shown in the man's face. A man to be successful must have sunshine inside. The world already has too many dyspepsia faces that breathe disaster and gloom.

Stomach trouble is the most common cause of discontent, sour face recklessness, disgust and lack of ambition. A bad stomach — there is the secret of many a failure. Anyone can have a good stomach, a strong stomach, a stomach that can take care of anything and everything that is put into it, no matter whether it is a very bad stomach or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. One ingredient of these little tablets digests 3,000 grains of food, and no matter how bad your dyspepsia or indigestion, they will digest everything in your stomach, thoroughly and completely, and better and more quickly than a good strong healthy stomach can do it. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will quickly cure loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, nausea, heartburn, eructations, loss of vim, and energy, bad memory, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets around with you wherever you go and take them after meals. Then only will you realize what it is to enjoy a meal, and what perfect digestion means. Your whole body and your mind will feel the effects; your vim will increase, you will be more satisfied with what the world does, you will think happier and be happier and your face will be one of supreme contentment. That will bring you success and then more success. Your face will bring you dollars. Try it. It will cost you just 50c for a package of these wonderful Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 82 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SERIOUS FLOODS IN U.S.

Fourteen Persons Are Drowned in Pittsburg.

Swollen Water Has Driven Hundreds From Their Homes to Higher Level—Ice Gorge Moving Towards the City—$3,000,000 Damage Already — Thousands of People Thrown Out of Employment.

Pittsburg, March 15.—The greatest flood in the history of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Eastern Ohio, was experienced last night. At 7 o'clock the water reached a stage of 34.6 feet at Herr's Island, and 34.3 feet at Market street. The waters continue to rise steadily about two-tenths of an inch an hour.

At the head waters, the rivers are stationary. This crest of the flood is expected here. About midnight 35 feet was recorded, 13 feet above the danger mark.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the 30 miles ice gorge at Parker, Pa., broke, and it is moving toward the city. The immense gorge in the Clarion River also had started down stream. Both gorges, however, are old and the ice is soft. On this account their arrival is not expected to cause much damage.

The whole lower down-town district is under skiffs.

At the depot were thousands of people, a chaotic mass of humanity shouting and pushing in their effort to board these trains for Allegheny or the many suburbs adjacent to the city. Patrolmen in large numbers endeavored to bring some kind of order out of the situation, but without avail.

Trolley, elevator and telephone service was demoralized in different sections. Electric light plants in many downtown buildings were out of commission and candles or gas light was being used.

Fourteen Dead Already.

Within the last 36 hours, fourteen fatalities, directly due to the flood, have occurred.

The damage to perishable goods and property in the Pittsburg district alone will amount to $1,000,000.

At Connellsville, Pa., the damage to the coke region is estimated last night at $2,000,000.

More than 100,000 persons are temporarily out of employment. The flood directly affects over 2,500,000 people.

All railroads entering Pittsburg are crippled.

In the suburbs of Aspinwall, Sharpsburg, Etna and Millvalle, more than 500 families are living in the second storeys of their homes.

Hundreds of persons are marooned in Pittsburg. Restaurants have been besieged all evening by persons unable to reach their homes, and every room in the hotels and boarding-houses have been engaged. There are not sufficient accommodations to take care of the people compelled to remain here.

CURZON BEATS ROSEBERY.

Former Viceroy of India Elected Chancellor of Oxford University.

London, March 15.—Lord Curzon of Keddleston, former viceroy of India, was elected chancellor of Oxford University yesterday by 1,111 votes against 430 cast for Lord Rosebery.

Hitherto in the history of the university, chancellors had always been chosen without a contest. Although much influential pressure was exerted to persuade Lord Rosebery to accept the nomination, there was some adverse criticism of his acceptance in the face of the almost certain election of Lord Curzon, who is a Conservative, on the ground that it gave the contest a political aspect, Lord Rosebery being a Liberal.

The polling was held in the Sheldonian Theatre last evening, and a constant succession of trains brought eminent voters from all parts of the country, peers, members of the House of Commons, archbishops, bishops and other men who had attained prominence in all professions, the contest exciting the keenest interest.

SHE PREFERRED DEATH.

Two Weeks' Bride Ends Her Life With Poison.

Fredericton, N.B., March 14.—Mrs. R. L. Black, of this city, a bride of a fortnight, committed suicide yesterday by drinking carbolic acid. Her husband is a drygoods merchant here, and she herself was prominent in social church circles.

This tragedy is the end of a sad and unfortunate love affair. For eight years Black and Miss Minnie Blackmer were betrothed, and a few months ago the engagement was broken by Black, after he had betrayed the young woman.

Miss Blackmer has brothers, and when they learned the state of affairs they forced Black to marry her. The ceremony was quietly performed a couple of weeks ago, but the disgrace has so preyed upon the young woman's mind that twice she tried to kill herself. Her body was found lying across that of her infant, which she apparently had tried to smother.

Scotland Yard For Spain.

London, March 15.—King Alfonso has decided to revolutionize Spanish police methods and to establish a criminal investigation department, modelled on the English Scotland Yard. He has offered the position of chief of the reorganized force to Inspector Arrow, of the London force, with a salary of $5,000. It is stated that his Majesty was much impressed by the police methods when he was here. He has been assisted by Queen Victoria in framing his plans.

Villagers Save Homes In Fire.

Moorefield, March 15.—Householders formed bucket brigades and saved this village from destruction by fire yesterday when Schnider's grain elevator and cider mill was burned, cinders settling on the roofs of the houses.

Bill to Place Check On Dishonest Pawnbrokers.

They Must Pay Heavy License Fee and Find Security --Make Daily Report to Police--Several Government Measures Finally Passed--Lands For Volunteers--Free Grants and Homesteads.

Toronto, March 16.—The first completed legislation of the present session of the Ontario Legislature came into being yesterday afternoon when the Prime Minister, Hon. J. P. Whitney, in his capacity as Acting Minister of Lands and Mines, secured the third reading and final passing of the following Government measures:

To amend the act to provide for the appropriation of certain lands for the volunteers who served in South Africa and the volunteer militia who served on the Frontier in 1866.

To amend the Free Grants and Homesteads Act.

Respecting the land grant to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co.

Check on Pawnbrokers.

Mr. W. K. McNaught (North Toronto) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the act respecting pawnbrokers. In so doing he said the protection of the public demanded that the business should be in the lands of honest men. In Toronto the business had not always been conducted lawfully. Pawnbrokers not licensed were more independent in the conduct of their business than second-hand dealers, who were under the supervision of the police. Their places could not be searched without a search warrant and privileges now extended to the officers by honest pawnbrokers would become compulsory in all cases. The act, Mr. McNaught explained, provided for a license fee of not less than $500 and satisfactory security in the sum of $1,000. The pawnbrokers must make a daily report to the police.

Premier Endorses Bill.

The Prime Minister endorsed the bill on behalf of the Government and complimented Mr. McNaught for the care and skill he had devoted to it. The bill was given its second reading.

Peace Resolution.

Ere adjournment the following resolution was laid before the House:

"That the Legislature of Ontario heartily approves of and urges through main measures which will greatly conduce to the peace and welfare of the world, viz.:

"A plan by which The Hague conference may become a permanent and recognized congress of the nations.

"A general treaty of obligatory arbitration for the acceptance of all the nations.

"A plan for the reasonable reduction of armaments by concurrent international action."

This was on the motion of Premier Whitney, seconded by Hon. G. P. Graham. The Prime Minister stated that the Canadian Peace and Arbitration Society had suggested the resolution which he was happy to endorse. Mr. Graham quoted Kant, who believed war would never be over till the world was fully organized, and that it could not be so organized until Government was representative. That 46 nations should be present in the peace conference indicated the approach of that time.

CUSTOMS' TAXES.

Continue to Flow Freely Into the Dominion Treasury.

Ottawa, March 16.—The Customs returns for the month of February show a continued increase in the revenue of imports and exports. The Customs duties for the month of February totalled $4,295,297, an increase of $802,349 over the corresponding month last year. As compared with 1905-06 the Customs duties for the first eight months of the present fiscal year have increased by $4,627,029. The imports for the eight months increased by $36,402,844, and the exports by $2,555,013.

Deserted By Show Manager.

Detroit, March 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown of Toronto have reached Vassar, Mich., on their way to Detroit. It is said they have walked from Lowell on the west side of the State. At Vassar Brown said that he and his wife were traveling with a moving picture show, starting from South Bend, Indiana. At Lowell the proprietor deserted the company. The Browns used up all the money they had to send Mrs. Brown's sister with the Browns' three-year-old child to Toronto. They then started to walk to Detroit, where Brown has a brother. Mrs. Brown said she would rather die than send home for assistance.

Blind Trooper's Relic.

Brockville, March 16.—Lorne Malloy, the blind trooper of the South African war, has just added another relic to his collection. It is a small fragment of bullet of irregular flat shape, about three-sixteenths of an inch across, with sharp, ragged edges, which was removed from his forehead a few days ago.

It was "contributed," the trooper states, on July 16, 1900, by a Boer rifle under the command of General Botha, but he was not aware of its presence until a few weeks ago when his forehead became inflamed.

Outlet of Trent Canal.

Ottawa, March 16.—The report of E. J. Walsh, C. E., and Mr. Butler, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, upon the western outlet of the Trent Valley Canal, was presented to the House last night.

It recommends an eight foot deep canal from Lake Couchiching to Georgian Bay, by way of the Severn River, or northern route.

The estimated cost of such a waterway is $1,457,000.

MESSAGE FOR ONTARIO.

General Booth's Parting Words of Counsel to the People.

Toronto, March 16.—Escorted to the station by his own people, with banners flying, and bearing 450 torches, General Booth left here last night for Montreal, after a week's stay in the city, during which time he has given 19 addresses, including visits to the Legislature and the prison. Before leaving the general handed out the following written message:

"Good-bye, Ontario!

"I have spent one of the most strenuous, but at the same time one of the happiest, weeks of my life in your capital city.

"The hour of your opportunity is assuredly with you. Make the most of it by going forward in the path of truth, and honor, and industry, forgetting not the service of the Lord God Himself, and prosperity for earth and heaven shall be yours. Grateful for your sympathy. Reckon on my prayers.

"William Booth."

He will sail for Japan on 1st April.

MASSON GOES FOR TRIAL.

Hockey Player to Face Charge of Manslaughter.

Cornwall, March 16.—Manslaughter is the charge Charlie Masson of the Ottawa Victorias will have to face in connection with the death of "Bud" McCourt in a Federal League hockey match here last week.

The preliminary enquiry was held yesterday before Police Magistrate Danis.

After hearing the evidence of nine witnesses, the crown, represented by County Attorney Dingwall, rested its case.

The defence did not call any witnesses, but J. A. Chisholm and R. A. Pringle, M. P., who appeared for Masson, held that the charge of murder was an improper one and should never have been laid.

"Mr. Dingwall held out for a similar charge in the Loney case," Mr. Chisholm argued. "but the crown prosecutor changed it to manslaughter. We did not desire to shirk a committal for trial on a charge of manslaughter."

THE DAILY SACRIFICE.

Two Trainmen Killed and Others Hurt In Pennsylvania.

Meadville, Pa., March 16.—The second section of freight train No. 72 on the Erie Railroad went over an embankment at this place yesterday. Two trainmen were killed and a number fatally injured. Two engines and 21 cars were demolished. The dead are Engineer R. D. Logan and a brakeman. The train was running at a fast rate of speed when the crossbeam on the forward engine dropped to the track, derailing the train.

Brakeman Killed.

Toronto, March 16.—A brakeman on the G. T. R., William Kerr of Toronto, while passing between the tender of the engine and a box car to fix the knuckle, was killed yesterday afternoon.

LITTLE HERO SAVED LIFE.

Throws Her Apron Over Woman's Head Who Was In Flames.

Quebec, March 16.—A young woman, Mrs. Philippe Gingras, residing in St. Lawrence ward, attempted several days ago to light a fire with petroleum. When the flames set fire to her clothing she made a desperate effort to tear off her burning clothing, but the fire reached her hair. The little five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Frechette, who resided upstairs, was attracted by the cries of the unfortunate woman. Without a moment's hesitation the child untide her apron and wrapped it around the head of the victim, thus stifling the flames and saving the woman's life.

BETTER LAND IN ENGLAND.

Hamar Greenwood Thinks British Climate and Land Best Canada's.

London, March 16.—(C. A. P.)—Hamar Greenwood, at a meeting of the York Woman's Liberal Association, referring to his recent visit to Jamaica, said, "I have increased in sobriety of thought, but by no means in good health." Turning to the question of social reform Mr. Greenwood made a regretful allusion to the fact that so many people were emigrating when there was land in England more fertile than in Canada, and where the climate was in many respects better than that of Canada.

Run Down By Street Car.

Hamilton, March 16.—Daniel McIsaac, 12 East Jackson street, was run down by a street car last evening. One arm and one leg were so badly mangled that they had to be amputated. As the victim is over 70 years of age, it is feared his injuries will prove fatal.

The mishap occurred about 8 o'clock at King and John streets. Mr. McIsaac was crossing King street from the south side and the car was going east, but the view was obstructed by the Macdonald monument.

Whole City Teetotalers.

Jackson, Tenn., March 16.—By a vote of 937 to 3, Jackson yesterday declared itself a prohibition town.

Armour's Solid Extract of Beef

is the kind that is simply the natural Essence of Prime Beef—concentrated. It is not a manufactured article like many extracts and fluid beefs, made from extract bought on the open market without any knowledge of its purity, and mixed with salt, water and other ingredients. Beef in fluid form offers opportunity for adulteration without detection. This cannot be said of solid extract.

"If Mr. Thomas Gardner, or any other man," he says, "will take hold of the Gas department, stop the leaks; make a thorough inspection covering the entire city and see that every person using gas pays for it, in the meantime seeing that valuable apparatus, now going to rack and ruin, is properly taken care of, and that city employees give their whole time to the city, he will earn his money all right. The best thing the Council can do is to give Mr. Gardner a fair chance at the Gas department before they go piling more duties on him."

"A party of operating railway officials running out of Cleveland formed themselves into a surprise party the other night and visited a neighboring town to see whether engineers were paying proper attention to the signals. The result was illuminating. According to the published reports the inspectors turned out the lights intended to show that the track was clear, and in spite of the warning thus given, twenty-four trains out of twenty-five rushed by, only one stopping to investigate what was wrong. Of four passenger trains only two even slackened their speed on seeing the signal which meant danger ahead. The road in question is one of the best and most efficient operated in the country, and if such a state of things can exist on it, what is the condition on other lines less completely equipped and less carefully operated?"

The Fire Drill.

Mr James L. Hughes, Chief Inspector of Schools for Toronto, writes: The appalling disaster in a Montreal school will naturally direct the attention of school boards throughout the Dominion to the best method of saving the lives of the children in case schools take fire. I see that some are recommending fire escapes on the outside of the buildings. After a long experience I have no hesitation in saying that, especially in winter time, when there is danger of fire, I believe fire escapes would be inadequate and dangerous. I believe also that the proper protection would be a thoroughly effective system of fire drill, both with a view of saving the lives of the children and of giving them a training which will make them calm and courageous in ordinary circumstances throughout their lives. the object of a fire drill is not chiefly to get children out of a burning school or other building quickly, but is primarily to prevent the possibility of a panic in case of fire.

It is not possible to burn a properly constructed building so quickly that the lives of the children should be in danger from fire. We have had during the last 30 years nine fires in our schools, three of which destroyed the buildings. On account of the regularly conducted fire drills there was no confusion in any case, though the flames and smoke were clearly seen by the pupils in three cases, so that they knew the buildings were on fire. The children marched in rank just as regularly as at ordinary fire drills. One vital point should be to save the children in case of fire without giving any consideration to their clothing. If the conditions justify it, the teachers and a few of the larger boys can easily save all the clothing after the children are safely out by throwing it out of the windows. Even if the clothing is burned it is a matter of small consequence compared with the loss of the lives of the children.

Hoping that they may be of service to school boards who have not already adopted a system of fire drill, I send the regulations of the Board of Education of Toronto regarding the fire drill:

(24) Conduct fire drills once a month, weather permitting, in conformity with the following regulations, and make a monthly report of the same to the board:

(a) Fire drill should not be held at regular periods.

(b) There should be a special signal given with the bell, which signal should be used for fire drill only.

(c) Teachers should dismiss pupils immediately, upon hearing the signal, and always in the same way.

(d) Pupils should not be allowed time to put on clothing.

(e) Pupils should be urged to walk quickly, keeping in line, and be prevented from crowding.

(f) Teachers and large pupils should be stationed at the foot of stairways, and in other important positions, to assist any who may fall, and should be specially trained in taking these positions with great promptness.

(g) Pupils should be confined to one means of exit occasionally, so as to be prepared for the contingency of having other exits cut off by fire.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

A Pretty Story.

Toronto Telegram: The name of Leaone Lyons, the invalid daughter of Ephraim J. Lyons, 719 Queen street east, is to be perpetuated by the congregation of St. John's Presbyterian Church in the new edifice about to be erected.

For many years Miss Lyons has been unable to walk, and so crippled that her hands were used with difficulty. Anxious to contribute to the building fund of the new church from her own labors, she began a cushion, which was completed a few days ago after great tedious labor. The cushion was sent to the ladies of the congregation with the compliments of the invalid, and the message that it might be sold for a dollar.

The ladies of the congregation familiar with the condition of the little donor, and realizing the effort that must have been employed, decided to keep the cushion, raise what they could on it, and contribute the amount to the building fund.

Up to date $85 has been subscribed on the handiwork of the little invalid. This will be augmented, and the amount probably devoted to the purchase of a new pulpit, which shall be christened the "Leaone Lyons Pulpit."

Miss Lyons declined to take any money from her parents to contribute to the building fund, though she had been offered it frequently, choosing to earn the money with her own hands.

Some people are merely the table decorations at the feast of reason.

New Methods Of Finance.

A startling state of affairs respecting Grand Trunk Pacific finance has been disclosed, but not yet fully investigated in the Public Accounts Committee. If the Liberal majority in the committee continues to head off inquiry into details the public may never learn the full particulars. But here are some of the facts so far revealed.

It will be remembered that the Government guarantees seventy-five per cent. of the bonds covering "cost of construction" of the prairie and mountain sections to be constructed by the company. About $16,000,000 of bonds have been issued, the Government paying the company as their expenditure is certified. Last year the company presented a claim for $926,233. The Accountant of the Railway Department went through the statement and struck out $102,000. These were accounts for legal outlays and general expenses, which he would not recommend for payment, as they were not "cost of construction." In regard to $55,000 of the bill there were no vouchers explaining the accounts or showing what money was paid for.

Notwithstanding the Accountant's adverse report the Chief Engineer of the department certified to the whole bill, saying in his letter to Mr. Emmerson that he had consulted the Department of Justice on the matter. The department of Railways having approved the whole claim went to the Department of Finance. The Deputy Minister of Finance heard Mr. Shannon's statement and consulted with his Minister, with the result that the account was held up for a month. It may be supposed that Mr. Fielding did not think these bills would look very well in the auditor's report. At all events the department did not pay. The Grand Trunk Company asked for the return of the account, and all the papers certified to as correct by the Department of Railways were bundled off to the company's office and no record of them can be found.

Meantime the company had submitted a second statement. This time some $70,000 of the claim was abandoned and the company tried to get the remainder. Mr. Shannon again refused to pass the items that he had rejected before. He seems to have kept a copy of the last lot rejected, which includes $6,424 to an Ottawa lawyer, $5,591 to another law firm, $3,500 to a third lawyer, fees to directors in London, and numerous other payments which are hardly cost of construction. The other amounts which the company withheld from their second statement are doubtless more interesting and more objectionable, but all record of them has disappeared from the department.

When it is remembered that the Government will probably endorse thirty or forty millions of bonds for the two western sections, it is a rather serious affair that the company which spends the money is to be allowed to put in all kinds of bills, get them through the departments if possible, and if the attempt fails, may carry away all the record, so that no Parliament or committee or Government may hereafter discover any trace of the transaction.

A SPRING NEED.

WEAK, TIRED AND DEPRESSED PEOPLE NEED A TONIC TO PUT THE BLOOD RIGHT.

Spring blood is bad blood. Indoor life during the winter months is responsible for weak, watery, impure blood. You need a tonic to build up the blood in spring just as much as the trees need new sap to give them vitality for the summer. In the spring bad blood shows itself in many ways. In some it breeds pimples and eruptions. In others it may be through occasional headaches, a variable appetite, perhaps twinges of neuralgia, or rheumatism, or a lazy feeling in the morning and a desire to avoid exertion. For these spring ailments it is a tonic you need, and the greatest blood-making, health-giving tonic in all the world is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red, health-giving blood, which reaches every nerve and every organ in the body, bringing health, strength and energy to weak, despondent, ailing men and women. Here is proof: Mrs. Geo. Merritt, Sandy Cove, N. S., says: "I was weak, feeling miserable and terribly run down. The doctor whom I consulted said the trouble was anaemia, but he did not help me. A friend advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it is simply impossible for me to over-estimate the good they have done me. I shall always recommend them to ailing friends."

But if you want new health you must get the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, manufactured in Canada at Brockville, Ont. Other so-called pink pills are fraudulent imitations. The genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all reputable medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A WEALTHY MANITOBA FARMER

TELLS HOW HE SPENT THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SEARCH OF HEALTH.

Physicians were entirely baffled by the case of Mr. Robert Squires, of Shoal Lake, Man. He owns a thousand acres of land in the west, and said he was willing to give it all to be restored to health. His trouble started with an ordinary cold that was neglected. Let Mr. Squires tell his own story:

"I have spent over three thousand dollars in my search for health; have travelled from place to place looking for suitable climate. I came to the conclusion that climate made no difference in curing throat or lung troubles. At the health resorts consumptives died there as at any place else. I determined to find a home remedy. I think I tried every one of the so-called cures for consumption. The only remedy that ever helped me was Psychine, and a significant fact about Psychine is that it is not a 'cure-all,' like the others, but specially for throat and lung diseases. Psychine was the last remedy I tried and I wish it had been the first. My case was a very bad one, and no hope was held out by any one of the eminent medical men that I would get well.

"A friend advised me to use Psychine. The first few bottles gave great relief from coughing, and seemed to ease the pain in the lungs. Within a month the cough and night sweats had disappeared, and I had greatly regained my strength. I used ten bottles, but my case was a serious one, and I didn't begrudge the cost, for I was completely cured after medical men considered my case hopeless. My lungs are now sound, and no sign of disease whatever is apparent.

"ROBERT SQUIRES,

"Shoal Lake, Man."

Thousands of others have borne similar testimony to the power of Psychine to not only cure coughs, cold, la grippe, catarrh, bronchitis, chills, night sweats, but also consumption and all wasting diseases. It strengthens the stomach, aids digestion, and builds up the entire system. It is a never-failing remedy.

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is for sale at all drug stores at 50c and $1.00 per bottle, or at Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, 179 King street west, Toronto.

A Matter Of Interest To All Cheese Men.

Henceforth the cheese factories of Ontario will receive instructions free of charge, instead of having to pay the instructor $15 for his services as in the past. This is the policy of the Provincial Government, which has recently been made known but instead of it being optional for the factories to be inspected, and to receive instructions, it will be compulsory for them to do so. The expenses will all be met by the Government, whose idea is to raise the general quality of Canadian cheese.

The province will be divided into districts, with a sanitary inspector in charge of the factories and dairy work generally in each district.

The instructors main work will be to instruct. They will not, as in the past, be expected to spend a full day at each factory. There are a number of factories in the province that require but little assistance, as they are nearly perfect now. Such factories may not be visited more than once or twice in the season. In the case of factories where improvements are needed, the instructors will first visit them, and make recommendations. Later, they will call back, as often as may be necessary, to see that their recommendations have been complied with. In this way, it is probable that a great improvement will be effected in a large number of factories in the province during the coming season.

Only in extreme cases will dairymen be prosecuted. They will first be shown the need for improvement. Later, if improvement is not made, they will be told it has to be made, and a certain length of time will be given, during which the matter must be attended to. Later, when necessary, an example will be made of offenders who continue to ignore the recommendations of the instructors. No prosecution will be made without the approval of the Chief Instructor.

As already stated, the main work of the instructors will be to instruct. They will visit the factories early in the morning, watch the milk as it arrives, consult with the cheese makers, give them any assistance that may be required in the factory, and, later, visit the homes of the patrons who may have been having trouble with their milk. The instructors will have a supply of printed matter, showing the care that should be given milk on the farm. These will be left with the patrons, with any recommendations for improvements that may be necessary. Later, these patrons will be visited again and improvements insisted upon, if necessary. In this way the value of the work of the instructors will be increased immensely.

Until recently it was proposed that every factory in the province should pay a tax to help pay the cost of instruction. Later another method of raising the revenue was devised and was under consideration for some time. It was expected it would be possible to raise about $12,000 from the factories. The Government, however, was induced to abandon the thought of raising revenue from the factories through the energetic and capable work of Mr. John R. Dargavel, of Elgin, Ont., who is a member of the Ontario Legislature, and president of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association. Mr. Dargavel took the matter up in person with the Government. He claimed that the Government can afford to do without this tax, and that if it is not collected it will remove any cause for friction that may exist. Finally he convinced the Government that it is not necessary that this money should be raised. Mr. Dargavel's work in this connection cannot be too highly commended. Mr. Dargavel took up with the Government the possibility of having a standard of qualification established for chees

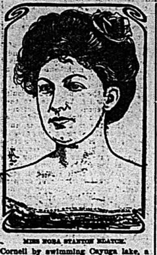
MISS NORA S. BLATCH.

A Civil Engineer In the Employ of New York City.

Miss Nora Stanton Blatch of New York city, granddaughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, is a member of that city's staff of civil engineers in charge of the $161,000,000 Catskill water system.

Miss Blatch's appointment was not due to any pull, but was made on merit.

Miss Blatch is an unusually pretty young woman, athletic, active and fond of outdoor life. She distinguished herself years ago while a senior at Cornell by swimming Cayuga lake, a distance of two and a half miles. The feat was an easy one for her, and her friends declared at the time that she could have swum the entire distance back.



MISS NORA STANTON BLATCH.

She decided to follow engineering on entering college and applied for membership in the American Society of Civil Engineers. She was admitted recently, being the first woman ever received into that organization.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, a noted New York clubwoman and lecturer and a daughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

Sunlight and the House.

Sunlight is nature's most health giving scavenger. A house without sunlight is unhealthy and unsafe for human occupancy, and it is necessary not only to have some sunlight, but to have as much of it as possible. It is, of course, not feasible to admit the direct rays of the sun to every room of a house. The typical plan of all houses is square or rectangular, and at least one side of the house is entirely beyond the reach of the sun. The other three sides, however, can receive more or less direct sunlight, and the problem of the plan is thus reduced to arranging the various rooms so that the amount of sunlight is adjusted to their uses, and it must be sunlight, for mere light itself is not sufficient. The rays of the sun have curative and cleansing properties that nothing else has.

It is generally admitted that a southern exposure is the best for all houses and should be obtained whenever possible. It is immaterial whether the entrance be placed on this side or not, so long as the rooms most in use open on to it. In dwellings of average size the entrance front will also be the front on which any important room opens, but in large country houses the old distinction of a front and back to a house has disappeared, and instead we have the entrance front and the garden front. The service and servants' quarters, so long regarded as characteristic of the "back" of a house, may be relegated to a side end or placed in a wing that abuts directly on the entrance front. In such cases it must be well screened and its purpose thoroughly subordinated.—American Homes and Gardens.

Mint Jelly.

Mint jelly, which gives the cachet of smartness to simple luncheons, may be made from the mint tea and sugar alone or, as I prefer it, with gelatin to stiffen. When used on a hot plate it melts almost immediately, but its flavor even so is a delight, and it looks charmingly green and appetizing when brought on the table. Pour two cups of boiling water over a bunch of fresh bruised mint leaves, then steep on the back of the range for ten or fifteen minutes. Strain and to a pint of the liquid allow a half package of gelatin soaked in cold water reserved from the two cups measured out in the first place. Add sugar to sweeten and lemon juice to make as acid as desired. Stir until dissolved, then set away to cool. As it begins to thicken stir in two tablespoonfuls of capers or picked nasturtium buds, then pour into little individual molds about the size of a small egg cup or in a good sized mold and set away to harden. It should be made the day before it is to be used. When ready to serve turn out on a low glass dish or pretty individual plates and garnish with tiny sprigs of fresh mint. Instead of using the plain gelatin you can take a package of any of the prepared patent jellies, currant or lemon being the preferred flavors.—Washington Star.

Her Proposals.

"I wish some one would publish a book from me entitled 'Proposals I Have Had,'" sighed a woman who has had a great many. "I think it would supply a want in modern literature to publish them arranged and classified. There was the man who asked me to marry him because he was a widower with two children to be taken care of; there was the old bachelor who gently sighed that he had tried everything else in life but getting married, and would I kindly help him with that experiment; there was the one—I hated him more than the others—who talked religion to me all the time because he thought I was very religious; there was the man who suggested that we might make a good business combination—my brains and his experience—and the man who wanted me to 'keep him straight.' I suppose it is useless to sigh for the impossible in this world of coarse materialism, but I confess I'm still looking for the man who 'loves me' before I put the final chapter to my book."—Philadelphia Record.

There is nothing more

The Wash Boiler.

Many watchful housekeepers complain that the wash boiler has an unfortunate way of rusting and iron molding the clothes. This may be avoided very simply by smearing the bottom of the boiler with a thick coating of good soap before putting it aside after the weekly washing is over. This little device will not only prevent rust, but the soap will serve as an excellent foundation for the suds of the coming wash day. Incidentally there comes to mind at this moment another excellent bit of advice—never use cold water to dampen clothes. Hot water does this work in a much more satisfactory and even manner.

Using Face Lotions.

In using buttermilk or any lotion for the face the manner of applying it is important. It is best to pour as much as you will need at one time of whatever you are using into a saucer. An excellent way of applying it is to use sterilized absorbent cotton or gauze, which can be bought reasonably by the pound or package at the chemist's. You can make some little balls of the cotton or pads of the gauze and put them into a clean wide mouthed jar with a screw top and use them as needed. Dip them into the lotion and gently wash it over the face, using fresh ones from time to time during the process.

Useful Seats.

In every house there are boxes, traveling trunks, etc., which some of us are obliged to have in our bedrooms, for the average house or flat does not rise to the dignity of a storeroom. Wherever they may be, they are an eyesore. But a tight fitting cover of sateen or cretonne will transform them, if not into things of beauty, at least into something more pleasing to the eye than originally, especially if the colors be chosen with due regard to the other surroundings.

Passing of the Old Maid.

Old maids are dying out. In a few years' time the typical old maid of our youth will rarely be seen, and a hundred years hence she will probably be dead altogether. The term "old maid" is now seldom or never heard; the expression "bachelor girl" has taken its place, and many and happy are the bachelor girls in Britain today, with their independence, their little homes and their own well arranged lives.—London Queen.

Grace In Sitting.

When a woman seats herself she should always take note of the lines of her gown. This should be gracefully hung across her knees, so as to bring out the line of the figure. A woman should seat herself in such a manner that she looks long, so to speak. The skirt can be so arranged over the feet that one takes on a nice height, even though one be built short.

Dress Trimmings.

It does not seem very wise to put much money into perishable dress trimmings or decorations which are likely to go out of fashion before they are worn out. Much more sensible is it to accumulate, little by little, good pieces of lace. Real valenciennes is not prohibitive and lasts a lifetime. Point and duchess are expensive at first, but a little goes a long way and makes the plainest gown elegant.

Woman at Her Best.

A woman's character and powers are finest about forty. A woman has gained everything at forty and lost nothing; she is at the full vigor of her intellectual powers, she has acquired experience and judgment and is not far enough away from youth to have become unsympathetic even to its wildest vagaries.—Bystander.

Exact that your carpet sweeper shall be cleaned thoroughly on every sweeping day and never put away dirty. Unlock it over a newspaper and take out every bit of dust, lint and dirt, then rinse the brush in soapsuds and dry before setting aside.

Metals and Sea Water.

The only metals that withstand the chemical action of the waves are gold and platinum, and glass also seems unaffected. No matter how long gold may be hidden in the ocean it will always be gold when recovered, and this fact explains the many romantic and adventurous searches after hidden submarine treasures lost in shipwrecks.

North Carolina Mica.

There is plenty of evidence to show that the Indians dug for mica in North Carolina long before Columbus landed, though what they used the stuff for is not obvious. The deposits in the mountains of the western part of that state are today by far the most valuable in this country, yielding something like 100,000 pounds per annum of a product superior in quality.

GOUDEAU'S SHEEP.

It Matched His Dog and Satisfied the Tax Collector.

Emile Goudeau, a celebrated character of Paris, was one of the most confirmed bohemians that ever lived.

There is a story of him and a certain black spaniel which followed him with the faithfulness with which the historic little lamb attached itself to the historic little Mary. Goudeau and the dog, in fact, were never separated.

It dawned upon the tax gatherer of the neighborhood that Goudeau had not paid his dues for the "inferior brother."

He approached him, therefore, in as friendly a spirit as possible, being, indeed, an old acquaintance, and said, "M. Goudeau, I must ask you to pay your tax for the spaniel."

The bohemian was immensely surprised, or affected to be. "But don't you know, my dear sir," he said in a tone of remonstrance, "this is a sheep dog, useful to me in my work and consequently exempt from the tax?"

"But you are no shepherd," returned the tax gatherer; "you are a poet."

"No shepherd!" replied Goudeau. "Every poet is a shepherd. Have you not heard of Virgil and Theocritus"—

The poet would have recited twenty other names if the tax gatherer, alarmed at such a display of learning, had not stopped him. "But at least you have no sheep," he said.

"No; I admit that," said Goudeau. "It is because I am too poor. But I will rectify that."

And he did. Next day he was observed promenading the streets of Montmartre with the same old black spaniel, but with a newcomer in the shape of a real, live, woolly sheep.—London Sketch.

The Word "Cutler."

"Cutler," according to its present use, should mean a man who makes things that cut, but really it has no more to do with "cut" than "cutlass" and "cutlet" have, which is just nothing at all. "Cut" has some Teutonic origin, but "cutler" comes through French from the late Latin "cultellarius," which meant either a soldier armed with a knife or a knifemaker, and "cultellus," a little knife, was the diminutive of "culter," which, among other things, meant a plowshare or "coulter." "Cutlass" comes from the same source, and "cutlet" is "cotelette," a little rib.

One Thing Lacking.

"I hear," said Hi Tragedy, "that while you were playing in one of the country towns a fire broke out in the theater."

"Yes," said Low Comedy, "and there might have been a horrible panic but for one thing."

"What was that?"

"There weren't enough people in the audience to create one."—Moonshine.

The Regular Charge.

"Yes," replied Dr. Soakem, "making a total of $122."

WHAT DOES IT MATTER.

What will it matter in a thousand years
If you give hope to any man today?
What will it matter if he doubts who hears
You speak the words that frighten faith away?

It may not matter when the seas are dry,
And you and he have long been drifting dust;
There may be no bright heaven beyond the sky,
No hell in which the wicked may be thrust.

But, oh, it matters much to you and him,
For they are weak whose faith has disappeared;
Beyond the stars, inscrutable and dim,
There was a Master whom Napoleon feared.

Pimples Off In 5 Days.

THE NEW CALCIUM SULPHIDE TREATMENT DOES WONDERS TO EVERY KIND OF SKIN ERUPTION.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient, the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy, because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. GIFTS TO A WIFE.

The Sentiment That Is Dear to the Heart of a Woman.

In a recent divorce case the husband, when asked if he ever made his wife any Christmas or birthday presents, replied:

"No; I am sorry to say I never did. I gave Mrs. —— power to draw on my bank account and to buy anything she wanted. I was mistaken. That was not all I should have done. That did not take the place of my buying things and taking them home to her."

It is astonishing how little even the majority of husbands know about the feminine nature. I recently heard a young wife say that she would rather have her husband bring her a bunch of violets than give her ten times the money they cost. But she said she could never make him appreciate the fact that money was not all that she needed.

I know men who never think of taking home a bunch of flowers to their wives. They either think it unnecessary extravagance or that if their wives want flowers they can get them themselves. They do not realize that women prize the little courtesies, the little attentions and evidences of thoughtfulness more than money. It is the invitation to the little outing or vacation, the little trip to another city, the bringing home of tickets to the theater or opera or to the concert or lecture—it is the hundred and one little things that make the average woman happy and not merely the fact that her imperative wants are supplied in a lump sum.

Most men overlook the fact that it does not take so much, after all, to satisfy the average woman. It is largely a question of the right spirit, of doing the things which indicate thoughtfulness. Just giving a wife a check once in awhile, no matter how large it may be, or telling her to draw as much as she needs from your bank account will not satisfy a womanly woman. It is yourself she wants with the money.

STORE WINDOW LIGHTS.

Regulations For Their Control as Applied In Berlin.

The regulation of artificial lighting in connection with window displays is a subject which has been given comparatively little attention by the municipalities of this country, considering the extent to which it is used for this purpose in these days. That this phase of the lighting question demands closer scrutiny there can be no doubt, and it might be well for information on the matter to look to those cities which have given it study. Stringent regulations have been adopted in Berlin and other European cities, where merchants were inclined to take advantage of laxity in the premises. In Berlin lamps outside shop windows must not be lower than ten feet above the pavement or project more than forty inches from the wall. Where the lighting in the windows is done by oil, petroleum, gas flame or Welsbachs there must always be a sheet of glass not less than one-tenth of an inch thick under the lamps and running the whole length and breadth of the shop windows, so as to completely cover the articles in the window, and nothing is to be put above the lamps. The lamps must be at least forty inches below any inflammable part of the construction and ten inches from any such part horizontally.

There are also regulations as to iron screens where there is bare wood and as to efficient ventilation. Bare flames are not allowed in lighting the gas. This must be done by chemical or electrical kindlers or by electric distance

CEILING COLLAPSES.

Douma's Forum Partly Wrecked—Was Purely Accidental.

St. Petersburg, March 16.—The ceiling of the hall in the Taurida Palace, where the Lower House of Parliament meets, collapsed yesterday and caused widespread wreckage among the seats below.

Though many rumors were circulated to the effect that the falling of the ceiling was the result of a plot to interfere with the meeting of Parliament, its purely accidental character was clearly established. The nails and other fastenings binding the ceiling to the rafters had not been replaced since the time of Catharine II., and broke under the extra weight of the new decorations. The aggregate weight of the ceiling material was so great that in its fall it twisted the massive bronze electriliers in such a way as to indicate that a terrible catastrophe would have resulted, had the fall occurred during the session of the House.

JAPS GETTING READY.

50,000 Men Making Arms Day and Night For Months.

Berlin, March 16.—Capt. Ignaz Bodio of the general staff of the Austrian-Hungarian army, in a pamphlet, "The Prospects of the Future American-Japanese War," declares the unprotected Pacific coast of the United States offers excellent chances of success for the Japanese.

He asserts Japan is working feverishly to complete her military and naval equipments, adding that, during the last few months, 50,000 men have been at work day and night in the arsenals, turning out guns and small arms.

He stated that the cartridge manufactories at Tokio and Nagoya, where 20,000 men are employed, have turned out daily 500 rifles, while the projectile works at Tokio make 600 shells a day for the field artillery.

Two Sent to Kingston.

Berlin, March 16.—William Reitz and William Heuser, found guilty last night on the charge of assault occasioning actual bodily harm to the deceased John Oraskek, were given three years and two and a half respectively in the Kingston penitentiary. His Lordship, Justice Mulock, addressing the prisoners, gave them a severe reprimand, outlining the seriousness of the offence they had committed.

Austria and Canada.

London, March 16.—(C. A. P.)—In the House of Commons, Winston Churchill stated he had no knowledge of the fiscal negotiations between Austria and Canada; he also saw no prospect of obtaining the views of the colonial Premiers as to the extent they regarded expenditure on armaments necessary to their protection.

Anxious to Come to Canada.

London, March 16.—Discharged men at Woolwich arsenal are hoping the Government will charter a vessel to emigrate them to Canada, following a precedent set 40 years ago.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

The earth seemed suddenly to [illegible] and give way beneath him and he knew no more. After he had fallen, the bark of Gregorio's rifle reached Don Q.

The chief stood back in the shadow of a rock and watched the active figure of Gregorio leaping down the slope.

"Where are you, brother? Is he stunned? I shot the mule under him when I saw you alone were with him," said Gregorio, stooping over the fallen animal and his rider.

The dim shape by the rock laughed and sprang at the same instant. Beneath the iron-bound musket-butt, which descended on his head, Gregorio went down kicking feebly on the sand. Don Q.'s delicate little hands pinioned him with a rapid and scientific completeness. Then he turned to Manuelo, tore the gag from his mouth, and with a strength surprising in so fragile a body, pulled him free of the dead mule.

"We will wait until our excellent Gregorio, whose shooting is so admirable, has regained his senses sufficiently to join in our conversation," Don Q. began, as Gregorio with a groan shifted his head from one bump on the rock to another, and blinked up dizzily at the moon. "He is already better. I trust, Gregorio, that your thoughts are quite clear?"

The man shivered, then scowled. Recollection had come to him also.

"I wish you both to listen to me very carefully," the chief pursued. "We have played a very interesting game together. Manuelo, for yours is the brain behind it. But I do not think I flatter myself when I say that the honors rest with me?"

"Yes, we have lost the game," said Manuelo, in the old rigid manner. "But we are not afraid!"

"You are a brave man," commented Don Q. politely; "but because you are not afraid now, it does not follow that you will not be afraid before we have done with one another."

"What does it matter?" answered Manuelo. "My brother and I took an oath to kill you. We have failed. Nothing remains but to make an end of us."

"Not so fast, Manuelo," put in the chief. "I have just been thinking how full of romance is your situation. You and Gregorio are twins. You were born together, you have lived and worked together, and now in the fitness of things you are to die together."

"And," resumed the brigand, "believe me, I should not interfere with so artistic a conclusion had I only ourselves to think of. But I cannot afford to forget that you have both belonged to that estimable force, to whose kind interest in my life I owe so deep a debt. It is incumbent upon me to send them information by a reliable hand—say by one of you—how a civil guard dies, who has failed in a duel with Don Q. I trust you follow me?"

The two men stared at him stolidly.

"It is clear that you do. There are, to return to my subject, many channels by which the whole story will find its way down to the plains. But that is not sufficient for my purpose. I wish the civil guard to know from the lips of one of their own corps that I have scored another point in the 20 years' gamble that has been played out between us. I have, therefore, decided that one of you shall go free. The other must die, and—well, I warn you he will need all his fortitude before the happy moment of his departure from life. You are brave men; choose, then, between you which shall go free and which shall—remain forever in the sierra."

Don Q. moved away a little space and the brothers began to talk eagerly together in low tones. At the end of five minutes the chief returned.

"Well," he asked, "I am waiting for your decision. Who is to be the lucky one?"

"Gregorio," shouted Manuelo at once.

"No, no!" cried the other passionately. "No, no, Manuelo, I cannot," declared the other hoarsely.

"I will decide," said Manuelo; "I have the right of choice before my brother, since I am the elder."

Don Q. held up his hand.

"It is enough. You cannot agree. The decision must be mine, for I regret I have not time (interesting as it would be) to listen to an argument between you—"

Manuelo broke into his speech.

"Hear me," he groaned; "Gregorio has a wife and child. Let him go!"

"The choice is in my hands, and in my hands it must remain," Don Q. answered; "I have decided. Gregorio shall go free after he has looked upon his brother's death. I have chosen him, not because he has a wife and child waiting for him in Murcia, but because, being readier of speech than our stiff-tongued Manuelo he will render a more vivid picture of what he has witnessed."

The soft flow of the chief's voice neither rose nor fell. Gregorio shuddered violently.

"I will not witness it," he cried. "Shoot us both, in the name of the virgin!"

There followed a silence, during which the chief stood like a dormant bird, his cloak half fallen on the sand at his feet.

"Other men beside you, Manuelo, other brave men have challenged me to do my worst, and, with one exception, I have always lived to hear their vain appeals for mercy." Don Q.'s low tone had an echo of weariness.

The man did not reply at once; then he said—

"Why mock me? Speak plainly."

"I do not mock you. I have many faults in the eyes of men, but it is well-known that I never lie. Is it not so?"

"That is so."

"Tell me then, Manuelo, the truth in return. What if I let you go free also?"

"It is impossible, senor," he said at last, "it is impossible. We have taken an oath that while life remains in our bodies we will seek your life. If you spare us now we will come again. Shoot me and be done with it. We are honorable men."

Don Q. burst into a shriek of hissing laughter.

"Manuelo, go free!" he cried. "See now I give myself into your hands. Go back to Murcia, and when your vow troubles you, come again and cross swords and wits with the king of the sequestradores. I really feel quite indebted to you, Manuelo. You have given me something to look forward to, an added zest to life, for death stares at me forever from your eyes. And although I have outgrown most of the human weaknesses, I still have in my heart a warm feeling for a very brave man."

A THREE-CORNERED GAME.

It is not too much to say that there were two Don Q.'s The one a sneering, vengeful, tiger-hearted brigand, who dealt in death, pain and blood-stained money; the other a charming, soft-spoken gentleman, full of courtesy and culture. But one quality remained always apparent, whichever side of his character happened to be uppermost—the man was a most terrible enemy. "He knows no fear, wrote a prisoner of his on one occasion, "nor do I think he has ever known it. Yet he owns an imagination that cuts like a knife to the heart of things. It is this faculty of placing himself in the position of his foes that has so long enabled him to baffle all designs made against his liberty and his life."

But of this particular point in Don Q.'s character Don Felipe Majada thought not at all as he lay at ease in a long chair and gazed up at the glorious blue sky of Spain—that country which only smiles when the sun shines. An ultimatum had that morning arrived from Madrid which said that if Don Q. was not captured or effaced within seven days, the governorship would be given into more capable hands.

"Ah, most beautiful," said Don Felipe aloud, "life has many trials, but it is only when the heart is broken that one tastes despair."

The woman he addressed moved her fan a little faster. She looked handsome and defiant, this full-throated, deep bosomed Andalusian with magnificent sulky eyes.

"Have you no words, my Rosita?"

"What shall I say?" She raised her heavy eyelids. How does one show despair? Does one grow fat upon it?"

"Do not mock me, I implore you!" continued Don Felipe. "It is on account of this carrion bird of the sierra that I shall be thrust from my place. To-day I am one of the highest officials of the state, in seven days—caramba!—I shall be—"

"Without money, position or credit," concluded Rosita.

"Unless I get rid of Don Q. within seven days!" Don Felipe repeated: "Don Q., mark you, Rosita, the abominable brigand who has defied all efforts to capture him since before I became governor, for years, for decades."

Rosita's lip curled, showing her pretty teeth.

"Some men would not accept defeat so easily," she remarked. "Sooner than that you would go single-handed into the sierra."

"I? Single-handed into the sierra? The saints forbid!"

"But think," she urged, still smiling, "how life will appear to you without money, position, honor, credit! Is it not worth the risk?"

"Ah, my most beautiful you do not understand!" he repeated heedlessly. "You are far from understanding. This vulture hates me. If I were in his grip"—he shuddered—"he would kill me. Not by an easy death, Rosita, by inches. He is a terrible man."

"He is at least a brave one!"

"Brave?" echoed the governor. "He was born lacking the nerve of fear! He would face an entire army alone."

"Whereas you," she pointed her fan at him with a little mocking gesture, "would head the army in running away. Is it not so?"

The governor sat up, puffing out his cheeks, with some idea of protesting.

"Dona Rosita, you forget that I—"

She took the words from his lips, laughingly shaking her head.

"On the contrary, my Felipe, I remember that you—"

Don Felipe occupied himself in rolling another cigarette with care, reflecting meanwhile that he had made a false step in confiding the state of affairs to Rosita, towards whom his feelings, though strong, were so annoyingly divided. He half feared, half loved her. Long ago, in the early flush of his admiration, he had spoken of marriage; now he had not the smallest intention of binding himself irrevocably to that compelling will.

"What am I to do? You, who have so often counseled me, do not desert me now, my beloved! You, who are my Minerva and Venus tell me what I am to do."

"But why should I?"

"Because our destinies are bound together," he responded with fervor, hoping to pass an awkward point with a pretty paraphrase.

"That promise of marriage—you will fulfill it?" Her dark eyes flashed out on him.

"The day of Don Q.'s death, I swear it."

"Is that true?" Rosita asked, rising from her seat and standing over him.

"On the honor of a Majada."

Perhaps this warrant was less satisfying than it sounded, but Dona Rosita accepted it. Her fan waved rapidly for a few moments.

"As you will not take my suggestion of going into the sierra—"

"Which is impossible!" interjected Don Felipe resolutely.

"We must turn to some trick to tempt Don Q. down into the plains—into your power," she continued.

Majada pursed his lips and shook his head in disappointment.

"Tricks have been tried times without number—and failed. No trap can tempt him," he asserted dolefully.

"Not if baited with a woman?" Rosita's splendid eyes looked coquettishly at him over the edge of her fan.

"But Don Q.—" he snapped his finger and thumb, "he cares no more than his own mountains even for beauty as glorious as yours!"

"That may be," she replied. "For all that I will tell you a plan by which you may draw the chief out of the sierra [illegible]" she added, smiling.

"How, how?"

"By playing upon what is best in him."

"Best in him? He is a bloodthirsty ruffian."

"He has never harmed a woman."

"True, true."

"Your country house is empty. You must imprison me there—because I refuse to marry you."

"O!" commented Don Felipe, dubiously.

"I will implore the assistance of Don Q. by a letter. He will come down in person to release me. I will tell him in the letter that you are sending some wine through the mountains, in the hope that he will intercept it, and so die, for the wine will be poisoned. This you must also do, and so prove my good faith in the eyes of the chief."

"It is a magnificent plan, my Rosita, and worthy of you," exclaimed Don Felipe in genuine admiration. "I have but to conceal two or three score men in the gardens of the Casa de Segil—we will seize him."

"And you will remain governor," she added.

"With the most beautiful wife in Spain!" He gazed at her fervently.

So it came to pass that the letter of Dona Rosita de Rivero, which betrayed the plot of the convoy of poisoned wine intended to fall into Don Q.'s hands, lit in his mind a cold and deadly fury against Don Felipe.

"This over-gorged carrion would endeavor a second time to poison me!" he reflected. "Am I a rat or a dog that he should do this? He must be taught. He has imprisoned this girl moreover. Yes he must be taught."

So for many hours the chief brooded in his cave, for when time permitted he liked to consider every possibility of the game.

After these hours of silence, he went to a table that stood in one corner of his cave and began to write. They were but a few lines which ran somewhat as follows. He kissed the hand of the lovely Dona Rosita. He thanked her for the hint she sent him, and he would take steps for her deliverance on the coming Friday evening. He paused for a moment as if about to add more, then sealed the letter and called Robledo.

The young fellow came running up the pathway to the cave-mouth.

"Bring also Antonio," was the order. Don Q. looked keenly from the worn, handsome face of Robledo to his companion's.

"I am about to trust you. I pray you may prove yourself worthy of the honor. I am about to put my life in your keeping. This letter must be placed in the hands of the lady whom you will find detained at the Casa de Segil. Take care that by no chance it falls into the hands of Don Felipe Majada—my life would pay the penalty. You understand?"

"Yes lord."

"Then go."

Don Q. looked after the man with that quiver of his drooping eyelids which with him betrayed amusement or anger. "A very meager intellect," he murmured. "That insect will do exactly as I calculate; he will endeavor to betray me."

Then he turned to the second of his followers, who stood waiting meekly.

"For you, Robledo, I have a double mission, the chief resumed, in his soft, sibilant tones. "Go down to the shrine of San Pedro and beg one of the good fathers to come up into the mountains to the gorge of the torrent. Say that his presence will be urgently needed on Friday evening."

The sun had already passed overhead and was dropping in the fierce blue sky when the chief mounted his fragile frame on an ambling mule and led a body of his followers downward toward the plains. By many bridle paths they passed, over wild scrub-grown areas, through glimmering summer woods, until in the splendid glow of evening they came to where a rugged path wound and tumbled through the lower ravines. Here a charcoal-burner rose from a thicket in which he had been crouching.

With his eyes on the ground he told of the passing of the convoy with wine for the Casa de Segil. That was 16 hours ago. He had kept watch ever since.

"We have secured the convoy. And the soldiers?" inquired Don Q.

"They also passed, my lord, in the dark before the dawn. I could count 60, but others went by in the gloom. There were more than 60."

"Good. You shall be rewarded, Tomas."

"And now, my children, forward. The soldiers will enjoy a quiet evening in the pleasant gardens of the Casa de Segil. We will not disturb them."

It was deep in the night in the streets of that white and ancient city where Don Felipe held office. The watchmen had just cried the hour with the facts that the night was black and the stars hidden, when six men in Indian file slipped noiselessly through the shadows under the sleeping houses, and paused by the wall of the governor's residence. Then their leader, drawing on more tightly his long muffling cloak, delivered an order or two, something flopped softly down from the balcony above, and a slender figure passed by a rope ladder into the window overhead.

History is uncertain as to whether it was a man or a woman who met him, but, in any case, the accomplice—for Don Q. had friends everywhere, equally in the little local courts of officials as in the huts of the goatherds—holding the thin hand of the chief drew him through a passage or two, and left him before a high closed door.

Don Q. took from his belt a knife, turned the handle of the door, and walked in. A faint lamp burned beside the bed. The brigand stepped up into the circle of its light, and tapped the sleeper sharply on the ear.

The governor awoke.

"Rise at once and come with me," went on the urbane, inexorable voice. "Dress warmly for it is chilly in the mountains, and I should never forgive myself if you were to contract pneumonia."

At the word "mountains" Don Felipe's jaw fell. He found his tongue at last, but the sound it sent forth was like the bleating of a kid.

"Wh—who are you?—I refuse to go with you."

BABY'S SMILE.

Baby's smile indicates that he is well and happy. It is only the sick child who is cross and restless. And the mother can depend upon it that [illegible] simply to be ugly—that is not his nature—he is crying because he is in pain—most probably his little stomach is out of order. The mother will find Baby's Own Tablets a never failing cure for all the minor ailments of little ones. In the homes where the Tablets are used there are no cross, crying babies — nothing but bright, happy and playful babies — the kind that are a joy to the home. Mrs Jos. Legree, Caraquet, N. B., says: "At the time I sent for Baby's Own Tablets my little one was weak and failing. He would cry night and day, and I did not seem able to get Short teeth denote a short life and long teeth the reverse. Projecting teeth mean a greedy disposition, but white, even teeth indicate an upright character.

Brignoli's Weak Point.

Brignoli, the tenor, was sensitive about his age. A young lady once said to him in admiration, "Signor Brignoli, I have known you ever since I was a little girl." He turned around in a fury and shouted, "Yes, and I have known you ever since I was a little boy!"

Men With Tails.

An old Dutch legend says that Thomas a Becket cursed the Kentishmen of England, who spitefully cut off his horse's tail, and that the entire generation of Kent which followed wore tails like horses.

Shell Sounds.

The peculiar murmuring sound, not unlike the ripple of the waves on a still evening, which we hear on placing a shell or other hollow object to the ear is due to the fact that the concave surface concentrates and multiplies all different sounds around us, so as to render them audible. The many sounds always present in the air are augmented by the resonant cavity of the shell.

The best apples are the heaviest ones and if good will yield to the pressure of the thumb with a faint cracking noise.

The Great Pyramid.

The greatest pyramid in the world is that of Cheops of the Gizeh group. It contains 89,000,000 cubic feet of masonry, is 451 feet high, and the total weight of the stone in this mammoth monument has been estimated as over 6,000,000 tons.

Olive Oil.

The simplest way to ascertain the purity of olive oil is to freeze it. Pure olive oil has the exclusive property of freezing at 3 or 4 degrees above zero, whereas other oils need a temperature of 10 degrees below zero.

The skin rids the system of more urea than the kidneys?

Nearly one fifth of the waste products of the body is eliminated by the skin. Suppose there is some unsuspected, unseen skin trouble—the pores are closed—the skin is unable to rid the system of its share of the waste.

Then the blood carries this waste product to the kidneys—immediately they are overworked—they strain to throw off the extra load. What the kidneys can't possibly eliminate, the blood takes up again and deposits on the nerves.

Then come the dull aches in back, hips and head—the nerves unstrung and irritated—the urine charged with impurities and highly colored—and you fear you have "Kidney Trouble."

Nonsense. Your kidneys are overworked—not diseased. What you need is "FRUIT-A-TIVES" to act on the skin.

Fruit-a-tives

(or Fruit Liver Tablets)

open the clogged pores—start up healthy skin action—and let the skin perform its natural function. This instantly relieves the kidneys of overwork—the back-aches stop and the complexion is beautified. There is no excessive waste matter in the blood to bring dull headaches—the urine is cleared—the bowels are opened and regulated—and the kidneys strengthened.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" act directly on the three great eliminating organs—Skin, Kidneys and Bowels—make them well and keep them well. That is why "FRUIT-A-TIVES" cure so many cases of apparent kidney disease that are really skin troubles.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" are fruit juices—in which the natural medicinal action of fruit is many times increased by the secret process of making them. Valuable tonics and antiseptics are added and the whole made into tablets—the finest formula known to medicine.

Buy them—try them—and cure yourself at home. 50c. a box—6 boxes for $2.50. At all druggists or sent on receipt of price. 106

FRUIT-A-TIVES Limited, OTTAWA.

The recent strike on the adjoining property of two veins of cobalt and silver but a short distance (about 60 feet) from and running directly towards Silver Bird has, in our opinion, really doubled the value of this property.

SILVER BIRD WILL POSITIVELY ADVANCE TO 25 CENTS ON MARCH 25TH.

Advices from Superintendent Gauthier states that the shaft is now 94 feet deep, that drifting will commence at the 100-foot level, and that he expects to soon be bagging ore for shipment. Supt. Gauthier has had many years of experience in mining, is thoroughly familiar with the formation and conditions, and his opinion and advice can be relied upon.

SILVER BIRD

NOW 15 CENTS PER SHARE.

SILVER BIRD is surrounded by the greatest producing mines in the Cobalt District.

SILVER BIRD is absolutely inside property, consisting of twenty acres (patented), being the west half of the northeast quarter of the north half of Lot 3, Concession 6, Coleman.

SILVER BIRD is a mine in full operation, with two 25 h.p. boilers, steam hoist, steam drills and all machinery and buildings necessary to complete an operating mine.

SILVER BIRD is working two shifts and is in full operation both day and night, sinking upon three veins and in the same formations identically as in the O'Brien, Timmins and Right of Way mines and lying immediately between these mines and the Green-Meehan, Red Rock, Cobalt Contact and Nipissing Extension. The veins are broadening out and are increasing in values with depth, now 94 feet in shaft.

SILVER BIRD has no indebtedness; there are no incumbrances against the property or stock of the company. The capitalization of The Silver Bird Cobalt Mines, Limited, is but $1,500,000.00, par value of the shares $1.00 each, fully paid and non-assessable, and no personal liability, with 500,000 shares in the treasury. The first allotment is now offered to the public for subscription at 15 cents per share.

Considering the inside location of the property, development done, results obtained, low capitalization and the large amount of shares in the treasury, this is unquestionably one of the best bargains (if not the greatest bargain) that have been offered in Cobalt mining shares.

How They Were Cleverly Used In Exposing a Fraud.

In a large factory in which were employed several hundred persons one of the workmen in wielding his hammer carelessly allowed it to slip from his hand. It flew halfway across the room and struck a fellow workman in the left eye. The man afterward averred that his eye was blinded by the blow, although a careful examination failed to reveal any injury, there being not a scratch visible.

He brought a suit in the courts for compensation for the loss of half of his eyesight, and refused all offers of compromise. Under the law the owner of the factory was responsible for an injury resulting from an accident of this kind.

The day of the trial arrived, and in open court an eminent oculist, retained by the defense, examined the alleged injured member and gave it as his opinion that it was as good as the right eye.

Upon the plaintiff's loud protest of his inability to see with his left eye the oculist proved him a perjurer and satisfied the court and jury of the falsity of his claim. He did it simply by knowing that the colors green and red combined make black.

He prepared a black card, on which a few words were written in green ink. Then the plaintiff was ordered to put on a pair of spectacles with two different glasses, the one for the right eye being red, and the one for the left eye consisting of ordinary glass. Then the card was handed to him, and he was ordered to read the writing on it through the glasses.

This he did without hesitation, and the cheat was at once exposed. Owing to the effect which the colored glass must have had upon the green writing the sound right eye fitted with the red glass could not possibly distinguish the writing on the black surface of the card, while the left eye, which he pretended was sightless, was the one with which the reading had to be done.—London Standard.

THE SWISS ARMY.

Always Ready For War Service at a Moment's Notice.

The total population of Switzerland is rather less than half the population of London alone, yet the plucky little republic can throw into the field at a moment's notice four completely equipped and trained army corps to Germany's and France's twenty and England's nominal eight. In proportion to her population as compared with Switzerland, England should possess fifty.

Every ablebodied Swiss is, ipso facto, a member of the army from eighteen to forty-four, yet never does one hear the least complaint made by a Swiss of whatever social class at the trifling sacrifice of time that his military duties demand. To watch a Swiss battalion on its way to maneuvers in camp or on its return is to watch as contented, serviceable and cheerful a lot of men as one could wish to meet.

The only serious tax upon the time of the soldiers is the first two months of hard training as a recruit. Afterward sixteen days in camp every other year is all that is required of him. Between whiles he shoots with his comrades—every little village has its shooting range—because he loves it, and devotes a certain amount of time voluntarily to the physical exercises he is taught at school to keep himself fit. On first joining he is carefully examined as regards his suitability for this or that branch of the service and is drafted into that for which he is best fitted, and he invariably takes as great a pride in his regiment, battery or squadron as could any voluntarily enlisted man in our smartest corps at home.

The Swiss army comprises 100 battalions of infantry and twenty-four squadrons of cavalry, with the necessary ordnance and departmental corps, while the artillery includes forty-eight field batteries, ten batteries of position and two excellent mountain batteries.—Pall Mall Gazette.

First Thermometer.

The first thermometer was made in 1621 by a Dutch physicist named Cornelius Van Drebbell and consisted of a tube filled with air, closed at its upper end and dipping at its other extremity, which was open, in a bottle of nitric acid diluted with water. As the temperature rose or fell the air in the tube increased or grew less in volume and consequently the liquid descended or rose. This instrument is now known as an air thermometer, but as its measurements were based on no fixed principle it was of little use.

No Relative of His.

Duncan, aged two and a half, had been naughty. To punish him his mother tied him in his high chair and kept him there for one hour, by the clock. His father got home before the hour was quite up and asked the youngster why he was tied up.

"Father," replied Duncan, pointing an accusing finger at his mother, "I'm completely surprised at that lady."

Lumber Laden Derelicts.

Lumber laden derelicts are the most troublesome to navigators. It takes them a long time to sink. One such reported in the early nineties drifted over 7,000 miles in 850 days. She was sighted thirty-eight times during that period, showing that she was frequently putting herself in the way of charted ocean travel.

To-morrow's International Sunday School Lesson.

JACOB AND ESAU — GOLDEN TEXT: "LYING LIPS ARE AN ABOMINATION TO THE LORD, BUT THEY THAT DEAL TRULY ARE HIS DELIGHT."

Time. — According to our Bible margins, Esau sold his birthright about B. C. 1805, 16 years after the death of Abraham. Jacob gained possession of it 25 years later, B. C. 1780.

Place — Jacob's early home was at Beersheba, in The South Country. He fled to Padan Aram, at Haran, near the head waters of the Euphrates, 280 miles northwest of Damascus.

The two brothers were twins, but Esau was the elder. They were born and reared at Beersheba. They were as different from one another as were Isaac and Rebekah, but with a difference. Esau, in whom Rebekah's nature was emphasized, was the favorite of Isaac, while Jacob, who grafted the shrewdness and business sharpness of his mother's family upon the home-loving and religious and thoughtful nature of his father, was the favorite of Rebekah.

Esau means "Hairy," but to this was added the name Edom, "Red," both on account of his ruddy color and the red pottage for which he sold his birthright.

"Esau was a sportsman, boisterous wild, clumsy." "Esau was full of the manliest interests and pursuits. He was a proverb of courage and endurance and success in the chase. . . He had an eye like an eagle. His ear never slept. His arrow never missed the mark. A prince of men. A prime favorite both with men, women and children. All the time an animal more than a man." "A gentleman by birth, but a brute by choice." He grew to be a worldly, sensuous, adventurous, but withal a brave, good-natured and jovial man, ready for any sport or pleasure, no matter at whose cost, and to break, in a jolly, rollicking way, every commandment in the Decalogue. He was prosperous in his chosen way, and became the head of a tribe, the moral ancestor of the bedouin tribes of to-day.

Jacob means "the catcher by the heel," "a supplanter." He lived at home, a plain, domestic man, a large farmer, with business proclivities and skill. He inherited from his mother the genius and insight which enabled him to gain his ends by adroit skill, by diplomacy, by ingenious cleverness, from those who would overcome him by superior physical force. Naturally this talent was cultivated by his living with his robust and physically overbearing brother. He knew by instinct the best end of a bargain. He was a natural-born business man, a splendid talent when joined with conscientious integrity. The selling and buying of his birthright when both were young men, 32 years old, is an illustration of their characters.

He inherited from his father the promises of God. He lived in the presence of visions and ideals. Joseph the Dreamer was his own son. He prized the promised birthright.

Jacob's career was a growth and development. We see his choice of the better things gradually overcoming his faults and imperfections. His progress is slow and difficult, with zigzag motions, with reactions, like the chilly days and snowstorms of spring, but it is moving on toward the summer harvests and autumn fruits.

Gen. 25; 29-34. The young men grew up together till they were about 32 years old, when an incident occurred small in itself, but with eternal consequences.

"The first-born is the head of the patriarchal family, and the right of the first-born includes the representative privileges derived from this exalted position."

"Esau was, by right of birth, the head of the family, its prophet, priest, and king; and no man can renounce such privileges, except as a sacrifice required by God, without despising God, who gave them. But more than this; he was the head of the chosen family; on him devolved the blessing of Abraham that, 'in his seed all families of the earth should be blessed'; and, in despising his birthright, he put himself out of the sacred family, and so became a 'profane person.' His sin must not be overlooked in our indignation at the fraud of Jacob, which, as we shall see presently, brought its own retribution as well as its own gain."

One day Esau, returning from a long hunt, ravishingly hungry, found Jacob cooking a wholesome and appetizing dish of yellowish-red lentiles.

The crafty Jacob, instead of sharing his meal with his brother, who had doubtless, often given him venison, drove a hard bargain, and Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. And knowing well Esau's fickleness, Jacob made him take a solemn oath. "I am dying of hunger," said the elder brother with characteristic exaggeration, "and what is a birthright to me?"

"Everybody knew that Esau's birthright was for sale. Isaac knew, Rebekah knew, and Jacob knew, and Jacob had for a long time been eyeing his brother for a fit opportunity. The opportunity came when the ravenous Esau asked for some of his pottage. 'As much as you are able to eat, Esau, only, say that you pass me to-day your worthless birthright,' said Jacob. 'Take it and welcome,' said Esau, 'and much good may it do you. It has never been worth a haunch of venison to me. You may have it, and my oath on it on the spot, for a good dish at once, and be quick, of your smoking pottage. Take it and let me be done with it.'"

Gen. 27: 1-40. About 25 years (or as some think, 45) pass away. Very probably Esau had forgotten his bargain, or, at any rate, had no intention of carrying it out. But Isaac, feeling the infirmities of age, though he lived many years after this, wished to devolve the care of his family upon his eldest son, and proposed at a feast to bestow upon him the birthright blessing, which would have made Esau the head of the family. Jacob remembered his purchase, and Rebekah, the prophecy. Jacob was her favorite son. The two were afraid that the desired boon was slipping away from them. They did not trust God, but took the matter into their own hands and conspired together his neck to imitate the rough and hairy skin of Esau, if Isaac should feel of him.

17. Then Rebekah imitated the venison stew which Esau was to prepare on his return from his hunting expedition.

19, 22. Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau, thy firstborn. But Isaac doubted because it was so soon after Esau's departure that there was hardly time for him to have found a deer and returned; and this necessitated another lie. His voice did not sound like Esau's. Hence Isaac said those words which have become a proverb of deceit: Thy voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

Thus deceived, Isaac gave the birthright blessing to Jacob.

Jacob inherited the blessing because he was best fitted for it, or rather he had within him the best possibilities which could be trained into fitness. Hence God had ordained that the elder would serve the younger. (Gen. 25, 23.)

An example of the contrary plan was shown by David when he refused to kill King Saul, although the kingdom had been promised to him. He waited God's time, and refused to do evil that good might come of it. (See 1. Sam. 24, 1-7.)

Another example, which Jacob had before him, was that of his grandfather Abraham in his sacrifice of Isaac.

We must judge of the guilt of this transaction, not by our light, but by theirs. For deceit was not looked upon then as a great evil, especially with a good motive and in a good cause. The birthright had been designated by God as belonging to Jacob. Esau had sold his right, and Jacob had acquired it. Esau had practically renounced his privilege, not only by the sale, but by marrying heathen wives from the great Hittite nation. By character and marriage Esau was wholly unfitted to be the father of the faithful and the inheritor of the promises. We must (unqualifiedly) condemn this deceitful transaction, as God condemned it by the many sorrows which flowed from it.

Esau received a certain blessing, one for which he was fitted. All his bitter tears could not give to him the birthright he had despised and sold. "He had no right, divine or human, to the inheritance. God had never said that his possession should go to the oldest, and had in this case said the express opposite. Besides, inconsistent as Esau was, he could scarcely have forgotten the bargain that so pleased him at the time, and by which he had sold to his younger brother all title to his father's blessings. Jacob was to blame for seeking to win his own by craft, but Esau was more to blame for endeavoring furtively to recover what he knew to be no longer his."

41. Esau hated Jacob. Jacob's wrong-doing kindled the fires of hate, where right-doing would have awakened love. The hatred prompted murder, for Esau planned to kill Jacob as soon as their father died. Well did John write: "He that hateth his brother is a murderer." (1 John. 3, 15.)

His mother sent Jacob away, giving as a reason to Isaac that his son ought to marry out of his kindred. He gained his object, but the wrong way of gaining it mingled the draught of good with many a tear of bitterness—"trouble in the flesh; vanity and vexation of spirit. He had to flee from his father's house; never to see his mother again; to wander over the deserts to kinsmen, who cheated him as he had cheated others; to serve Laban for twenty-one years; to crouch miserably, in fear and trembling, as a petitioner for his life, before Esau, whom he had wronged, and to be made more ashamed than ever by finding that generous Esau had forgiven and forgotten all; then to see his daughter brought to shame; his sons murderers, plotting against their own brothers, his favorite son; to see his grey hairs going down with sorrow to the grave; to confess to Pharaoh, after one hundred and twenty years of life, that few and evil had been the days of his pilgrimage.

Rebekah lost her favorite son, for, so far as we know, she never saw Jacob again; and Esau was not of a nature to be a comfort to her; and her husband was weak and blind.

OLD AGE

Comes to Everyone, But Its Visits May Be Postponed.

Old age is not a question of years. Some men are old at forty, others are young at sixty.

It's a mighty hard proposition to look young, no matter how young you feel if your hair is falling out and your head becoming bald.

Perhaps you are tired trying ineffectual remedies for this evil.

We don't blame you if you are.

Why not try an effective one for a change.

PLANETARY VITALITY.

Earthquakes Can Take Place Only on Living Globes.

A moon quake is now unthinkable, because the moon is as dead as a door nail. Our satellite is "ever foreshadowing our own ultimate doom, like the mummy at Egyptian banquets," but in the meantime, if the Edinburgh Review has correctly conceived the teachings of seismology, the inhabitants of earth may console themselves for the havoc wrought through earthquakes by reflecting that they demonstrate the vitality of our planet. In that distant past when the moon actually quaked there may—some scientists declare there must—have been forms of animation on its surface. "Though the moon, by reason of its smaller size, was bound to lose its atmosphere, it must have taken millions of years to do so, and there may have been time for the cycle of life, from the primeval germ up to sentient beings and down again to the hardiest lingering plant cells, to run its full circle." The writer in the Edinburgh Review continues to develop this line of thought:

"Earthquakes are a sign of planetary vitality. They would seem to be characteristic of the terrestrial phase of development. Effete globes like the moon can scarcely be subject to the stress to which they are due, nor can they be very suitably constituted for the propagation of elastic waves. Inchoate worlds, such as Jupiter and Saturn, are still less likely to be the scenes of reverberating concussions. Their materials have not yet acquired the necessary cohesion. They are pasty or fluid, if not partially vaporous. On the earth the seismic epoch presumably opened when, exterior solidification having commenced, the geological ages began to run. It will last so long as peaks crumble and rivers carry sediment, so long as the areal distribution of loads fluctuates and strains evoke forces adequate for their catastrophic relief.

"Our globe is by its elasticity kept habitable. The separation of sea from dry land is thus and not otherwise maintained. The alternations of elevation and subsidence manifest the continual activity of this reserve of energy. The dimensions of the globe we inhabit depend upon the balance of pressure and expansiveness. Relaxation or enhancement of either instantly occasions a bending inward or an arching outward of the crust. Just by these sensitive reactions the planet itself shows itself to be alive, and seismic thrillings are the breaths it draws."

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Don't permit pretended friends to exaggerate your sorrows.

Any man is unreliable when talking about his side of the case.

Most people expect a dollar's worth of thanks for a fifty cent present.

To be successful one must know when to grant and when to refuse concessions.

A discontented person is bad enough to live with, but a self satisfied person is lots worse.

Too many people think it isn't wrong to lie about a man who lives a hundred miles away.

After a man has earned your business don't give it to the other fellow just to be contrary.

The average woman keeps a cook just long enough for the cook to peer into all the closets and get good looks at the family skeletons.

Venison Once Cheaper Than Pork.

Time was, along in the early forties and the early fifties of the last century, that from the wilds of Morgan and Brown counties hunters would bring venison to market and sell it much lower than pork was sold in that day, pork being preferred by the Hoosier then to the red deer of the woods. It was in that time that an entire wild turkey, full grown, would sell at a price far below the present appraisement of a scrawny spring chicken, and a dozen quail could be bought for less money than it now takes to buy a dozen links of sausage—neither was the quail required to masquerade as "short billed snipe."

Loving Kindness.

My dog tried to bite me. I liked the dog, so I kicked him lovingly in the jaw. He understood that argument.

My grocer tried to cheat me. I liked the grocer. I did not kick him in the jaw, but I told him lovingly that I would not deal with him again. He understood that argument.

My baby tried to slap me. I liked the baby, but I did not kick her in the jaw or even cease to play with her. I kissed her lovingly on her cheek. She understood that argument.—Independent.

A Test For Eyesight.

An interesting test for eyesight may be had by observing Ursa Major—the Great Bear—on a clear starlit night. Not every one is aware that Mizar, the second star in the constellation, is a double star. To observe this doublet demands good vision. Some starry night look up to the sky and see if you can discern it. If you do see it, you can rest content in the knowledge that your eyesight is not defective.

The Same Thing.

Pa Twaddles—Well, what's the matter now? Tommy Twaddles—Ma says I mustn't never say a word while she's in the room. Ma Twaddles—Why, no, I didn't, dear. I said you mustn't interrupt while I'm talking. Tommy—What's the difference? — Cleveland Leader.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

IT'S ABOUT NOW.

IT'S just about now that nearly every man has the Spring Suit question on his mind.

Many will come to us without any urging on our part.

Sometimes an old customer drops out; perhaps tries a high-priced tailor, but he comes back again and tells us frankly that he likes our clothing—likes the fit—the style—the fabric—the workmanship and our prices.

We have built up our reputation for selling the best of clothes by handling only the best productions of the

The World's Best Clothing Makers.

We are just entering on our tenth year's business in Belleville and can safely say that our showing for the coming season far excels our best previous effort.

Come see our handsome Spring Suits and learn how much suit goodness you can get here for

HATS

No two men look alike. Is it then reasonable to suppose that the same style hat will be equally becoming to all men.

We are inclined to think not. We go upon the supposition that the

"RATHER HIGH."

A prominent oculist in lecturing before a State Medical Association recently on eye-strain, said: "The fitting of glasses is no easy work. The best oculist if he spends his whole life on the study of optics, will be a student all his life, and yet have plenty to learn. Dr. N.—, of Philadelphia, charges $100 for every case of refraction. Many oculists charge $25, yet to the patient it may be a better investment than an extra suit of clothes ordered. Often remarkable symptoms are cured by lenses." We are convinced the reason why we have succeeded in giving relief in cases where the ordinary opticians have failed and even where oculists have failed is because our whole time, study and constant research is along the one specialty, RELIEVING EYE-STRAIN BY THE AID OF THE RIGHT GLASSES, whereas, with the ordinary optician, it is only a "side line," most of his time and attention being taken up with his other business. With the oculist, he has to give so much time to treating diseases of the eye, nose, throat, etc., that he has very little time left for the study of refraction.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Trenton Boys Were Fast.

Trenton's crack hockey team, which has not been beaten so far this season, came down last night and stacked up against a local bunch composed of four O.H.A. Juniors and three others, who, it may fairly be stated, were quite the equals of the O.H.A. men. The match was a fast and clean exhibition of hockey, and was enjoyable from start to finish. The Trenton lads proved themselves a fast and clever lot, able to take care of themselves in pretty nearly any kind of junior company. The Armstrong brothers, on the wings, are the pick of the team, and they did most of the scoring last night. Considering their ages, 16 and 17, it would appear that these lads have quite a future in hockey. The remainder of the visiting team played in good form. The locals did not seem to get fairly started until the second half. In the first period the fast Trenton kids had matters much their own way, and kept the puck in Belleville territory pretty steadily, the half-time score being 5-1, but in the second half Belleville had the best of the play, and were bombarding the Trenton goal-keeper most of the time. The locals were off in their shooting, and had hardly their share of the luck. At one time the score stood 8-1 in favor of Trenton, and then the locals took a brace and ran in four in quick succession. The boys from Mr. M. B. Morrison's town appeared to be winded, and the Bellevilles were coming fast, while the crowd howled with joy. The Trentons braced up again, however, after one of their men had delayed matters by going off for a rest, and scored the last goal, making the score 9-5 in their favor. Mr. James Connolly refereed well, ruling off three Trenton men and one local. It was a good, fast, enjoyable match all through. The teams:

SPORTING NOTES.

Toronto Telegram: Professional hockey players in Toronto this winter have come pretty near being good amateurs. For the first game or two they did fairly well, but the game with Berlin left them a princely two dollars and sixty cents to be "divided" up. And after the Wanderer game was over there was never a cent to fight over. It's easy to be amateurs when the gate receipts are small enough.

Winchester, the Pittsburg goalkeeper, is now at his home in Toronto.

AQUATICS.

Oxford-Cambridge Race To-day.

Putney, Eng., March 15. — The Oxford and Cambridge crews which are to take part in the annual boat race from Putney to Mortlake to-morrow afternoon, wound up their training to-day with brief paddles. The Cambridge men are the favorites at 4 to 1 on, but both crews are above the average of university "eights," and the Oxonians improved so rapidly after they first appeared on the river here that a good race appears to be assured. The Cambridge crew was ambitious to beat all previous records, and intend to row against the clock as well as against their opponents, with the object of lowering the record, 18 minutes 47 seconds, over the course about 4 1-4 miles, established by Oxford in 1893 and equalled by Cambridge in 1900.

A Strange Sermon.

Winnipeg papers just to hand contain reports of "Ralph Connor's" sermon on the Sunday night after the Manitoba elections which seems to have made considerable talk in Manitoba and Ontario. The Rev. Mr. Gordon protests that his sermon was misrepresented, but after reading the report in the Winnipeg Free Press, the chief Grit organ of the West, says the Brockville Times, we do not see that he was much misreported. His sermon strikes us as being the effort of a man who was considerably agitated and who did not clearly know just where he stood in the matter. He made use of the usual platitudes about both parties being politically corrupt, but he also made this curious assertion, according to the Free Press:

"He was told that in Ottawa both parties, the leaders of both parties were rotten with corrupting vices, that those things were challenged on the floor of the House without reply."

That strikes us as being uncommonly like slander,—an ordinary, sinful layman would have hesitated a long time before he would have made such a serious charge against Sir Wilfrid Laurier or Mr. Borden. And "Ralph Connor" has admitted that he only has a bowing acquaintance with Sir Wilfrid and none at all with Mr. Borden, the Conservative leader. If his campaign statements are as wild and mischievous as these from his own pulpit we do not wonder that his influence amounted to nothing.

Farther on in his sermon he said, if the Free Press is to be believed:

"He believed that the defeat was one of the best things that ever happened to the Liberal party. He was not sure that the Liberal party was in a fit and proper condition to receive the administration of the affairs of this province in a way that would be absolutely for the good of the people. He did not know that the Liberal party had learnt its lesson."

This is odd talk to hear from a man who a few days previous had been moving heaven and earth to put these same Liberals in power. It is a pity that the Rev. Mr. Gordon had not discovered how unfit for power his Grit friends were before he mixed up in the recent campaign.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH CONCERT.

The sacred concert held in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last night was largely attended, and the programme rendered gave the best of satisfaction. Rev. Mr. Emerson was chairman, and his timely and witty remarks were listened to with evident appreciation.

Mrs. Allen, who was in excellent voice, added to her already enviable reputation, singing, with splendid taste, "The Bird with a Broken Pinion" and a fine Dudley Buck composition. She also sang in a duet with Mr. H. Wrightmyer, which was listened to with delight.

The Misses Leslie sang a duet, "Beautiful Land," in a very pleasing way.

Mr. James Dyer hardly ever appeared to better advantage than in his two selections, "Angel Land" and "The Penitent." His voice seems to improve with each successive appearance.

Mr H. Wrightmyer showed good taste and sympathy in his rendition of "The Children's Home."

Miss Joy Higgs played two violin solos in fine form, her technique being surprisingly good. Miss Higgs' playing shows that she has had the benefit of excellent tuition, and has made good use of it.

Readings were contributed by Mrs. Hess and Miss G. Smith, which were much enjoyed.

One of the most pleasing numbers was that given by the male quartette, Messrs. Doyle, Wrightmyer, Taylor and Burrows, who sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" in really splendid style. These really fine young singers are, by their excellent work, attaining, and deserving, a reputation which extends beyond their own bailiwick.

Profs. Hunt and Cameron left nothing to be desired as accompanists, and their work tended to accentuate the pleasures of the evening.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

Lincoln J. Carter's successful drama, "Shadows of the Past," comes to the Carman on Monday next, and from the record it has made thus far promises to be one of the best plays that will be seen here this season. A well-balanced cast interprets the various roles in a forceful, enthusiastic and dramatic manner and brings out every telling point in the interesting story. While there are no scenic effects, a carload of gorgeous scenery is carried, which is a marvel of the scenic painter's craft.

"SERGEANT KITTY."

Helen Byron, the star of "Sergeant Kitty" Co., that will be seen at the opera house next Wednesday, March 20th, is by no means unknown in Ontario. In fact, she has many friends and admirers all through Canada, for she was long identified with the best of stock companies in America. She has made a great success as a dramatic leading lady, but it remained for her to do even better when she went into comic opera and in the military comic opera, "Sergeant Kitty," in which she is now appearing, she has received the most flattering notices all over the country. This attraction should prove an entertaining one here.

Former Resident Married.

A wedding took place in Hillier on Wednesday, says the Picton Gazette when Mr. W. Allen, a former resident of Belleville, and Miss Lily Tripp, were united in marriage. The marriage took place in the Methodist church, Hillier, the Rev. White, performed the ceremony, after which the bride and groom, and wedding guests repaired to the residence of the bride's parents, where the merry-making took place, after which the happy pair left for Belleville and Oshawa, the latter place of which will be their future home. Nothing but the best wishes follow the young couple.

Silver Wedding.

A silver wedding anniversary was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Richardson, Big Island, on March 7th, at which a large number of relatives and friends gathered to celebrate the occasion. After a bountiful spread of the good things of this life, an enjoyable evening was spent. The presents were costly and too numerous to mention. Among the relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson, Bloomfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Richardson, Mr. David Richardson, Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howell, Picton; Mr. and Mrs. Levi Cole, Demorestville; Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. A. Crouter, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Crouter, Crofton; Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Richardson, Belleville, and Miss Mabel Bately, Wellington.

Renfrew On Trial.

Fred Renfrew was this afternoon on trial before Judge Deroche on the charge of escaping from jail. The proceedings had not concluded when we went to press.

Miss Appleby Married.

On Monday last, at Bancroft, Miss Daisy Appleby, youngest daughter of Mr. L. A. Appleby, formerly jailer here, was married to Mr. Ernest A. Read, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed in the Anglican church by the Rev. James Dixon, rector of that village. The young couple will take up their residence in the Queen City.

A Small Fire.

The fire brigade were this morning, shortly before 10 o'clock, called out for a run to Brassey street, near the G.T.R. station. A slight blaze on the roof of a house occupied by a family named Cummings was the cause of alarm. Fortunately the fire was extinguished before any amount of damage had been sustained.

The Way Some Places Obtain Manufactories.

(Extracts from the Municipal World and the Canadian Municipal Journal.)

Windsor.—Passed an industrial by-law intended to enable the Council to arrange with manufacturers seeking locations.

Whitby.—Carried the Ontario Car Works by-law.

Wingham.—Will loan the Wingham Carriage Co. $5,000.

Deseronto.—Only six voted against the by-law submitted granting the Deseronto Furniture Company a loan of $10,000.

Welland.—A by-law granting fixed assessment and other concessions to the Robertson Machinery Co. was carried.

Goderich.—Decided to aid the Rogers Manufacturing Company, the Furniture Company and Carriage Company.

Amherstburg.—Defeated a by-law to grant aid in establishing a canning factory, the required number of favorable votes not being polled.

Orangeville.—Ratified a loan of $15,000 to the Hurndall Novelty Manufacturing Company.

Cayuga.—Only three voted nay and 134 yea on the by-law submitted in Cayuga to give the Window Glass Manufacturing Company 14 acres of land and tax exemption.

Barrie.—The by-law to aid in rebuilding the Dyment Foundry at Barrie was defeated.

Stouffville.—A bonus by-law was carried.

Guelph.—Carried a by-law to loan $5,000 to Morlock Bros.

Listowel.—Carried the G.T.R. station and Coleman by-laws.

Hull.—Fixed assessment of Smelting Works for 50 years at $100,000.

North Monaghan.— Benton Carpet Co. assessment fixed at $10,000.

Barrie and Collingwood both have Committees of Council to take charge of a special department called the "Industrial and Advertising Committee," and this committee is expected to be on the lookout for new industries and to advertise the town and its advantages. Bracebridge has a man engaged at a salary of $150 per year for the purpose of advertising the town and securing new industries.

OBITUARY.

ALMON REYNOLDS.

There passed away at the family residence, Township of Hallowell, Prince Edward County, on Thursday, March 14th, an aged, highly prosperous and intelligent farmer in the person of Almon Reynolds, at the advanced age of 76 years. The deceased was a man who was greatly respected, and enjoyed the full confidence of the entire community. His wife, who was a daughter of the late Gilbert French, predeceased him several years ago. He was a brother of W. P. Reynolds, of Picton, and a sister, Miss Rose Reynolds, Mrs. Cunningham, of Trenton, and a sister, who resides in the United States, also survive. A son, Byron, also is left to mourn.

Presented With Bible.

The following explains itself:

To Mrs. Doxtader:

Our Dear Friend, — We, the members of Centenary church and Sunday School, have gathered here this evening to show our appreciation for the faithfulness and untiring zeal, which you have shown during the past years. We regret very much that we are losing you from our midst, but we know that wherever you go, you will be working for the Master. To help you on with your good work, we present this Bible to you, hoping it will be a fit reminder of your Centenary friends.

We are also glad to have the opportunity of presenting to you this set of dishes. We hope to have the pleasure of taking a cup of tea with you in your new home.

C. P. R. To Tweed.

We are informed that, during the past few days, surveyors have been at work staking out a contemplated line of the C.P.R. from the village of Tweed to this city. The contemplated line runs parallel through the 5th concession of the Township of Thurlow and thence through the Township of Hungerford to Tweed. The surveyors were in Thurlow Township during the past week.

A HEALTHFUL DRINK.

A leading medical journal apropos of the value of effervescent beverages says that carbonic acid gas in mineral waters greatly improves digestion, and that this is particularly so in the case of Apollinaris, because its mineral constituents give additional help in that direction, so that Apollinaris is by far the best of the few naturally effervescent waters for mixing with whiskey, wine, fruit syrups or milk. The article goes on to say that the consumption of effervescent liquids is especially large in Great Britain and the United States.

The Doggie Died.

Hamilton Spectator: When the Volunteer Organist appeared at the Grand recently there was sorrow among the members of the company. It was caused by the sudden indisposition of a popular member, who became so ill that he had to be left behind when the company resumed its tour. This member was a big St. Bernard dog and was a great favorite. The manager thought so much of the dog that he left a man in charge of him with instruction to do everything possible to save doggie's life. It was to no purpose, however, for the dog died on Tuesday last. When the manager heard of this he wired back to have the remains embalmed and sent forward by express to New York. The telegram came just in time to save the board of health people the trouble of cremating the dog, and a firm of local undertakers did the embalming and shipped to body to New York.

A Mistake.

Mr. Dennis Sullivan reported to the police that some pieces of flooring which he had purchased had been stolen, but upon investigation it was ascertained that the pieces had been taken to another place by mistake.

Will Open New Chapter.

London, March 16.—(C. A. P.)—Hon. Clifford Sifton, interviewed, said that the time was approaching when an entirely new chapter in the development of Canada will be opened. This will call for the presence of a class of British people quite different from that now emigrating. It also would be accompanied by the introduction of capital to develop Canadian industries. "But you must not expect to see matters hurried," he said.

Manitoba Cabinet Grows.

Winnipeg, March 16.—An important Cabinet change was announced last night when the Provincial Government made known that it had created a new portfolio, that of Minister of Telephones and Railways. J. H. Howden, M.P.P., member for Beautiful Plains, is the new Minister.

It also is announced that active work on the entire system of Government and municipal telephones will be started in sixty days.

Hyman Coming Home.

Ottawa, March 16.—Hon. C. S. Hyman and Mrs. Hyman leave Coronada, Cal., on Saturday, and are expected in Ottawa next week. He has spent two months at Coronada, leaving Canada at the end of November. He is sufficiently recovered from nervous prostration to resume public and private duties. This is the tenor of private despatches to Ottawa.

Asks $25,000, Gets Half a Cent.

Limerick, Ireland, March 16.—In the action for libel brought by William Emerson, member of Parliament for Cork, against The Freeman's Journal, in which he claimed $25,000 damages, the jury yesterday rendered a verdict for the plaintiff, awarding him one farthing (half a cent) damages on each of the six counts.

Held For Murder.

London, March 16.—At the preliminary examination yesterday Police Magistrate Love sent Daniel McPherson up for trial on a charge of killing his father. The case goes on this morning.

Nearly a Disaster.

Dover, Eng., March 16.—The British armored cruiser Duke of Edinburgh grounded yesterday as she was leaving the harbor here, but subsequently was towed off without having sustained any damage. She was caught by a strong tide, which drove her rapidly towards the Prince of Wales pier, and the prompt dropping of her anchors alone saved the warship from crashing into the pier.

Warship In Trouble.

Brest, March 16.—There was another accident to a French warship off this port Thursday. During torpedo exercises the coast defence ship Fulminant was struck and seriously damaged on the water line by a torpedo. Collision mats were at once applied to the hole in the vessel's side, and she was towed into port in a sinking condition.

58 Toulon Dead Identified.

Toulon, March 16.—Only fifty-eight bodies have been identified of the 107 found in or about the hulk of the battleship Iena. The state funeral will be attended to-day by President Fallieres. All the dead have been posthumously promoted so that their survivors will receive higher pensions.

Dutch Kill 280 In Indies.

The Hague, March 16.—An official despatch received here yesterday from the Island of Celebes, Dutch East Indies, announced that the Dutch troops had captured an important rebel stronghold, after a stubborn fight. The fleeing enemy left 280 men dead on the field.

Frank Daniels Killed by Fall.

Portland, Maine, March 16.—Frank Daniels of Montreal, marine superintendent of the Dominion Steamship Line, was killed by falling into the hold of the steamer Southwark here yesterday. He is survived by a widow and two daughters in Montreal.

Forest Reserve Located.

Ottawa, March 16.—The part of Ontario to be reserved as a forest reserve is 6,000 square miles in the north. This permanent forest reserve will lie between the Riviere du Lievre and the Ontario boundary.

BOURASSA ON WARPATH.

Scores Hyman Transaction—Will Discuss Fowler Charges on the 26th.

Ottawa, March 16.—Armand Lavergne called attention to the report of the committee on privileges and elections, declaring the Hyman resignation invalid. He moved that the report be not concurred in. True, Mr. Hyman had not followed the letter of the statute, but it was within the power of the House to respect the intention of the member and to declare his seat vacant.

Mr. Bourassa characterized the entire Hyman transaction as a "Parliamentary joke." He gave notice that on Tuesday, March 26, he would discuss the various charges and countercharges that had been flying back and forth across the House, including the famous "women, wine and graft" indictment, the findings of the Insurance Commission respecting certain members, and reference in the House concerning western land deals and other transactions disclosed by the insurance investigation.

Mr. Bourassa explained that this date had been fixed after consultation with the Premier and the leader of the Opposition.

The House then went into committee on the Lemieux labor disputes bill. A few amendments were agreed to, insuring the right of railway employes to avail themselves either of this act or on the present Conciliation Act. The bill was then reported.

Liability For Injuries.

The House also discussed the bill respecting the Grand Trunk Railway Co. yesterday.

Mr. Lennox (South Simcoe) and Mr. Bennett (East Simcoe) insisted that the clause providing for an employe pension fund should be safeguarded so as to prevent the employes contracting away their right to recover for wrongful death or personal injuries. Mr. Lennox moved an amendment to this effect.

The House divided upon this amendment, and the same was voted down. Yeas 22, nays 48; a party vote. The bill goes over.

Dr. Stockton, M. P., Dead.

Ottawa, March 16.—Dr. Stockton, M. P. for St. John, N.B., died in the Water street Hospital after an illness of about four weeks. His daughter was with him at the time of death, and Mrs. Stockton is now en route to Ottawa from New Brunswick.

Dr. Stockton was a member of the New Brunswick Legislature from 1883 to 1899. In 1900 he unsuccessfully contested the seat for the Commons, but was successful at the last general election.

This makes the eighth death in the Commons and Senate this session, four members of each Chamber having passed away. The remains will be sent to St. John for interment.

Accused of $40,000 Forgery.

Montreal, March 16.—Jos. O. Motard, senior partner of the firm of Motard, Fils & Senecal, 5 Place Royale, importers of wines and liquors, and agents for the trappists monks of Oka, has been arrested on a charge of forging notes on the Molsons Bank to the amount of nearly $40,000.

He has admitted his guilt and says the greater part of the money was spent in advertising his business. He stated that the notes are for sums ranging from $100 to $200, to which he had forged names of his regular customers.

Motard tried to raise the money to cover the forged notes, but without success.

Laurier's Hostility.

London, March 16.—(C. A. P.)—The Morning Post's correspondent says Laurier will represent the views of French-Canadians only respecting an imperial council.

The Morning Post, editorially, says the pity of it is that probably his hostile attitude is based on a misconception of the proposal. While it merely aims at giving the conference a continuous existence by arranging that responsible Ministers of each state reside in London, which would not alter the principle.

More Army Emigrants.

London, March 16.—The Vancouver sailed with 800 Salvation Army emigrants. Quite a ritual marked the departure of the vessel.

Lord Tennyson has announced he will emigrate a party of deserving Y. M. C. A. members at his own expense.

Steamer Larchmont Found.

Providence, R. I., March 16.—After a search of over a month the wreck of the steamer Larchmont has been found by Capt. James Buddington, a fisherman, one quarter of a mile south of Watch Hill Light.

Friendship.

Friendship, this beautiful relation of life to life, soul to soul, is of most serious import. It sometimes makes our warmest friend in reality our worst enemy. Bad qualities in a friend are false lights—they lure to evil. Many of us are constituted so that it is easy for us to form friendships. Let us be careful of those thus brought under our influence and power. Let us keep them unsoiled. Let us feel that grave responsibilities lie in our friendships and that they also enshrine glorious opportunities.

Sold.

It was the first performance of one of those overadvertised shows from New York.

"You don't think much of it," said the manager in surprise. "Why, the whole house is sold."

The critic smiled knowingly.

"I don't doubt it," he replied as he jotted down another roast. "I heard several people in the audience say the same thing."

Sam Houston's Retort.

General Sam Houston was a master of stump speaking and bitter invective. Once while addressing a large audience he was interrupted and asked what he thought of a certain politician. Without hesitation he replied, "He has every characteristic of a dog except fidelity."

Sufficient Reason.

To Owners Of Bad Breath—

FOUL ODOR OF INDIGESTION, SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING STOPPED AT ONCE WITH STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odors which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 53 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FLOOD'S HEAVY DAMAGE

Will Cost $9,337,000—Conditions Better In Pittsburg.

Had to Fight Two Serious Fires as Well—Dynamite Fails to Check the Flames — Twenty-five Houses Destroyed—City In Darkness—Lighting Plant Put Out of Commission—Enormous Losses.

Pittsburg, March 16.—With the rapid receding of the waters in the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio rivers, conditions are fast assuming normal proportions and the greatest and most destructive flood in the history of the city is at an end. At nightfall the approaches to the bridges were clear of water and several hours later street car service was resumed.

Ten square miles were inundated. The loss in actual dollars probably will never be known, but an estimate thus far in Allegheny county may be summarized in the following tables:

Loss in output of steel mills	$3,000,000
Loss in output of other industries	2,000,000
Loss in wages of employes	1,837,000
Estimated damage to industrial plant	2,500,000
Total	$9,337,000

Four business houses and fifteen residences have been burned to the ground in the Mount Washington district across the Monongahela river. Two attempts were made to stop the flames by dynamiting adjacent buildings, but the wreckage caught fire. No water is available and the flames are being fought with chemicals and a bucket brigade. Several of the residences are tenements.

Water Caused Fire.

Fire yesterday destroyed the plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Co. in South 14th street, and slightly damaged the bolt works of the Oliver Iron and Steel Works adjoining. The loss to the Tin Plate firm was about $25,000 and to the Oliver Co. $1,000. The fire originated from a car of lime which was set on fire by the high water.

Entire Block In Flames.

Two alarms were sounded for a fire in the south side district of this city. The entire block on the north side of Carson street between 13th and 14th streets is burning. The immense Oliver steel plant is threatened. The fire burnt fiercely.

The fire practically burnt itself out at noon. Twenty-five business houses and dwellings were destroyed or badly damaged.

The loss from both fires will not exceed $225,000.

Conditions in Southern Ohio were worse yesterday. At Parkersburg, W. Va., the electric light plant was put out of commission, and the city is in darkness. Telegraph and telephone service is badly crippled.

The loss at Marietta, Ohio, will be enormous. Water has flooded the main street, and many residents have been forced to vacate their homes. The city was in darkness last night.

Much damage has been done in the oil fields, and there is considerable suffering in the surrounding country. Two men were drowned yesterday.

All danger has subsided in Maryland. The Potomac River has fallen about six feet.

Central American War.

Managua, March 16.—The Nicaraguan Government yesterday issued a decree recognizing the provisional Government of Honduras, and declaring its members to be allies of Nicaragua.

The last battle fought between the Nicaraguans and Hondurans was so decisively in favor of the former that Five Alienists Declare He Knew Nature of His Act.

Evelyn Thaw Again on the Stand—Tries to Keep Hummel Silent—Judge Fitzgerald Overrules Objections of Delmas—Says Mrs. Thaw Herself Broke Bond of Secrecy—Severe Cross-Examination.

New York, March 16.—With Delmas fighting him every inch of the way, District Attorney Jerome yesterday secured from Abraham Hummel his complete story as to the affidavit it is said Miss Evelyn Nesbit made in the lawyer's office in 1903, charging Harry K. Thaw with beating her when she had told him that the statement that Stanford White had harmed her was not true.

The Hummel testimony came during the afternoon session of the trial yesterday, and Mr. Delmas, first objecting broadly to all of Hummel's testimony, offered a specific objection to each question put by the prosecution.

Justice Fitzgerald overruled every objection and Mr. Delmas had exceptions to the rulings noted on the records.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw herself was called to the stand in the effort of the defence to keep Hummel silent. She declared she had called upon Hummel in his professional capacity and to seek his advice as a lawyer. Stanford White had taken her to the lawyer's office with that end in view.

Justice Fitzgerald declared that admitting the proposition of counsel and client, Mrs. Thaw herself had waived the professional privilege by taking the stand early in the case and giving her version of what transpired in Hummel's office. The bond of secrecy once broken could not be re-established.

Delmas Badgers Hummel.

Unsuccessful in blocking Hummel's testimony, Delmas, in cross-examining the witness, brought from his own lips the fact that he had been convicted in December, 1905, in the very court room which Thaw is being tried on a charge of conspiracy.

He further admitted that two indictments for subordination of perjury are pending against him, and that one of these indictments charges him with having caused a false affidavit to be made.

Jerome protested against the witness "being dragged through the humiliating details" of his trial, but Justice Fitzgerald declined to interfere.

Then Mr. Delmas asked Hummel if he had not heard the speech made by Jerome when sentence was about to be imposed; when Jerome urged the court to pass the longest and heaviest sentence within its power upon Hummel, as he "had been a menace to the community for twenty years."

Justice Fitzgerald sustained an objection to this, and Hummel was not compelled to answer.

Delmas wanted to know if Hummel had had any more recent business transactions with the district attorney and asked if Mr. Jerome was pressing the charges against him.

"He certainly is," said the witness with spirit.

Evelyn Signed Affidavit.

Hummel's testimony in brief was to the effect that he had dictated a statement to a stenographer in the presence of Miss Nesbit and Stanford White; that he gave the affidavit to two of his clerks to take to Miss Nesbit in the Madison Square Garden Tower and the paper was returned to him with Evelyn Nesbit's signature attached.

He kept the affidavit until Miss Nesbit called and demanded it. He refused to give it to her and turned it over to Stanford White advising him to have a photographic copy made.

Abraham Snydecker, one of Hummel's clerks, was called and said he took the affidavit to Mr. White's rooms in the Tower and handed it to a woman pointed out to him as Miss Nesbit. She kept the affidavit for five minutes and signed it, saying she had read it through.

Jerome completed his medical testimony yesterday, Delmas declining to cross-examine any of the experts.

Five alienists declared Thaw knew the nature and quality of his act and knew the act was wrong.

Jerome announced that when the matter of the admissibility of the Hummel affidavit was disposed of the prosecution would rest.

"The defence will not," said Delmas, and he further intimated that more experts will be called by him on surbuttal.

Adjournment was taken until Monday morning.

Fatal Fight In Mid-Air.

New York, March 16.—Thursday, while standing on a narrow scaffold on the third floor of the Edison Electric Light building, which is being erected at 39th street and First avenue, Frederick Thompson and John Thornton, both negroes, grappled and fought until they tripped and fell to the first floor. Both were probably fatally injured. Thompson is 29 years old, his back was broken and he was injured internally. Thornton's back also was broken and he received contussions of the head and a broken collar bone.

Two Negroes Lynched.

Monroe, La., March 16.—Flint Williams and Henry Gardner, two young negroes, were taken from the city jail about one o'clock yesterday and hanged by a party of about 50 men. Both negroes confessed to having with a third negro, shot and robbed two Italians on Monday night.

Gardner also confessed to having entered the room of Miss Jessie Bumpus about three o'clock Tuesday morning.

FIGHT FIRE AND FLOOD.

Eighteen Lives Lost Trying To Escape From Burning Houses.

Firemen Unable to Get Near--One Hundred Rescued in Boats--Leapt From Windows Into the Water--Pittsburg in Danger From Ice--500 Homes Surrounded With Water--One-Third of City Submerged.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 18.—Eighteen persons are known to have lost their lives in the fire that occurred at the plant of the Warwick Pottery Co., in the flooded district, yesterday.

Because of the water surrounding the burned district, it was impossible for the fire apparatus to reach the scene. The firemen pressed into service all the boats that could be secured and carried the lines of hose to the burning buildings by this means.

They did heroic work, and not only fought the fire, but assisted in rescuing many persons.

All the police that could be spared were rushed to the scene to assist in the work of rescue. The crew of a boat that was moored across the river from the building manned a yawl and rescued about 100 persons.

The men were offered all kinds of rewards for the work they had done, but they refused to accept them.

Screams for help from those in the buildings could be heard a mile north, where thousands of persons, unable to lend any assistance, watched the blaze.

Had the victims remained in their homes none of them would have met death.

No sooner had the explosion that started the fire occurred than people commenced leaping from the windows into the water. Five of them were drowned by the upsetting of a boat.

Cincinnati Losses Heavy.

Cincinnati, O., March 18.—A stage of sixty-one feet was reached by the flooded Ohio River last evening. Forecaster Bassler has placed the probable crest at sixty-three feet some time to-day. Losses cannot be given, although they are heavy and extensive.

Many thousands have been driven from their homes and the sufferings of the homeless and unemployed will last several days. The Cincinnati administration has asked for authority to issue bonds for $150,000 for the relief of flood sufferers.

The city suffered a loss of about $150,000 yesterday in the collapse of the Eighth street viaduct over the railroads of the Mill Creek quarter. Three fifty-foot spans went down.

500 Homes Surrounded.

Huntington, W. V., March 18.—The Ohio River reached its highest point yesterday afternoon with fifty-eight feet three inches. After remaining stationary two hours, it began to recede slowly. The stage exceeded by six-tenths of a foot the January flood.

Some five hundred homes in Huntington and Central City are surrounded with water. Cattlesburg, Ceredo and Porterville are flooded. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has not run a train into Huntington since Wednesday.

Boatrides In Main Street.

Portsmouth, Ohio, March 18.—One-third of the city is submerged. Thousands of people put in the day boatriding through the principal streets.

There have been no fatalities and subsequently little actual suffering. The railroads have been the chief sufferers, and dozens of floodbound passengers are quartered at hotels.

Ice Menaces Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, March 18.—With 80 miles of ice in the Allegheny River, above Parker, Pa., and a drizzling rain throughout Western Pennsylvania last night, local river men are looking forward to another flood stage in this city.

Preparations were being made here last night to prevent any serious damage when the ice gorge arrives here.

It is said that the damage sustained by the railroads will not be fully known for several weeks. Miles of track have been weakened and will have to be replaced. Hundreds of freight cars were swept into the river. The damage sustained by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad between Pittsburg and Connellsville, Pa., will be enormous.

Paralytic Cremated.

Victoria, B. C., March 18.—A pathetic tragedy is reported from the Dell Ranch, midway between Chemainus and Ladysmith, Mrs. Oslar, an octogenarian resident, being burned to death. The old lady, a paralytic, living with her son, was sitting by the open fire, sparks from which ignited her clothing. Unable to move, the unfortunate lady burned to death.

Explosion on a Destroyer.

Corfu, March 18.—The British destroyers Dragon, Boxer, Desperate and Foam went out at noon Saturday on a steam trial. At five o'clock a tube in the Dragon's boiler exploded, injuring severely Stokers Dawe, Parks and Brown, and slightly injuring Chief Stoker Gough and two men named Moyle and Wilton.

The Dragon was towed into harbor and the men were landed and taken to the military hospital.

Two Killed In Warship Crash.

Ajaccio, Corsica, March 18.—During the manoeuvres Saturday night without lights, the torpedo boat destroyer Epee rammed torpedo boat No. 263. A steampipe burst, killing two men and fatally injuring another.

Badly Scalded.

Brantford, March 18.—George Drury, engineer at the Goold-Shapley-Muir Co. Works, was badly scalded by the bursting of a steam pipe in the engine room. He is in a critical condition.

Kingston Prosecutor Named.

Kingston, March 18.—H. A. Stewart of Brockville has been appointed crown prosecutor for the assizes, which open here to-day.

ATLANTIC EXPRESS WRECKED.

Five Persons Severely Injured, Two Perhaps Fatally.

Durand, Mich., March 18.—The Atlantic express, on the Grand Trunk Railway, due here at 5.55 a. m., from Chicago, en route to Port Huron and the east, and running late, ran into an open switch at Bancroft, five miles from here, Saturday, and struck a freight train.

Five persons were severely injured, two of them perhaps fatally. Engineer A. F. Schram and Fireman Frank Cowan, both of Battle Creek, Mich., suffered broken limbs and severe scalds, and may die. I. F. Smith of Dowagiac and Mrs. D. Shook and Miss Ruth Shook of Lansing, her daughter, were severely scalded, but are not thought to be fatally hurt. A number of other passengers received minor injuries, but were able to proceed east on a later train.

Town Lot For Baby.

Saskatoon, Sask., March 18.—A baby boy was born at Aylesbury to an emigrant couple on the north-bound train that got here late Friday night. The mother was given the smoking department in the first-class coach. Services volunteered by lady passengers were availed of, but the couple refused the assistance of medical men. The parents and child are now comfortably located at the emigrant hall in this city.

The Reeve of Aylesbury has offered the father of the child a town lot if he would locate there, as the boy was the first male child born in that village.

The parents are from Russia, and came to Saskatchewan to settle. Passengers on board the train raised a purse of money for the infant.

Finds Husband Self-Slain.

Kaladar, March 18.—Returning to her home Saturday, Mrs. W. P. Berry found her husband's pipe, knife and tobacco, which he always carried, on the dining table, his watch and chain hanging on the wall, and his vest on the back of a chair. His oft-repeated threats to commit suicide recurred to her, and she got William Bongard to investigate.

He found Berry sitting in a room with a rifle in front of him, the muzzle placed at his throat. A bullet had torn through his head.

What Provinces Get.

Ottawa, March 18.—Under the provisions of the new act governing the granting of provincial subsidies by the Dominion, of which notice has been given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the increases to the various provinces, on the basis of the last census returns, will be as follows: Ontario, $789,485; Quebec, $599,866; Nova Scotia, $177,659; New Brunswick, $130,000; Manitoba $142,530; British Columbia, $215,000; Prince Edward Island, $65,345; Alberta, $48,329; Saskatchewan, $136,210.

Gas Kills Couple.

Philadelphia, March 18.—Lying side by side on a bed in their home here, Thomas Sherlow, 68 years of age, and his wife, Annie, 62 years old, were found dead Saturday. They had been asphyxiated.

A fox terrier lay dead beside them.

A deputy sheriff who had gone to the house to serve a summons for debt made the discovery.

Bites Blasting Cap; Killed.

Tucson, Arizona, March 18.—L. J. Walden, superintendent of the Purcell mines in the Socita mountains, was killed Saturday by the explosion of a blasting cap which he was crimping between the teeth.

TIMELY TOPICS.

By the way its going just now, you know,
We'll soon see the last of the beautiful snow.

And very few of us will shed any tears. By the time the mayflowers begin to bloom everybody has had about all the winter he wants in this country.

The man on the next block saw a sure-enough robin this morning. He was up at the top of a tall tree, singing in a minor key, and looked as though he were trying to get his toes in his pocket.

It is gratifying to note that, at last the Government is to arrange for a betterment of conditions at the local post office. For years and years people have complained of the awful state of affairs, and fully seven years ago this journal called attention to conditions, and asked if there were not some Liberals in this city who were large-minded enough to drop, for the nonce, their political prejudices, and, for the public good, use their influence with the Government to have matters bettered. But for many seasons, alas! the good seed fell on stony ground. Our friends the Grits refused to admit that there was anything the matter with conditions at the local post office; it was only a story concocted by the wicked Tories, they said, and deliberately winked the other eye.

But at last, glory be, the eyes of the Grits were opened; public opinion grew so demonstrative that it could not be ignored any longer, and the Board of Trade passed a couple of warm resolutions, while at the same time Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., brought the matter up in Parliament, and obtained information showing that the revenue from the local office was more than four times as much as was expended on it. Then the Government got busy, and began, no doubt, to look around and see how, without loss of prestige and dignity, it could better conditions in the Belleville post office. Just about this time, by a most strange coincidence, the West Hastings Reform Association woke up with a start and discovered that something needed to be done with the local office. They investigated conditions, and, no doubt on the advice of a Government inspector, drew up a list of improvements which they thought should be made. And the Government studied the list, and graciously sent word that the improvements would be made.

It never gets damp or lumpy. Each crystal dry, full of salt-life. That's why particular people use WINDSOR SALT. 140

At the next meeting of the West Hastings Reform Association it will, no doubt, be

"Moved by Mr. Henry Pringle, seconded by Mr. O'Flynn, that this association hereby expresses its heartfelt gratitude to The Intelligencer, for calling our attention so repeatedly to conditions in the local post office; to the Belleville Board of Trade for its strong resolutions and threat to send a deputation to interview the Government, and to Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., for bringing matters to the attention of the Postmaster-General from his seat in the House of Commons."

Carried unanimously — we don't think.

An Idaho man, with a reputation for lying, confessed to a murder, and the jury refused to believe him. This shows the value of a bad reputation.

A man in the States who lost both his legs in an accident didn't get as much in damages as he asked. But then he has no kick coming.

These nights the ladies dream of millinery parlors and beautiful hats, while the men have the same old housecleaning nightmare.

There will be, truly says the Montreal Gazette, general acquiescence in the course of the Legislature in voting a pension of $300 a year to Mrs. Maxwell, mother of the principal of the Hochelaga school, whose noble self-sacrifice has stirred the whole country. If special pensions are justifiable it is in such a case, where the grant is a recognition by the state of devotion to duty by one of its servants carried to the limit that marks the ultimate stake in man's capacity and regard for those who are dependent upon him.

The following story is told of Sir John A. Macdonald. He is said to have not quite reached his majority when he "hung out his shingle," in Kingston, as a full-fledged barrister and attorney. He was an alderman at 26, a member of Parliament at 29, a Cabinet Minister at 39, and Premier at 52. It is said of him that in Kingston he met John Shaw and asked him the best way to become popular. The reply he received was: "Join our lodge and run for alderman." Within two months John A. was an Orangeman and alderman.

Here is what the English press thinks of politics in Canada. The Pall Mall Gazette publishes an article alleging that the whole Canadian public life and no inconsiderable portion of the business life is permeated with corruption, and he says the man who himself is honest feels that he must be ready to cope with boodle at every turn. A large section of the population are incapable of being convinced that any man can be so foolish as to run for alderman or member of Parliament merely for his health. According as a member is successful and subservient he is rewarded with a collectorship, judgeship, or other Government plum. He winds up with, "There has never yet been a Federal Premier who has not been free from suspicion of personal enrichment."

There never was a period in the history of enactments providing for the punishment of infraction of liquor laws when the law was better enforced than at the present time. Mr. Whitney has stated that while the law was upon the Statute book, it should be enforced, and he is fulfilling that promise to the letter. Scarcely a day passes but there may be found in the newspapers, accounts of the punishment of those who violate the license law. Yet Grit temperance howlers are constantly attacking the Government upon some theoritical whim, forgetting the practical enforcement of the law.

In St. Thomas the other day, cases arising of the recent round-up of hotels in the local option districts of Elgin County, were prosecuted by the Crown Attorney, and Fred. Smith was fined $25, and $4 costs, and Mrs. Dew, $50, and $3 costs. The son of John Wilcox appeared on behalf of his father, who escaped from an officer and is now in Detroit, pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license, and keeping a disorderly house. He paid the fine of $200, and $10 costs. If Wilcox comes back to Canada he will be arrested on the charge of escaping from an officer and other charges.

A Galt hotel from which the license was removed about a year ago was raided by Chief of Police Gorman and Constables Taylor on the 9th of March and a considerable quantity of beer and other liquors found hidden in the kitchen were confiscated. The proprietors will appear in the police court on Wednesday.

A Bavarian wine dealer has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $2,500 for adulterating wine. It was proved that he manufactured 53,000 gallons of "wine" in one year by means of chemicals, not using a single drop of grape juice. This is another of the numerous similar cases in which it was proved that within seven years there were used 300 tons of glycerine, 120 tons of tartaric acid, 10 tons of potash, and 11 tons of citric acid in the making of "wine."

"No rain or snow can make us stay,
If we have tickets for the play;
But let one drop the walks besmirch,
And it's too wet to go to church."

Some "authorities" say St. Patrick was born in the north of England, others that he was born in Scotland, while Rev. J. Wild holds that he was the prophet Jeremiah. Perhaps that is one reason why Jerry is nearly as good an Irish name as Pat.

The gentle zephyrs of St. Patrick's day rather used up the Union Jack on top of the City Hall. The least the good saint can do is to furnish a new one.

An anonymous party has volunteered to provide Mrs. Maxwell, mother of the Hochelaga heroine, with an annuity of $500 for the rest of her life. The late Miss Maxwell was the sole support of her widowed mother. Everyone will agree that the gift is a noble one, and is but another evidence of the high appreciation which the Canadian people feel for deeds of heroism.

In the Thaw trial District Attorney Jerome put a hypothetical question of 13,000 words (about 13 columns) to expert alienists, and they answered the elongated query in less than fifteen. Another instance of brevity being the soul of wit.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST" TO-NIGHT.

"Shadows of the Past," Lincoln J. Carter's great success, will be seen at the Carman to-night. This play is founded on a point of old English law, which gives the right to a father of the sole guardianship of his child after it has reached the age of seven. There is a large opportunity for the display of strong dramatic action in this play, which is brought out very cleverly by an able and well balanced cast. Much pathos, sentiment, quaint comedy and keen satire runs through the story. The plot is a strong one, well conceived and cleverly unravelled. Many of the characters are taken from actual life. The scenic investure is said to be much out of the ordinary and harmonizes beautifully with the fine lines of the plot.

A FINE COMIC OPERA.

"Sergeant Kitty," the great comic opera, comes to the Carman on Wednesday night. The play tells in a rational way the story of a pretty, headstrong girl, Kitty, who is determined to be married to the man she loves despite the opposition of an eccentric old aunt. The elopement, the marriage by proxy, the pursuit by the aunt, the tricks played by Kitty upon the aunt, the complications which arise from the necessity of keeping the marriage a secret and the added troubles of another couple, who are also married secretly and the love-making and disappointment of a funny captain are the ingredients that go to make one of the most comic of all operas.

The Trent Canal

Ottawa, March 17. — Before the Government finally decides as to the northern outlet of the Trent Valley Canal, a survey will be made of a possible route from Nottawasaga Bay, at the southern end of Georgian Bay, to Lake Simcoe. This route, if found possible and not too costly, would prove considerably shorter than the Severn River route, recommended in the return laid on the table of the Commons last week, giving the report of Mr. E. J. Walsh, engineer in charge of the canal. A considerable sum has been placed in the supplementary estimates to provide for going ahead this year with the completion of the southern portion of the canal from Rice Lake to Trenton. A deputation from Northumberland county and adjacent districts will wait on Hon. Mr. Emmerson this week to ask that this canal be carried through to completion as soon as possible.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

Ireland's Progress.

Yesterday being St. Patrick's day, and the same having been celebrated with customary eclat all over the English-speaking world, it may be in order to note that Ireland has made wonderful progress during recent years. Her growth commercially and industrially and her elevation socially has been noted for its substantiality, and from the days of depression and hardship the island has risen into a sphere of perpetual happiness and contentedness. One has but to look at statistics of the past year to see this onward march, and in the bank statistics alone can the progress be best noted:

In 1900 deposits in the joint stock banks of Ireland amounted approximately to £48,000,000. On June 30, 1906, there was on deposit, in the banks of Ireland nearly £54,000,000, an increase of £6,000,000, or an average increase of £1,000,000 annually. During the same period loans have increased from £35,500,000 to £42,700,000, or in the sum of £6,200,000 and aggregate resources have gained £6,700,000, being now £78,800,000, against £66,100,000 in 1900. There are eight joint stock banks in Ireland, besides the Bank of Ireland, all with 627 branches throughout the country. Sixty-eight new branches have been established since June, 1900.

The assets of all the joint stock banks of England and Wales, including the Bank of England, were £851,000,000 in 1906, an increase of £79,400,000 in five years. Deposits have increased in the sum of £63,600,000; cash in the sum of £35,400,000, and loans by £25,600,000. While deposits in the joint stock banks of England and Wales have increased by 10 per cent. in the six years ending June 30, 1906, Irish bank deposits have increased in the same period by 12 1-2 per cent. The bank deposits in Scotland show a decrease of £2,600,000 since 1900.

There is a forward movement in the commercial life of Ireland, which promises to carry the island to a permanently higher plane.

Shadow Etiquette

"I saluted the Kaffir chief respectful and hearty," said the sailor. "Can you imagine my surprise when he gave me a kick?

"'Get off my shadder,' he says.

"'Wot?'

"'Get off my shadder.'

"I was standing, by chance, on his shadder, the shadder of his stomach. I skipped from there to the face. He groaned. When I got on to sunlit ground again, he says to me:

"'Didn't you never have no bringing up? Look at you now, lengthenin' out your shadow longer'n mine! Crouch, consarn you, or I'll warm your hide with this here club.'"

The sailor gave a loud laugh and emptied his glass of hot milk.

"Them Kaffirs," he said, "regards their shadderese as part of themselves. A polite Kaffir would no more walk on another's shadder than a polite American would hit a lady. They have a regular shadder etiquette. You mustn't on no account let your shadder be longer than a superior's; you must crouch to make it smaller; and that there crouch for the purpose of diminishing the shadder is thought by the Spencerian philosophers—I don't say I think so, mind—to be the origin of the bow."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

THE LATE MR. C. B. RECORD,

FOUNDER OF THE RECORD FOUNDRY.

Reproduced above, is a portrait of the late Mr. C. B. Record, the founder and original head of the Record Foundry & Machine Co., of Moncton, N.B., and Montreal, P.Q.

Previous to Mr. Record going into the manufacture of stoves, those used in Canada were almost wholly of American manufacture. The character of the work turned out by the Record Foundry & Machine Co., at once gave their stoves a standing, and as a result a very large business soon grew up, largely owing to Mr. Record's untiring industry and perseverance against many obstacles.

Although Mr. Record retired from active business as far back as 1879, the solid basis on which he had established the industry, has resulted in its growth from a sturdy pioneer into one of the largest stove manufacturing plants on the northern half of the American continent. With two large plants, one in Moncton and one in Montreal, the Record Foundry & Machine Co. are known from Halifax to Vancouver, and their "Calorific" and "Admiral" furnaces and "Penn Esther" ranges recognized as the standard of Canadian excellence.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

The Tabernacle.

At the above church yesterday morning Rev. Prof. Doxsee, of Albert College, preached an interesting and illuminating sermon on the 37th verse of the 37th Psalm:

"Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

It was generally supposed, the preacher said, that there had been no perfect man since Adam's fall, but evidently, judging by the Psalmist's words it was possible for a man to attain perfection. Probably the words of the text meant a man who lived up to his abilities and opportunities to work for his Maker. As such a man advanced in years and experience no doubt he would become even more useful. Speaking of the best way to attain a proper knowledge of spiritual things, the Rev. gentleman made use of an apt simile. Before a man started on a journey, he said, he would consult his railway time-tables, and be guided by them; before a man built a house he would go to an architect for his plans and adhere to them. So it should be with a Christian, who would take the Bible as his timetable and plan his life by that of the Saviour, who was strong enough to drive the money-changers out of the temple and yet gentle enough to gather the little children in his arms. A perfect man must be filled with humility, even as the Saviour, though He was the Lord and Master of His Disciples, yet washed their feet when they were disputing among themselves as to who was the greatest. So the perfect man, by following in the footsteps of the Saviour, would find peace and a light for his feet when his time came to pass through the valley of the shadow.

The choir, in good form, sang an anthem, "Come Unto Me," Mr. Jas. Dyer and Miss Helen Dyer taking the solos, and Mr. Ransom sang a solo, "Angels Ever Bright and Fair."

Holloway Street.

The pastor, Rev. R. H. Leitch, officiated at both services yesterday, and large congregations were present. In the morning, before the sermon, the right hand of Christian fellowship was extended to a number of those who of late had identified themselves with the church. These included some who had come to the city from the country and a number of young people who were brought into the church during the recent services. Rev. A. Martin assisted in this part of the service. The pastor's subject was "A Mother's Favorite."—and his text was from Hebrews, 12th chapter, 15th verse:

"Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled."

The discourse was in reference to the deception practiced by Jacob, through his mother's influence, whereby he received his father's blessing, which was intended for his brother Esau.

During the service a duet entitled "Peace, Sweet Peace, was rendered by Misses E. Price and McMurray.

St. Michael's.

At St. Michael's church last evening Rev. Father Twomey preached an instructive sermon to a large congregation. During the service Miss Jessie Phillips, in fine voice, sang most acceptably a solo, entitled, "Angels Ever Bright and Fair."

There is nothing which a chaste and refined woman detects so quick as the atmosphere of an impure man.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Kenora beat Brandon 8 to 6 on Saturday night, and it now looks like a sure thing that the former will meet Wanderers for the Stanley cup.

Scotland won the last football match of the Rugby international series at Blackheath, defeating England by 8 to 3. The record for the year is. Scotland, 3; Wales, 2; Ireland 1.

The international Association football match between Ireland and England resulted in a victory for the Emerald Isle by 1 goal to 0.

What must the reverend editor of The Globe think of this, which appears on the sporting page of his paper. "The amount of money absolutely lost by Toronto people in the New York stock market in two days of last week exceeded the entire amount that has changed hands at Woodbine since the latter place opened its gates. Further, the money sent to New York to protect margins is really lost. That which circulates at Woodbine only goes from one hand to another."

Two weeks ago the Oxford crew rowed a trial over the Putney to Mortlake course in 19 minutes 31 seconds. On Saturday they were nearly five lengths behind when Cambridge finished the same course in 20 minutes 26 seconds. There is a vast difference between a trial and an actual contest, even when the conditions are more nearly identical than it is possible to have them on two days on a tidal river. This was not the first, nor will it be the last, instance of "failure to race up to his work."

A Heartless Fraud.

Medicine Hat, March 17.— A most revolting deed was revealed yesterday, when J. J. Moore, a local undertaker, was placed under arrest, charged with the hideous crime of improper burial of the dead. The accused has the contract for burying the pauper dead from the General Hospital, and on Wednesday last, having two bodies turned over to him, placed them both in one coffin and interred them in that manner. One body was that of Dane, who committed suicide on Sunday last, and the other was that of Ernest R. Minns, of Toronto Junction, who had been employed by H. H. Foster on his "Seven Persons" ranch. When young Minns died on the 8th a telegram was sent to Mr. Foster, but as his ranch is twenty miles from the station he was unable to get into the city until Wednesday, arriving here about an hour after the interment had taken place. He immediately arranged with the undertaker to raise the body and place it in a better class of coffin than provided for in the hospital contract, and gave a check for $30 in payment. Interment was to take place on Friday. On arriving at the cemetery the party found that the body had already been transferred to the new grave. The case in which it had been placed, however, bore a rough appearance, and Mr. A. E. Whiffin, who was present, asked if there was an inner casket in the case. Moore is alleged to have answered in the affirmative, but his nervousness caused comment, and an investigation followed. Moore took the grave-digger to the cemetery, and on the coffin being raised and opened the latter was astonished to find that two bodies were packed in it, head to feet, with only a sheet over them. Not being aware of the enormity of the offence, the grave-digger said nothing about it in the city until refused remuneration for his loss in not having two graves to dig. He then told, and on Moore's establishment being visited the identical coffin which had been purchased was found to be still there. To endeavor to right matters Moore volunteered to take out a most expensive coffin and transfer the body to it. This he actually did, but Mr. Foster refused to compromise and Moore was arrested by Sergeant Pennyquick on two charges, being liable for disrespect to the dead and obtaining money under false pretences. He was released on $2,000 bail.

Abuses the Ladies.

London, March 17. — Father Vaughan's latest sermons have pitilessly lashed women for their sins and foibles. He cites dog worship as one of the evils of the hour, and asks, "Will not the practice of lavishing upon brutes love which should be bestowed upon a husband and child bring some horrible curse with it?"

"During the past week," said the priest, "as a woman was taking her pet dog to a dog party she began to talk to the little beast in her arms in French. When asked why she did so she answered:

"This darling little child of mine understands every word I say when I speak my native tongue, and I should not like him to grow vain like Bertha."

"Yet this woman, who was wearing on her hat a plume torn from a living bird of paradise, did not realize that she was making a disgusting exhibition of herself.

"While this degrading practice is on the increase the birth-rate is on the decrease, and infant mortality has already reached one-fourth of the total number of deaths.

"If drinking has decreased among men it has been made up for by the increase among women. Mental deficiency is growing among them. Now blindness and skin, bone and nervous diseases like locomotor ataxia are becoming more prevalent."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Mr. A. E. McKenzie has contributed $5,000 to the new building recently erected in Brandon, Manitoba.

Yesterday Rev. Mr. Laidlaw, speaking at the Y.M.C.A. on Friendship, observed that companions are not always friends. Companions frequently got a fellow into trouble! To esteem a person really as a friend was to establish a mutual love with such a one. Under all circumstances real friends will prove honorable to each other.

THE REAL CHINESE GONG

It Makes an Uproar as Awful as It Is Astonishing.

By the way, did you ever hear a real Chinese gong? I don't mean a hotel gong, but one of those great moon disks of yellow metal which have so terrible a power of utterance.

A gentleman in Bangor, north Wales, who had a private museum of south Pacific and Chinese curiosities, exhibited one to me. It was hanging amid Fiji spears beautifully barbed with sharks' teeth, which, together with grotesque New Zealand clubs of green stone and Sandwich Island paddles wrought with the baroque visages of the shark god, were depending from the walls; also there were Indian elephants in ivory, carrying balls in their carven bellies, each ball containing many other balls inside it.

The gong glimmered pale and huge and yellow, like the moon rising over a southern swamp. My friend tapped its ancient face with a muffled drumstick, and it commenced to sob like waves upon a low beach. He tapped it again, and it moaned like the wind in a mighty forest of pines. Again, and it commenced to roar, and with each tap the roar grew deeper and deeper till it seemed like thunder rolling over an abyss in the Cordilleras or the crashing of Thor's chariot wheels.

It was awful and astonishing as awful. I assure you I did not laugh at it at all. It impressed me as something terrible and mysterious. I vainly sought to understand how that thin disk of trembling metal could produce so frightful a vibration. He informed me that it was very expensive, being chiefly made of the most precious metals, silver and gold.—From "Life and Letters of Lafcadio Hearn."

BURNING IN EFFIGY.

A Custom Born of the Superstition of the Ancients.

The burning of people in effigy has come from a foolish superstition of the ancients, who believed that by burning a likeness of a person they were inflicting pain upon the individual himself. Theocritus tells us that the Greek sorcerers killed their enemies by magic rites performed over the effigy of the person who had offended them, and Virgil also makes mention of this.

In the days of witchcraft and persecution one of the most common charges against witches was that they made waxen images of their enemies which they melted before a fire and thus caused the dissolution of the originals.

The Japanese still regard the effigy as a means of punishment of faithless lovers, and in France to the time of the first revolution execution by effigy was a legal rite. In the Netherlands the same illogical custom prevailed, and the different religions burned the effigies of each other's leaders with zeal. In England the burning of effigies was also practiced, as it was later in America.

No doubt from the ancient custom of burning the effigy arose the idea of placing the wax figures of eminent men in Westminster abbey. In olden times upon the death of a celebrity a waxen figure representing him fully dressed as in life was made and carried in the rear of the funeral procession. After the service the effigy was set up in the church as a temporary monument, and during the time it was on exhibition it was customary to paste or pin pieces of paper containing complimentary epitaphs upon it. The royal figures in Westminster abbey date back to the fourteenth century.—New York Tribune.

Stanley the Explorer.

Although the fever of African exploration did not seize upon Henry M. Stanley until after he found Livingstone, when the example set by the latter fired the Welshman's ambitions, there can be little doubt that Stanley was a born explorer. Otherwise he would scarcely have been able to accomplish those arduous journeys which enabled him to fill up an enormous blank in the map of Africa. Stanley's discoveries were of the greatest political importance and led to the founding, among other things, of what is now the Kongo Free State. His ultimate discovery of Emin Pasha furnished a magnificent illustration of Stanley's indomitable courage and perseverance.—London Mail.

A Royal Slip.

Considerable amusement was once caused by a slip of Emperor Nicholas' pen in accepting the offers of several companies of Siberian militia who volunteered for service at the front. The petition read, "We humbly lay at your majesty's feet our desire to be permitted to fight and die for the fatherland." The emperor in accepting wrote on the margin of the petition in his own hand, "I thank you sincerely and hope your wishes may be fully realized."

The Wasted Witticism.

"I always thought," said the hostess, "that Scotchmen were humorous. Last night I showed a departing Scotch guest a great pile of overcoats in the dressing room.

"'Here,' I said, with a wave of my hand, 'you are the first to leave. Take your choice.'

"'Thank you,' said he as he fumbled searchingly among them, 'I'll 'ave me own.'"—New York Press.

A Legal Remedy.

Hostess — Were you seasick coming across, dear? Miss Pert—Oh, no! You see, papa was with us. Hostess—But what has that to do with your not being seasick? Miss Pert — Well, you know, papa is a judge, and he overruled the motion.—Boston Transcript.

KITCHEN WALLS.

An Economical Finish Which Is Easily Kept Clean.

A practical and inexpensive treatment for kitchen walls is to rub successive coats of oil mixed with varnish into the walls until they are a pretty light brown shade. The first coat makes them a light yellow; then each successive coat turns it a darker brown. This can be continued until the walls are a light chocolate in color.

The varnish added to the oil produces a surface which can be washed and even scrubbed, if necessary, and one that steam will not discolor. With this wall it is effective to paint the woodwork white—three coats of common white paint and then a finishing coat of white enamel. This makes a smooth, shining finish, which easily is kept clean with a cloth wrung out of skim milk. After this treatment it will appear as smooth and shining as when first put on.

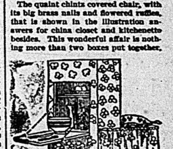
It is possible to make the walls any color one prefers by adding a little dry coloring matter to the oil and then stirring the varnish in afterward. Add the coloring matter with a light hand, trying the oil from time to time on a piece of board, so as not to make the coloring too pronounced. It is better to run the risk of not adding enough and so be obliged to add another coat than to apply one coat that is unpleasantly dark.

This treatment of the walls is far more satisfactory than using wall paper covered with a coat of shellac, so it can be wiped down with a damp cloth from time to time, or oilcloth, which also would admit of wiping down with a cloth wrung out of ammonia water. These last, not being a part of the walls themselves, afford an opportunity for the odor of cooking to linger longer than is pleasant, while they also afford a lurking place in which the insect fraternity may thrive. The day has passed when the rear of the house is relegated to the background, and today the housekeeper exhibits her spotless kitchen with pride.

AN ODD CHAIR.

This Practical Device Is Made of Two Chintz Covered Boxes.

The quaint chintz covered chair, with its big brass nails and flowered ruffles, that is shown in the illustration answers for china closet and kitchenette besides. This wonderful affair is nothing more than two boxes put together, one for the back and one for the seat. The bachelor girl opens a door like a writing desk in the back, and there is everything she wants, from dishes to vinegar and pepper and salt. If you are not too inquisitive she will tell you that another chintz covered affair in the corner with the fern sitting on it is an icebox.



AN INGENIOUS CHAIR.

Artistic? Well, rather. And very practical.

Antique Furniture.

So much antique furniture is in use at the present time that a few suggestions as to its care may not come amiss. Wipe each piece carefully with a damp chamois skin, rinsing out the chamois frequently to remove every particle of dust, and give particular attention to the carvings. These may be gently brushed with a soft brush, such as is used in burnishing silver, dipped in lukewarm water in which a little soap has been dissolved. After drying the wood carefully rub in a little linseed oil and polish with a soft cloth. This treatment applies only to mahogany and oak furniture. A very good dressing for black walnut and ebony is made from half a wineglassful each of olive oil and vinegar and a spoonful of alcohol. Linseed oil with a little turpentine added is also a very satisfactory dressing. If there is much carving on the furniture the wood may be cleansed with paraffin before polishing.

Thread.

Many sewers err in using too coarse cotton both on the machine and in hand sewing, and sometimes it is so coarse that the cloth will tear away from it. The thread should be chosen with regard to the thread or fabric of the goods and the object of the work. For buttonholes and sewing on buttons a coarse thread is needed; for gatherings, medium coarse; for stitching on the machine, fine, and for hand hemming, finer still. Many sewers will find that No. 80 will be better where they have been using No. 60. Keep the workbasket always well supplied with all commonly used numbers of cotton and plenty of needles of all sizes, different darning needles, millinery and glove needles.

Floor Borders.

To make a floor border for a rug that is laid on bare boards take old newspapers and paste down one by one until the floor is covered. Let them dry, then paste down another layer. When again dry put on a layer of good wainscoting and paste well all round. When dry go over with a good coat of varnish, and you will have a nice warm covering for your floor and one that looks as well as floor linoleum. This is a cheap method, and it wears well. When required to be cleaned wipe off with a damp cloth.

OUT FOR TROUT.

(New York Sun.)

'Tis now adown the gurgling stream
The trouter creeps along,
With every burden of his heart
Lost in the brooklet's song.
The world with all its misery
He leaves far in the rear;
His home and friends forgotten are
At this time every year.

The swash against his rubber boots
Gives every nerve a thrill;
A wet foot on a day like this
Will never cause a chill.
What though he slips and sits him down
Where stones are green with slime?
He's after trout and naught shall mar
His joyous outing time.

What though he meets a farmer bold
With gun and old dog Tray?
He pulls a "fiver" from his purse
And wends his happy way.
There's naught can swerve him from the thing
He thinks so very fine:
There's music in the reel for him,
And joy in tug of line.

Who wouldn't be a fisherman
With all the joy it brings,
And spend a day, all free from care
Out where the brooklet sings?
Who wouldn't whip the streams all day
With tackle new and light—
And have no plaguey fish to dress
When he gets home at night!

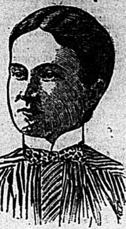
WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. ANNA C. FALL

One of the Cleverest of Boston's Women Lawyers.

Mrs. Anna C. Fall of Malden is one of the cleverest of Boston's bright coterie of women lawyers. Mrs. Fall, indeed, was among the very first women to practice law in Boston. She graduated from the Boston university law school in 1891 and tried her first case in November of that year, it being the first jury case tried by a woman in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Fall is the author of a pathetic little story, "The Tragedy of a Widow's Third," which proved a strong argument in favor of [illegible] the widow's share of her husband's property when the matter was being agitated in the legislature some years ago.



MRS. ANNA C. FALL.

For nine years this bright little woman was a member of the Malden school board, where her influence was very valuable.

So successful has Mrs. Fall been in her chosen occupation that her daughter is following in her footsteps and is a student at the Boston university law school.—Boston Traveler.

Care of the Piano.

A piano should be tuned at regular intervals, preferably after the beginning of each season. It becomes out of tune as much by change of temperature as by use.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the selection of a tuner, as an incompetent tuner can do great damage and will usually magnify a slight trouble in order to justify a high price. It is best never to engage an unknown tuner, or if he is engaged be careful to examine his references and be satisfied that he is reliable and experienced.

The jingling or singing sound at times noticeable when the piano is played frequently is due to what is called "sympathetic vibration." This is produced by an ordinary article in the room vibrating in sympathy with some particular note in the piano. To ascertain the cause of this vibration the key which seems to produce the difficulty should be struck by one person and another should go about the room listening carefully, and thus the article which vibrates can be discovered and the cause removed.

Any hard substance, no matter how small, when dropped inside of a piano will cause a rattle or jarring noise.

If a pedal should squeak remove the bottom panel of the piano and apply a little black lead, powdered from a pencil, at the part where friction exists.

Cleaning the case may be accomplished by wetting a piece of canton flannel and dropping upon it a few drops of ordinary olive oil. Rub a small portion of the piano at a time, wiping it off thoroughly with a dry piece of canton flannel. Afterward rub with a soft, clean chamois skin or another piece of clean canton flannel, always taking care to rub with the grain of the wood and occasionally to breathe on it in order to remove every particle of oily substance.

Sanitation In the Country House.

The general problem of good water and safe sewage appeals to every owner of a country house. The best soil for these purposes is a sandy one, and wherever a rocky or clayey soil gives possibility of a fissure which might connect water and drainage expert examination should be called in. The individual plant for sewage disposal may often be a well and a cesspool, the cesspool, once a bogy to sanitarians, being now justified by the septic tank and the sand filter, both of which principles are employed in its construction. Two points must be recognized here: Such a covering of the well that the grave danger of surface pollution may be avoided, for it is most essential that no pollution should be washed through covering boards; also the direction of drainage, which is generally toward the nearest water course, must be such that the water supply may not be below the point of sewage disposal. With these simple precautions of soil, covering of well and proper location of water and drainage, the isolated country house owner may feel secure.—Hollis Godfrey in Atlantic.

The Linen Closet.

The woman who can set a whole closet aside for her linens and can have that closet shelved to her fancy is a fortunate individual indeed, for there's never a woman living who doesn't like linens kept just so.

Each kind should have its separate shelf, which should be covered with clean white paper, or, better still, with the pads made of dimity or of cheesecloth lined with perfumed wadding. Lavender is the most pleasant perfume to use for linens, especially the lavender flowers, sprinkled thickly in the padding and perhaps sewed up in little flat bags as well, which are laid here and there among pillow cases and sheets. No other perfume has quite so clean and fresh a quality about it for the purpose. Sheets and pillow cases alike should be marked with indelible ink (unless you prefer to embroider everything), giving each set some distinguishing mark, so that they are kept together and meet the same amount of wear and tear. A change for each bed is the usual allowance.

Refurbished Bedstead.

One might term a bedstead recently evolved by an ingenious housewife a hybrid, yet it might be said in its favor that it combines the advantages of appearance of the mahogany four poster with the hygienic merits of the metal bed. This is accomplished by using the four posts of the mahogany bed with the springs and frame of the metal bed. A dimity tester and valance with a colonial spread entirely concealed the metal portion in the daytime, and its possessor says she prefers it to the entire mahogany bed. In explanation it might be said that the mahogany bedstead used was bought for a song at a sale, as the only good thing about it was the four fine posts.

How to Dry the Hair.

Some children catch cold very easily after having their hair washed. In order to dry it quickly and prevent this use for the final rinsing quite hot water in which a few drops of alcohol have been added. Then rub the hair well with alcohol and wring it out as dry as possible. Next take two or three towels, divide the hair and wipe each strand separately. Let the child sit in a warm room or, if possible, in the sun. Fan the hair and wipe each strand separately, and it soon will be perfectly dry.

Kitchen Rugs.

Very neat and serviceable rugs for use in the kitchen can be made from old trousers legs and heavy dress materials which are past redemption as wearing apparel. Wash the material and cut it in strips about two inches wide. Sew the strips together, making three lengths, which braid together tightly. Make the center of the rug of a heavy piece of material or a scrap of carpet, cut oval or round, and sew the braided strip round and round until the rug is the desired size.

Effective Table Square.

A very effective table square was made at small cost from unbleached linen toweling twenty inches wide. Two lengths of linen were used and a line of heavy linen lace insertion was used to join the pieces. Narrow linen lace to match edged the square, and small round medallions of lace were let in at eight corners of the cloth.

A Test of Housekeeping.

As good a test of the right sort of housekeeper as the old time one of looking in corners and under beds for dust is that of passing a cloth over the tops of doors and windows. Your true housewife will look to it that they are dusted as regularly as the furniture is and every sweeping day will see them wiped off with a damp rag.

Plaiting a Skirt.

Plaits that are to be stitched only a certain number of inches from the waist line should be graduated from the front to the back and the depth of the plaits marked by a colored thread. The plaits, however, should be basted to the foot of the skirt and pressed carefully their entire length.

Household Safes.

The fashion of small safes concealed in unlikely places is such a popular one that any piece of furniture may now be used to baffle burglars. The latest is a linen chest, a substantial thing of oak or cedar, which contrives to hide a safe. The safe is fire as well as burglar proof.

Pressing Sleeve Seams.

For pressing the seams of a sleeve procure a three-quarter round, short length of lumber. Pad it and cover with a piece of white ironing cloth. This furnishes a firm base for the pressing, which is utterly lacking in the customary broom handle.

Sofa Pillows.

The best sofa pillows are covered with waxed cotton. This is done by ironing the inside of the cover with a hot flatiron rubbed on a cloth well saturated with beeswax. When treated in this way it is impossible for small, elusive downs to work through.

Furniture Polish.

This is an excellent furniture polish where a bright surface is desired: Half a pint of alcohol, half an ounce each of rosin and shellac powdered. Mix these with the alcohol, then add half a pint of linseed oil. Shake thoroughly before using.

One should never tamper with moles. It is unsafe and sometimes is followed by serious consequences. If any treatment is necessary go to a reliable physician for it.

A teaspoonful of vinegar put into an oil lamp or stove that smells or smokes will cause it to burn with a clear light and prevent smoking.

To give the house a pleasant odor take some live coals and sprinkle ground cinnamon on them.

When buying table linen buy the best quality the purse will allow.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"You will not I am sure do anything so rash as refuse. You cannot know that it is Don Q.'s shadow which lies across your face. Corpse of a scullion! Do not keep me waiting! My patience has its limits. I have ripped up a man for less."

Sunrise saw the governor woe-begone and chilled, bound on a pony with rough paces, mounting higher and ever higher into those sierra he had hitherto beheld only in terrified visions of the night.

This was Friday—what had happened? It was the day on which Don Q. had promised in his letter to deliver Dona Rosita. What was going to become of him, Felipe?

They encamped in the gorge of the Torrent, a remote and lonely spot, seldom trodden by the foot of man.

Soon a sibilant voice called from the choza.

"Bring the prisoner here, Robledo."

"You are Don Felipe Majada?"

The fat captive quaked and bowed.

"I have received some complaints of your conduct toward a lady," went on Don Q. politely. "I trust you will find yourself able to demolish these accusations."

Don Felipe feebly shook his head.

"It pains me greatly," resumed the brigand, "to be obliged to touch on so delicate a subject, but I am given to understand that you have pestered a lady with your attentions. I trust for your own sake that gossip rather than truth lies at the root of these reports?"

"They are false, senor," gasped Don Felipe in an agony of apprehension. "I swear they are false!"

"Then how can you explain this?" demanded Don Q. handing him the letter that he and Dona Rosita had concocted together only four days earlier.

Majada read it, wagging his head and grimacing in sheer terror as he strove to speak.

"It is all false. She loves me!" he blurted at last.

"And the wine?" questioned Don Q. "Bring here a bottle, Robledo."

It was laid at his feet.

"Do you recognize this bottle?"

"No, no!" Majada almost screamed.

"Then will you gratify me by taking a glass with me. You appear overcome. A glass of good wine is a restorative." Don Q. urged with suave gravity. "Come, let us drink to our happy meeting."

"It is impossible! Hearken to me, senor. Have mercy on me!" and there on his knees with his hands stretched for mercy Don Felipe gave his rendering—the ancient rendering of Adam—of all that had passed between himself and Dona Rosita.

A long and heavy silence fell upon the group. Don Felipe exhausted by his efforts found himself crying dumbly. At last Don Q. spoke.

"This lady loves you?"

"She adores me! She would marry me in spite of myself," mumbled the other.

"How fortunate . . . for you."

"What do you mean?"

"That I am about to send for her, Don Felipe. If she loves you, she will come."

"It is impossible. My servants have her in charge."

"Take a pen and write to your major domo, or whoever happens to be in command at the Casa de Segil, ordering that the Senorita de Rivero be allowed to accompany the bearer of your letter. No more."

"I repeat," stammered Majada, "that it is impossible."

"How unlucky for you!"

"You are chivalrous—she is a woman," pleaded Don Felipe.

"Senor," said Don Q., in his softest manner, "write the letter; and if you have any influence with Dona Rosita, as you say you have, use it to bring her here."

Resistance was hopeless. Majada's shaking hand produced the words.

"You have finished?" demanded the chief gently.

"Yes," puffed Don Felipe.

"Then add this postscript. If she loves you it will cause her to fly to your side." The exquisite courtesy of the brigand's manner only deepened with each sentence. "Write, senor: 'Don Q. desires me to add that if you are not here by 8 o'clock I shall be buried at a quarter past.'"

"Senor," protested Majada miserably, "this—is—"

"The truth—no more."

"When she comes, we will have a talk and apportion the guilt," returned the chief agreeably. "She is an important witness. Now, senor, you know the course that events will take. Let us dismiss all thoughts of the future; the future will take care of itself. In the meantime the air of our mountains is excellent. I have packets of tobacco from Havana, also excellent; and most excellent of all, some wine of the doradillo grape. I foresee that we may sing a song together, and gossip of the old romances. You shall tell me of the life from which I have divorced myself, and I will relate to you how many of your old acquaintances came to me in the mountains, and—how some of them left me."

But not even this program appealed to Don Felipe Majada. He drank wine, but more and more he steeped himself in the gloom of terror. Talk he could not, and the chief presently excused himself, saying he would indulge in a siesta. But no sleep came to the tired eyes of the governor. What would be the result of Rosita's arrival? How much would she betray?

Soon the slight bustle of some arrival on the little plateau under the ilex trees reached Don Q.'s ears. He waited but a moment before be called to Robledo. The young bandit, handsome, panting, travel-worn, appeared at the opening of the choza.

"You have done my bidding?"

"The lady is here, lord."

"Good." The chief pondered a short time, and gave some orders before he commanded that Don Felipe Madaja and the lady should be brought before him.

Dona Rosita had never looked more handsome.

Don Q. rose and bowed before her, sweeping his sombrero to the ground.

"I crave your pardon, fairest senorita," began the chief with sibilant fluency. "I am to blame. This loveborn gallant implored me not to put you to so much inconvenience for his sake. But a certain story he has told me requires to be investigated. Without your delightful presence I could do nothing. The sight of your beauty has refreshed my dim eyes, your amiability my poor heart." Again the sobrero swept the dusty floor.

"What would you know of me? Ask your questions and let me be gone. Give me my liberty, senor."

"But certainly. It will be my happiness to secure the liberty of the lovely Dona Rosita. Condescend to hear me."

Don Q. recited the story of the plot as it had been told him by Majada.

The lady did not speak for a long moment, she pierced the unhappy governor with a silent gaze.

"Grant me a moment, senor," she implored, "out of the hearing of all these ears," she waved a contemptuous fan at the guards who had accompanied her. "Let me enter the choza and tell you all the truth."

Don Q. signified his acquiescence, and bade his men draw off.

"Order this traitor to come, too. Dona Rosita touched Majada on the shoulder. "He shall be forced to tell the truth."

"So," she cried, "this false man has dared to say many things to prejudice me in your eyes? He would save himself by throwing the guilt upon me! O, noble cabeliero! O, chivalrous gentleman! I thank you!" She turned to spurn Majada.

"O, Rosita, Rosita!" moaned the governor.

"I hate you! You have torn me from my home. You would force me to marry you!—Lord of the sierra!"—she turned to Don Q. with a magnificent movement—"what is such a traitor worthy of?"

"It is indeed a most shameful affair, senorita. Shall I punish him? Pray command me," replied the brigand with an air of respectful sympathy.

"No!—I will deal with him myself." Then springing to the side of Don Q. she added passionately: "Give me your knife, senor—and I will show you how we Spanish women deal with such a one!"

Don Felipe cowered, his hands over his blanched face, as the chief handed the weapon to Rosita. She took it and faced Majada.

"Felipe," she said, with a sudden break into a caressing tone, "Felipe, look up and listen to me."

The governor, struck by the change in her voice, peered up at her, his hand only half withdrawn from his face.

"Felipe, you swore to marry me in seven days if—something happened. Is that not so?"

"If," repeated the man, sulkily, "What's the good of talking of it now?"

"Because it is going to happen! Help me, Felipe, help me!"

Lithe as a wild creature, she flung herself round upon Don Q. as she spoke, stabbing viciously at him with the knife. The chief flung up his arms and his dark cloak swirled about his head like the flapping of huge wings; but she pressed upon him, driving her knife deep as the folds of the cloak closed and settled in a heap upon Don Q.'s falling body.

Terrified by success, Rosita stood spellbound, gazing at the motionless and shapeless heap of black clothing, under which lay the body of the famous brigand. At last she drew a long breath.

"I have won! I have defeated even Don Q! There he lies, your unconquered thief, killed and out-maneuvered by a woman! You allowed my first plot to fail—I don't know how—but my second has mastered him."

But Majada only moaned.

"You coward! You thought all was lost before, but I would not yield! As soon as I saw the wretch's weakly body, his thin wrists, his pallor, the idea of this trick darted into my mind. I told myself I could not fail! I have won in spite of his subtlety and power. Felipe, you will remain governor, and I shall be your wife! Are you not happy now?"

But Majada made no response, he only gaped at her as she stood over him flushed and splendid in a storm of triumph. Suddenly an odd expression crossed his face, his mouth fell open blankly, and, before she could comprehend what this meant, her wrists were seized from behind. She wrenched her hands towards her breast to free them, and looked back over her shoulder into the face of Don Q.!

"Help, help, Felipe!" this time the cry was an agonized appeal. But Majada stood heavily apart.

A shrill whistle from the chief brought his men up. He charged them to strictly bind both prisoners.

"You have condemned yourself, senorita," Don Q. said. "Had I not been on my guard—" he stooped and raised his hat from the ground, the knife transfixed through crown and brim.

She shrugged her shoulders and laughed bitterly: "I had hoped it was your heart!"

"It would seem that you and Don Felipe have been partners in a conspiracy against my life," pursued the chief. "Down in the plains you permitted yourselves to compass my death. I am able to inform you that the soldiers still wait my coming in the gardens of Segil."

Dona Rosita's eyes flashed.

"I should have retrieved that disaster, if the blood running in this creature's veins were not milk," she pointed at Majada. "Now do as you like with us."

"What does Don Felipe deserve at my hands?" asked Don Q.

"Spare me, spare me!" cried Don Felipe, given over to fresh apprehensions.

Don Q. held up his hand for silence.

"You deserve to die." He paused, "but this lady loves you."

"No! He is a coward. I would kill him rather than marry him!" Rosita cried hotly.

"Lady, you have courage enough for two; thus, when you and this poltroon are made one that will be no hindrance. To become his wife has been your desire. You deserve punishment as certainly as he."

"But I have heard you never hurt a woman," she protested.

"True. But when I can give them their heart's desire, which occasionally serves my purpose equally well." He turned to Robledo. "Bring hither the good father.

"I will not submit! I will not be the wife of Don Felipe!" she exclaimed.

"Will you permit me to kill him instead?" inquired the chief sadly.

She turned away from her fellow-captive with a cold aloofness.

"I pray you to do so."

Don Q. considered her for a long moment.

"You have shared his guilt; you must, therefore, share his punishment," he said. "Choose, and remember in choosing for him you choose for yourself."

She met his eyes; a red spark seemed to glow under the drooping lids. The fiery spirit died within her. This terrible man was capable of anything. She shrank back with a gesture of compliance.

An hour later the couple were about to start for the lower passes. As they mounted Don Felipe approached the chief.

"You have forced me to marry a tigress!" he complained.

Don Q. was once more the amiable gentleman.

"But a beautiful tigress," he amended. "Pray accept my warm congratulations. I cannot answer for her qualities as a wife, but I am very sure the Senora Majada will make a very charming widow."

A KING OF FINANCE.

Time went on for a long period in the mountains as serenely as of old. The executive had deprived Majada of his appointment, but otherwise the matter of dealing with Don Q. fell once more into abeyance.

Thus the usual series of captives continued to appear in the Boca de Lobo, but although most of them were satisfactory from a financial point of view, it chanced that not one presented any qualities of interest in the eyes of Don Q., until a certain Mr. George McCorkadale—whose fame was emblazoned in the bourses of the two hemispheres—blundered into the widecase net of the robber chief.

Though a naturalized Englishman, he had been born and bred in Cuba. He early crossed to Brazil for larger facilities of trade; later New York and London knew him well. There was, in fact, nothing Scottish about him but his name and his extraordinary business instinct. He was one of the few who, starting well equipped in life with a large banking account and an excellent share in a profitable business, have refused to sink back upon the couch of ease offered to them by circumstances. Born rich, at 20 he was hard at work, and at 35—the age at which he visited Spain—he had contrived to roll the ball of his fortunes through so much of the mud of the world's wealth that he was become one of the money kings of the day.

Already inclined to fleshiness, and over-swarthy, he yet possessed in a pronounced degree the type of good looks characteristic of the Spanish colonies. It was commonly reported that he had never met his match at a bargain or as a prophet of the weather changes of the financial world. But his most salient quality was said to be the capaciousness of his maw. Those who knew him best declared that if he had gathered all the wealth of the universe into his pocket, with the exception of a single dollar note, he would know no rest until he had somehow acquired that last dollar also. Under other conditions of life, or lacking some share of his preponderant cold greed, he could be conceived a gambler. In fact, he was a gambler, but with accurate knowledge, power and pull on his side—a peril to his generation of the most modern kind.

Such was the man who in an interval, in a lull in his electric career, chose to go motoring in Spain. He told one or two friends that he was feeling the strain of business, and then slipped quietly away to join his yacht at Vigo. As a matter of fact, he was in the position of a hunter who has set a snare and waits out of sight for his quarry to fall into it. He had engineered with skill and consummate completeness a corner in that human necessity, corn. Never before had he held so strong a hand in the destinies of the world. To be absent while his enormous transactions worked out to their appointed issue was a part of his scheme. He foresaw a possible amount of embarrassment when those most concerned saw his net closing over them. He resolved to go away for a holiday and leave time to play his hand for him. So, having forced even time to his own uses, he disappeared to await the moment when he must return for his final coup and victory.

At the pasoda in the village, one night a spoken name roused him from his moodiness. The talk had veered about to a subject that under the sierra possessed a perennial interest—the doings past or possible of Don Q.

"I have heard many stories of this fellow," McCorkadale joined in, with the half-contemptuous manner peculiar to him. "Tell me his last exploit."

The innkeeper, a thin, dark, wiry mountaineer glanced furtively round at the men gathered in the room and shook his head.

The Cuban smiled unpleasantly.

"You have the nerves, patron," he said. "You look as if you knew too much! Every one warns me of the vulture of the sierra, yet you, who live under the shadow of his beak, know nothing of him."

"Not so, excellency," exclaimed the man. "The lord of the sierra dwells up there in truth"—he waved his hand toward the north—"but poor folk like ourselves speak little of him."

To be continued.

When Bunny Was Bumped.

By LESLIE TRAIN.

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells.

Bunny Travers was not a bad fellow. On the contrary, everybody liked him, and everybody said it was too bad that he had money and had spent six months in London to learn the ways of an ass. One day when the subject of the up to date girl was on the carpet Bunny listened for awhile with a bored air and then observed:

"It's all theory. She cawn't be found, ye knaw. They are the same old languishing lot, just a lot of gurls, with their giggle and twaddle and waiting for a proposal. As I may have remarked before, they bore me—bore me dweadfully. Weally, I think I shall have to cut the whole lot of them."

Among those who regarded Bunny as an asinine good fellow was Burt Galbraith, the young partner in a downtown brokerage firm. He had a wife and a home on the north shore of Long Island, and his sister Nettie lived with them. As he listened to Bunny's observations a smile hovered around his mouth, and that night when he got home he said to the sister:

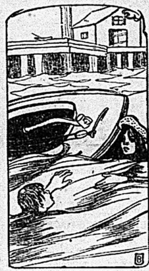
"Say, Net, we've got a feller in the Clipper club that needs bumping, and he needs it bad. I am going to invite him down to stay for a week."

"What for?" was asked.

"So that you can bump him. He doesn't believe there's an up to date girl in America."

Bunny balked a little when invited down to the island home. He was at last prevailed upon, however, and one Monday afternoon he was safely landed at Ravensrest. Half an hour later Miss Nettie was dressed for a spin in her brother's auto and informed the visitor that a twenty mile ride was on the cards. If it would bore him, why"—

"Not in the least, me deah gurl. I rawther fawncy the thing, doncher knaw, or think I should if there was any speed in it. If you can assure me of twenty miles an hour I shall be positively chawmed."



"HANG ON HERE, AND WE SHALL BE BLOWN ASHORE."

He was quietly assured, and after the machine got well started he found the assurance well founded. Bunny began to get nervous after the speed exceeded fifteen miles an hour, but he managed to restrain himself until it had reached twenty-five. Then his hat blew off, his hair stood up, and there was a quiver to his voice as he turned to the girl and said:

"Oh, now, I thought we came out to see the landscape, doncher knaw."

Farmers began to yell, dogs to bark and drivers of teams to draw out to the fences as the speed was raised to thirty miles an hour, and Bunny Travers confessed to himself that for the first time in two years he wasn't bored. The pace went to thirty-five and then to forty, and he finally judged that it had gone to a hundred and the auto was flying above the trees. Then it slackened as they entered a village, and the girl steered the machine up one street and down another and finally halted before the office of a justice of the peace. A benign looking old gentleman came out, and the girl handed him $5.

"Now, then, what's all this?" asked Bunny as Miss Nettie was turning the machine about.

"Oh, whenever I exceed the speed limit I stop and pay a fine. They don't have to arrest me and have witnesses and a trial. Saves time and carries out the letter of the law, you know. Little invention of my own, and I am thinking of taking out a patent. I'll try for a mile a minute going back."

Bunny groaned. To his utter amazement, he was not in the least bored. On the contrary, he was anxious to suggest that Miss Nettie accept a check for $1,000 for the benefit of charity and allow him to walk home. Before he could state the case, however, the machine was under way. When they reached home the girl found a bundle of clothes in the seat beside her. After awhile Bunny Travers emerged from the bundle and said that he was a changed man.

An hour after breakfast next morning when Bunny had finished his cigar his entertainer asked him if he wouldn't like to have a bout with the foils. He smiled incredulously, but she asked him to follow her to the billiard room and there produced a pair of foils. Here was his opportunity to get even with her for the scare of the day before. He would disarm her three or four times and wound her vanity. It was Bunny, however, who was pinked and disarmed and driven all around the room and made to look like 30 cents. The afternoon was rainy, and Miss Nettie proposed billiards and pool. Bunny began by giving her twenty on billiards and four balls on pool and in the course of three hours found that she could give him all that and then win every game.

Next morning he got up to wonder what was coming. He soon found out. There was a cracking good sailing breeze, and the whitecaps were running on the sound. When Miss Nettie proposed a sail in her catboat, Bunny looked at those whitecaps for a long minute, and shivers ran up his back. He followed her down to the boat landing, however, and did his best to appear indifferent. The girl hoisted the sail, took a reef in it and then shipped the tiller, and the visitor was asked to sit amidships and trim the craft. When half a mile out and just after the fifth barrel of spray had struck him in the back, he said something about having an important engagement in the city, but the boat did not cease to bounce nor the spray to fly for nearly an hour later. Miss Nettie was also sopping wet and her hair flying, but she was bumping Bunny. On approaching the landing she rounded into the wind, held fast to the sheet and yelled out as the boat turned turtle. She was alongside of him as he came up, sputtering and gasping, and as she reached out a hand and drew him to the overturned boat she said:

"Hang on here, and we shall be blown ashore. We might as well have a bath while we are about it. Hope you are enjoying yourself."

When Bunny went to his room for the night he was almost ready to admit that he was wrong in arguing that there were no up to date girls. The next morning something happened to please him. He was invited to take a morning gallop in company with the young lady, and he saw his way clear to pay off old scores. He was given the best mount, but the gallop had not covered a hundred rods when it was evident that horse and man were not agreed. At the first fence to be jumped the horse remained on one side and Bunny on the other, while the girl disappeared in the distance and didn't seem to miss her cavalier for a full hour. Bunny's excuse was that he lifted his horse too soon for the jump and that there was something wrong with the climate of the United States.

Next day the visitor and Miss Nettie went buggy riding. Bunny took the reins with a determination to show off. He was showing when Miss Nettie took the reins away and brought the runaway animal down to his paces. There was one more bump in store for the young man. Next day, after wrestling for an hour with his palpitating heart, he made a proposal in due form. Miss Nettie realized what was coming and was prepared for it. She simply handed him an advertisement she had written and proposed to insert in the leading papers. It read:

"An up to date girl wishes to adopt an orphan boy and be a mother to him. Will teach him how to climb trees, stand on his head and turn back handsprings. All new ideas taught as soon as they appear. A positive guarantee given not to bore him. A cure for languidness and the London complaint kept constantly on hand. Address in confidence."

That was another bump for Bunny, but he took it like a little man. Instead of returning to his old ways and his old life, he went over to Oldfields and bought the right to plant oysters, and he has displayed such energy and ambition during the past year that Burt Galbraith looks at him across the club dinner table and mutters to himself:

"I wonder why in thunder Net does not name the day. I know they love each other and are as good as engaged."

A Progressive Age.

Pierre de Campe, who was calcimining the Bradly kitchen, was so excessively slow that his discouraged employers began to fear that the deliberate Frenchman meant to end his days under their roof.

"Do you think," asked Mrs. Bradly desperately, "that you'll be done by 5 o'clock, so we can cook dinner?"

"Madame," replied Pierre, pausing to gesticulate with his brush, "maybe you have hear som' peop' say dat dis ees de age of progress. Oui, madame, eet ees de age of too moch progress. Evairew'ere hon dose states of America dere ees too moch 'urry, 'urry, 'urry. Evairew'ere eet ees 'Make 'aste, make 'aste!' Dere ees no ripose—no taime for do notting good. Evairew'ere I am come wit' ma pail, ma brush, ma scaffold, eet ees not 'Pierre, how good you can do dose vork?' but 'Pierre, how queek you ees got t'rough?' Parbleu! Biffore a man ees get one leg een hees hovairhall som'bod' ees hask heem, 'Say, meester, how soon you go vay?'"—Youth's Companion.

Books That Helped.

"What books have helped you most?" asked the sincere and serious young woman.

"I can't recall all of 'em," answered Mr. Cumrox, "but they were mostly stories with love and fighting in them. You see, I was in the book selling business when I began to get prosperous."—Washington Star.

STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, becomes necessary because of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irregularities, Displacements, Pain in the Side, Dragging Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other one medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in preparing women for child-birth and during the period of Change of Life.

Third, the great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

For more than 30 years has been curing Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and Organic Diseases, and it dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Thus she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health. Write today, don't wait until too late.

EDMUND KEAN.

To See Him Act Was Like Reading Shakespeare by Lightning.

Before the third century after the birth of Shakespeare had reached its first quarter there was born in England to a stage carpenter and a strolling actress a child destined to grapple with the poet's highest thought and interpret it with a vividness that to this day stands unrivaled. Coleridge's terse comment, that to see him act was reading Shakespeare by lightning, reveals him with the fullness of a volume. Edmund Kean, along with most people early trained to an art, had little if any education of the schools. He was when a boy provided with instruction by some benevolent people whom his smartness and beauty attracted, but he rebelled against the tasks of study and went to sea. But life there was too rough for his fine nature. He returned to England and at the age of seven began the study of Shakespeare's characters with his Uncle Moses. This he continued with an actress named Tidswell, who taught him, besides, as well as she knew, the principles of her art.

At an early age he had the credit of originality so surprising as even then to challenge the supremacy of Philip Kemble. At fourteen he played Hamlet. King George had him recite at Windsor castle, and it is said this incident led some gentlemen to send him to Eton, but there is no record of it. At twenty he was in a provincial troop, a member of which he married, and for six years thereafter, until his glorious night at Drury Lane, his life was one of hardship, struggle, obscurity, but, thanks to the faith in himself, not hopeless. His London debut was made at twenty-eight. He had fought for it hard and long and would then have missed it but for the falling reputation of the theater. London debuts in first roles are not easy for provincial actors, and none knew better how hard they are to get than Henry Irving. Kean seems to have been at his full splendor and made a hit. After that his habits were altogether prejudicial to the refinement of taste or the acquisition of knowledge.

A TREE OF ILL REPUTE.

The Fresh Juice of the Upas Acts as a Deadly Poison.

An evil reputation has long been borne by the upas tree, Antiaris toxicaria, which grows in Borneo and other East Indian islands. It is still a common belief that birds flying within the influence of its poisonous vapors instantly perish and that it is fatal for animals or men to rest beneath its shade. It resembles certain rhus plants (like the poison ivy) in emitting a volatile substance which affects the skins of certain susceptible persons, though others are unaffected. The sap is very poisonous and is the chief substance used by the Dyaks of Borneo for poisoning the tips of their darts.

In this process an incision is made in the bark of the tree and the milky exudation collected on a palm leaf and dried first in the sun and then over a fire until a thick brown mass is left. In this state it can be kept without deteriorating, and when required for use it is made into a thin paste with the juice of "tuba" root, which is used to stupefy fish, or with tobacco or lemon juice, and the ends of the darts dipped into the mixture and dried. These darts are made from the middle stem of the palm leaf and are about six or eight inches in length and of about the thickness of a knitting needle.

They are used with a wooden sumpitan, or blowpipe, which is about seven or eight feet in length and has an internal diameter of about one-quarter inch. A bird struck by one of these little darts is instantly killed, and a pig dies in about twenty minutes. The fresh juice of the upas tree, whether swallowed or injected into the blood, acts as a violent poison, causing convulsions and death.

Larvae Nests.

By breaking open rotten logs one can find in midwinter the grubs or larvæ of many of the wood boring beetles, and beneath logs and stones near the margins of ponds and brooks hordes of the maggots or larvæ of certain kinds of flies may often be found huddled together in great masses. The larvæ of a few butterflies also live over winter, beneath chips or bunches of leaves near the roots of their food plant or in webs of their own construction, which are woven on the stems close to the buds whose expanding leaves will furnish them their first meal in spring.

He Didn't Hush.

"Mamma," queried little Willie, "what is 'hush?'"

"Why do you ask, dear?" said his mother.

"Because," explained the observing urchin, "when I asked sister what made her hair all mussed after her beau was here this afternoon she said, 'Hush, dear.'"

The Caller.

"Mary, has any one called while I was out?"

"Yes, ma'am; Mr. Biggs was here."

"Mr. Biggs? I don't recall the name."

"No, ma'am; he called to see me, ma'am."

Corrected.

The secret of being tiresome is in telling everything.—Voltaire.

A Terrible Scene.

Strohschneider, the famous aeronaut, astonished the natives of Stockerau, near Vienna, by carrying a young barrister on his back along a tight rope eighty meters in length fixed to the church steeple. A few days later flaming posters appeared on the walls announcing that Strohschneider would effect a balloon ascent in the company of Herr Pramper, the popular landlord of the White Rose.

Notwithstanding the fact that the police had forbidden the landlord, who has a large family, from taking part in the performance mine host entered the inclosure at the appointed time, to the no small delight of the assembled multitude. At a given signal the balloon rose in the air, Strohschneider and the landlord sitting on the trapeze beneath. Some of the spectators declare that the latter turned as pale as a sheet during his upward flight, though he did not fail to wave his hat to the crowd. After reaching a dizzy height the two balloonists were observed to quarrel and actually came to blows. All at once the landlord plunged headlong into space. A shout of horror arose from the spectators, who ran to the spot where they expected to find Pramper lying with broken limbs. What was their astonishment at discovering not a corpse, but a lay figure dressed in one of the landlord's suits. The manikin was conveyed to Stockerau in triumph.

The British Anthem.

The whirligig of time has brought changes of its own into the British national anthem. In 1745 it began:

God save great George, our king!

The king's name was again inserted in that second verse, which has been used as an argument to prove that the words were written by Ben Jonson as early as 1607 to celebrate King James I.'s escape from the gunpowder plot:

Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks;
On George our hopes we fix—
God save the king!

The change to the present form is:

On thee our hopes we fix,

where deity has been substituted for majesty. There is another rendering, which the exigencies of the times no longer demand:

Oh, grant that Marshal Wade
May by thy mighty aid
Victory bring!
May he sedition hush
And like a torrent rush
Rebellious Scots to crush;
God save the king!

—London Queen.

CAMBRIDGE BEAT OXFORD.

Wins University Boat Race by Four and a Half Lengths.

Putney, Eng., March 18.—The sixty-fourth annual boat race between crews representing the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge was rowed Saturday over the usual course from Putney to Mortlake, a distance of about 4 1-4 miles and was won by Cambridge.

The crews were sent off at 3.06 p. m. At the Craven Steps, about three-quarters of a mile from the start Cambridge was a length ahead. At Hammersmith Bridge about 1 3-4 miles from the start Cambridge was leading by a length and a quarter.

At Barnes Bridge, about 3 1-2 miles from the start Cambridge was three lengths ahead.

Cambridge won by 4 1-2 lengths.

The unofficial time was 20 minutes 26 seconds.

The record time over the course is 18 minutes 47 seconds, established by Oxford in 1893, and equalled by Cambridge in 1900.

Gem Smugglers Caught.

New York, March 18.—Arthur Preston Green and Charles Rohrer, passengers on the North German Lloyd steamer America, were arrested when the vessel arrived from Hamburg and Southampton yesterday, charged with attempting smuggling.

Diamonds and jewelry to the appraised value of nearly $25,000, which the custom officials allege, the prisoners had failed to declare, was taken from them. The valuable were confiscated and the men were held for extradiction.

Though only the charge of smuggling was preferred against the prisoners here, they are wanted abroad in connection with a theft of some $25,000 worth of jewelry and precious stones in London.

Decrease In Grain Trade.

Winnipeg, March 18.—The total grain receipts to date this year have amounted to 47,995,000 bushels of wheat and 4,920,000 bushels of other grain. In the corresponding period of last year the receipts amounted to 50,273,000 bushels of wheat and 3,883,000 bushels of other grains.

CHILDREN.

IF YOU HAVE ANY THIS WILL INTEREST YOU.

"So many little boys and girls come into our store who are weak, thin-legged and hollow-cheeked," said Mr. J. S. McKeown, our well known druggist. "It seems a shame to allow them to remain so, for they will grow up into weak, sickly and nervous men and women, without the vitality to work or enjoy life."

"If," continued Mr. McKeown, "the fathers and mothers of such children would believe what we say of Vinol, we would see a great difference in the appearance of the younger generation of this city. You know Vinol is not a patent medicine, and is just the tonic growing children need. It will make for them good, healthy flesh, sound bone, hard muscle and rich, red blood.

"True, Vinol is a cod liver oil preparation, but it does not contain a drop of oil, or any bad tasting feature. It is so delicious that all children love it, yet it actually does contain all the medicinal curative elements found in fresh cods' livers, and is the most wholesome and best medicine for children we ever sold.

It is because we know what Vinol will do that we guarantee if it fails to make your children well, rugged and rosy, to refund your money. J. S. McKeown, druggist.

St. Kitts Man Acquitted.

Buffalo, March 18.—The federal jury in the case of Maurice Morris of St. Catharines, Ont., who was indicted upon charges of making a false invoice through the custom house at Niagara Falls, reported to Judge Hazel Saturday a verdict of not guilty.

Jacob Sklorsky, who was jointly indicted with Morris, was discharged by Judge Hazel Friday afternoon on the ground that there was no evidence that he had anything to do with the offences alleged in the indictment.

Jonasson Carries Gimli.

Winnipeg, March 18.—The result of the elections in Gimli are not all in, but with five polls to hear from Jonasson, Liberal, has a majority of 160 over Baldwinson, Conservative, the present member. There was some dissension in the Conservative ranks, and little attempt was made to carry the seat.

The line-up of the House is: Conservatives 28, Liberals 13. The recount in Morris, where Hon. Colin Campbell has only a majority of 2, takes place to-day.

Spectator Killed In French Riot.

Nantes, France, March 18.—The strike of the stevedores of this port resulted yesterday in violent rioting, in the course of which a spectator was shot dead.

A mob stoned the gendarmes and police, who were forced to disperse the crowd with drawn sabres.

DRAMATIC LIFE STORY

OF CENTURION WHO PAID TRIBUTE TO CHRIST'S DIVINITY.

SOME LESSONS WE MAY LEARN

Jesus the Absorbing Figure in the Crucifixion—Some Facts of Roman History—In Darkest Times of Sin and Wickedness, Many Stood Up Boldly For the Right — Overcome Evil With Good.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 17.—In this sermon the preacher outlines in imagination the dramatic story of a character of the time of Christ whose experience has a remarkable interest for the people of to-day. The text is Matthew xxvii, 54, "Truly this was the Son of God."

No picture of the crucifixion is perfect unless the face of Jesus Christ is the centre and the absorbing theme. All other parts of the picture must converge toward that divine face or radiate from it even as the spokes of the wheel branch out from the hub. There may be three crosses, but Jesus' cross must be the central cross. There may be soldiers there gambling for a prize, but that prize must be the garments of Jesus Christ

But, though we would not for one instant turn your chief thought of the crucifixion from our Divine Lord, yet in order to bring Christ's saving sacrifice a little closer we would this morning have you watch the upturned face of a Roman soldier who is standing at the foot of the cross and with outstretched arms is uttering the words of my text. Who is this centurion? Where did he come from? What was his past life? Why was he led to believe in the divinity of our Master and King? These are questions which I would like to answer in an imaginative way, for in all the Bible we do not read one word about him except that he was a captain or a petty line officer in the Roman army and that he was detailed by his superior officer to see that Christ was executed according to the Roman law. And yet in an imaginative way I believe we can read between the lines and trace this centurion's life step by step from his cradle to his spiritual surrender at the foot of the cross, where to-day we are all gathered to worship our dying Lord.

In the first place, I imagine that this centurion was once a Roman youth who was born amid the pure, sweet, wholesome country life of old Italy. By that I do not mean he came of an ignorant, poverty stricken family, but I believe he came of an Italian landowning family which had neither poverty nor riches, but had purity in domestic life, refinement of home associations and had all which was possible in a heathen land to make life pure and sweet and wholesome.

It is a very grave mistake to suppose that rural Italy in the time of Augustus was like immoral Rome. You can no more judge the country life of Italy by the moral standards of the social life of Caesar's capital than you can judge the moral standards of France by that of Paris or the pure, sweet country life of our own land by the standards of the Tenderloin district of New York or by the social scandals of summer resorts. The more I have read Roman history the more I am impressed with the fact that Rome was not only the immoral cesspool of all Italy, but of all the foreign capitals and the countries of the world. Do you not remember the famous sentence of Juvenal, "In Tiberium defluxit Orontes?" This translated means, "Into the Tiber the Orontes emptied itself." Where was the Orontes river? Did it literally flow into the Tiber? No. The Orontes river was away off in Syria. In order to empty itself into the Tiber it would have to flow through the Mediterranean waters, as the Thames to empty into the Rhine would have to jump the English channel. Now, what did Juvenal mean by that sentence? Why, simply this: The Orontes was the river upon whose banks eastern Antioch was built, as Paris is built upon the banks of the river Seine. Juvenal was poetically saying, "All the filth and the immoral rottenness of Antioch and of all the eastern cities were emptied into Rome as the river Orontes figuratively empties its filth into the river Tiber, upon whose banks the Roman capital was built."

What Juvenal teaches us Farrar and Stanley and all the penmen who have delved into Roman history also teach. In the rural districts of the Roman empire virtue dwelt. There were purity and truth and honor. There the women lived, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion. There thousands and tens of thousands of Cornelias had their most precious jewels in the setting of a cradle. From the pure, sweet, wholesome life of the rural districts of Rome came the men who filled up the legions of Caesar, which defended the Roman power from the Atlantic ocean on the one side to the Tigris on the east, from the Danube on the north to the Sahara desert on the south. The men who conquered the then known world under Julius Caesar and Augustus were not the debauched valetudinarians from the polluted palaces of Rome. These warriors were the physical and mental giants who came from the rural districts of Italy as the strength of the French republic is found in the country life of France and not in the haunts of the dissipated youth of Paris.

Again the scene changes. Now I would have you stand in the very centre of all the sin and debauchery and moral filth of the great capital of the Caesars. The year is about 13 A. D. The Augustinian reign was drawing to a close. The greatest of Roman rulers next to Julius Caesar himself was about to die. The political world was filled with plots and counterplots and insurrections. "The king is almost dead. Who shall be the next king?" was the question upon every lip. The hand of Augustus, that royal master of men, that hand which was as soft as velvet and yet as strong as steel, was beginning to loose its vise-like grip. The splendor of the Roman capital had drawn the wealthy prodigals into its debauching maelstrom and licentiousness, and unbridled passions were running riot everywhere.

It was into such a mad scene of wassail and carousal that, I think, this centurion of my text, then a young man of sixteen or eighteen summers, was inducted. In order to understand what kind of temptations assailed the moral character and the spiritual life of this young man I would have you for a little while wander through the excavated ruins of old Pompeii. You know that the most famous eruption of Mount Vesuvius took place only some threescore years after Augustus died. At that eruption of 79 A. D. God seemed to put out his hand and say: "I will cover up this city in beds of lava. Then nearly 2,000 years later I will lift my hand and show to the world how low and vile and bestial and immorally corrupt a great capital can become when it is drunk with wealth and sinful revelries and when man, unbridled in his evil desires, can become viler in his desires than the four footed swine snouting for their food amid the repulsive stench of a city's refuse." And this is just what God did. In an instant the earth was rocking in the agony of an earthquake. In an instant the heavens were covered with leaping flames. In an instant the great rivers of molten lava were rolling down the sides of the volcano. In an instant life ceased to exist in the Newport of old Rome

There upon the walls of some of these excavated homes of Pompeii we find pictured the degenerate lives of those ancient inhabitants. One glance at some of those pictures reveals to us what the besotted lives of the men and women who inhabited those homes must have been. Those pictures tell us more than whole libraries of written words could ever reveal. Oh, no; the charge of hypocrisy which Christ hurled against the ancient Pharisees could not be applied to the immoral and drunken degenerates of ancient Rome. Then the followers of Bacchus not only sinned, but they gloried in their sins. They not only sinned, but they pictured upon the walls of their homes down to the minutest details the vileness and the repulsive corruptions of their sins. There they were welcoming their guests with such words as these: "Come and see me in my lewdness. Come and see me in my domestic crimes. Come and see me an inhuman monster. Come and see my inner sinful life as it is." And into such evil environments as these I think the centurion of my text was inducted in Rome when he was a very young man.

I think the boy came from a pure, refined home like that in which most of us were cradled. It was also a home which was not blessed with either riches or poverty. The old homestead stood in the midst of a vineyard. The farm also had its green pastures for the cattle and its fields for raising corn and wheat. The father had plenty of money to support the family, but he had very little to spare. But as this boy seemed to be especially bright I think the parents did everything in their power to send him to one of the great universities at Rome for an education.

Thus I see the centurion, then a very young man, enter one of the great Roman schools. I see him caught there in the maelstrom of sin. I see him, like the prodigal of Christ's parable, become the victim of all kinds of evil associations. I see him, like thousands and tens of thousands of young students to-day, who come from pure, true, consecrated Christian homes in this country, enter the large universities of some of our great cities and then plunge headlong into all kinds of sinfulness. Then I see the young man, besotted with drink and evil excesses of all kinds, return to his old home and say: "Here I am, mother. Here I am with health gone and character gone and noble spiritual ideals all gone. Here I am. You sent me from the pure associations of my sisters and my rural home. Here I am, a moral, mental and spiritual degenerate." Such I believe was this young student after his life of sin and crime in the Roman capital during the latter years of the Augustinian era.

Again the scene changes. I believe this young man, disgraced and socially ostracized at home, makes up his mind to start life anew in one of the distant Roman provinces. This has been the natural course for thousands of young men of all centuries who have disgraced themselves at home. Then they try to make a new start in a new world among strangers. You who have been western miners in the old seventies know what I mean. There in those western mining camps it was the well recognized law that no man should pry into the personal history of his neighbors. Why? Because many of the young men of those camps had lived lives of social dissipation in the east and their past records could not bear the focus light of publicity.

This centurion of my text may have come from one of the purest and the most refined homes of all rural Italy. Then, by the student life of licentious Rome, we see his moral and spiritual life completely wrecked. In this far-off Roman province of Judaea he is earnestly and prayerfully trying in the Roman army to make a man out of himself.

Again the scene changes. It is now about the year 30 A. D. This is the time when all the Jewish world is perplexed and in doubt about a Nazarene named Jesus. We are now in the Roman barracks of Jerusalem. This is the officers' quarters. Before us sits the well developed figure of an officer about thirty-eight years of age. This is the former youth of whom we have been speaking, now a broad shouldered Roman centurion. He turns to one of his brother officers and asks: "Tiberius, why are they making such a fuss about this man Jesus? Who is he? Is he a thief or an insurrectionist? Has he murdered anybody? Why does old Caiaphas, the high priest, hate him so? Why, I understand the sanhedrin is going to 'quick step' him to the cross. Tell me something about him." Then I think I see Tiberius turn and sharply look about him. I begin to surmise that this Tiberius is a Christian. Perhaps he was the Roman centurion who was once stationed in Capernaum, about whom Matthew wrote, who had a beloved servant dying from an apparently incurable disease. This servant Christ healed. You know the story. Then I think I hear that Christian centurion tell Julius, his brother officer, all about this Jesus. "Julius," says he, "Christ never did any one any harm. All he does is to heal the sick and open the eyes of the blind and brush away the lepers' scales. Yes, Julius, his mission is to heal the broken bodies and to cleanse us from all sin and to save us at last. Oh, Julius, will you not believe that Christ is God?"

Methinks I can see Captain Julius sitting there in the Roman barracks. His head is resting on his hand. Then I hear him say: "Oh, is Jesus all that? Is his mission only to help the poor and the sick and the suffering? Is his mission to cleanse sinful men from an evil past? How my dear mother would have loved him! How tame are the penates—the household gods of my old Roman home! Truly, father and mother to the best of their spiritual light made our old homestead virtuous and pure. But, oh, what would mother have been able to do had she had this Christ for her Saviour?" Then methinks I see the centurion anxiously look into Tiberius' face and say: "Captain Tiberius, do you believe that this Jesus will forgive me, even me? Why, my mother died of a broken heart on account of my waywardness and vileness of my youth. Will this Jesus forgive me, even me?" Then I think I see Captain Tiberius place his hand upon Julius' shoulder and say: "Yes, Julius, This Christ can be your Christ, for in my own hearing, after Jesus raised my sick servant, I heard him say to a great crowd of people who were flocking about him near Lake Galilee, 'All that the Father giveth me shall come to me, and him that cometh to me I will in nowise cast out.' Oh, Julius, will you not believe?"

But again the scene changes. We are now standing at the foot of the cross. This is the crucifixion. Here are the two thieves, the one on the right, the other on the left of the cross which bears the dying Lord. Yonder come the great multitude, sneering and wagging their heads. Here are the soldiers gambling for the garments of the dying Saviour. By a strange coincidence I find that this same Captain Julius, whose conversion we were listening to the other night in the Roman barracks, has been detailed to see that the order of Pilate in reference to the three state criminals is carried out. Methinks I see him standing in the foreground of the crucifixion scene looking up at the face of Jesus. This Roman centurion's countenance has a troubled look. "Is he God?" that countenance seems to say. "If he is God, why does he not come down from the cross and save himself, as the scoffers are challenging him to do? Oh, I wish I could say he was my Lord! Then I might go back to Rome and tell my brothers and sister and old sinful companions about him." As the Roman centurion soliloquizes thus it is about 12 o'clock noon. Suddenly the heavens become as black as midnight. Then there is a booming and a crashing, as though the rocks were being splintered under our feet and the firm mountains were shaking from their foundations. There is a great cry of agony. I hear the Saviour call, "Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani!" which is interpreted, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" Then I see the Roman commander in fright tremble and crouch as if terror stricken. I see him arise and stand straight up and reach out his hands toward the cross and cry out, "Truly this was the Son of God!" Oh, my friends, with your sins looming up behind you and with the evidences of Christ's divinity at hand, cannot you and I at this crucifixion scene speak as the captain of the Roman soldiers spake in reference to the dying Lord?

Of course in one sense this sermon is entirely imaginative. And yet I think there may be more truth in it than many of us believe. As I begin it in an imaginative way, so I will end in the same way. When I think of this Roman centurion, I never picture him as simply acknowledging Christ as the Son of God and then going back to his life of sin. I picture him as resigning from the Roman army and returning to the Roman capital. Then I picture him as one of the Christians of old Rome to whom Paul later wrote. Then I picture him as going out to the old homestead, to the pure home of his youth, and telling his brothers and sisters about his new found Christ. Then I picture the persecutions coming. Then I imagine him an old man, bending under the weight of seventy-five years, but strong in faith and in fidelity to Christ. He may have been among "the saints in Caesar's household" of whom Paul writes. He may even have been among the Christian martyrs who were burned under Nero. The change would not have been any more extraordinary than that which transformed Saul the persecutor into Paul the apostle. You may say the story is imaginative, but it is not unreasonable. Remember, this man had actually seen Christ. Think of it! Could he ever forget that spectacle? Let us join him in spirit as he stands at the foot of the cross and with him acknowledge Jesus as the Son of God. If, as I have suggested, he did lay down his life for Christ, may we not join him in that spirit too? We are not called to die for Christ, but we may live for him, giving our time and our labor in his service. So may we consecrate ourselves to him and declare that, whether we live or die, we are the Lord's. Then at the last he will give to us the crown promised to those who are faithful unto death. Then we shall not stand at the foot of the cross, but we shall be seated upon a throne and wear a crown of eternal and triumphant reward. May God bless this sermonic dream. "Truly this was the Son of God!" Come, let us change the text a little—"Truly this man is and forever shall be the Son of God and our resurrected Saviour and redeeming Lord."

"RATHER HIGH."

A prominent oculist in lecturing before a State Medical Association recently on eye-strain, said: "The fitting of glasses is no easy work. The best oculist if he spends his whole life on the study of optics, will be a student all his life, and yet have plenty to learn. Dr. N.——, of Philadelphia, charges $100 for every case of refraction. Many oculists charge $25, yet to the patient it may be a better investment than an extra suit of clothes ordered. Often remarkable symptoms are cured by lenses." We are convinced the reason why we have succeeded in giving relief in cases where the ordinary opticians have failed and even where oculists have failed is because our whole time, study and constant research is along the one specialty, RELIEVING EYE-STRAIN BY THE AID OF THE RIGHT GLASSES, whereas, with the ordinary optician, it is only a "side line," most of his time and attention being taken up with his other business. With the oculist, he has to give so much time to treating diseases of the eye, nose, throat, etc., that he has very little time left for the study of refraction.

SUDDEN DEATH FROM APOPLEXY YESTERDAY—RESPECTED LADY SOON FOLLOWED HER LIFE PARTNER—OTHER DEATHS

MRS. THOMAS WILLS.

The scriptural saying, "In death they were not divided," may aptly be applied to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wills, late of this city, who are now both numbered with the silent majority, the venerable lady passing away about 5 o'clock yesterday morning. She had been ill for some time, and, in fact, was believed to be beyond recovery when her husband was seized with the fatal stroke.

The late Mrs. Wills was a native of Maidencombe, Torquay, Devonshire, England, where she was born in 1826. There was only six weeks' difference between the ages of the deceased lady and her venerable partner in life, the former being the elder; only six days separated them in death.

In 1835 the late Mrs. Wills, then Miss Anna Maria Levesconte, came to Canada with her father and family, she being the youngest daughter of Capt. Henry Levesconte, a hero of Trafalgar, who was a post captain under the immortal Nelson. They first settled in Seymour township, where Capt. Levesconte's grant of land, as a retired naval officer, was situated. Subsequently the family moved to Belleville, and since then Mrs. Wills' life had been spent in this city. In 1852 she married Mr. Thos. Wills, the surviving issue being three sons and one daughter, namely: Messrs. H. T. Wills, banker, of New York; Alfred Wills, a doctor, of Gold River, Y.T., and J. F. Wills, an ex-alderman and barrister, of this city, and Miss Wills, at home.

The deceased lady was a devoted adherent of the Church of England, and was, while her health permitted, a regular attendant of St. Thomas' Church, of this city.

The bereaved family will receive the sincere sympathy of all classes in the double affliction which has so suddenly overtaken them.

MR. I. HUFFMAN.

At a few minutes after 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, death came suddenly to Mr. Isaiah Huffman, a well-known citizen who resided on Charles street. It appears that the deceased was about the house in the morning and partook of his breakfast as usual and made no complaint of feeling unwell. At the hour above mentioned he, in company with his little grandson, went into the barn and, without any warning, Mr. Huffman fell to the floor and, before help could be secured, life was extinct. Apoplexy is given as the cause of death. Deceased, who was 56 years of age, was born in the Township of Hungerford. When a young man he came to Belleville, where he had since resided. He was for years a traveller for Messrs. Chown & Sons, of Kingston, and was popular with all whom he came in contact with. Mr. Huffman was a member of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A., F. & A. M., Belleville Lodge, No. 81, I.O.O.F., and the A.O.U.W. He was a member of Bridge Street Methodist Church. A widow and one daughter, Mrs. Vanbuskirk, of this city, survive. Other relatives are four brothers and three sisters. The brothers are William, of this city; John, of Napanee; Elias, of Huntsville, and Thomas, formerly of Tweed. The sisters are Mrs. Jas. Young, of Michigan; Mrs. Samuel Seeley, of Wallbridge, and Mrs. David Seeley, of Stirling. To the bereaved ones will be extended sincere sympathy.

MRS. E. WAY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Way, a well-known lady residing in the Township of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, passed away on Saturday night. Deceased was 61 years of age, and had lived in the township all her life. Her husband preceded her to the tomb some years ago. Mrs. Way had been for a long time a devoted member of the Methodist Church.

MRS. JANE O'HAGAN.

After about a year's illness, Mrs. Jane O'Hagan, an elderly lady, who resided on Murney street, passed away yesterday morning. Deceased, who was in her 81st year, was well and favorably known in this city, in which she had been a resident for many years, as a kind-hearted Irish lady. Mrs. O'Hagan was a member of St. Michael's Church. An aged husband and a family of one son and three daughters mourn the demise of a faithful wife and a devoted mother. The son is Patrick, of Lethbridge, Ont., and the daughters are Mrs. (Dr.) Dolan and Mrs. Geo. Teale, of this city, and Mrs. O'Leary, of Tacoma, Wash.

The Post Office.

POSTMASTER - GENERAL LEMIEUX PROMISES THAT IMPROVEMENTS IN CONDITIONS SHALL BE MADE AT ONCE.

Everybody will be glad to hear that the Government has, as a result of representations made to it, promised to see that a betterment of conditions in the local post office takes place. It is not necessary to remind our readers of the action of Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., or the local Board of Trade, or the fact that, for seven or eight years, The Intelligencer has been doing its utmost to have conditions bettered.

On the 5th inst. the secretary of the West Hastings Reform Association, Mr. John H. Carr, wrote to Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General, as follows:

"We have carefully investigated post-office matters here, and we respectfully submit to you the following suggestions for the improvement of the service;

"1st. That additional help be provided for night work, so that the mail may be distributed promptly at the opening of the office.

"2nd. That the office be opened each day, from 6.30 a.m. until 7 p.m.

"3rd. That on Monday morning, in order to accommodate commercial travellers, leaving on the six o'clock trains, the office should be opened between five and six o'clock.

"4th. That a graduated scale of remuneration should be arranged for the deserving clerks, and of such amounts as would secure the continued service from year to year of the staff.

"5th. That sufficient help be employed to provide two clerks for the delivery wickets, in order to give prompt service to the public, after the distribution of each arriving mail

"6th. That such additional help be employed, and such other changes in the working of the staff be made, as may be deemed advisable, in order to secure efficiency in the service of the office.

"We are frank to say that the present service has been far from satisfactory to the public for a long time, and we sincerely trust you may give effect to these suggestions, or such other suggestions as may be in the public interest, to accomplish the purpose which we have in mind."

THE POSTMASTER - GENERAL'S REPLY.

The above communication called forth the following reply:

"Ottawa, March 12, '07.

"J. H. Carr, Esq.,

"Dear Sir,—I am in receipt through you, of a letter dated the 5th instant from the Reform Association of the West Riding of Hastings, making representations concerning the inefficient condition of the mail service in the Belleville post office.

"I reply, I beg to say that I have given instructions to have the improvements suggested carried into effect with the least possible delay.

"Yours faithfully,

Asks For Damages.

MR. JAMES WELSH SUES TRENTON ELECTRIC COMPANY OVER THE DEATH OF HIS SON.

An interesting case will be tried at the Assizes which open to-morrow. It will be remembered that, last fall a young man of this city, named William Welsh, was killed by a live electric light wire which had broken loose from the pole near the corner of Strachan and St. Charles streets, and was hanging down. The young fellow, it was alleged, was endeavoring to safeguard the wire, for the benefit of other people, when, the evidence showed, he touched it and met his own death. His father, Mr. James Welsh, now sues the Trenton Electric Company, which owned the poles and wires, for unstated damages.

Lenient Sentence Was Imposed On Renfrew.

JUDGE DEROCHE LET HIM OFF WITH A MONTH FOR ESCAPING FROM THE COUNTY JAIL.

Fred Renfrew was on Saturday afternoon brought up before Judge Deroche, charged with the following offence;

"That he did, on the 3rd of October, 1906, unlawfully escape from the custody of a penal institution where he was undergoing sentence for an offence committed."

To the charge the accused, through his solicitor, Mr. McMahon, pleaded guilty.

Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, moved for sentence, but before it was passed Mr. McMahon made an appeal for leniency, claiming that the prisoner only had 23 more days to serve when he escaped, and that it was owing to information he (the prisoner) had received about the illness of his wife and children that impelled him to escape when he had the opportunity.

Before passing sentence His Honor asked Renfrew how he effected his escape, and the prisoner told, showing that he did so whilst outside of the prison walls. After lecturing the prisoner upon the seriousness of the offence the Judge said he would be lenient in this case, and imposed a sentence of one month in jail.

Assizes To-morrow

THE JUDGE WILL BE PRESENTED WITH A PAIR OF WHITE KID GLOVES.

The spring sittings of the High Court of Justice will open at one o'clock to-morrow afternoon, before the Honorable Mr. Justice McMahon. For the first time in some years there is not a criminal case upon the docket, and in consequence His Lordship will receive the customary pair of white kid gloves. There are several jury and non-jury cases entered for trial, some of which are quite important. The following is the list:

Engine Ditched By Stray Cow On Track

A wreck occurred on Sunday afternoon on the line of the Grand Junction Railway, near Halloway station which is but a few miles from the city. Fortunately no person was seriously injured. It appears that a freight train was coming towards the city when some cattle were seen upon the track. Before the engine could be stopped it struck one of the bovines and the result was that the engine was ditched, also a couple of cars. The auxiliary from this city was sent out to the scene of the wreck, in order to clear the track.

NEW CRUISER LAUNCHED.

Her Armament Almost Equals Main Battery of Dreadnought.

London, March 18.—The Indomitable, the first of the new class of armored cruisers, was successfully launched in the Clyde on Saturday. She is 17,250 tons, is 530 feet long, exceeding the older armored-cruisers by 50 feet, has turbine engines, and is expected to attain a speed of 25-knots per hour.

Her armament includes eight 12-inch guns, almost equalling the main battery of the Dreadnought.

By special order of the admiralty, the greatest secrecy is being maintained concerning the details of the construction of this, the largest cruiser in the world. The cost of the Indomitable is approximately $9,729,000. While ostensibly a cruiser her actual status has not been definitely set forth, and it is believed she approaches nearer to a battleship in armor and armament.

Sir William Pearce, the chairman of the Fairfield Co., the builders of the warship, presided at a luncheon after the launching. He said he was not permitted to give any information regarding the cruiser, and that she must remain a mystery until the official trials or until the admiralty saw fit to take the public into its confidence. Rear Admiral Bearcroft also spoke at the luncheon. He said he was confident that the Indomitable, if occasion arises would carve out a record for herself that would live in the annals of naval history.

The two sister ships will be launched within a fortnight.

GIRL OF TEN SUICIDE.

School Children Agree to Die Together After Playing Truant.

St. Louis, March 18.—It has developed through testimony yesterday at the coroner's inquest into the suicide Saturday night of Liebling Slocum, aged 10 years, that she had entered into a suicide pact with Gertrude Harper, also 10 years old.

Gertrude Harper testified that Friday she had told her mother that she was going to take her life and was prevented.

The two girls were school children and chums. Liebling had been reproved for playing truant and became melancholy. The two girls brooded over the matter and agreed to die together. Friday Liebling swallowed carbolic acid and died last night.

J. P. Slinger, the drug clerk who sold the carbolic acid to Liebling Slocum, was arrested yesterday and is held on a warrant charging the sale of a poisonous drug to a minor. He asserts one bore a note purporting to be from her mother, asking for five cents' worth of carbolic acid, to be used for household purposes.

STRIKE RIOTERS SHOT.

Police Arrest Twenty One Men After Severe Struggle.

Hammond, Ind., March 18.—In a strike riot yesterday at the East Chicago mill of the Republic Iron and Steel Co., several men were shot, two probably fatally.

The trouble started when 50 laborers struck for higher wages. Twenty went back to work, and the remaining 30 broke through the gates of the steel plant to get at their companions.

A riot followed, in which Neshe Zecevich, a foreman, was shot through the shoulders. The wound will probably cause his death. John Kalini, a laborer, was shot and beaten, probably fatally.

Several others were injured by knife thrusts and bullets.

The East Chicago police, after an hours' work, arrested 21 men and ended the riot.

McINTOSH BROS.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE

Upton Sinclair's Colony Burned to the Ground.

Helicon Hall Completely Destroyed—Author of The Jungle and His Wife Had to Jump—55 Persons In Settlement—Babies Thrown In Blankets—Incendiarism Suspected—No Fire Escapes Available.

Englewood, N. J., March 18.—Helicon Hall, the home of Upton Sinclair's Socialistic colony, was burned to the ground, following an explosion on Saturday, which tore the front part of the building away, and sent flames to every corner of the structure. The 55 persons who comprised the settlement, including the author of "The Jungle" and his wife, were shut in by the flames, and jumped from windows on the second and third floors. Children were tossed from the windows in their night clothes, and caught in the arms of men and women or in blankets held by them. A number of women in the colony received sprains, bruises, and cuts. A workman named Briggs was said to be missing.

The explosion seemed to have occurred in the ball-room, and was of such force as to be heard a mile away. As it was not caused by the boilers of the heating plant, suspicion was aroused that it was the deliberate work of some malicious persons.

Fire followed the explosion almost at once, and quickly spread through the lower part of the building, shutting off the escape of the occupants, who at first rushed for the stairways, but were turned back by the flames. As there were no fire-escapes, the members of the colony began to jump from the second and third storey windows. The men then threw out blankets first, and then used them to break the fall of the women and children, who were dropped into them.

Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair, who occupied a room in the front of the building, were thrown from their bed by the explosion, and jumped out of the window.

The Sinclair Co-operative Colony was established last October, and included a number of educators, men and women, engaged in literary pursuits. The co-operative servant plan was adopted, the meals being served in common in a large dining-room.

FIRE IN OLD LONDON.

Three Warehouses Burned In Finsbury District—Loss, $1,000,000.

London, March 18.—Three big warehouses in the Finsbury district, London's busiest industrial centre, were destroyed by fire yesterday morning, causing damage to the amount of about $1,000,000.

Starting in Featerstone street, in the premises of Cox & Co., hat manufacturers, the flames, fanned by a strong wind, jumped the street and enveloped the establishment of the Maxime Co., wood turners, and spread to the adjoining warehouse of Green & Co., shoe manufacturers. Owing to the strength of the wind, it appeared for a time as though the whole block of adjoining property would be devastated, but after three hours' hard work the firemen gained control of the situation.

$10,000 Fire In St. John.

St. John, N. B., March 18.—Fire Saturday night in the centre of a Prince William street block caused damage estimated at $10,000. It broke out in the four-storey brick building owned by George E. Fairweather, and occupied by A. B. Smalley, jeweller and watchmaker. The building was gutted and considerable stock damaged. The adjoining building, the Dearborn Co.'s spice factory, suffered several thousands of dollars loss, and Bowman and Cole, wholesalers and tea merchants, suffered by smoke and water. All the losses are covered by insurance.

Hotel Burns at Falls.

Niagara Falls, March 18.—Victoria Hall, the summer tourist temperance house, at Niagara Fall Centre, was totally destroyed by fire Saturday. It is believed the fire started from crossed electric wires in the section closed for the winter.

The occupants escaped in their night clothing. Dr. Gibson, was partially overcome by smoke, while the daughter of the proprietor, Miss Young, and a friend, Miss Inez Sinclair, had to be taken out with assistance of a ladder.

The three-storey building burned like tinder, and in two hours was flat on the ground. Total loss $15,000; insured for $8,000.

Walkerville Church Burns.

Walkerville, March 18.—The eastern part of the town was visited by a disastrous fire Saturday afternoon, the McGregor-Banwell Fence Co. going first.

The Walkerville fire brigade kept the fire from spreading in the immediate vicinity, but the wind carried some cinders to the roof of the Roman Catholic Church, Our Lady of Lake St. Clair, over 200 yards distant, and the whole roof was in flames. The Detroit fire tug soon had the fire under control, but not until the church was a total loss.

Twenty-Two Miners Killed.

Saarlouis, Rhenish Prussia, March 18.—Twenty-two miners were killed yesterday morning at the Gerhard coal mine. They were descending one of the shafts in a cage when the cable broke near the top and the miners plunged down several hundred feet. They all met with instant death.

The mine belongs to the Prussian Government, which has already begun an official inquiry into the accident.

Masson Out On Bail.

Cornwall, March 18.—Charlie Masson of Ottawa, the hockey player, who is charged with causing the death of "Bud" McCourt in a match here on March 6, has been released on $16,000 bail, $8,000 by himself, $4,000 by his father, D. T. Masson, and $4,000 by J. H. Dewar of Ottawa.

The bail was granted by County Judge O'Reilly.

DOWIE DID NOT FORGIVE.

Promised to Return With Ruthless Hands to Destroy.

Chicago, March 18.—Although the sermon prepared by Dowie was not used in the funeral rites, it was issued for publication. It makes plain that Dowie did not forgive his enemies before he died, as he says of those who ousted him from control:—"I shall return, and with ruthless hand shall I exterminate the vipers and the dogs of hell that now hold high places in the City of Zion. They dreamed, and in the grossness of their dreams they thought they had prevailed over the first apostle. And now, priests and elders of Zion, I shall return in another form, brighter and more beautiful and ten thousand times more terrible, to cut ye off in the midst of your sins, and to win back Zion for the truth and for them that held to the word and did no evil."

There was a small-sized panic during the funeral ceremonies because of the announcement that another of Voliva's followers was dying. In the past week three of his lieutenants who held similar positions under Dowie have died suddenly, and when it was said that a fourth was likely to die before morning several of the mourners ran from the tabernacle, shouting that Zion was accursed by God. This excited the rest of the 3,000 mourners, and before the cooler-headed leaders could get among the people to counsel quietness fully five hundred had left the building.

FRACTURED HIS SKULL.

Goderich Magistrate Falls Downstairs While Working Alone.

Goderich, March 18.—A distressing accident occurred Saturday evening, resulting in the death of Charles A. Humber, one of Goderich's most estimable citizens.

In carrying a heavy article down a flight of stairs Mr. Humber accidentally fell headlong to the bottom, fracturing his skull and causing concussion of the brain. As the deceased was working alone in the house it was not till some time after the accident occurred that his delayed return home caused anxiety, when on search being made he was found unconscious on the cellar floor.

For years he served as councillor and latterly discharged the duties of police magistrate. He stood high in Masonic circles, filling high offices in Maitland Lodge No. 33, Huron Chapter No. 30, St. Elmo Preceptory No. 22, and with several degrees in the Scottish Rite.

Willemstad, Caracao, March 18.—A despatch received here from Cuenta, Columbia, announces that a powerful revolution has started in the State of Tachira, Venezuela, with Gen. Juan Pablo Penalosa as its leader.

Who Said Dinner?

Uh! xx! ?--?! !x! !

!?!x--!--Cranky and ?!x--! Because !--!--x! Don't Digest x?!--

There are many people who can see nothing good in a doughnut except the hole. For them there is nothing in this world but calamity. Their greatest trouble is to have to eat three times a day. The stomach is in rebellion, and this is immediately shown in the man's face. A man to be successful must have sunshine inside. The world already has too many dyspepsia faces that breathe disaster and gloom.

Stomach trouble is the most common cause of discontent, sour face recklessness, disgust and lack of ambition. A bad stomach — there is the secret of many a failure. Anyone can have a good stomach, a strong stomach, a stomach that can take care of anything and everything that is put into it, no matter whether it is a very bad stomach or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. One ingredient of these little tablets digests 3,000 grains of food, and no matter how bad your dyspepsia or indigestion, they will digest everything in your stomach, thoroughly and completely, and better and more quickly than a good strong healthy stomach can do it. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will quickly cure loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, nausea, heartburn, eructations, loss of vim, and energy, bad memory, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets around with you wherever you go and take them after meals. Then only will you realize what it is to enjoy a meal, and what perfect digestion means. Your whole body and your mind will feel the effects; your vim will increase, you will be more satisfied with what the world does, you will think happier and be happier and your face will be one of supreme contentment. That will bring you success and then more success. Your face will bring you dollars. Try it. It will cost you just 50c for a package of these wonderful Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 82 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

JEROME SEES THE END

Thaw May Know His Fate on Friday.

Monday and Tuesday Will Be Consumed In Hearing Evidence—Two Days For Summing Up — Severe Strain on All Parties—Sensational Affidavit of Evelyn Nesbit to Be Read In Court.

New York, March 18.—"Thank God, the end is in sight!"

This was the fervent whisper of District Attorney Jerome at the Thaw trial Saturday, uttered loud enough for the reporters to hear, following a favorable decision by Justice Fitzgerald regarding the Hummel affidavit.

The strain on those attending the trial has been severe. Justice Fitzgerald has shown the effects of it, as have the lawyers, the defence and the district attorney. When Mr. Jerome asked for an additional 15 minutes Friday at the usual hour for adjournment, Mr. Delmas protested, declaring that his endurance had been stretched to the breaking point. He would not consent to another minute of extra session.

Not To Be Drawn.

Mr. Jerome did his best to get from Mr. Delmas an estimate on the length of time that would be required to complete the sur-rebuttal, but Thaw's lawyer declined to give any suggestion on this line.

It is generally believed, however, that Monday and Tuesday will see the close of evidence and Wednesday and Thursday will be used in summing up. There is every reason to believe that Friday will put the fate of Harry K. Thaw in the hands of the jury, unless some unexpected development occurs.

Story of Her Wanderings.

The sensational affidavit which Mr. Jerome fought so hard to get into the evidence, gives Evelyn Nesbit's story of the wanderings of herself and Thaw on the continent, during which time, according to the affidavit, Thaw beat her several times in an effort to make her swear to a document charging White with having drugged and attacked her when she was a girl of 15. The affidavit also declares that Evelyn Nesbit submitted to the lashings, declaring that White had never wronged her—a sworn statement in direct contradiction to her story on the stand of what she told Thaw in Paris. This may be read in court to-day.

Will Re-Marry Evelyn.

An interesting report was circulated to the effect that Thaw, overjoyed at the prospects of an early ending to the trial, is already making arrangements as to what he shall do upon his expected release, for the prisoner is obsolutely sure he will be free.

Among other things it is said he will at once investigate whether his marriage is strictly legal under the laws of Pennsylvania, as it has been testified that he was insane at the time he made his will and when he was wed.

To insure legality of his marriage with Evelyn Nesbit, the prisoner, it is said, has decided to go through a second ceremony with her if any possibility presents itself as to annulment of the marriage. Thaw's move would prevent his relatives from forcing an annulment of the ceremony, and it is one of the prisoner's cleverest plans promulgated so far, to make the bonds between him and Evelyn fast.

Would Emigrate Irish.

London, March 18.—(C. A. P.)—Giving evidence before the congested districts commission, W. H. Boyd, representing the Irish Landowners' convention, said the Irish peasant who is too lazy to work becomes ignorant of agriculture and he would emigrate the people in shiploads and place them in districts in Canada where land labor can be procured for them. It might be that they would require several years' tuition in agriculture before they would be able to cultivate the land, but his opinion certainly was that emigration was better for Ireland than migration.

The Journal seriously suggests that the Unionists should agree to submit the question of Irish home rule to the arbitrament of the colonial conference on the ground that the Colonial Premiers could speak from experience.

John Redmond, at Liverpool, declared that unless there was deep treachery Irishmen were on the eve of getting control of the important Irish affairs. Regarding the education question he said the only fair solution was the Canadian system which Catholics would accept to-morrow.

Negro Wins Scholarship.

Philadelphia, March 18.—A bright-looking little colored man, with the impressive name of Alain Le Roy Locke, is the first negro to win a Rhodes scholarship. Locke is a senior in Harvard University. He won the honor that entitles him to study at Oxford at a competitive examination held at Boston and was one of seven aspirants who passed.

The conditions under which the scholarship was given included a provision that neither race nor color should bar a candidate; that merit alone should count.

Lost In Blizzard.

Prince Albert, Sask., March 18.—While driving from Kinistino with a coffin for Patrick McGovern, formerly of Orillia, who hanged himself at the home of Charles Brady, twelve miles from the town, Patrick Murphy was thrown from his sleigh, his horses running away.

He got lost in a blizzard, and was found by two commercial travelers Saturday. Both his feet were frozen and may have to be amputated.

Victims of Explosion Buried.

Toulon, France, March 18.—The victims of the explosion on board the battleship Iena, March 12, were given an imposing national funeral yesterday. All business was suspended, the public and many private buildings were draped with black, and the lighted street lamps were covered with crepe.

The Trent Canal Outlet

Will Be No Selection Till Other Routes Are Surveyed.

Premier Unable to Say if Extention of Manitoba Boundaries Will Be Provided For – Importation Of German Cutlery – Discussion On Dominion Lands Accounts – Railway Company's Obligations to Employees.

Ottawa, March 19.—In the question of the hour yesterday Mr. McCarthy of Simcoe was assured by the Minister of Railways that there would be no selection of a western outlet for the Trent Valley Canal until all the available routes had been surveyed and reported upon.

Mr. Armstroug of East Lambton brought up the statement in the reports of J. B. Jackson, Canadian commercial agent at Leeds, England, that quantities of German cutlery and felt were being sent to Canada through British ports, and entered under the preferential tariff in the guise of British-made goods.

The Minister of Customs replied to the effect that severe penalties attached to such practices and the department was giving all possible attention to matters of this kind.

Manitoba Boundaries.

Mr. Roche of Marquette asked whether the Government would introduce a bill this session providing for an extension of the boundaries of the Province of Manitoba.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied: "Owing to the expected early departure of the Prime Minister to attend the imperial conference it is hardly possible to give an affirmative answer to this question."

When the bill respecting the Grand Trunk Railway came up for third reading Mr. Bennett (East Simcoe) proceeded to divide the House upon his amendment providing that nothing therein contained should permit the company to relieve itself from any legal obligation to an employe for wrongful death or personal injury, but the Government weakened and accepted the amendment.

Dominion Lands.

The House resumed consideration in committee of the Dominion lands account bill. The Opposition insisted upon so amending section 10 as to make the records at the various land offices open for inspection as are the registry offices in Ontario. Mr. Oliver feared that such a course would lead to claim jumping. The department was often compelled to show leniency to homesteaders who might be technically in default.

The discussion took a wide range, being participated in by Messrs. Borden, Sproule, Roche, Lake and others. Mr. Oliver received no assistance from his side of the House. He insisted that the fact that many people went to the Northwest and did not find land to suit them was no reflection upon the land laws of their administration.

The Minister had emigrated with others to Manitoba in 1873. Many of the party returned to Ontario because they could not find any suitable land.

It was finally agreed to amend the section so as to required the agents in charge of the land office to answer enquiries from bona fide applicants as to any particular homestead. Mr. Oliver promised to draft a supplemented section to cover this.

RAILWAYS TO COME DOWN.

Railway Commission Declares Three Cent Rate Must Be Maximum.

Ottawa, March 19.—Sixty days from this date, the Grand Trunk Railroad may charge no more than three cents a mile passenger rate, either east or west of Toronto.

The board of railway commissioners, sitting here yesterday, decided that the maximum passenger rate to be charged in Ontario and Quebec, either by the Grand Trunk or the Canadian Pacific, shall be three cents.

Further, the Canadian Pacific must cancel its four-cent rate in Saskatchewan and Alberta, on the lines east of and including the Calgary and Edmonton Railway, charging only three cents. The board proposed to notify other railway companies of this action immediately, and to request them to inform the board whether they are willing to reduce their rates similarly, and, if not, to inform the board of the ground upon which they object to doing so.

Centenarian Dead.

Toronto, March 19.—Mrs. Featherstone Osler, one of the most distinguished and benevolent ladies that has graced the city's history, died yesterday at her residence, in her 101st year.

She was one of the very few centenarians in the Dominion, and was in every respect a remarkable woman. Her last birthday, Dec. 14, was the most memorable of her whole life, as it was on that day she reached a century of existence, and the occasion was made one of celebration and congratulation.

Salvador Joins Honduras.

Panama, March 19.—According to reliable information received here from Salvador, that country has allied itself openly with Honduras in the war with Nicaragua.

On March 10, 2,500 Salvadorean soldiers landed at Amapala and proceeded the next morning for Choluteca. This body of men came from San Miguel, in Honduras, and are under the command of Gen. Jose Dolores, Presa.

Knocked Down By Skater; Dies.

Winnipeg, March 19.—While skating Sunday afternoon Thomas Stoddard collided with another skater and was knocked down, becoming unconscious. He lingered until evening, when he died.

Elected By Returning Officer.

Winnipeg, March 19.—In the recount held in Morris yesterday the vote stood even, and Attorney-General Campbell was elected by the casting vote of the returning officer.

BRITAIN NEGLIGENT.

Government Treatment of Newfoundland Severely Criticized.

London, March 19.—(C. A. P.)—In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Lyttelton said, respecting the Newfoundland fishery controversy, that while admitting it was impossible to ignore the United States case, there was a grave issue which was likely to lead to friction and collision unless it was settled. No prejudice ought to arise in future through making the modus vivendi.

He complained of the pathetic and negligent manner in which the Government treated the matter. He declared the Government ought at once to have consulted the colony, and both together ought to have framed such a policy as would, if possible, have been acceptable to the United States. If not, the policy ought at any rate to have been acceptable to Newfoundland. Britain, he complained most seriously, was the country of the Government which had allowed themselves to be placed in a position of conflict with the colony.

Mr. Winston Churchill, defending the Government, said the provincial arrangement was without prejudice, and was absolutely necessary if the fisheries were to be conducted in a peaceful manner. He denied that the Government had prejudiced the permanent interests of the colony.

The Solicitor-General said Newfoundland was fully consulted. The United States displayed the greatest possible anxiety to reach a reasonable arrangement, and had met the Government fairly.

Previous to the discussion Earl Grey declared he regarded the settlement as temporary.

The Chronicle says the Newfoundland discussion only indicates the need of an improved imperial organization.

The Leader asks: Does Mr. Lyttelton serious maintain that our relations with the United States ought to have been imperilled rather than violate the sanctity of the Newfoundland Legislature's statute-book when the statutes were aimed deliberately at the States.

TWO VESSELS WRECKED.

Mail Steamers On the Rocks, But No Lives Lost.

London, March 19.—Details received yesterday of the disaster to the White Star Liner Suevic, homeward bound from Sydney, N. S. W., by way of Cape Town, with nearly 600 passengers and crew on board, show that she struck the Brandies Rocks close under the Lizard Lighthouse at about 10.30 Sunday night, and will probably be a total wreck. Lifeboats and tugs from the Lizard and Falmouth soon reached the scene, and together with the Suevic's own boats, commenced landing the passengers. The women and children were first sent ashore. There were no fewer than 100 children on board, many of them being babies in arms, whom the local fishermen and their wives lifted out of the boats and carried through the surf to near-by cottages.

Rescued With Breeches Buoy.

London, March 19.—Almost within sight of the wrecked White Star Line steamer Suevic, the Elder Dempster Line steamer Jebba, from Calabar, Lagos and other West African ports for Plymouth and Liverpool, ran on the rocks under the cliffs near Prawle Point early yesterday morning. Her seventy passengers, many of whom were soldiers invalided home from the west coast of Africa, and her crew were safely taken ashore by the breeches buoy. Heavy seas were breaking over the steamer, rendering the lifeboats, which are standing by the vessel, useless. The Jebba will prove a total loss.

Did it ever strike the West Hastings Reform Assassination, which claims to have the post office under its wing, that the front door of that noble building is altogether too small for its purpose, especially in winter time? At present, when one goes in or not, he stands a fine chance of being sandwiched between a couple of husky men or of himself being compelled to rudely brush against ladies. Especially is this state of affairs apparent between 5.30 and 6.30 in the evening. There should be one door to open in and another to open out. If the West Hastings Reformers will kindly mention this matter to the Postmaster-General he will no doubt have it attended to.

A plan is being developed in England whereby young men will be given certificates from the schools in which they have studied, which will substantially mean that they have left school without a stain upon their characters, and that they have passed through a probationary period of eighteen months since leaving school, learning some calling with credit. Such certificates will, it is thought, be of great value to young men, who may emigrate to Canada or other parts of of the Empire. The organization is to co-operate with the Public Schools Association of Montreal. The idea seems to be an excellent one.

The following letter has been received:

Mr. Editor, — I noticed in The Intelligencer some time ago, an announcement that Stewart Masson, Esq., had been appointed and sworn in as Police Magistrate, vice J. J. B. Flint, Esq., resigned, and I mentally exclaimed "A good appointment, no man at the Bar better fitted for the position." What was my surprise last week when I saw Mr. Masson descend from the Bench, and Mr. Flint ascend it and proceed to try cases.

Can you tell me what this means? Have we two Police Magistrates? If so, are they both under pay, and by whom?

Yours,
A PUZZLED ONE.

Married men's hearts will be gladdened (?) by the news sent out from fashionable centres that ladies' hats are to be more expensive this year than ever. Easter Sunday will develop beautiful creations of the milliner's art. They will be trimmed with yards and yards of ribbon and many flowers. The hats will be set well on top and should be worn tipped a little over the face. The colors will be brilliant and beautiful. Red of a soft, subdued tint is one of the leading colors now, while violet and heliotrope are also to be much worn. The softer sex live in anticipation of the exquisite effect that will be produced while the husbands will stand and admire and pay the bills.

The Board of Railway Commissioners, sitting at Ottawa yesterday, decided that after sixty days from that date, the G.T.R. and C.P.R must charge no more than three cents per mile in Ontario, Quebec, Alberta and Saskatchewan. Of course the railways can charge as much below three cents a mile as they like.

We see by The Canadian Mute that fire drill is now held twice a week at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. The Canadian Mute says:

"This was one of the first things to which Superintendent Coughlin gave his attention when he assumed office, and, with the assistance of Mr. W. J. Campbell and Mr. C. J. Peppin, he has devised what is perhaps the most complete and comprehensive system of fire drill to be found in any school for the deaf on the continent."

York Loan Affairs

Toronto, March 18. — The National Trust Company, liquidators of the York County Loan and Savings Company, issued the following statement: "As stated in our former reports the shareholders have been grouped in about thirty different classes in order that the court may define the rights of the parties and pass upon the claim for preferential payment which has been advanced on behalf of certain shareholders. On going into the matter we have, however, been impressed by the fact that in following the ordinary procedure prescribed by the Winding-up Act and the ordinary practice in the Master's office the proceedings would be very complicated and tedious, and exceedingly costly. We have, therefore, upon the advice of counsel, thought it advisable to apply for certain amendments to the Winding-up Act in order that each class of claimant may be represented before the court by counsel and the matter dealt with expeditiously and at the least possible cost. We have met with every possible consideration at the hands of the Minister of Justice and he has taken charge of the matter with every assurance that if at all possible the necessary amendments will be passed this session."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

Clergymen in Politics.

Clergymen who enter the political arena do not, as a rule, mince matters, but strike out from the shoulder, forgetting they are not in the pulpit, when no one can "speak back." They, therefore, must not complain if they are treated as are lay politicians when they indulge too freely in denunciation of those who do not see things as they do. In Manitoba our esteemed Belleville boy, the Rev. Salem Bland, and the Rev. C. W. Gordon, better known as Ralph Connor, the novelist, and others were not satisfied with taking the stump, but used their pulpits in denunciation of the Roblin Government on the temperance question, and were severely handled by the Premier of that province, and by one of his colleagues, the Hon. Robert Rogers, who accused the Rev. gentlemen of stating what they knew to be untrue. Of this we have grave doubts. That they may have been mistaken and arrived at a wrong conclusion as to facts may be, and no doubt is, correct, but that they deliberately misrepresent facts few who know these Rev. gentlemen will believe. The roasting and castigation administered by the Premier is followed by the Winnipeg Telegram, which says:

> "Manitoba Liberals, including Rev. C. W. Gordon, Rev. Salem Bland and Prof. Osborne, deserve no sympathy. They fetched and carried and did chores for Laurierism in its warfare upon the educational liberties of Saskatchewan. The burden of Laurierism was more than they could carry in the English-speaking sections of Manitoba. The compatriots of Laurier turned against them in the French-speaking constituencies."

At Hamilton, Ontario, there has been some plain talking by clergymen, three of whom in that city devoted some thought and plain talking a Sunday or two ago. Rev Mr. Kitchen said that Hamilton was one of the worst cities in the east, and that the local races were attended by the "scum of the earth" and then added: "The man who steals a railway or a constituency is not sent to jail, but to the Senate."

Who will say these utterances are not complimentary to Hamilton and to the Senate?

The Rev. Dr. Hunter spoke on the license question. He said that the plebiscite had caused the defeat of Hon. Geo. W. Ross, and if Premier Whitney did not repeal the three-fifths clause he would be defeated at the next election. Nonsense, Doctor; it was corruption of the vilest and most flagrant character that was the cause of Ross' defeat. The Laurier treatment of the plebiscite vote, which he treated with contempt, though the question of prohibition, which he submitted to the electorate, had over 15,000 majority, did him no harm so far as the Grit temperance vote was concerned. They buried their professed prohibition principles and rallied to his standard. Let's have a little more principle and less chicanery, and the country will be better governed.

Wedding Bells.

LLOYD—REID.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Reid was last Wednesday the scene of a very pretty wedding, being the marriage of their youngest daughter, Gertrude, to Mr. Thomas Lloyd, of Halloway.

At 7.30 the organ sounded forth in rich strains of music, the wedding march being played by Miss Myrtle Wickett. The bride took her place on the arm of her father, under a beautiful arch of evergreens and flowers, the ceremony being performed by her pastor, Elder Barker, before a company of about 60. The bride looked charming in a gown of cream voile, carrying a bouquet of white and pink carnations. The young couple were unattended.

After congratulations the wedding party repaired to the dining-hall, where a sumptuous repast was served. The young couple received many costly and useful presents.

The evening was spent in music and singing, the merry laugh expressing the pleasant evening enjoyed by all. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presence of the grandmother of the bride, looking well and happy. The eve following a reception was given by the groom's mother, Mrs. Lloyd. Mr. Lloyd, having charge of the Eclipse cheese factory, will take up house-keeping there. Many friends join in hoping their voyage through life will be a long and pleasant one.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR COUGH.

Mix half ounce of the pure Virgin Oil of Pine with two ounces of Glycerine and half pint of Whisky. Use in teaspoonful doses. A famous throat and lung specialist, whose camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine has attracted great attention, declares the above formula will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, heal the lungs and cure any cough that is curable. The ingredients can be secured from any drug store at small cost.

Care should be exercised in securing the best quality of Glycerine and Whisky, while the Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) should be purchased only in the original half ounce vials, which are securely sealed in a round, wooden case, with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario—plainly printed thereon. Cheap or adulterated oils, which are sold in bulk, always create nausea, and never effect the desired results.

Bankers Retain the Corby Cup.

The Bankers' hockey team of the City League will have possession of the Corby trophy for another year. Last evening they defeated the Park Nine team, which game settled the ownership of the cup for another year. A number of games have during the winter been played for this cup, but none were more warmly contested than that of last night. It was a battle royal and the winners had only one goal the better of their opponents. The ice was rather soft for fast hockey, but in spite of that drawback it was a hard-fought and interesting game. A goodly number of spectators were in attendance. At half-time the score was 1 to 0 in favor of the Park Nine. During the second half the Bankers succeeded in scoring 4 goals, whilst the Park Nine could find the net but twice. At the finish the score was Bankers 4, Park Nine 3. Mr. James Connolly was referee and performed his duties in a satisfactory way. The line-up was as follows:

Bankers.		Park Nine.
Phillips	Goal	Smith
Taylor	Point	Brennan
Turner	Cover Point	Doland
Ilsey,	Centre	Gerow
Allen	Rover	Storms
Hamilton	Left Wing	Gerow
Burke	Right Wing	Barrett

SPORTING NOTES.

Kenora beat Brandon 4-1 last night, and will now defend the Stanley Cup. The games with the Wanderers are fixed for Wednesday and Friday of this week.

Whitcroft scored three of Kenora's four goals last night. He seems to have made good, all right.

At Oxford last week the Dark Blue representatives beat Cambridge University in the Inter-Varsity lacrosse match by 13 goals to 9. This is their first victory since the matches were commenced in 1903.

Durnan states that he will revisit Australia in November and row Towns again, provided he is allowed £500 expenses in lieu of a share of the gate money.

In support of his challenge to Geo. Towns for the sculling championship Ernest Barry, of Brantford, the most promising sculler in England, has deposited £25 with The London Sportsman. Barry, who is 25 years old, and stands six feet high, wants to row for from £200 to £500 a side, on the Thames course.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

The above melodrama was presented at the Carman last night by a good company, and gave satisfaction. Miss Julia Gray, as Delia Morley, proved herself a fine actress, and the cast was a capable one. The scenery was first-class, as is usually the case in Mr. Carter's productions.

COMIC OPERA TO-MORROW.

"Sergeant Kitty," with Helen Byron as the star, comes to the Carman to-morrow night. The fact that "Sergeant Kitty" has been able to live well into its third season en tour would augur well for its qualities as an entertainer, and point to the fact that the claims made for it that its music was tuneful; its comedy of the good clean, infectious kind, and that there was something of substance in it, had some basis. In the mass of musical plays it is a case of the survival of the fittest, and the management of "Sergeant Kitty" express the greatest satisfaction at the returns so far this season.

Piety often seems like pretense to those who have not felt the impulse of principle.

The Stale Bread of Hungary.

In Hungary they do not eat fresh bread. Whether it is because the Hungarians believe in hygiene more than their American or European brothers and sisters or not has never been told, but the Magyar is partial to stale bread, and the staler the better. His "rozskenyer," or ordinary black bread, as it is eaten by the very large majority of the Magyar population, is carefully laid away on a shelf and dug out for consumption months and months after it has come out of the great ovens. If the huge loaf, weighing something like five pounds and for which the Hungarian pays 6 or 7 kreutzer, equivalent to about 3 or 4 cents in American money, has carefully been hidden away for two years, it is considered all the better. The Hungarian never thinks of where the bread is to come from tomorrow. He thinks of where it is to come from next year, for he has at least a year's supply on the shelves. The Hungarian bakes her bread 365 days ahead of time. Her Wednesday baking is for the Wednesday of a year to come; her Thursday baking for the Thursday of a year to come.

To Cut the Night In Two.

Professor Victor Hallopeau, member of the Paris Academy of Medicine, says:

The true secret of long continued, valuable brain work is to cut the night in two. The scholar, the inventor, the financier, the literary creator, should be asleep every night by 10 o'clock, to wake again at, say, 2 in the morning. Three hours' work, from 2 to 5, in the absolute tranquillity of the silent hours should mean the revealing of new powers, new possibilities, a wealth of ideas undreamed of under the prevailing system.

From 5 to 8 or 8:30 sleep again. Taking up then the day's work, the brain will be still saturated with the mental fruits of the midnight vigil; there will be no effort in putting into practice or carrying further what was planned or begun those few hours before.

The habit may be hard to acquire, but mechanical means of waking at first will induce the predisposition.

We love to expect, and when expectation is either disappointed or gratified we want to be again expecting.—Johnson.

A Smooth Villain.

"Before we were married," she complained, "you always engaged a cab when you took me anywhere. Now you think the street car is good enough for me."

"No, my darling, I don't think the street car is good enough for you. It's because I'm so proud of you. In a cab you would be seen by nobody, while I can show you off to so many people by taking you in a street car."

"You dear! Forgive me if I gave you pain in saying what I did."

The Story of a Charm.

A titled English lady has a story of a woman who had a little Japanese charm given her. Every time she wore it some mischance happened, and she generally fell ill. Her son at last took the jewel to the keeper of the Japanese curios in the Paris museum and requested to be informed what the charm represented. "This," said the expert at once, "is the emblem of sickness." The woman never wore it again.

What to Name Your Dog.

There are certain English names for dogs that have meanings that might be given when appropriate. Alan means a hound; Ashur, black; Blanco, white; Crispin, curly; Duncan, brown; Julius, soft haired; Leonard, lionlike; Linus, flaxen haired; Rufus, red; Vivian, lively; Clara, bright; Constance, loyal; Joyce, sportive. Such names as Scud, Rover, Dart and Patter are suggestive in themselves. Two classic names suitable for dogs are Bitery and Lyon.

THE KING'S FOOD.

Explanation of the Ancient Board of Green Cloth.

With regard to the board of green cloth it is one of the most ancient institutions of the English court, is composed of the lord steward, of the treasurer, and of the controller of the household, as well as of several minor officials, and derives its name from the green cloth on the table at which the officials sit on the occasion of their meetings. It has charge not only of the accounts and of the victualing of the royal household, but likewise of the exercise of a number of legal prerogatives and immunities pertaining to the residences of the sovereign. The board of green cloth is, in fact, the council of the lord high steward, who in ancient days bore the title of seneschal, and who, subject of course, to the sovereign, enjoys jurisdiction, independent of the ordinary tribunals of the land, over all the inmates of the royal palaces and royal parks, and over the people connected therewith. Indeed, the lord steward, in conjunction with his board of green cloth, has the rights of life and death over offenders, and the power of selecting a jury from among the servants of the sovereign.

In these modern times it is doubtful whether the lord high steward would be willing to exercise his prerogative of sitting in judgment upon a case of felony, such as, for instance, a murder committed within the precincts of Buckingham Palace or Windsor Castle, and he would probably delegate his authority to one of the judges of the High Court of Justice to deal with the case. In fact, he does something of the kind at the Ascot races. The Ascot race course, as everybody knows, forms part of the royal domain of Windsor, and since it has become so popular as a race meeting during the Ascot week in midsummer, it has been found necessary to devise some means of administering summary justice on the spot.

Powers of the Lord Steward.

Accordingly the lord steward of the household each year secures the services of the senior police magistrate of the metropolis for the Ascot week, and the magistrate in question, by virtue of the authority delegated to him by the lord steward, holds court in his name in a room provided for the purpose beneath the grandstand and inflicts penalties on the thieves and toughs who are brought before him charged with offenses committed upon the racecourse.

The last occasion on which the lord steward dealt with a case of homicide was when the mysterious murder of Senlis, the Swiss valet of the Duke of Cumberland, afterward first King of Hanover, took place in St. James' Palace. The duke was the subject of such general execration that popular sentiment did not hesitate to lay the crime at the door of this son of George III. But the coroner's jury, recruited by the lord steward and by the board of green cloth from among the King's servants, absolved the duke of all responsibility and rendered a verdict of murder by unknown persons.

The lord high steward receives his charge immediately from the sovereign, and by virtue of his office takes precedence of all dukes who do not happen to be princes of the reigning house. The immediate direction of the royal household "below stairs," that is, the kitchens, the domestic servants, etc., is in his hands, and in those of the board of green cloth. He and the latter are responsible for the expenditures and for the supplies. But virtually his authority extends over the entire court, even the chamber, the chapel, and the stables. The lord steward's insignia of office is a white wand or staff, which he carries in the presence of the sovereign, but which on state occasions, when the monarch is not present, is borne before him by a footman, bareheaded. On the death of the sovereign from whom he has received the white staff he breaks it over the royal bier at the close of the obsequies to indicate that his office has ceased and that there is no longer any board of green cloth.

Fate of Sunken Ships.

What becomes of the ship that sinks in midocean? If it is of wood it takes in the first place, considerable time for it to reach the bottom. In a hundred or more fathoms of water a quarter of an hour will elapse before the ship reaches the bottom. It sinks slowly, and when the bottom is reached, it falls gently into the soft, cozy bed, with no crash or breaking.

Of course, if it is laden with pig iron or corresponding substances, or if it is an iron ship, it sinks rapidly and sometimes strikes the bottom with such force as to smash in pieces. Once sunken a ship becomes the prey of the countless inhabitants of the ocean.

They swarm over and through the great boat, and make it their home. Besides this, they cover every inch of the boat with a thick layer of lime. This takes time, of course, and when one generation dies another continues the work, until finally the ship is so laden with heavy incrustations, corals, sponges and barnacles that, if wood, the creaking timbers fall apart and slowly but surely are absorbed in the waste at the sea bottom.

Cabby and His Fare.

"Dear me, cabby," said an old lady, as she lighted from a four-wheeler at Liverpool Street Station, "your horse's knees are bad."

"Don't you go and think it's becos 'e's got into a silly 'abit of tryin' to stand on 'is 'ead in the street, ma'am, 'cos it ain't," was the reply. "That there 'oss is a serious thinkin' 'oss, 'e is, ma'am; a werry prayerful animile 'e is, too. 'E's been praying this last six year as 'ow 'is pore old master'll one o' these days come across a kind-'earted party what'll give 'im a copper or two over 'is bare fare, but, Lor' bless yer, ma'am," he added, as he looked at the shilling the old lady had handed him, "'e's losin' faith fast, and unless something soon 'appens 'e'll die a bloomin' hinfidel."

SELECTIONS

SEAGOING RAILROAD.

Line From Miami to Key West to Cost About $20,000,000.

Inside of three years, when work now under way is completed, it will be possible to travel in a railroad car all the way from New York or Chicago to Havana. This will be brought about by the construction of a seagoing railroad which will run from key to key over the 154 miles separating Miami and Key West. From the latter point it is only 100 miles to the Cuban capital, and across this stretch of water the trains will be ferried on monster floats capable of holding thirty cars.

This project is an extension of the Florida East Coast railroad, owned by Henry M. Flagler. It was started last year, and up to date the grading of the section of the road on the mainland and the construction of some of the viaducts have been completed.

Some idea of the boldness of the undertaking may be gained from the fact that from Long key to Conch key it is 10,400 feet, across Knight's key channel 7,800 feet, across Moser key channel 7,800 feet and across Bahia Honda channel 14,940 feet. However, along the major portion of the route lies a coral bed which will make a firm foundation for the viaducts. One of these viaducts will be the longest marine bridge in the world, double the length of Brooklyn bridge, in New York. The viaducts will consist of reenforced concrete arch spans and piers, and to insure safety and comfort the rails will be laid thirty feet above low water. Eventually it will be a double track road all the way from Miami to Key West.

Aside from its attractiveness to travelers, this line across the Florida keys is already being regarded in the commercial world as a factor in the future development of both Florida and Cuba. About 4,000 men are engaged in this latest Flagler enterprise. The traffic between Florida and Cuba will begin as soon as the line reaches Bahia Honda, some distance north of Key West and where there is a deep harbor. But the plan is to reach Key West as soon as possible and make that place one of the big southern seaports.

Money From Seaweed.

Japan, which wastes nothing in its domestic economy, realizes $2,000,000 annually from its seaweed products. According to the report of C. J. Davidson, an attache of the British embassy at Tokyo, more than fifty varieties of the seaweed found along the Japanese coast are utilized either for food or as manufactured products.

The traveler sees bundles of dried seaweed, white with the crystallized salt of the sea water, hung from the front of every food stall. The coarser varieties are stewed and served with fish. Some of the delicate sprigs of sea grass are boiled with fish soups and remain a vivid green, floating against the red lacquer of the soup bowls.

Other species of seaweed are used in the manufacture of glue, of plaster and of starch. Whole villages are given over to seaweed fishing and the drying and packing of the product for shipment to the manufacturing plants in the large cities. In the country along the seashore the farmers use the coarse and ropy kelp for fertilizing their vegetable fields.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

India's Fine Roads.

It is probably not generally known that India is remarkable for its possession of many most excellent roads, some of them of great length, like that which runs from Bombay to Delhi, a distance of 900 miles. It is described as "a perfect highway." Another fine road, 1,500 miles in length, extends from Calcutta to Peshawur, at the frontier of Afghanistan. These roads are kept in perfect repair and were built originally for military purposes before the advent of railroads. Many of the native princes give particular care to their roads. Of course the nature of the country plays a part in the existence of the roads, and now they serve as a stimulus to the use of automobiles, which are very popular in India.

Steamships' Quick Lunches.

One of the finest cargoes of iron ore ever mined in the Lake Superior region was trundled aboard a little schooner about fifty years ago. Four days were required to put 300 tons aboard her. A week was required to get the ore out of her. Two seasons ago the great steel steamer Augustus B. Wolvin loaded more than 10,000 tons of ore in eighty-nine minutes, or in less than an hour and a half. And this huge cargo was jerked out of her in a little more than four hours.—Outing.

Japanese Brewing.

Mr. Shibata, the brewer, has ordered a solid gold pan, which will be used for tempering sake. The capacity of the pan is such as to hold about a hundred gallons. It will take two or three months to make the pan, during which time the house of the goldsmith will be specially guarded by the police.—Tokyo Times.

Would Cremate All Autos.

A petition has been presented to parliament asking that every motor vehicle in the country be burned in one great bonfire before 1908, the resultant scrap metal to be sold for the benefit of those who have been maimed by the accursed automobiles.—Brussels Cor. New York Sun.

TRIAL MARRIAGES.

A Queer Old Custom That Existed For Ages in Scotland.

"Handfasting" was a custom that existed for ages in Scotland. The contracting parties met at the annual fairs in their several districts. There young men chose the maids who best pleased them. They joined hands and by that act became man and wife until the corresponding day of the following year. If the love and fortunes of the pairs had prospered during the year, on the anniversary of their meeting they were legally married by the priest; if all had not been well, then they parted.

The practice is supposed to have arisen from the scarcity of clergy. If the pair decided to part at the end of the twelvemonth, the bride was at liberty to marry another man, her apprenticeship to matrimony not carrying with it any reproach to her. Such marriages were by custom made legal. Any issue resulting from the union would in the case of a second marriage be taken by the father and rank as heir after the children of the marriage which lasted for life.

Many weddings were unmade at the end of the year, but it was dangerous if the initiative were taken by the man who had wedded the kinswoman of a chief. When a Macdonald of Sleat availed himself of his right to send back the sister of a Macleod of Dungaven, the latter resented it as an indignity. "He had no bonfire to celebrate his wedding, but he shall have one to solemnize his divorce," Macleod swore. He kept his word, and a terrible vendetta between the clans resulted.

ODDITIES IN GRAVES.

A Woman Who, Born, Living and Dying Cross, Was Buried Cross.

There is a curious old gravestone in Prestbury churchyard which records the fact that one woman at least in England died a bachelor. Her name was Sarah Pickford, and the stone gravely informs the reader she was there interred "August ye 17, Anno Dom. 1703, and died a Bachelour in the 48th yeare of her age."

A stone in Westminster abbey records the interment there of George Graham, who was the only workman that received the honor of being buried in Westminster abbey. He was a scientific instrument maker, who in 1700 invented the deadbeat escapement in clocks. His funeral was attended by the Royal society in a body.

In East Ham churchyard there is a tombstone placed crossways. The woman interred is said to have been born cross, lived cross, married a Mr. Cross and died cross. Her dying request was to be buried cross, and this was carried out.

As to more ancient graves, that of Noah is reported to be in the small town of Nakhitchevan, near the foot of Mount Ararat, and is sixty feet in length. Another tradition says that the grave is merely a niche in the wall of an abandoned fortress.—London Chronicle.

A Direct Appeal.

A story is told of a New York car conductor who had once been in the ministry and who retained some of his former ways of speech in his new calling. He had been at the front of the car collecting fares, and when he returned to his platform a well disposed person told him that a man had boarded the car at Houston street and had found a place inside. The conductor stepped inside the doorway and ran his mild gaze up and down the car, but could not be sure which of the tightly packed passengers was the late arrival.

"Will the gentleman who got on at Houston street please rise?" he asked calmly.

The gentleman rose involuntarily, and, with a bow and a "Thank you!" the conductor collected his fare.

Irving's Uphill Fight.

When Irving first appeared in a certain midland town critics declared that his curious mannerisms of voice, gait and gesture destroyed his chances of becoming a great actor. How Irving confounded his critics by creating triumph after triumph and redeeming the English stage from the charge of mediocrity is now a matter of history. This great Shakespearean actor rose from the ranks to the head of his profession by sheer force of his histrionic power, ability and originality. And withal he was one of the most kindly of men, generous to a fault when the distress and troubles of others came under his notice.—London Mail.

Adam and Eve.

Adam was making his avowal to Eve.

"No power shall ever take you from my side," he declared fervently.

"That's a pretty rash promise, isn't it," inquired Eve, winking, "since you know I was taken from your side the first thing after you arrived here?"

Perceiving that the woman was giving him a rib roast, Adam went off sulking in the apple orchard.—Exchange.

He Was Right.

"See here," feebly complained the victim after the accident, "I thought you said it was perfectly safe to go up in that old elevator?"

"Well," replied the elevator man, "so it was safe to go up. You see, the dangerous part of it was comin' down."

TIMELY TOPICS.

WHEN CHILDREN PRAY.

How sorely pressed the Lord must be
With all the tearful people's woes;
The weak implore for mastery,
Above their strong, relentless foes;
The poor cry out against the rich,
The slave would fling his chains away,
And oft their cries must be unheard,
But God, I think, hears every word
When little children kneel to pray.

Mayhap the pious Pharisee
Is never heard above the roof,
When he, at bedtime, crooks the knee,
Beseeching for his own behoof;
Their prayers may all be said in vain
Who arm themselves and march away
To fall in battle or to kill,
But God, I think, must listen still
When little children kneel to pray.

The ones who wrangle over creeds,
And those who think, forsooth, that they
Are sent to judge the people's needs
And give the word and show the way,
May be so little and obscure
That God, with all His awful cares,
Is deaf to them; but, filled with love
I think He listens from above
When little children say their prayers.

The newest, smartest way of suggesting that a person uses language strong and vigorous, but not profane, is to say that person indulges in "tongue banging." This phrase comes straight from the heart of modish London. Cremation is becoming more and more the fashion among the titled and untitled aristocracy of Great Britain, and this is naturally leading to the abandonment, in a great measure, of ancestral vaults and of the old family mausoleums; and the substitution in their stead of columbariums, such as that of Lord Monson. These columbariums, in spite of their ornate character, do not, however, inspire the feelings of solemnity aroused by the stately tombs that adorn so many of the ancient cathedrals, abbeys and churches of the United Kingdom.

Aged Farmer Suicides.

Woodstock, March 19.—Suspended by a halter from the limb of a tree, William Slawson, 68 years of age, a farmer, was found by his wife in the woods on his farm north of here Saturday evening.

Slawson told his wife he intended going to Maycock's farm. Evidently he went to the stable, got a halter and walked to the woods.

It seems he mounted a rail fence, fastened the halter around his neck and jumped.

He Drew on Sight.

Mart Hoover years ago, when Kansas was not the cultivated commonwealth it has since become, had sent a consignment of corn to a commission merchant in Kansas City. The merchant telegraphed, telling the consignor: "Your credit is $27.40. Draw on me at sight."

But Hoover was mad. He had expected his money, and none came. He felt he had been duped, and he treasured up the grievance. One time, about six weeks later, the commission man came to Hoover's town, got out of the bus and started to walk down the street. Hoover saw him and instantly drew his revolver and fired. His eye was fairly good. The bullet cut away the merchant's necktie and unfastened his collar.

Then Hoover put up his gun.

"That's expensive shootin'," said he, "but I reckon you're as sorry as I am."

"What do you mean?" demanded the town constable, arresting the gun man.

"He told me to," said Hoover, surprised.

"Told you to?" demanded the white-cheeked city man. "I never did anything of the kind!"

"You did," said Hoover. And, drawing out the telegram, he read:

"'Draw on me at sight.'

"I done it," said he.

Curious Freaks of Razors.

The finest grades of razors are so delicate that even the famous Damascus sword blades cannot equal them in texture. It is not generally known that the grain of a Swedish razor is so sensitive that its general direction is changed after a short service. When you buy a fine razor the grains run from the upper end of the outer point in a diagonal direction toward the handle. Constant stropping will twist the steel until the grain appears to be straight up and down. Subsequent use will drag the grain outward from the edge, so that after steady use for several months the fiber of the steel occupies a position exactly the reverse of that which it did on the day of purchase. The process also affects the temper of the blade, and when the grain sets from the lower outer points toward the back you have a razor which cannot be kept in condition even by the most conscientious barber. But here's another curious freak that will take place in the same tool: If you leave the razor alone for a month or two and take it up you will find that the grain has assumed its first position. The operation can be repeated until the steel is worn through to the back.—Strand Magazine.

FEW CRACK BILLIARDISTS.

Schaefer Deserves Most Credit For Improving the Game.

The fact that very few first class billiardists have ever been developed is one of the strange features of the game. Vignaux, Schaefer and Slosson have been champions more than thirty years, the only others developed during all this time being Ives, Hoppe and Sutton, a most remarkable showing, not to be paralleled in any other branch of sport.

Of all the experts Schaefer deserves most credit for the development of the game to its present high standard. He always has been anxious and willing to aid in the development of youngsters, and Ives, Hoppe, Morningstar and Sutton all were his pupils. The balk line nurse, the feature of play responsible for all high runs, however, is the invention of Sutton, and when as a shortstop he first sprung it he occasioned great surprise.

Schaefer is the father of all the rules under which billiards are played. At various times he has surmounted by his inventive genius the many barriers imposed on experts to decrease their speed and necessitated the making of new restrictions, for the other experts could all take advantage of the new discoveries as soon as they came to know them, and almost unending runs were the result.

In a championship contest between Jake and Ives the latter sat down with 14 to go, and Schaefer came to bat with 500 to go. The largest run ever made up to that time had been 283, and the Wizard seemed to have but little show to win. His great inventive genius came to the rescue, however, the anchor nurse was discovered, and Schaefer ran the game out. This was the only time the anchor nurse was allowed in a match game, for Ives after it was discovered could play it as well as Schaefer, and as it made the game too easy it was immediately barred.

Incidental to the above game, Frank White, a well known Chicago sport, won a most remarkable bet from Leo Mayer, the well known bookmaker. As Schaefer walked up to the table in the final inning White turned around to Mayer, who was making books on the contest, and said, "What are the odds now, Leo?" "One hundred to 1," said Mayer. "I'll bet you $10," said White. "Done," said Leo. And when the game was over Leo had to settle with the wise Mr. White, who, a billiard player himself, knew that a game was never over until the last point was made.—Washington Post.

Painting Barrels.

Did you ever see a Standard Oil man paint a barrel? No? It is a revelation. Tricks in all trades. The oil barrels, as every well informed man should know (Standard Oil being the biggest thump in the world), are blue as to bilge and bulge and white as to heads. The completed barrel is rolled into the shop by thousands. A man steps up with a brush of white paint and with three swipes executes a design upon the head, then spins the barrel along. It is caught by another man with a brush deeply dipped in blue paint. He takes the rim between his thumb and fingers, gives it a whirl and while that barrel is spinning runs his brush up and down. In less than three seconds that barrel is all blue. Then as it spins along the man with the white paints keels it over and with three more swipes makes the other head white. Talk about your bowling alleys!—New York Press.

Blind Football Fans.

When the 200 inmates of Henshaw's Blind asylum, Manchester, sat down to tea the other evening an officer read out to them the announcement in the Daily Mail of a special edition for the blind. There was a burst of applause when the reading was over, followed by a buzz of animated discussion.

"It is surprising," said Mr. M. H. Illingworth, the governor, "what a keen interest the blind take in field sports. They follow the game of football in detail."

"Have you ever been to a football match?" he asked a blind youth.

"Yes," he replied.

"And you know the players?"

"Yes, I know them all and everything that is going on."—London Mail.

Single and Plural S Germans.

A journalist in Berlin has been exercising his ingenuity in attempts to explain the meaning of the letter S which appears with more or less frequency after the names of German military officers in the records kept at the ministry of war and in the kaiser's military cabinet. He has come to the following conclusions: One S after an officer's name means that this particular officer "sauft" (drinks); SS means that he "sauft stark" (drinks hard); SSS denotes that he "sauft sehr stark" (drinks very hard); SSSS means that he "sauft sehr stark schnapps" (drinks very hard schnapps); finally, SSSSS means that the "schnapps" is "schlecht" (bad). Any officer with five S's is summarily dismissed by the kaiser.

A Swell Bootblack.

A bootblack wearing a diamond stud and whose linen is as spotless as that worn by those whose shoes he shines is one of the fixtures of a government building in this city. He was highly insulted when a passing stranger, seeing his "kit," asked him to "polish 'em up!" In a loud voice the son of Italy gave the well intentioned offender to understand that he "shined only by contract." This is a fact, and when at the end of each month he collects his "fees" the bootblack's pile in profits amounts to as much as the salaries of some of the men who employ him and is really in excess of that paid to many.—Philadelphia Record.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"I am curious to see him. I wish he would at this moment enter by your door!"

"The saints forbid, senor!" put in the priest. "You know not what you say. Without question you are a rich and a great man, but the lord of the sierra demands more than a ransom sometimes."

McCorkadale snapped his fingers.

"Patron, you shall hire me a mule to-morrow, and I will ride into the mountains to look for Don Q."

"You must, then, buy the mule at its full price, excellency" replied the inn-keeper sullenly "for I am a poor man, and I shall never set eyes on it or you any more."

The Cuban laughed, yawned, stretching his arms over his head.

"Have no fear, patron; I do not believe in your brigand. I have met some in my time a good deal more terrible. I will but ride back into Malaga."

As he spoke someone struck a guitar and began to sing. Verse by verse it flowed—a pathetic song of love and parting. Then another voice followed, in an altered rhythm, the singer improvising—as Spaniards commonly do—with a witty allusion to the stranger who, mistaking the quebranta-huesos for a parrot, would go up into the sierra to scratch its head.

A handsome young man, in the worn, leather accoutrements of a mountaineer, with a scarlet waistband, who had been dozing in a corner, an ancient fowling-piece propped between his knees, now woke up, and, seizing the guitar, chanted out a hunting-song in praise of the wild boar and the joys of bringing him to bay in some deep thicket under the mountain spurs.

The company was visibly stirred.

"Any boars to be had hereabouts?" McCorkadale asked with interest.

A chorus answered him. Robledo, the singer, was himself a cazador—a hunter who had killed many boars. There were also roedeer and foxes up there in the gorges. But Robledo, in spite of the Cuban's brusque urging and offers of good payment, hung back at first, though, after some persuasion he promised to arrange a hunt for his excellency.

Under cover of a surge of talk, the innkeeper brushed past the Cuban.

"Do not go, senor," he said in a low voice. "It is dangerous to hunt wild boars. If anything should happen to you, it will give my inn a bad name."

But opposition was the salt of life to McCorkadale. His eyes gleamed.

"What is your good name to me?" he asked with a laugh.

Thrim-thrim-thrim-thrim! The guitar twanged a dancing measure. Immediately there was the crisp, melodious rattle of castanets, the circle about the fire broke up, and in the clear space two couples were dancing the girls swaying gracefully as meadow grasses, with many delicate steppings, swift and involved.

McCorkadale watched them, a glow coming slowly up into his face. Then he sprang to his feet, thrust aside one of the young men, and took his place as partner in the dance. There was a suppressed scuffle behind him as the cazador's sinewy wrist spoiled a knife thrust aimed at the Cuban's back. The ousted partner, a young shepherd, turned in hot blood on the hunter.

"Be content, Estaban; my lord desires him," said Robledo soothingly.

In these dances partners advance and retreat, circle and bend, each moving in relation to the other, but separately without contact even of the hands. McCorkadale took his part ably and with abandon, but as the music quickened he caught the girl by the waist and whirled her round in a rough waltz. He fancied he heard a growl from the spectators, but the dance hurried to an end and a black-browed man at once came up to tell him that the cazador had already departed to locate the quarry for his excellency's pleasure.

In the forenoon of the next day Wilson from his couch by the wall watched McCorkadale ride away toward the mountains with Robledo and one or two others. The innkeeper turned in from the doorway.

• • • • • • •

"George McCorkadale, most entirely at your service," the gentleman of that name was saying as he swept his hat in an elaborate bow across his feet.

"McCorkadale," Don Q. repeated slowly, gazing at the swarthy face opposite, "and an Englishman? Yet that turn of the wrist was surely never learned beyond the sound of the Spanish tongue." He illustrated the supple movements as he spoke.

Don Q. was sunning himself on the rocky terrace outside his dwelling-cave. In front of him stood the recently-caught captive smiling and jaunty, in these particulars varying to a marked degree from the generality of individuals who occupied that position.

The boar hunt had resolved itself into a trap for the hunter. When McCorkadale arrived at the patch of level ground shut in by steep cliffs and feathered with brushwood—which he was assured was excellent ground for pig—the men had closed in about him. He grasped at the rifle slung behind his saddle, but his captors were too quick for him.

His first feeling was a murderous flare of rage. But Robledo and his companions knew how to handle furious men, and as the mule was led upwards through patches of pine and pinsapo, along tracks hardly to be detected, and lastly, through barren, echoing ravines, the Cuban cooled down to a more reasonable view of the situation. For an idea germinated in his mind that a temporary seclusion in the glen of the brigand might very well answer the purpose for which he had left England. He proposed to have as good a time as possible and though, when he left the languorous woods behind and climbed further and further into the shadows of bare black gorges, the desolation and intangible menace of the landscape communicated itself to his thoughts, he shook it off, and prepared to meet the dreaded chief with a cheerfulness he judged that personage would find unusual.

"Though English born, senor, I had the privilege to be brought up in your country." He supplemented the speech by another extravagant bow.

The chief's eyelids flickered. There was a suspicion of mockery in the man's courtesies.

"I have long been an exile from the world," he remarked with apparent irrelevance—"and there are many types of Englishmen."

McCorkadale looked sharply at him. The words might have conveyed an insult had the tone been lest suave.

"Shall we touch on the disagreeable of business?" went on Don Q. urbanely. "The matter of your ransom, for example, senor?"

"Certainly. But pray let me assure you I am not a rich man. More's the pity!"

"It is indeed a pity, as I had thought of saying fifty thousand—"

"Pesetas?" interjected the prisoner airily.

"The senor is mistaken. I was about to say dollars; but, since he has the bad taste to bargain, we will say pounds—fifty thousand English pounds sterling."

"You joke, surely? It is the ransom of a millionaire!" exclaimed McCorkadale.

Don Q. bent his head with a polite gesture of assent.

"Precisely. I perceive you do not understand that I am a man whom sordid considerations easily pain and offend. The question is now in abeyance. We will not return to it for a week. The petty details of business disgust me, as I have said; but finance on a grand scale—that is another affair. I have looked forward for some time to discussing the subject with so eminent an authority as yourself."

McCorkadale turned the dark red of a swarthy man.

"In spite of your exile you seem to gather some news up here," he remarked, dropping his debonair manner.

"I flatter myself that it is so," agreed Don Q. with much amiability. "I count myself fortunate in meeting you. At one time or another members of various professions have honored me here in the mountains—sportsmen, doctors, politicians and so on; but never before a millionaire. They came to me in various ways—by rail, by carriage, on foot, and on horseback. But you, senor, outdid them all by rushing headlong into my domains in—an automobile." The chief smiled, as though paying his companion a compliment.

"Ah, the scoundrel!" said McCorkadale reminiscently. Then, resuming his flippant manner: "You've got the better of me this trip. Well, I must communicate at once with my secretary. This ransom will take some time to collect,"—adding to himself, "but may I be skinned if ever you finger a penny of it!"

It was the evening of the second day. Don Q. and his guest were sitting within the cave over cigarettes and coffee. The conversation touching on many points, lingered long on present-day financial methods. McCorkadale had explained the nature of "trusts" and "corners." He had gaily admitted that such combinations stifle legitimate trade, that companies to absorb any special line could be engineered with the effect of starving small traders out of their lawful share of business. A description of the corner in corn was given, though its promoter modestly omitted to mention his interest in the operation.

Don Q. listened with attention.

"It would appear from much that you have been good enough to tell me, senor, that business is a cloak for many sores," he remarked.

McCorkadale showed his white teeth in a complacent grin.

"I suppose one must acknowledge so much. But what does it matter as long as the sore is on the back of another man?" he replied.

Don Q. eyed him broodingly.

"You may not be aware, senor, that I hold strong views on one's duty toward one's neighbor," he said.

"It goes without saying," laughed the Cuban: "but, I presume, stronger one's on one's duty to oneself?"

The chief raised a delicate yellow forefinger.

"Pardon me, I think not," he said with some grimness. "But it seems strange to me that I, who occasionally perform the meritorious action of relieving the rich of a part of their wealth, and thereby decreasing their temptations, am put outside the pale of the law, whereas these of whom you speak spend their lives in robbing the poor, and yet are respected and praised. How is this?"

"A matter of luck, I suppose," responded the other indifferently. "But there is something I want to talk over with you. Just reconsider the subject of my ransom—£50,000 is a long price."

Don Q. rose abruptly.

"At the end of the week, senor, when we have come to know one another better, we will speak of it again."

"But the delay is absurd!" exclaimed McCorkadale angrily. "I cannot permit it—I insist—"

Don Q. raised his hand.

"There are two courses open to you," he said slowly. "Either you remain as my guest, in which case I am sure you will respect my prejudices, or you will become the guest of my children in the valley, who will, I fear, not be likely to respect yours."

The Cuban set his jaw. It was intolerable!

"Call up your comrades, Gaspar, Robledo and the rest, and settle the matter out of hand," he said insolently, losing hold on his temper; but the chief walked away into the interior of the cave without replying.

It was evident that detention in the mountains annoyed the Cuban out of all proportion to the hardships it entailed. Don Q. became serious, and at the end of the week he spoke:

"It would seem, senor, that my hospitality does not meet with as much of your approval as I could wish."

"This has lasted long enough," broke out the other irritably. "Even your society and that of your companeros, Gaspar & Co., down there"—he pointed a brown finger at the fires in the glade—"begins to pall after a while."

Don Q. sat silent for a moment, swallowing his wrath. This low-bred animal had, for the second time, dared to speak of the villainous Gaspar and his like as the "comrades" of their chief.

"I have been thinking much the same, senor." He spoke at last with a steady voice.

"That is well. If you let me go to-night I will pay you half as much again as the ransom you ask."

"You are in a hurry to descend the mountains. To-night, you suggest? O, no, senor, I grieve to disappoint you. This day month, shall we say?"

"Suppose we say this day week instead?" amended the prisoner. A notion struck him that he would play with Don Q.—play with his avaricious desires—fool him with a dream of wealth. "You remember our conversations on financial methods?"

The chief glanced at him for a moment, then lowered his eyes.

"Perfectly, senor."

In a few sentences McCorkadale explained the situation. He himself was the genius responsible for the famous corner in corn. He stood to gain something over two millions provided he reached London in time.

Don Q. listened, nodding to emphasize the points. Although he did not speak, a certain excitement was discernible about him.

"And if you do not arrive in London on the 21st?" he questioned.

"Of course, the whole scheme will fall through. It will mean ruin, in short."

"To you?" inquired the chief, with interest.

"Caramba! yes, to me. But we will not even allude to that most unlikely alternative. You, who are also a business man—" he began persuasively.

"Yes, yes," softly interjected Don Q. "we are both brigands. You are a brigand of the city, I of the mountains. I deprive the rich of their superfluity, you rob the poorest of their bread."

The Cuban arched his black eyebrows.

"These are details," he said, flicking the ash from his cigar.

"It is your intention to starve many thousands—poor women and little children—that you may grow richer—you who are rich already?" pursued Don Q. in a colorless tone.

McCorkadale stared him in the eyes.

"That is their business—or, at any rate, of their husbands and fathers."

"True, true," assented the chief, with the meekness of one convinced.

"I thought you would see it in my light, especially if I gave you my word that if you enable me to reach London in good time, I, on my part, will engage to make over to you 25 per cent. of any profits I may make on the deal."

"It is clear," commented the chief politely, "that my patron saint sent you into the sierra."

"Anyhow, it will be a record haul in the annals of brigandage."

"You must pardon me, senor, if I make one small amendment to your plan. I, of course, trust you; but we are, as you said, business men, and a certain sum in hand before you leave me, by way of guarantee for the rest you have with so much of generosity promised, would be more satisfactory to my children down there in the valley. Suppose we name £100,000 as the sum to be placed in my hands by next Sunday. If you will have the goodness to write your instructions now the money may come in time for the 21st. You will pardon me."

"Well, it is uncommonly inconvenient," McCorkadale objected.

"What would you? My children must be satisfied. They do not comprehend the operations of high finance."

"Think again, Don Q. Surely there is no need to lift so much capital. Let the original sum stand."

"Pray do not force me to repent once again of a transaction between us. If you desire to bargain we can postpone the matter for another week. No? Then I will send you writing materials for your letter."

The chief passed into the cave leaving McCorkadale upon the terrace.

At first the Cuban frowned at the opposite cliff, but pleasanter thoughts quickly followed, and suddenly he threw back his head and laughed aloud—a ringing neigh of laughter that awoke the echoes.

Only one man in the valley below ventured to look up, and his mouth opened wide in an answering grin.

Don Q. had approached from behind with his usual noiseless step. He withdrew as quietly.

"The joyous spirits of my guests please our amiable Brancolo. It is good. We laugh each in our turn, we of the sierra," he said.

• • • • • • •

From the outset McCorkadale had tried to get into touch with Don Q.'s men, but failed until he happened upon Brancolo, the upshot of their stealthy conferences being a very neat plot to rid themselves of Don Q. and to acquire his treasure.

Brancolo was half Italian, half Spanish—a powerful, hairy fellow with a sleek, meaning smile. He had not been long in the sierra, and nothing short of necessity would have driven him there, for he was accustomed to a city life of easy infamy.

As the plot matured Brancolo persuaded a couple of intimates to join. The night for the attempt was fixed, and no suspicion seemed to have visited the chief. The Cuban was allowed to wander at will about the valley—even to linger till after darkness had fallen. A faint rasping noise rising nightly in the cave had so far eluded Don Q.'s usually vigilant ear, a fact which McCorkadale persistently brought forward as a proof that the brigand's best days were over.

On the appointed evening, after a friendly dinner and smoke enjoyed in the company of the chief, McCorkadale withdrew to the particular recess in which he slept behind a cunningly contrived door. The accustomed routine was gone through. The chief followed him to turn down the bolt. It fell with its well-known click, and the Cuban in the darkness beyond it listened with a satisfied grin.

That night a change had taken place in the weather. The wind moaned through the swaying pines, squalls of rain drove across the valley, and when, a couple of hours after midnight, Brancolo met one of his allies at the foot of the pathway leading to the brigand's cave, a dense mountain mist filled the valley.

"What? Are you alone? Is it you, Barbon? Where, then, is Pedro?" asked the Italian.

"Have you not heard? The Old One sent him to Cantalera this evening," was the reply.

"What matters? There are still three of us."

Brancolo began to feel his way upwards, pushing his companion ahead of him. Weird noises of nighttime in the sierra seemed all about them, and they were scarcely sorry when they reached the opening of the cave.

A red light from the smoldering fire burned dully against the shroud of the mist. A death-like silence lay within.

From where the men stood one wall of the cave was dimly visible, but the fire and large area of the floor were hidden by a flange of rock that screened the entrance.

McCorkadale, for his part, lay long awake upon his bed of dry fern and grass, listening to the movements of the brigand. By and by began the soft pacing to and fro, a nightly habit of Don Q.'s, which always immediately proceded his going to rest. But on this night it seemed to the watcher that he continued his walking much later than usual.

At length all was still except the moaning of the wind and the occasional sharp patter of a shower on the rock-face outside.

By feeling the hands of his watch he knew that the hour was come. He crept from his bed. With infinite patience he drew in the wire that unshipped the bolt from its socket, then noiselessly pushed the door open and slipped out, stealing up the short passage to the main cave, and looked in. The fire had sunk to a heap of glowing ashes, but gave light enough to show Don Q. huddled in his cloak on a stool by the hearth.

McCorkadale stopped, breathless, with a curse in his heart, but plucked up spirit as he noticed the still, brooding, birdlike attitude that surely betokened sleep.

Perhaps after all, luck was on his side. Don Q., for once, was caught napping, his head hunched between his shoulders. Instead of the danger of hunting him out of some hidden lair, how much easier now to—

He moved forward again until he came within the sight of the mouth of the cave. Instantly two figures detached themselves from the gloom outside.

The moment had arrived. McCorkadale sprang swiftly behind Don Q., and fired three shots into his body.

The brigand swayed once, and falling forward, settled limply, face downwards, on the rocky floor.

McCorkadale stood tense, one foot advanced, waiting to see a movement. But there was none—the heap of black draperies lay still. Yet the terror of the dead was upon him for he started at the sound of a sigh behind him. He glanced back. At his shoulder stood Barbon, livid over the ragged tufts of his beard, his starting eyes fixed upon the chief's body.

McCorkadale pulled himself together.

"See, he is down at last! Did I not tell you? Where is his charmed life? Poof! Come, let us search for his hoard; there is no time to lose."

He ran forward, Barbon at his elbow. There was a strange grinding sound, a strangled shriek. He heard Barbon grunt out an oath as he pitched headlong into the glowing embers. The Cuban whirled round in his heels, and met a ray of light that played blindingly upon his eyes.

He could not see, but he fired wildly, and clubbing the pistol rushed in upon the man with the lantern; but the light was snapped off, and, in the darkness, he dashed heavily against the wall.

He did not need to hear the familiar sibilant chuckle. Don Q.'s counter-trick was plain enough now.

For awhile he lay half-stunned, then a little burst of flame—Barbon's beard ablaze in the hot ashes—showed him the brigand standing over him. The Cuban dragged himself up into a sitting posture, with his back against the wall. He was utterly confounded and cowed, his early spurt of courage evaporated.

The chief opened the lantern, and looked him over, breaking into intermittent chuckles of harsh laughter.

"Mr. McCorkadale," he began, using the English form with a derisive inflection, "the song was not so far-fetched after all. You came into the sierra to scratch the parrot's head, and found the vulture."

The Cuban tried to turn his face from the pitiless light with a shudder.

"Corpse of a scullion! Am I grown sick, and deaf, and blind?" pursued the brigand. "Yet four to one against me! The chances were all on your side, fool!"

"No, for you have the luck of the devil," broke out the Cuban. "Pedro betrayed us. I did not see him."

"I assure you, you misjudged him—and, permit me to add, me also. He admitted a few details—reluctantly, believe me; but they did not add appreciably to the knowledge I had already of your little scheme. Pah! Animal, get up and pull this carrion out of the fire."

McCorkadale, in spite of his name, came of a hybrid race that knows when it is beaten. He obeyed.

He bent over Barbon. The man had been stabbed in the back. One hand still clutched at the cloak of the dummy figure with which Don Q. deceived them.

Under the chief's directions, McCorkadale worked frantically till he tossed the dead body into the valley below.

"Now, our good Brancolo—your chief friend. We must not forget him," said Don Q. in his softest tones, as he turned his lantern on a shapeless, horrible something that lay by the opening of the cave. "You do not ask a question. Shall I tell you? He lingered so long fearing to cross my threshold that the door sills caught and crushed him."

McCorkadale's shaking lips were blue.

"And Pedro?" he gasped.

Don Q. shrugged his shoulders.

"What do I know? Ask the vultures. Indeed, senor, I consider myself indebted to you"—he lit a cigarette as he spoke—"for you have given me an admirable opportunity to rid myself of some of the least desirable of my children."

By the time McCorkadale returned to the world the corner in corn had become past history. People spoke of it as an extraordinary coup manque. Later, when they met with its promoter, they began to believe in the legend of overstrained nerves he had so glibly circulated before he visited Spain. Moreover, rumor declared that the ruined millionaire had lavished enormous sums on religious institutions in that country, but this was an addition which those who best knew him refused to credit.

Yet it happened to be true; and this was how it came about.

"I fear, senor, you do not feel towards me the gratitude which I deserve at your hands," Don Q. observed, when the six weeks' imprisonment of his captive came to an end. "I have saved you from committing a monstrous crime."

"Crime?" echoed McCorkadale bitterly.

"I know of what you are thinking—of the night of our little adventure in the cave. Is it not so? You appear to forget that you would have killed me had I not had the good fortune to be beforehand with you."

"You have my ransom; let me go," cried the Cuban desperately.

"Pardon me, senor; it is of that I would speak with you. I cannot soil my hands by taking a ransom of money gained as yours has been."

McCorkadale turned a terrified look upon him. Fate had forced him to learn in those latter days some of the things he had aforetime taught to others.

"You have nothing to fear," resumed Don Q.; "I am a man of honor. You have bought your freedom; and, though I cannot myself accept the price of it, I must fulfill my part of the bargain in giving you your liberty. I will deduct a small amount for distribution among my children, and afterwards I venture to hope that by bestowing the remainder on hospitals and sisterhoods that aid the poor we may purge it from the curse it carries."

HOW M. BLUFORT PAINTED FOR HIS RIGHT HAND.

For a considerable time Don Q. was occupied in dividing McCorkadale's unwilling charities among the various institutions founded for the help of the very poor.

While yet he busied himself with these matters, Don Q. had the good fortune to secure an English prisoner, a tall spare man, who drifted up into the Boca de Lobo, or rather was carried there by the current of events that in the sierra sucked most travelers into the vortex of the brigand's power.

On an evening some few weeks later, Don Q. had risen from the table, set out on the terrace, to fetch from his secret cellar another bottle of his choicest vintage, which gave proof enough that the captive of the moment, seated opposite to him, was one who held a high place in his good graces.

Don Q. counted himself lucky in the acquisition of a prisoner of the type of Sir Graham; he loved to talk with him, and so keep in touch more or less with the world he had abjured. For Sir Graham was a Briton of the adaptable sort, a lord of many acres, a very genial gentleman behind a surface of reserve, and between him and his captor had sprung up one of those queer likings which the bandit possessed the quality of inspiring.

It was to this fact that Sir Graham owed the reasonable figure at which his ransom had been set, and while he waited for its arrival he found the brigand very good company. "A rare man," he said of him afterward, "when amiable, an A1 companion; when not, better absent."

Don Q. returned with the bottle that he had carefully opened and, seating himself at the table, resumed the conversation at the point where he had left it.

"I am aware it is said that the Pyrennean ibex are finer beasts than those to be found in our mountains. But this is a mistake. Your itinerant sportsman," he bowed with a courteous smile to his guest, "spends a month or two after his quarry, he goes where the cazadores take him, he finds only what he is meant to find, he sees but what it is arranged he shall see. You have not yet shot in the mountains of Castile, but wherever you go, you will never bring down a finer head than that of yesterday, with its 32-inch horns."

An extreme sentiment has always the effect of embarrassing one of Sir Graham's race. He turned the subject rather awkwardly.

"By the way, I had amongst my luggage when I came up here, some magazines and some odd monthly parts of the World's Best Pictures. One of them contains a rather striking reproduction of a painting of ibex in the sierra. I think it might interest you."

Don Q. held up his hand.

"Pray be seated. Your books shall be brought to you."

He hissed sharply, and a man ran up from the valley in answer.

For some weeks these publications had lain unopened in the cave of Don Q. and the Englishman noticed with some surprise the eagerness with which the brigand now turned the pages, and also the acumen and point of the remarks he made. But it was clear that the portraits interested him the most.

Sir Graham sipped his wine meditatively.

"May I venture to suggest that no artist of—at any rate sufficiently high reputation, has up to the present had an opportunity of studying you," he answered with gravity.

"True," said the chief, "the fault is after all my own," and he returned to his examination of the pictures. "My attention," he added presently, "has been arrested by these two portraits, both of which are signed by Alcibiade Blufort. Both are excellent pieces of work."

Sir Graham bent over to look at them.

"Well, I suppose Blufort's name is second to none in Europe as a portrait painter," he remarked.

"Indeed? That is very interesting." Don Q. paused. "Senor, do you think this French artist, Blufort, would paint my portrait?"

It was the Englishman's turn to be staggered.

"Yes, senor," the chief repeated with firmness, "my portrait. It will be no small honor even to Senor Blufort to place upon canvas the features of him, who, after Napoleon, is the greatest brigand the world has ever known."

Sir Graham bowed from his side of the table with cordiality.

"Unquestionably," he said.

"Posterity," resumed the chief, "will value it, for posterity will apprise me at my true worth. I grieve at times, senor, when I reflect how very false an idea of me may go down to future generations. But my autobiography, which I have carefully written, will give them the real facts of my career, and tell them of one or two of my exploits, which—if I am not mistaken—will live. I have noticed that biographies of great men are always prefaced by a portrait, reproduced from the work of some great artist. Mine must not be an exception. Besides," continued Don Q., becoming almost genial, "I will admit that I should not be adverse to my portrait being bought by the English nation, among whom I may say I have many friends."

"By jove, yes!" agreed Sir Graham, looking across at the strange face and figure of the chief, "by jove, yes! It is a real loss to the world that no adequate representation of you can ever be given to the thousands who have heard of and wondered at your famous career."

"But why should not a great portrait of me reach the world that wonders at me?" demanded Don Q. sharply. "Do you not think it possible that Senor Blufort can be persuaded to pay me a visit in the sierra to place upon his immortal canvas the likeness of one whose name, I can, without being misunderstood by you, declare to be worthy because equally immortal?"

Seeing that the chief waited for his answer, Sir Graham replied diplomatically—

"I imagine he would think twice before coming."

"The fee need be no obstacle," urged Don Q. "I believe that artists vied with each other for the honor of portraying Napoleon."

"Still—your reputation," hesitated the Englishman.

"I have certainly been much maligned," admitted the chief. "There are many narrow-minded people in the plains. But genius, senor, genius such as this Frenchman's, would not—in my opinion—be deterred by foolish gossip from seizing upon the chance of securing so unparalleled a subject for his art to expend itself upon."

"Very likely you are right," said the other.

"Besides, Senor Blufort happens at this moment to be at Malaga. He is studying details of Spanish life for his next great picture. I shall invite him to visit me. He will not refuse, I feel sure."

This was growing serious, for Sir Graham could not imagine how a true likeness of the brigand could by any possibility please that fastidious, but high-tempered personage. And if it did not please him, what would happen to M. Blufort?

To be continued.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

MOLASSES FOR HORSES.

Scientific tests in substituting molasses for oats and other cereals in feeding horses have yielded surprising results. It is now definitely established that as a horse diet there is magic in molasses. With this syrup on his bill of fare the horse rapidly takes on solid weight, develops prodigiously in muscular energy, grows a glossy coat and enjoys uninterrupted health. For these animals, therefore, molasses is declared to be both a tonic and health food. In addition to the many desirable results, a molasses diet reduces the cost of horse maintenance 25 per cent.

For scientific experimentation two abject and unthrifty animals were selected. One weighed 900 pounds and the other 940 pounds. No preparation was made for the sudden change of diet, but in place of the usual allowance of hay and oats the horses were given three times a day one quart of molasses diluted with three quarts of water and mixed with five pounds of cut hay. A marvelous improvement in the animals resulted. In two weeks one gained 40 pounds in weight and the other 45. In four weeks from the beginning of the molasses diet horse No. 1 gained 95 pounds and horse No. 2, 102 pounds.

Both of these horses were shedding their coats and after six weeks of molasses regime their new coats were glossy and luxuriant. Horse No. 1 at the end of that period weighed 1075 pounds and No. 2, 1086 pds. All symptoms of decrepitude disappeared. At the termination of the six weeks experiment the animals could not be recognized as the forlorn creatures with which the tests had been begun. In place of those jaded specimens there were led forth from the stables two fine horses, the scientists describing them to be "full of play, life and energy." The animals were afterwards employed profitably for city work.

These and such like tests are extending the use of molasses as a food for horses. Firms employing many horses in the hardest kind of contract and truck work are discovering that the animals will perform more service and remain in better condition on a diet of molasses than when fed the choicest and most liberal allowance of cereals. In the United States artillery corps there are enthusiastic champions of molasses as a horse diet, and horses in the armies of France, Germany and Austria are being fed on molasses with very satisfactory results.

Quite recently tests have been conducted to determine what efficiency molasses might have in restoring invalid horses to health. A gelding greatly reduced as the result of a severe accident, and a lame and ailing truck horse were selected. At the beginning of the experiments the gelding weighed 1250 pounds and the truck horse 1140 pounds. Fed on a diet chiefly consisting of molasses, the invalid horses improved with marked rapidity. In fifteen days the gelding weighed 1320 pounds, having gained 72 pounds. In that same period the sick truck horse gained 60 pounds The total gain of the gelding in one month was 200 pounds and of the truck horse 110 pounds.

The conclusion that eminent specialists have arrived at is that good molasses is not only a fattening and energy-producing diet for horses, but that in many cases it will restore ailing animals to health.

BREEDERS' NOTES.

"The largest mule in the world," so it is said, is owned by Luke Emerson, of Bowling Green, Mo. She is called Missouri Queen and stands 18 1-2 hands high and weighs 2250 pounds.

Twenty years ago the first question that most of the prospective purchasers of horses asked was, is the animal standard bred. Now the first question asked by most of the prospective purchasers, is, is the animal absolutely fearless of automobiles and trolley cars? Horses that pay no attention to those objects find a ready sale at good prices. Horses that are intended for the road and general purpose uses should become familiar with automobiles and trolley cars as soon as they are halter broken. If they are by level-headed, intelligent, sensible sires, and from dams of similar character it will not take long to educate them so thoroughly that they will be fearless. In selecting stallions and mares for breeding purposes as much attention should be paid to the mental as the physical qualities of the animals, for the former is inherited and transmitted with as great uniformity as the latter.

DRESSING PIGS.

Very few farmers seem to have a sound knowledge of the fine points in killing, scalding and dressing pigs for market. Some scald their pigs in water far too hot, thus reddening the skin and so depreciating the value of the carcass. Again, others do not scald with water hot enough, since the dehairing is noticed to be defective The temperature for scalding is about 160 degrees, and this temperature is roughly attained by mixing three buckets of boiling water with one of cold.

The carcass of the pig, after it has been stuck and bled, is immediately thrown into the scald, and kept in motion in the hot water. It is kept in motion by seizing hold of the nose, and then twirling it round and round. This movement is kept up for fully five minutes before commencing to scrape the carcass. After being scalded the carcass should be shaved (that is, thoroughly scraped) in the hot water. When that operation is complete the carcass should be thrown into a tub of cold water, and there the head and feet should be completely shaved. It is then removed from the cold water tub and hung up, and again scraped. After being again thoroughly scraped the belly is opened from the aitches to near the tip of the lower jaw. Then all entrails are removed, and the inside and also the outside of the carcass washed well with clean, warm water. No blood stains should be allowed to remain on the carcass. As a last washing, cold water should be thrown over the carcass. Now it should be scraped with a piece of clean, bent hoop-iron, so as to remove all water adhering to the carcass, and finally it should be well rubbed with a dry cloth and rubbed dry, and a belly-set put in position. It should, when all the operations are completed, be hung in a place which is well ventilated, but free from draughts. If hung in a draughty place, and more particularly if the carcass be very moist, it will turn a reddish-yellow color, sometimes even presenting the appearance often observed in pigs just recovering from an attack of swine plague. When set, and just before dispatch to the railway, each carcass should be encased in bagging material. New material should always be used for this purpose.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

When Labor Was Cheap.

Looking over an old Connecticut farm inventory, 150 years old, the price of wheat at that time is set down at 62 1-2 cents per bushel: far below the present market rate.

Winter Loafing The Ruin of Farm Help.

Many good farm hands are spoiled by loafing in the cities during the winter months. To get and keep good men, give them work the year round at the best wages that can be afforded.

Buying the Land Twice Over.

The fertilizer or manure applied in a single year by the high culture methods is worth sometimes as much as the land itself. Think of that when buying a farm and purchase land which has the richness already there. To bring up poor soil is to buy it at least twice over.

Most Farmers Find Them Handy.

It is surprising how the most enterprising farmers are dispensing with the hand hoe. To be sure, the horses have a 'hard row to hoe' on such farms, but the farmer's back gets the benefit. If the farmer happens to grow the right crops he needn't keep a hoe on the place. We know of one large farmer who says he does not.

Educating the Artichoke.

A French scientist has taken to collecting Jerusalem artichokes, which by nature are remarkable for their scraggy and irregular forms. He has at length succeeded in raising those that are entirely smooth and round, and as long as he selects the best specimens the tubers are as symmetrical and perfect in form as one could desire.

Bran Cheaper than Hay Meal.

The test of alfalfa meal as compared with wheat bran at the Pennsylvania Experiment Station showed that the bran was the more desirable food at $20 per ton as compared with alfalfa at $23. The alfalfa meal is simply ground alfalfa hay. Its use in place of bran resulted in less milk, and the cost per quart of the milk produced was slightly greater.

Oats as Stock Food.

Oats are less digestible than corn, chiefly on account of the large percentage of hull which they contain. They have a much higher percentage of protein than corn, especially when considered in relation to digestible matter. They are the most satisfactory single grain for feeding horses. They are not suitable for hogs on account of the large percentage of crude fibre. They may possibly form a part of an economical ration for dairy cows, although in general the demand for them for horse feeding is so great that the price is nearly always out of proportion to the amount of digestible matter contained.

DAIRY DEPARTMENT.

Why the Cows Shrunk.

A stable filled with cows having three ventilators, with all open in full draft, the degree of temperature was 62 degrees. On closing two of these ventilators, the thermometer registered 73 degrees, when a test was taken of milk showing a shrinkage of 3 1-2 per cent. On opening these ventilators the temperature came back to normal and the milk returned to former amount.

This rise of 11 degrees in temperature under different conditions would not cause such shrinkage, but being confined in a stable wanting in proper ventilation caused a heavy, stagnant, poison air, void of oxygen, which was detrimental to the vitality of a dairy cow in the secretion of milk.

A New Orleans woman was thin.
Because she did not extract sufficient nourishment from her food.
She took Scott's Emulsion.
Result:
She gained a pound a day in weight.
ALL DRUGGISTS: 50c. AND $1.00

I was told of a party who was having a large cow stable built of the most approved, up-to-date pattern. With a thermometer hanging breast high, which by the use of the King system of ventilation the temperature did not vary over six degrees from 60 degrees in all winter, such stables would require to be built about air tight, with a space of dead air in wall so that circulation could be controlled by dampers. Where it is essential to purchase concentrated by-products to balance a corn ration, we find they contain plant food equal to one-half their cost.

Admitting this to be correct, and allowing some sixty per cent. of same to be found in the liquids, we at once see how great must be the waste that follows the average stable, coupled with loose habits in the care of manures.

PROSPEROUS FRENCH FARMERS.

Although many French peasant farmers are compelled to live extremely thrifty lives, barely making both ends meet, my experience in France, extending over many years, and assisted by unusual facilities, teaches me that they are practically a prosperous people, and that, if they live simply and work hard, their lives are examples of contentment and happiness, while they form the backbone of the nation.

Prosperity is a relative term, but it does not consist in mere moneymaking. A man is prosperous if he is able to obtain food, clothing, and other necessaries of life by his own exertions, and especially under his own vine and fig tree, and to live happily in consequence. Men may differ as to what constitutes a sufficiency, for they may be rich in this world's goods and still be unsatisfied, and here is a source of unhappiness and discontent.

Co-operation in relation to milk, butter and cheese production has effected marvellous changes among the peasant farmers of France. In one parish, which I take as an example of many, there was but a handful of milking cows fifteen years ago; there are now nine thousand. Three years ago there were 3300 co-operative dairies in a given number of districts in which the system was unknown, but where the work is still increasing, and in which 253,000,000 gallons of milk were handled. The French, moreover, import a smaller quantity of meat alive and dead than they export, sending from their own farms 5,750,000 cattle annually to the butcher at a wholesale valuation of forty-four millions sterling.

I take another example from a whole sheaf. Staying with a landowner, in Touraine, himself a farmer on a large scale, I found that his work people were almost all owners of a cottage and a hectare (2 1-2 acres) of land, the chief produce of which was wine, the pure juice of the grape being sold and the refuse retained for their own consumption. I inquired how it had been possible for these people to become owners of such sweet little properties. The answer was practically that saving for this particular purpose was inherent in their nature, and that the young, in commencing their lifework, left with their employer from the start a portion of their wages to which they systematically added week by week or month by month, until the time arrived for a purchase to be effected. "But," I asked, "how are you able to spare your employees to cultivate their land?" The reply is worthy of the man who made it. "They," he said, "have the good sense not to ask for leave of absence when they are really needed, while I have the good sense not to refuse when they can be spared." In this parish the homes are equally simple and as typical as the people. There was thrift with labor, and entire absence of drunkenness, supplemented by happiness and contentment.

The French have the advantage of a parcels post which enables them to transmit anything from butter and cheese to oil and wine; indeed, any class of postable produce, including live poultry—which I have myself received, cash on delivery—to buyers in other countries than their own. They are inherent lovers of the soil, and consequently lovers of labor, without which they could not retain their land. There is less desire for fine clothes than with us, their Sunday best lasting for a generation; while their visits to church and to market, with their produce before them, are a hundred times more numerous than those trips to town which constitute a growing fascination to the rural classes of this country. They possess the great advantage of the farm school and school farm, through which many a peasant boy has found his way to college and to position.

In the aggregate the peasant farmer of France is rich; he is the best of citizens; and the system of which he is an example is, if I am any judge whatever, most conducive to the happiness and prosperity of his country.—London Mail.

Contentment has been praised more, and practiced less, than any other condition of life.

The Military Death Sentence.

"You know how a soldier traitor is put to death," said the colonel. "The traitor stands blindfolded, and half a dozen privates shoot at him simultaneously. But perhaps you don't know that each of those privates, though he take the most careful aim, may afterward say without fear of contradiction that the traitor's blood does not stain his hands. This is the reason: Two of the rifles for this ghastly shooting are always loaded with blank cartridges. Then they are shuffled, and no one knows which the harmless ones are. The executioners draw, and each is as like as not to draw a harmless gun. So when they shoot they can solace themselves with the thought that maybe they are only shooting a blank cartridge at the poor blindfolded wretch before them."

Hans Breitmann's Philosophy.

I have found that if we resolve to be vigorous of body and mind, calm, collected, cheerful, etc., we can effect marvels, for it is certainly true that after awhile the spirit or will does haunt us unconsciously and marvelously. I have, I believe, half changed my nature under this discipline. I will continually to be free from folly, envy, irritability and vanity, to forgive and forget, and I have found, by willing and often recurring to it, that, while far from being exempt from fault, I have eliminated a vast mass of it from my mind. It is certainly true, as Kant wrote to Hufeland, many diseases can be cured by resolving them away. He thought the gout could be.—Letters of Charles Godfrey Leland.

Time to Change.

It was at a table d'hote dinner at a hill station in India that a very young officer just up from the plains found himself seated next to a lady whom he took for one of the grass widows common in those parts. He made himself agreeable, but his neighbor seemed a good deal out of spirits, so he said sympathetically:

"I suppose you can't help thinking of your poor husband grilling down below?"

But the lady was a real widow, and when he learned that he changed his seat.—London Answers.

Sparing the Smasher.

"I told you," said the merchant, "to mark this box 'Handle With Care.' What's this nonsense you've painted here?"

"That," said the college graduate, "is the Latin for 'Handle With Care.'"

"How do you expect a baggageman to understand that?"

"He won't and therefore he won't get mad and smash the box."

For Feminine Jurors.

In breach of promise cases the presence of female jurors among the male jurors would certainly benefit the men, as they would at once see through the wiles of their own sex, disconnect the picture hat and the pretty gown and disclose the hussy at heart in the pleading, innocent betrayed one.—Lady Violet Greville in London Opinion.

These vary in intensity from day to day, from week to week, but they are rarely absent. He is troubled with sleeplessness, has constant difficulty with his stomach and periods of nervous exhaustion. As a result of this constant pain, etc., his own personal reaction to life is much of the time sad, his philosophy is optimistic, but he has often to yield to the state of his feelings. My friend tried many remedies, for a year he was under the care of a physician, who put him on an exclusively meat diet, but no permanent improvement. He tried long periods of rest and out-door exercise with the same result—only slight improvement for the time being.

PRESENT CONDITIONS IN THE CITY SCHOOLS.

INSPECTOR MORGAN MAKES HIS REPORT TO THE SCHOOL MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE — A LENGTHY DOCUMENT WHICH RECOMMENDS SOME DRASTIC CHANGES.

A joint meeting of the School Management and Printing and Supplies committees was held last evening. The meeting was called for the purpose of receiving the report of School Inspector Morgan, on conditions in the city schools.

Rev. A. L. Geen, chairman of the Printing and Supplies committee, presided, and others present were Messrs. Bennett, Walker, Johnson, Roberts, O'Flynn, Morden, Anderson, W. C. Reid, C. M. Reid, and Mallory. The School Inspector's report was as follows:

To the Board of Education of the City of Belleville;

Gentlemen, — I have the honor to present to you my first report as your Inspector of Schools.

You will recollect my great unwillingness to accept this position, and it may have seemed strange to you that I should so hesitate to enter again on work to which my life had been devoted, and which had become a sort of happy second nature, to be brought once more into close touch with children whom I love and with whom I am infinitely happier than under any other circumstances; all this, too, in a progressive city many of whose leading citizens I had already been privileged to number among my warmest and most valued personal friends.

I hesitated simply because of the grave doubt on my mind as to whether I could accomplish, at least to my own satisfaction, what you wished me to undertake. I had heard many stories (true or the reverse), of serious defects in various phases of your public school work, and yet I was unable to reconcile these stories, on the one hand with what I believed of the progressive liberality of those members of the Board whom I knew, and, on the other, with the ability of some of the school officials whom I had met. You will remember that I asked to meet the members of the Board before coming to a decision, and that, after a short interview, I cordially consented to act as your Inspector.

No inducement could have brought about this decision had you met me in any other spirit that the one you manifested, for I knew that without your active and liberal support and backing my work must have been foreordained to failure.

But your frank acceptance of the principle that existing defects were to be remedied whatever the cost, your manly willingness to assume your full share of responsibility for such defects, your generous recognition of the immense value of the service rendered by an efficient teacher to the state, the liberal spirit which you showed in the discussion of even large expenditures of money, if necessary for the success of your schools and the welfare of your children, convinced me that I should have your hearty and generous support in any effort put forth for the benefit of the children of Belleville In that conviction I cheerfully consented to act as your Inspector, in that belief I present my first report, and I feel that, working together, we can soon place your schools in such a state of efficiency that every citizen of Belleville will be able to point to them with pride. To this end I shall endeavor to do my duty, having every confidence that you will not fail to do yours.

A. As to the teaching it must be apparent that it is too soon for me to be able to give you a criticism (of any value), on the individual work of each teacher, save in the most general terms. I can however unhesitatingly make two statements. (1) If your buildings, furnishings and equipment were at all proportionate to the success of the average work being done by your teachers my task as your Inspector would be comparatively light. (2) Most of your teachers are earnest, progressive and successful, and in the course of my visits I did not meet one who failed to accept in the best spirit the frankest criticism offered, or to acknowledge gladly the benefit derived from any suggestion made or assistance given. At a later date I shall furnish for your guidance a detailed confidential report of every teacher.

(B) I find it difficult however to write in fitting terms of the inadequacy and inefficiency of your equipment. The buildings are quite unworthy of the City of Belleville, the desks are inferior to those in the average small, country cross-roads school-house, there is not a slate blackboard in any room in the public schools, there are only half-a-dozen modern maps, the Globes are Globes in name only, there is an almost total want of beauty or art; Supplementary Readers (an absolute necessity if intelligent reading is the goal sought), are unknown, and of Kindergarten apparatus there is none. In fact, gentlemen, your equipment gives but little assistance to your teachers, and is unworthy alike of you as a Board, of the progressive liberality of your citizens, and of the thriving city of which you are so justly proud.

I enclose a list of the improvements which should be made, and of the equipment which should be installed without delay in your schools if we are to retain the right to criticize with any fairness your teachers' work. As well require a mechanic to do good work with very poor tools, or none, as expect teachers to succeed without at least fair equipment.

You will notice that I make no mention of such expensive items as building, nor do I urge strongly (except in one instance), general reseating, though the latter is so important that it might well be undertaken and treated as expenditure on capital account.

Remembering how large a portion of your children's lives, at the most impressionable age, is spent in school I would fain make an earnest plea for the introduction there of some small part of the beauty which you so properly lavish elsewhere. Not only would it make the school more attractive to all the pupils, but it would constantly exert on those to whom it is denied at home, the silent but increasing and marvellously uplifting power which Beauty exerts over every child. I would like also to urge a heartier financial recognition of the good work which your teachers are doing. But I feel that your staff would for the present choose a good equipment rather than an addition to their salaries, and I content myself with asking in the name of your teachers, and still more on behalf of your children, the barest essentials in the furnishing of an ordinary modern public school.

I am fully aware, gentlemen, that the list herewith, carefully moderate as it is, represents a fairly large amount of money, but, apart from the fact that the improvements are demanded by the school law of our land, I venture the assertion that for no other purpose can your city spend a like amount with so real, so substantial, so beneficent a result. I also know that some of you are no longer personally interested in the excellence of the schools, but my conviction is that on this very account you will be more anxious that other men's children shall enjoy every educational advantage that your liberality and foresight can give them. And finally I am fully conscious of the fact that you are trustees of public funds, and that you are therefore bound to exercise due economy and care with their money, but also I know that there is no extravagance so fatal as false economy, and I am certain that public opinion in Belleville almost unanimously favors a splendid generosity to your teachers and your schools.

If you have any doubt on this point, call a mass meeting, explain to the people what you want to do, take the public fully and frankly into your confidence (if I can assist you, you may command my services at any time), and not only will you be overwhelmingly supported by public opinion in any reasonable outlay you may undertake, but I believe that the same public opinion would as strongly condemn any half-hearted measures for the betterment of your schools.

Gentlemen, our children are our most precious asset, and the most valuable legacy we can leave to them is a good education and a thorough training. I therefore earnestly pray you, let no paltry question of money, no cry of economy tempt you to deny in any measure this priceless boon to the children of Belleville. Now at least you know what is needed in and for your schools. Let us see to it that we prepare and equip, as thoroughly as may be, those who, in a few brief years, must take our places to mould and guide, for weal or woe, the destinies of this fair Canada of ours.

Gentlemen, I have the honor to be

Your obedient servant,

J. C. MORGAN.

I shall not speak of the great advantage it is to any town or city to be able to advertise and guarantee first-rate schools, though this is no unworthy consideration. I believe that you will prefer to view the question from the immeasurably higher ground of "duty to our children and to our country. I certainly do.

I shall reserve for a future time the discussion of such important topics as the teaching of music, the establishing of manual training, the introduction of drill among the boys, looking to the formation of a cadet corps, and one or two other kindred subjects.

The report was unanimously adopted by the joint committee, and it was resolved that it be printed and circulated, so that the ratepayers could have a proper opportunity to thoroughly weigh the many excellent recommendations made by Mr. Morgan.

Tetter, Salt Rheum and Eczema.

These are diseases for which Chamberlain's Salve is especially valuable. It quickly allays the itching and smarting and soon effects a cure. Price, 25 cents. For sale by all Druggists.

Contract Awarded.

The Belleville Hardware Company has awarded the contract for its new building to Mr. Geo. A. Bennett, of this city. The building will be four stories in height, of brick, with stone front, and will stand on the lot to the north of the company's works, formerly occupied by Mr. Consaul. The company's business grew so fast that it was necessary to enlarge their plant; hence the erection of the new building.

There's naught so sweet as love's young dream,
And it would sweeter be,
If lovers would only take
A little Rocky Mountain Tea.

The Spring Assizes.

The spring sittings of the High Court of Justice opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon, before the Honorable Mr. Justice McMahon.

Owing to the fact that there was no criminal business, His Lordship was presented, by Sheriff Hope, with a pair of white kid gloves.

The Grand Jury was composed of the following gentlemen:

James E. Brown, Daniel Ketcheson, Wm. Burley, J. C. Dale, W. P. Hudson, J. K. McCargar, A. Leslie, D. Consolus, F. Rollins, G. Sutton, W. Rogers, B. Phillips, C. D. Gouge, and F. Mullins.

After the Grand Jury had selected Mr. J. C. Dale as their foreman, His Lordship addressed them briefly in reference to their duties, which under the circumstances he said would be light.

In his opening remarks Justice McMahon said the Sheriff had presented him with, a pair of white kid gloves, which was an intimation that there was no criminal business before the court, which was a gratifying feature.

OBITUARY.

MRS. M. COCHRANE.

Mrs. Margaret Cochrane, relict of the late Richard Cochrane, passed away this morning at the family residence, Pinnacle street. Deceased had been ill for years and her demise was not unexpected. She was in her 61st year, and for over 40 years had been a resident of this city. Mrs. Cochrane was a member of the Methodist church, and was a lady who was esteemed by all who knew her. Her husband preceded her to the tomb some three years ago. Two sons, Edward A., of Toronto; Chas. R., of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. James French, of this city, are the surviving members of the family.

MRS. E. McGRATH.

Mrs. Elias McGrath, who had been a victim of heart trouble for some months, died at an early hour this morning. Deceased, who was 49 years of age, was born at Kingston, but the greater portion of her life had been spent in this city. She was a member of St. Michael's church, and had a large circle of friends. The husband, but no family, survives.

Judgment Sustained.

Messrs. O'Brien and Cook, proprietors of a hotel at Trenton, were recently fined $50 and costs for selling liquor during prohibited hours. They were tried before Police Magistrate O'Rourke, who found them guilty and imposed the fine. The parties appealed and the appeal was heard by Judge Fraleck, who dismissed it, thus sustaining the conviction. Mr. Carnew appeared for the appellants and Mr. A. A. Abbott for the inspector.

Presented With A Ring.

A pleasing event took place last evening at the residence of Miss Chalaupka, namely the presentation to a young lady who was leaving the city. The recipient was Miss Florence Andrews, a graduate at the Ontario Business College. An address was read, accompanying which was a handsome monogram gold ring. Miss Andrews is returning to her home at Bishop's Crossing, Quebec.

Many business men are shortsighted in not looking into things. They are daily losing money by not adopting the great Hollister Rocky Mountain Tea system. Makes them well and keeps them well. 35 cents.—D. M. Waters.

Division Court.

The Circuit this week will be taken as follows:

By Judge Deroche.

Marmora—Wednesday, 20th
Tweed—Friday, 22nd.

By Judge Fraleck.

Stirling—Tuesday, 19th.
Madoc—Thursday, 21st.

Bad breath, coated tongue, a languid feeling, is entirely unnatural. Your lazy liver and bowels need a tonic. The best soothing tonic to every organ is Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.—D. M. Waters.

A Tribute to the Late Canon Burke.

The trustees of the Woman's Christian Association desire to express their deep sense of the loss they have sustained by the death of the late Canon Burke, and extend to Mrs. Burke and family their sincere sympathy. Since the organization of the W. C. A. Canon Burke was its unchanging friend, evincing his interest by word and deed, officiating in his turn at the Sunday services at the Hospital, and the Home, visiting and comforting the sick and dying, contributing to the needs of the poor, upholding its claims to his congregation, aiding in every department of the work, cheering and encouraging the members by his expressed convictions that the work was a blessed one.

Praying that the God whom he so well served, may comfort you in this trial, on behalf of the trustees,

F. H. YEOMANS, President
W. C. A.

There is nothing more pleasing than praise if it is honest and you believe you have earned it.

OLD MAN'S CRIME.

Teased By Boys He Turns On Neighbor Who Interfered.

New York, March 19.—Some mischievous boys were indirectly responsible for the arrest early yesterday of David Stanhoff, jun., of Brooklyn, on a charge of having murdered his friend and next door neighbor, John Hoffman. According to Stanhoff's story, he was returning home just after midnight when he came upon Hoffman beating two boys in front of his house. Hoffman was in a fearful rage, he said, and when Stanhoff remonstrated the other man turned upon him. Stanhoff declares that he was forced to fight to defend himself. One of his blows knocked Hoffman down, and as he fell his head struck the stone curb, fracturing his skull. He died soon after being taken to a hospital. Stanhoff was immediately arrested.

It is said a crowd of boys have been annoying Hoffman for some time, and it is supposed the two he was beating when Stanhoff interfered were members of the gang, whom he had caught.

MASSACRE OF JEWS.

Rising In Roumania, and Whole Town Destroyed.

New York, March 19.—The cable despatch received Sunday night by the Jewish Morning Journal, of this city, reporting that terrible massacres have occurred at Podihilo, Roumania, has caused consternation among the Roumanian Jews in New York. They fear another Kishineff affair, in which so many Russian Jews perished. Podihilo is only about 30 miles from Kishineff, which is in Bessarabia, across the Russian frontier.

All of the Roumanian societies in New York, have been notified to attend a mass meeting to-night in the Manhattan Lyceum, in the heart of the East Side Ghetto. The best measures that can be taken to aid the afflicted at Podihilo are to be discussed and decided upon.

The cablegram received here announcing the massacre was signed, according to the recipient by three leading merchants of Podihilo. The cablegram follows:

"Terrible massacres since last Thursday. Town totally destroyed. All the Yiddish population are ruined and houses pillaged. We ask help."

CHARGED WITH MEAN FRAUD.

Medicine Hat Undertaker Puts Two Bodies In One Coffin.

Medicine Hat, March 19.—J. J. Moore, a local undertaker, is under arrest on a charge of disrespect for the dead and of obtaining money under false pretences.

He has a contract for burying the pauper dead. On Wednesday last the body of a Dane and of Ernest R. Minns, formerly of Toronto Junction, were turned over to him. He buried them both in the same rough box.

A short time after the interment H. H. Foster, on whose ranch Minns had been employed, arrived. He ordered and paid for a decent burial. It was the grave digger who made the discovery and he divulged only because he was refused remuneration for digging two graves. When found out Moore transferred the body to an expensive coffin and endeavored to make amends, but Foster refused to compromise and caused his arrest.

Salvador Joins Honduras.

Panama, March 19.—According to reliable information received here from Salvador, that country has allied itself openly with Honduras in the war with Nicaragua.

On March 10, 2,500 Salvadorean soldiers landed at Amapala and proceeded the next morning for Choluteca. This body of men came from San Miguel, in Honduras, and are under the command of Gen. Jose Dolores, Presa.

McINTOSH BROS.

THAW BEAT EVELYN

Jerome Reads Alleged Famous Affidavit Made to Hummel.

Case for Prosecution Closes—Experts for Defence Declare Thaw Was Insane—Evelyn Denies Truth of Story—Delmas Proceeds to Show True Character of Hummel—Policemen Testify for Prisoner—Verdict Friday

New York, March 19.—When the Thaw trial was adjourned yesterday only four expert witnesses remained to be examined before the taking of evidence closes. Three experts were disposed of yesterday in a little more than an hour, so it is generally believed that the last word of evidence may be in to-day.

In that event the summing up by Mr. Delmas for the defence will begin Wednesday morning. District Attorney Jerome will reply on Thursday. Justice Fitzgerald may proceed immediately with his charge to the jury, or he may defer it until Friday. There should be a verdict by Friday night.

Delmas Changes Tactics.

After fighting for an hour and a half against the introduction in evidence of the famous affidavit drawn by Abraham Hummel at the request of Stanford White and with the alleged consent of Evelyn Nesbit, charging Harry K. Thaw with having cruelly beaten Miss Nesbit on several occasions during their trip through Europe in 1903, Attorney Delmas suddenly switched tactics yesterday and demanded that the whole of the alleged affidavit go into the record and be read to the jury. District Attorney Jerome had contemplated reading only certain portions of it, which he declared directly contradicted the testimony of young Mrs. Thaw.

Severe Whippings.

In the affidavit it appears that, though Evelyn Nesbit was in possession of a considerable sum of money, she remained with Thaw and endured frequent whippings.

With the reading of the affidavit Mr. Jerome announced that the people rested their case in rebuttal.

Mr. Delmas immediately offered in evidence the record of the trial of Abraham Hummel on the charge of conspiracy.

The district attorney did not object and the defendant's lawyer proceeded to read the entire record to the jury.

The Hummel affidavit had already been discounted by the statement of its contents by Mr. Jerome at various times during his arguments as to its admissibility.

Mrs. Thaw Denies It.

Mr. Jerome had also quoted quite freely from the affidavit during his cross-examination of young Mrs. Thaw.

During that cross-examination she denied emphatically having made any of the statements contained in the paper.

It was, to get Mr. Jerome's own words denouncing Hummel, that Mr. Delmas undertook to read the entire record of the trial.

Mr. Delmas began the introduction of testimony in sur-rebuttal, putting on the stand three policemen who saw Thaw the night of the tragedy or early on the morning after. They all declared that he either looked or acted irrationally.

Final Stages Reached.

Delmas then passed to the final stages of the trial by introducing the first of seven alienists employed by the defence, three of the experts being new to the case.

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, and Dr. W. A. White, superintendent of the Government for the insane, at Washington, D. C., were yesterday's witneses, and all were interrogated on the 15,000 word hypothetical question framed by Jerome. All three declared Thaw was so mentally unbalanced at the time he killed Stanford White that he did not know the nature or quality of his act, and did not know that the act was wrong.

To-day the experts will be Drs. Evans, Wagner, Chas. W. Pilgrim of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., president of the New York State Lunacy Commission, and Dr. Minas Gregory, superintendent of the psychopatic pavilion at Bellevue Hospital.

M'ELROY WINS CARLETON.

Has Over 600 Majority Over Independent Conservative.

Ottawa, March 19.—R. H. McElroy of Carp was elected to fill the vacancy in Carleton County for the Ontario Legislature caused by the death of G. N. Kidd. He was the official Conservative candidate against W. H. Hartin, Independent Conservative.

Five polls are to be heard from.

There was a bigger vote polled yesterday than at the general election, when the late G. N. Kidd won by 1,179 over J. Smith, Liberal. The figures now stand. R. H. McElroy, 1,477; W. H. Hartin, 860. Majority, 617.

Petrolia Girl Missing.

Port Huron, Mich., March 19.—Flossie Golden, 17 years of age, a comely girl, whose home is in Petrolia, has disappeared.

She came here some time ago to work for a prominent family as nursemaid. More than a week ago she walked from the house, saying she would be gone only a few minutes.

Nothing has been heard of her since. She left her money and clothing in the house.

Three New Townships.

Toronto, March, 19.—Prosser, Lucas and Crawford are three new townships to be opened shortly for the benefit of those entitled to locate under the Veterans' Land Grant Act. They lie about 50 miles west of Lake Abitibi and consist of excellent farm land. They are six miles square each and will furnish 432 claims of 160 acres.

Triplets; Girls; All Well.

Comber, March 19.—Triplets, all girls, were born to Mr. and Mrs. William Manley of Staples, six miles from here, Sunday. The mother and children are all well.

AYR BANK FORGERY CASE.

Duncan the Manager Goes For Trial On Serious Charges.

Galt, March 19.—John F. Duncan was formally committed for trial yesterday by Police Magistrate Blake on three separate charges, falsifying the books of the Bank of Commerce, at Ayr, by fraudulently making an entry of $17.90 read $13,017.90; forging by alteration of a cash voucher, and stealing a bank draft from the Galt branch of the bank in January, 1905.

In the last charge the prisoner, it is alleged, kept this draft, marked it cancelled, filled it out to the Windsor branch at Ayr, forged the Windsor manager's name, and, on March 7, at Stratford, cashed it at the bank, receiving the $2,000 it called for.

It also came out in evidence that Duncan had $3,650 on him when arrested at Paris, on the request of the Ayr manager, who had discovered his defalcation. This he handed to his lawyer, and the lawyer, in turn, to the Ayr manager.

Duncan expressed the hope that the bank would be merciful since he had given up all the money he had. He had nothing to say when arraigned. Crown Attorney Bowlby was present for the crown. Crown Attorney MacPherson of Stratford appeared for the bank, and J. B. Dalzell appeared for the prisoner.

The witnesses examined were Manager Lay of Ayr and Accountant Melville of Stratford. The prisoner took things coolly.

Level Crossing Accident.

Preston, March 19.—A team of horses attached to a wagon containing two men was struck by the 11 o'clock Grand Trunk train yesterday morning at Groh's crossing, between Preston and Hespeler.

A man by the name of R. Johnson, said to be from Berlin, was badly hurt and taken to Galt Hospital. The other man, name unknown, escaped. The horses were killed and the wagon smashed.

Three New Townships.

Toronto, March, 19.—Prosser, Lucas and Crawford are three new townships to be opened shortly for the benefit of those entitled to locate under the Veterans' Land Grant Act. They lie about 50 miles west of Lake Abitibi and consist of excellent farm land. They are six miles square each and will furnish 432 claims of 160 acres.

WAS GOING TO SKIDOO.

Youth, Disappointed By Showman, Tries to Evade His Landlady.

Windsor, March 19.—Henry Stewart, 18 years of age, who came from Toronto three weeks ago, is under arrest on the complaint of his landlady, Mrs. Lee, who claims Stewart is in her debt to the extent of about $13, including board and money she says she advanced to him.

Sunday night, she caught him in the act of passing his clothes out of an upstairs window into the arms of a companion, who had climbed a convenient telegraph pole to receive them.

Stewart says he came to Windsor in response to an advertisement by one Kenneth Keith, who promised him a good position as a song and dance artist with a traveling show.

Centenarian Dead.

Toronto, March 19.—Mrs. Featherstone Osler, one of the most distinguished and benevolent ladies that has graced the city's history, died yesterday at her residence, in her 101st year.

She was one of the very few centenarians in the Dominion, and was in every respect a remarkable woman. Her last birthday, Dec. 14, was the most memorable of her whole life, as it was on that day she reached a century of existence, and the occasion was made one of celebration and congratulation.

Killed Like Predecessor.

Elmira, N.Y., March 19.—A week ago, Walter Casterline, an Erie trackwalker, was waiting near Chemung to be relieved, when he was struck and killed by a fast train.

Last night, Lewis H. Sherman, who succeeded Casterline, had finished his work and sat down on the track in the same spot Casterline met his death.

Sherman was deaf and did not hear a fast train approaching. He was instantly killed.

Dressmakers' Strike.

Vienna, March 19.—The dressmakers and ladies' tailors held mass meetings yesterday, and unanimously decided to strike to-day for increased wages. Nine thousand women and girls and 3,000 men are involved.

Was Jealous, Not Insane.

Jerome Believes Case Against Thaw Is Strong.

Cross-Examination of Experts Drags Along--Affidavit Not Feared by the Defence--What Both Sides Will Plead--Summing Up Commences To-day--Expert Gives Unexpected Answer--Guard Falls Asleep.

New York, March 20.—Unless all signs fail, to-day will see the completion of the evidence of the long-drawn-out Thaw trial, and on Friday the case will go to the jury, after nine full weeks before the court.

Thaw's attorneys stated last night that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw would not be recalled to the witness stand. The only thing she could do would be to again deny that she told Hummel that she had been beaten by Thaw, and deny again that she knew what was in the famous affidavit when she signed it. It is not believed that this would be of any value to the defence, as she has already told all her side of the story. The attorneys for the defence state that they do not consider that the introduction of the affidavit has done their case the slightest harm, while District Attorney Jerome is quoted as saying that he considers it one of the strongest features of his case.

A Day Each For Summing Up.

Under the agreement, each side will stake one day for the summing up. It it probable that Justice Fitzgerald will charge the jury Friday morning, and the case should go to the jury Friday night.

Mr. Delmas, in his address to the jury, will urge the acquittal of Thaw, on the theory that he was temporarily insane at the time he killed White. He will argue that the defence has shown beyond doubt that Thaw's mind was unhinged by the story which Evelyn Nesbit Thaw told him before they were married, and that it was while in a condition of mental irresponsibility that he took White's life. He will attempt to discredit Abraham Hummel, who has testified that Evelyn Thaw told him everything that was in the affidavit, by showing Hummel's record.

Jealous Man's Revenge.

District Attorney Jerome will urge the conviction of Thaw for murder in the first degree. He will claim that there is nothing in the case to show that Thaw suffered from anything more than jealousy, and that his hatred for White, who had been his wife's lover before he married her, with full knowledge of this fact, led him to revenge himself by taking White's life.

The case has been fought to the last ditch by both sides, and what the jury will do no one can tell. In case of a conviction there will, of course, be an immediate motion for a new trial. Mr. Delmas has saved all his exceptions, and his constant objecting may have served to inject reversible error into the case.

The Trial Drags.

District Attorney Jerome yesterday morning continued his cross-examination of Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffee, one of the alienists for the defence.

"In your answer to the hypothetical question, doctor," began Mr. Jerome, "did you interpret the question in the light of facts which are outside the question?"

"Why, in a way, certainly," answered Dr. Jelliffee. "My knowledge of the alphabet allowed me to read the question, but there is nothing about that in the question."

The cross-examination dragged along at great length, and was something of a surprise in view of Mr. Jerome's expeditious handling of the experts Monday.

Thaw is holding up remarkably well, but said yesterday that he, too, was beginning to feel completely tired out. He asked permission yesterday to retire for five minutes, and, when he reached the corridors leading to the prisoners' pen, lighted a cigarette and walked briskly up and down.

During the cross-examination of one of the experts at the afternoon session, Thaw's prison guard created much amusement by falling asleep in his chair.

He slumbered for several minutes, with his chin on his breast, before one of the court attendants gave him a sharp nudge. The guard rubbed his eyes and looked sheepishly about. He stood up during the remainder of the session.

When Dr. Evans, the last of the experts stepped down, Delmas asked permission to introduce in evidence one of the letters sent from Pittsburg by Mr. Lyon. Jerome objected, unless all the letters were admitted. The point was still being argued when adjournment was taken fifteen minutes later than usual.

Thaw Sends Cheque.

Pittsburg, March 20.—Mayor G. W. Guthrie of this city received the following letter from Harry K. Thaw yesterday, in which a cheque for $100 was enclosed to aid persons suffering from the flood of last week.

"Owing to demands upon me, I can only send $100 toward the relief of the sufferers by the unprecedented flood. A cheque for that amount is enclosed."

The mayor replied that no fund had been raised in Pittsburg, but that one had been raised in Allegheny, and asked what disposition should be made of the money.

Wife's Death Killed Him.

Paris, March 20.—Mme. Berthelot, wife of the distinguished professor of chemistry, died yesterday. Prof. Berthelot, when summoned to her deathbed, suffered an attack of syncope, from the effects of which he died.

300,000 Coming to Canada.

Ottawa, March 20.—Indications are that immigrants this year will number 300,000, or 50 per cent. increase over last year. Most of them will come from Great Britain.

French Warship Damaged.

Toulon, March 20.—The French battleship Charles Martel arrived here yesterday, leaking seriously.

DYNAMITE IN CELLAR.

Dastardly Work of Upton Sinclair's Enemies.

New York, March 20.—Upton Sinclair, whose co-operative colony house, Helicon Hall, near Englewood, N.J., was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning, admitted Monday that there was enough dynamite found in the cellar of the building to have blown it to atoms.

This statement, with the finding Saturday afternoon of a stick of explosives near the wreck of the boilers, has spurred the authorities to more vigorous efforts upon the theory of incendiarism.

The police are working on the supposition that the place was set on fire, and will question several persons who are known to have had disagreements with Mr. Sinclair.

REVENGE BEFORE HE DIED.

Killed His Slayer and Fatally Wounded Latter's Brother.

Birmingham, Ala., March 20.—H. H. Chamberlaine, formerly of Richmond, Va., superintendent of the mines of the Crescent Coal Co. at Sleca, Ala., and Joe Creek, a miner, are dead, and Will Creek, the latter's brother, is dying as the result of a three-cornered pistol fight at the mines late Monday. The two miners were drinking and were creating a disturbance. When Chamberlaine tried to quiet them Joe Creek fired upon him, inflicting wounds which resulted in Chamberlaine's death. While lying mortally wounded, Chamberlaine fired several shots, one of which killed Joe Creek and fatally injured his brother Will.

Alberta Fixes Game Law.

Regina, March 20.—In the Legislature yesterday the second reading of the bill for the protection of game was made.

The amendment of the game laws was made necessary through the rapid settlement of the country. One of the features of the bill is the prohibition of spring shooting of wild fowl.

It was approved by the convention of game guardians last year, and is generally approved of, but the Government desires to get into line with public opinion, not only in this province, but throughout the American continent.

There also are provisions for limiting the amount of a sportsman's bag to ten grouse or prairie chickens for one day and 100 for the season, and forbidding the use of dogs in hunting deer.

Salaries of Judges.

Regina, March 20.—A resolution passed in the Legislature here yesterday provides that judges shall be paid $500 yearly as judges of Surrogate courts by the Provincial Government. A Surrogate judge will also be district judge and in that capacity will receive $2,500 a year from the Dominion Government for first year of service, and after that $3,000 a year.

Disaster In Mine.

Madrid, March 20.—A despatch received here from Cordova reports an explosion of fire damp in the Bal de Interne mines at Fente Ovejuna. No precise details of the gravity of the accident are given, but it is said that a number of miners have been brought to the surface dying of suffocation.

Traced by Bloodhounds.

Guthrie, Okla., March 20.—The body of Dr. J. W. Davenport was found in a road near Ardmore, Indian Territory, Saturday, and Monday Mrs. M. Brooks, a neighbor, was arrested. Bloodhounds followed a trail to her house, where a revolver with one chamber empty was found.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The backbone of winter seems fairly strong yet.

Robins, crows, grassbirds and blackbirds are here, and they must have their own opinion of the weather man.

Twenty days of March gone, and the weather, perhaps, might have been worse.

The report of School Inspector Morgan, presented to the School Management Committee of the Board of Education on Monday night, and published in The Intelligencer yesterday, does not place Belleville's public school conditions in a particularly favorable light. The Inspector, who has had wide experience, says, in effect, that Belleville's school equipment is archaic, and the furnishings ridiculously poor, and there is reason to fear that much of what he says is only too true.

This great family journal is no advocate of undue extravagance; we have no desire to see sybaritic luxuries installed, but common decency demands that Belleville school children should have the same comforts and advantages that are enjoyed by the children of other places. The old cry that what was good enough for our daddies is good enough for us will not "go down" these days. It is a far cry from backwoods days to those of the Twentieth century. Conditions change, and men must change with them if they would not "lag superfluous on the stage."

It may not be necessary to adopt in toto the recommendations of Mr. Morgan. But that improvements, many and varied, are needed in our schools is the opinion of more than one member of the Board of Education. For instance, we are told of five distinct rooms which are compelled to shift with one map, and that not of the Cannibal islands, but of Ontario. One teacher, 'tis said, uses a globe which he paid for out of his own pocket. But, if what we are told is true, the furnishings are even worse than the equipment, and make for anything but comfort and convenience.

WINDSOR SALT—because it's pure, fine, clean, dry, piquant—is used by most people all the time. 132

Is there any necessity, in Belleville for this state of affairs? We think not. But is it not a fact that the members of the Board of Education, by their happy go lucky methods in the past, have to shoulder the responsibility for it? A member of the Board expresses the opinion that, for a small annual outlay during recent years, the equipment could have been kept up-to-date, and there would have been no necessity, now, for the comparatively large expenditure of money which stares the members of the Board in the face. There is no denying the fact that, for years, in the opinion of many citizens, educational affairs have been simply drifting in this city, and the Board, instead of being, as it should be, the most progressive of our municipal institutions, was the sleepyest and dullest. The ratepayers themselves were chiefly to blame for this, for they took positively no interest in educational affairs. And what is the result of all this drifting? Well, the consequence, we are told, is that the Board of Education will, on Monday evening next, ask the Council for just $5,000 more than has been asked annually for years past. Will they get it? Well, we shall see what we shall see.

Seeing that it is the duty of the cloth to elevate the people, one can hardly criticize that Portuguese priest who has invented a new explosive.

It is comforting to know that the line has at last been drawn somewhere in respect to the clothing a woman needn't wear on the stage. The actress who appeared barefooted in her latest play is down with the grip.

An Idaho man with eight daughters offers $1,000 a piece for eight sons-in-law, stipulating, however, that they must be church members who do not smoke, drink, chew, swear or gamble. Evidently that man thinks he is living in a place something like the Bay of Quinte district.

Toronto reporters spell the name of our genial City Clerk thus: "W. C. Mickell." And this is Fame!

The authorities of the C. P. R. and G. T. R. have announced their intention of bowing to the mandate of the Railway Commission in regard to three cents a mile fares. This will make the first-class fare from Belleville to Toronto $3.40, instead of $3.75.

Peterboro Review: The Belleville Intelligencer says that the Canadian General Electric Company may remove from Peterboro. We wish to tell our usually well informed contem. that there is no more fear of the company's removal than there is of Belleville enjoying an industrial boom.

Belleville's industrial boom has been going on for years, so we take from our esteemed contemporary's remarks that the industry in question is about to leave Strattonville. Well, it's fashionable to give things up in Lent.

Picton Gazette: There ought to be generous response to the invitation given elsewhere by Mayor Farrington, for a meeting in Shire Hall next Saturday to consider the advisability of tendering the Hon. R. P. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba some kind of a reception, upon the occasion of his forthcoming visit to Picton in the near future. Being a native of Prince Edward should enlist the hearty support of his old time friends, irrespective of political bias.

The many Belleville admirers of Premier Roblin might well take part in some such function as the one suggested above. The Manitoba Premier won a great victory in the face of heavy odds, and deserves all the honors his friends can give him.

One of the building fixtures for the coming summer, we are told, is a terrace of four houses to cost $10,000. And of rumors of single houses being built there is no end. This should be a fine summer for those engaged in the building trades.

SINCLAIR'S The Topic of the Day SINCLAIR'S

THERE is certainly good reason why people talk so much about our vast assortment of Dress Goods. We could not exaggerate the importance of our Dress Goods Department, the stocks or variety. We cannot say too much in their favor.

Three words that truly emphasize it are: "Best in Town." Without doubt we have the largest Dress Goods department in Central Ontario and in order to accommodate this big stock of dress fabrics we had recently to rearrange our store.

The dress goods department now occupies the entire south side of our store. Every part of this new dress goods section is overflowing with brightness.

The widest range of dress goods now awaits you at Sinclair's.

CRUMS ENGLISH PRINTS.

We have just received 250 pieces of Crums Celebrated English Prints, the kind your grandmothers used to buy. Nearly every store will tell you they sell Crums Prints, but this is not so. The genuine Crums Prints are stamped on the outside of each piece.

We pay half a cent a yard more for Crums Print than we would have to pay for the next best cloth.

Wind Blew "Spirelet" All Out Of Plumb.

During the gale which prevailed last night the "spirelet" on the southeast corner of the tower of Bridge St. church was partially displaced and from present appearance is liable to fall. The church officials will no doubt see that it is either placed in position or taken down, as in its present position it is certainly dangerous looking.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SERGEANT KITTY" TO-NIGHT.

When Manager Walker of the new Walker Theatre in Winnipeg had about completed his house he looked over the entire field of attractions for one suitable, and good enough to dedicate the house. His choice fell upon Helen Byron in "Sergeant Kitty" and the result was that on Christmas Day this organization opened the finest theatre in America costing to build over a quarter of a million dollars. If this star and play was thought to be suitable to dedicate so beautiful a house in such a progressive town, this same attraction which will appear here to-night ought to be worthy of more than passing attention on our part, and should be accorded such patronage as a really good company and play deserve.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Night school classes meet to-night. Thursday night Professor Hunt has consented to assume the direction of a class in vocal music.

The McMaster Band will also conduct noon-hour services during next week—twice at the Y.M.C.A., and on three other days will visit some of the shops.

Mrs W. W. Smith, of Dayton, has contributed $25,000 to the new building in that city.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

HERPICIDE'S MISSION.

It Takes Away the Dread of Birthdays.

Nothing is more annoying to men and women of middle age than to see those unmistakable signs of age—thin hair and grayness—approaching. But science has discovered that these conditions are no longer, "unmistakable" evidences of old age, for the dandruff germ theory proves that even very young people may suffer hair loss, while those fortunate enough to escape the ravages of the scalp germ, retain their abundant locks to a ripe old age. Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and removes the risk of appearing old before your time. Save your hair and your feelings, by using the genuine Herpicide.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Promising Senatorships.

Our friend Nathanael Vermilyea may congratulate himself on the fact that he is not the only one who has been deceived by the powers that be.

In a discussion the other day, in the House of Commons, upon the question of Senate appointments Mr. Bennett enquired whether it was correct that Dr. Spohn, who was a member of the House in 1891, had a written pledge given by the First Minister that he was to have a seat in the Senate. He (Bennett) had it on the authority of a gentleman, whose word he believed to be perfectly good that he had seen such a letter. In this letter, written in 1892, the Prime Minister pledged himself that in the event of the Liberal party coming into power Dr. Spohn's claim for a Senatorship would be considered. He asked whether it was true that Dr. Spohn had such a letter in his possession.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he always had been blest with a good memory, but he could not remember a letter written ten years ago.

Mr. Bennett—It was in 1892.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—That is worse.

Mr. Bennett may take it for granted that the letter was written and is in the possession of Dr. Spohn. Dr. Spohn was, at the time the promise was made, asked to sacrifice himself once more in an attempt to capture a riding, and the price was to be a Senatorship. Sir Wilfrid has evidently a convenient memory.

He did not deny the existence of the letter. It was more convenient to forget.

Sir Richard Cartwright was a little more adroit when a similar question was asked him in the Senate by Sir Mackenzie Bowell, as to the letter said to have been written by him, promising a seat in the Senate to Mr. Vermilyea. His reply was, "when the letter is produced we will discuss it." Cunning old fellow!

Neither of these gentlemen denied writing the letters, but dexterously squirmed out of answering by forgetting and demanding their production. If the truth were known, scores of such letters were written, in addition to verbal pledges given.

Come, Sir Wilfrid and Sir Richard, make your promise good. Now is the time, there are three vacancies in Ontario. Give one of them to your devoted follower, Mr. Nathanael Vermilyea. Has he not earned it?

HAVE YOU A WEAK BACK?

DOES RHEUMATISM OR NEURALGIA TORTURE YOU?

Zam-Buk Will Give Speedy Relief.

Has the trying March weather brought on your Rheumatism or Neuralgia, or put an ache into that weak back of yours? If it has, remember that Zam-Buk rubbed well in over the aching part will give you speedy relief. Zam-Buk contains valuable herbal essences so refined and concentrated, so searching and so powerful, that a little rubbing enables them to penetrate diseased or inflamed muscles, nerves and tendons. That ache in limb or back means that the muscles and nerves are needing help. They have "caught cold"—the nerves are "starved"—irritated, inflamed. Your body is a wonderful machine and it sometimes needs a little lubrication. What proper lubrication does for an overheated machine bearing, Zam-Buk will do for a joint or lever or muscle which is inflamed, or heated, or sore, or aching, because of cold, neuralgia, rheumatism, etc.

Mrs. John Sidstone, of Swan Valley, Man., says: "I have proved Zam-Buk to be a sure cure for rheumatism. It gave me such relief that I would not be without it in the house."

For cold in the chest, catarrh in the head, etc., Zam-Buk rubbed well in to the chest and forehead gives quick relief. Besides its uses as an embrocation, Zam-Buk heals chapped hands and cold sores, eczema, poisoned wounds, scalp sores, itch, barber's rash, blood poison, pimples, boils, Spring eruptions, etc. It also stops bleeding and cures piles, fistula, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes sent for $2.50. Send 1c stamp for postage of free trial box.

SPORTING NOTES.

A correspondent writes to the sporting editor asking us to propose the formation of a Wheelman's club in this city. He thinks that, with occasional organized runs, and the benefit of good fellowship, such an organization might be conducive of benefit. Who wants to be counted in on this matter?

Thirty-six broken and twisted bones in one hand is the secret disclosed in the life of James McGuire, the great baseball catcher.

Harry Westwick, of Ottawa, is said to get $1,000 for helping Kenora hang on the Mr. Stanley's silverware. Hockey has populism beaten a block when it comes to raising the value of silver.

Here were the highest salaried men on the American League teams last year, Lajoie, Cleveland, $6,500; Keeler New York, $5,000; Collins, Boston, $5,000; Jones, Chicago, $4,500; Davis, Philadelphia, $3,800; Stone, St. Louis, $3,600; Stahl, Washington, $3,500; Crawford, Detroit, $3,500. This year Jones has been raised to $5,000 and Keeler to $5,200, while Collins signed for $4,200. Clark Griffith, the New York manager, gets a salary of $5,000 Chick Stahl, the new Boston manager, will draw $3,800 this year. Larry Lajoie is said to be the king pin in the salary line for both leagues, Christy Matthewson is said to run him a close second. McGraw draws more than Lajoie, but he is regarded as a manager and not as a player. It is said that it requires five ciphers to write Muggsy's salary.

Sister Of "Queen of Klondike" Married

The Mrs. Carbonneau mentioned in the following despatch is the wife of a gentleman who at one time loomed large in the eye of the local public in connection with the rolling mills:

Scranton, Pa., March 16.—News has reached here of the marriage of Miss Nellie T. Mulrooney, sister of Mrs. Belinda Mulrooney-Carbonneau, the "Queen of the Klondike," to Jesse Noble, president of the Dime Bank, of Nome. The wedding took place at Fairbanks, Alaska.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble, accompanied by Mrs. Carbonneau, are now coming East, and the party is expected to shortly reach Archbald, where they will spend a few days at the homestead of the Mulrooney family.

The bride has been in Nome for a year past, and is cashier of the bank of which her husband is president, and which was organized and financed by her sister, Mrs. Carbonneau, whose mining claims and other industrial ventures in the Alaskan gold fields have made her a rich woman.

Another sister of the "Queen," Miss Agnes, is in Philadelphia, where she is being educated. She figured a year ago in an alleged kidnapping affair in that city.

The Last Rites.

The late Mrs. Jane O'Hagan was buried yesterday morning, in St. James' cemetery. The deceased lady, who was born in Ireland 81 years ago, had lived in Picton most of her life, and came to Belleville four years ago. She is survived by her husband, two sons and three daughters, namely, Robert, of Lethbridge, Alta., and Harry, Bliss, N. Y., Mrs. (Dr.) Dolan, and Mrs. Geo. Teale, of this city, and Mrs. O'Leary, of Tacoma, Wash.

Winds of passion do not blow to harbors of high purposes.

Canadian Honored In Czar's Domain

The following article from the Kansas City Times, refers to a gentleman formerly well known in this district, where he has relatives and friends. The Mr. Waddell mentioned, who is a Canadian, and is another instance of the way in which Canadians forge to the front by virtue of ability and qualities of character, is a son of the late Sheriff Waddell, of Cobourg. The article reads;

The Czar of Russia is a pretty busy man these days; and if reports are true about the way things are going to the bad in his country, he's a pretty much worried man, too. Nevertheless, he found time the other day to send a little note to J. A. L. Waddell, the bridge engineer of Kansas City. Nicholas had his sister, Her Imperial Highness, the Grand Duchess Olga, put in a few lines, too, just by way of additional honor for the Kansas City man. And the Count Loicq de Lobel sent a few remarks. The whole thing was stamped with the seal of the Russian Government. Mr. Waddell received it yesterday.

The letters are in French. In the language of diplomacy, and French diplomacy, too, they are very polite, of course, and say a lot of nice things about Mr. Waddell. Chiefly, however, they told him he had been elected a member of the Society of Benefices, because of his services in connection with preparing the plans for the Trans-Alaska-Siberian Railway. The society is a royal organization, the Grand Duchess Olga founded it, and the count, who is the chief promoter of the new railway, is a member.

The count's communication said he had been given the privilege of sending the decoration of the society to Mr. Waddell and it would follow the notification. He also said the special note of appreciation from the Grand Duchess in her own writing, had been given to none other of the 25 members of the society. It was a special signification of friendship, he said, between Russia and the United States.

"Please accept, sir, the expression of my thankful sentiments," was the brief note of the Grand Duchess.

"I had known they intended to make me a member of the society," said Mr. Waddell yesterday, "but I hadn't any immediate knowledge of the plans. It is a great privilege to be a member of that society. I saw the decoration worn by Count Loicq de Lobel last autumn in New York city and it's a handsome one. I'll prize mine very much."

Eighteen years ago, following Mr. Waddell's four years of teaching in the Imperial University of Tokio, in Japan, the Japanese Government, through the Mikado, created him a "Knight Commander of the Rising Sun." A beautiful decoration, studded with jewels, was given to him, on account of his services as a teacher and because he introduced the American system of bridge-building that aided Japan in the war with China. The title of knight made him one of the Japanese nobility.

Two years ago Mr. Waddell was made vice-president and principal engineer of the Trans-Alaska-Siberian Railway, which proposed to build a Railway from Cape Prince of Wales through Alaska, tunnel under Behring strait to Siberia and connect with the Trans-Siberian Railway at Kansk. Count Loicq de Lobel has furnished most of the funds.

Following the war between Russia and Japan the Grand Duchess Olga organized a royal society whose members are chosen because of their works benefitting Russia and the Russians.

Orange Grand Lodge Meets At Brockville.

The Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario met at Brockville yesterday, and the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East met at the same place to-day. A large number of delegates from the city and county of Hastings were in attendance at the Grand Lodge, namely; Bros. F. M. Clarke, Grand Secretary; R. Powell, and W. C. Reid, of this city; J. E. Halliwell, Grand Master, Stirling; Robt. Gordon, Grand Treasurer, and J. J. Parrott, Tweed; J. B. Lowery, Frankford; Alex. Provins, Deseronto; W. Kerr, Thomasburg; W. J. Hall, Plainfield; J. Bannett and J. F. Hill, Shannonville; J. W. Green, Indian Reserve; W. W. Draycon, Wellman's Corners; T. H. Thompson, Madoc; H. Wallace, Ivanhoe; G. Conley, St. Ola; W. H. Craig, Tweed; W. H. Cook, Corbyville, and Thos. Campion, Marmora. Sir Mackenzie Bowell will also visit the Grand Lodge while it is in session.

From the Grand Secretary's report it is seen that there are in the province of the Grand Lodge 24 County lodges, 80 district lodges, 377 subordinate lodges, with 13,010 members, and the value of lodge property is $204,536. During the year 1079 members were initiated, 216 reinstated, 501 suspended, 25 expelled and 129 died. Four primary lodges were instituted and the charter for a fifth one was issued last week, which does not appear in this year's records.

YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Brockville, Ont., March 19.—The thirty-first annual meeting of the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario met here this afternoon, with a large and enthusiastic attendance of Sir Knights from all parts of the jurisdiction. The Grand Master, Lt.-Col. J. Earl Halliwell, of Stirling, was in town, but owing to his still suffering from the effects of the unfortunate accident which befell him two months ago, when he had his leg broken, he was not present during the afternoon. In his absence, Past Grand Master A. W. Gray presided.

The delegation from the local preceptory extended a cordial welcome to the chapter.

The reports of the Grand Registrar and Grand Treasurer showed the Association to be making substantial progress. The increase in membership during the year has been the largest in its history, while the finances are in splendid shape.

At the evening session the Grand Master was present and delivered an able and comprehensive address. After noting the growth and extension of the order, he made a plea for united strength in order to accomplish the objects the organization was striving for. "These objects are," he said, "speaking generally, the diffusion of Christian knowledge and the maintenance of absolute liberty of conscience. If we keep these objects always before us our labors will result in good. The moment we forget these our labors are wasted, if they are not positively injurious."

After striking the Standing Committee an adjournment was made until to-morrow morning.

PALE FACES.

BY SOME THOUGHT TO DENOTE REFINEMENT.

"What a mistake!" said Mr. J. S. McKeown, our leading druggist. "In place of refinement pale faces denote disease.

"A bloodless face indicates impoverished blood, pure and simple.

"What is the result? A weakened condition of the entire system, the development of humors, disfiguring eruptions and finally a general collapse.

"I wish your paper would tell every pale man, woman and child; yes, and every feeble old person, that I am so sure that our famous cod liver oil preparation, Vinol (delicious to taste, and without oil), will make rich, red blood, create strength and restore them to a normal condition, that I will pay for all the Vinol they take if it does not succeed.

"Why am I so sure? Simply because I have seen it succeed so many times that I now don't believe it can fail. You see, it contains in a highly concentrated form all of the vital principles of cod liver oil without any grease to upset the stomach. We know that it is fresh and actually does contain the fifty odd medicinal curatives taken from fresh cods' livers, and 'it is the real thing,' as the boys say. We do not ask you to take our word for it, but simply try it on our guarantee." J. S. McKeown, druggist.

Miller's Worm Powders correct all such troubles as lack of appetite, biliousness, drowsiness, sallow complexion, etc.; nice to take. Sold by J. S. McKeown.

SARCASM!

TORONTO NEWS ON THE NERVES OF MR. HYMAN.

Mr. Hyman's resignation as member for London is not valid. It has taken a committee of the House to ascertain this soulstirring fact. Lawyers have bent their brows vainly upon the tangle of red tape before their eyes, business men have searched unsuccessfully for a loose end. There has been a little vituperation, a little annoyance, a great deal of talk, and nothing done.

Although Mr. Hyman wants to resign, although his state of health precludes his presence in Parliament, although he has sent in a letter of resignation, he is still glorified by the halo which the magic letters "M. P." form above his head. It seems that the Green Chamber of Ottawa has claimed him for its own. Bought votes at $10 a piece sent him there, red tape would fain keep him there—

Till the sun grows cold and the stars grow old,
And the leaves of the judgment book unfold.

But friends of Mr. Hyman say he is a nervous wreck, and that it would be as much as his life is worth to write out a new resignation and have it properly witnessed. We can understand that. His nerves, or his nerve, made it impossible for him to resign when the odorous facts of his election for London were ventilated before Col. Denison. It seems a constitutional weakness in the member for London. And so we have arrived at a deadlock. Mr. Hyman cannot resign a seat which was not honestly won, and London does not care to be disfranchised.

So far as we can ascertain, one thing to be done is for the Government to appoint Mr. Hyman a Senator, or a Customs Collector, or a poundkeeper, for the law says that the acceptance by a member of Parliament of an office of emolument or profit from the Crown shall thereby vacate his seat. But the question arises, could Mr. Hyman write a letter accepting such an office? Alas, we fear not.

Perhaps if Mr. Hyman would write a new letter of resignation, say, at the rate of two words a day, he might, in the course of a week, complete it without suffering a very serious relapse. Friends could see that it was properly witnessed. We should be glad to learn the opinions of some eminent specialists on neurosis as to the effect of such an action on the distinguished member's health.

Are you not well? Are you pale, weakly, depressed in spirits, melancholy, tired, nervous and irritable? Try Miller's Compound Iron Pills. Sold by J. S. McKeown.

SIDNEY CROSSING.

March 18th.—The Epworth League convention of the Bayside circuit was held at Wesley Church on Friday. The pastor, Rev. H. W. Foley, presided. Both sessions were well attended and the convention pronounced by all most successful, both spiritually and intellectually. During the afternoon session excellent papers were given by Mr. S. Kincaid, on "The Holy Spirit in E. L. Work," and Mrs. N. Gilbert on "Daily Bible Study," each giving many helpful suggestions. Rev. T. H. Howard, of Rednerville, gave a very instructive and practical address on "The Young People's Movement," tracing its history from its inception to the present day, of wonderful results. His address was full of inspiration for every Leaguer, urging them to engage in this grand work with more activity and consecration. A "conference on methods," conducted by Rev. A. H. Foster, of Smithfield, gave rise to lively and interesting discussions, bringing out many helpful hints on important points in connection with League work. At the evening session Rev. W. J. Cragg, of Frankford, gave an enthusiastic and scholarly address on "Tithing and Temperance Work." His address was attentively listened to and highly appreciated. A splendid paper on "Work Among Juniors" was ably handled by Miss Ella Ostrom. The choirs of White's and Centenary Churches, also the boys' choir of Wesley, ably furnished the music for both sessions.

Mrs. Jas. Hogle leaves on Wednesday for a few days' visit with friends in Brighton.

Rev. H. W. Foley is visiting his parents at Bowmanville.

Surprise parties are all the rage in this vicinity, and the most pleasant of all was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Finkle on Wednesday night, when about 60 of their friends gathered there to bid them farewell ere they took their departure for their new home in Trenton. Mr. Chas. Bonisteel acted as chairman, while Mrs. J. Kelley read an address, and Messrs. Chas. Moon and Percy Meyers presented Mr. and Mrs. Finkle with a handsome oak secretary. Mr. Finkle, in reply, thanked his many friends for their kindness in showing their appreciation of himself and wife in such a manner, and that he was sorry to move from their midst, where he had spent more than 30 happy years. Mr. Finkle was for 20 years superintendent of White's Church Sunday School, and had also held many other positions of trust in the church. He and his wife will be greatly missed in religious as well as social circles, and all join in wishing them every success in their new home.

CONSECON.

On a recent evening a most enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Walt, Lake View, where their nephews Mr. Earl Walt and Messrs. Ross and Baird Bush had invited a number of young folks to partake of an oyster supper. Among those present from Consecon were Miss Ruby Leigh, Miss Lydia Thompson, Mr. Allan Weeks, and Mr. Fred Ward. Those from the Lake Shore were Miss Pearl Marvin, teacher of the Lake View school; Miss Lela Huyck, Miss Beatrice Bush, Miss Mona Pierson, Miss Lottie Bush, Mr. Ross Bush, Mr. Earl Walt and Mr. Baird Bush. Those from Trenton High School were Miss Nellie Weeks, Miss Mabel Thompson, Miss Rae Weeks, Mr. Delbert Bush and Mr. Elden Walt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Walt. All report a most enjoyable evening spent in games and amusements, which lasted till the early hour of two o'clock, when the party broke up, some being caught in the rain before reaching home.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

B. F. Crocker, Esq., now 84 years of age, and for twenty years Justice of the Peace at Marlinsburg, Iowa, says: "I am terribly afflicted with sciatic rheumatism in my left arm and right hip. I have used three bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it did me lots of good." For sale by all Druggists.

HAVE YOU POWERS OF RESISTENCE?

IMPORTANCE OF STRONG AND VIGOROUS VITALITY.

If you are subject to coughs, colds, chills, catarrh, bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia, loss of appetite, lack of proper assimilation of food, beware! These are but symptoms of very serious trouble. They are evidences of an absence of your powers of resistance against disease of the most insidious and fatal nature. These powers of resistance can be speedily restored, and these symptoms and diseases absolutely banished by the use of Psychine, that wonderful remedy which is revolutionizing the old theories regarding the curability of consumption and all its forerunners.

"My wife was under treatment of an eminent throat specialist for a most dangerously diseased condition of the larynx and weak heart. After having taken three bottles each of PSYCHINE and OXOMULSION she was perfectly restored.

"J. J. Rice, Red Deer, N.W.T."

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is for sale at all drug stores or at Dr. Slocum's laboratory, 179 King street west, Toronto.

GILEAD.

The weather man has taken away our snow, but has left sugar-weather in its stead. Hurrah for the taffy-pulls and sugar socials now.

A very pleasant time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Huffman, sr., on Wednesday, March 13, when her 92nd birthday was celebrated. A number of relatives from diferent parts were present; also a friend from Bloomfield in the person of Mr. Fiske. Mrs. Huffman is enjoying the best of health, and her many friends wish for her several years of health and happiness.

Mr. Albert Martin had the misfortune to get kicked by a horse one day this week. He was laid up for a few days but is getting along nicely.

Mrs. Sherry and her two sons spent Friday evening with Miss Maggie Huffman.

Messrs. Bradden and H. Fairman took a trip to Bancroft one day recently.

TIMELY TOPICS.

WHEN THE SUN GOES DOWN.

I have wondered what lies past the world's far rim,
When the great red sun goes down,
Since the dreaming of youth, of long ago,
I have longed, so longed, sometimes to go
Over the slopes and the mountain trails,
The deserts and valleys, through wood and vales,
To the land where the sun goes down.

I have gazed in the desolate, tinted West,
There where the sun goes down,
And wondered at strange and foreign lands
Of unknown tongues on other strands,
And longed, so longed, sometimes to go
That I might see, that I might know
There where the sun goes down.

I have looked in the faraway jeweled skies,
There where the sun goes down,
And longed for the deeps of a starry night,
A trackless waste and a Polestar light,
And I wished that I had been born to see
Those lands and know their mystery—
There where the sun went down.

And I've turned, in the dusk, from the afternoon glow,
After the sun went down,
To the lights that gleamed in the city's heart,
The lights in hall and throbbing mart,
And longed, so longed, for the arms and breast
That cradled me sweet to sleep and rest—
After the sun went down.

Dowie dead, nine new prophets have arisen in Zion. Competition is the life of trade, and the mantle of Elijah cannot expect to escape the tendencies of a commercial age.

• • •

A white hearse was used at the Dowie funeral, this being the best substitute the undertaker could produce for the fiery chariot in which Elijah III. might be expected to take his departure.

• • •

A Chicago man gave his wife $3,000 to buy a hat, and she disappeared, which teaches the lesson that if you wish to keep your better half it is your duty to confine her activities in this line to the $1.98 counter.

Montreal's death rate is heavier than that of any other city in Canada, the mortality being caused by the general desire on the part of the citizens to leave for a place where the streets are said to be better.

The little Grand Duchess Olga, eldest daughter of the Emperor of Russia, is probably the richest girl in the world. When she was but a week old the sum of a million pounds sterling was presented to her and invested on her behalf.

Arrangements are being made to get New York, Vermont and Canada to unite in celebrating, on July 4, 1909, the 300th anniversary of Samuel de Champlain's discovery of the lake which bears his name, and which abuts on the territory of each of these communities.

It is figured that for the 20-year period from 1887 to 1906, the applications filed for divorce throughout the United States reached the total of 1,400,000, and probably on these applications about 1,000,000 divorces were granted. In the 20-year period from 1867 to 1886 the number of divorces secured was 328,000.

The New York Herald says: So far as can be discovered there is no sound reason for the wholesale decline in stocks that occurred this week. Its most plausible explanation is that it was the work of a powerful "bear" combination which has been at work for some time and which has been enabled to force the sale of stocks carried upon margin.

The fall in the price of American railway stocks has been attributed to the attacks of legislators and newspapers. Those who take this view should study the New York Post, a staid and sober paper which caters to the "intellectuals" and has a holy hatred for Socialists and demagogues. It declares with brutal frankness that the managers of the American railways have themselves to blame. It tells them that if they will devote themselves to the business of carrying passengers and freight, and keep out of high finance, they will have nothing to fear.

NINE PASSENGERS HURT.

Colonist Special Derailed at Carlstadt—The Injured In Hospital.

Winnipeg, March 20.—The westbound colonist special was derailed at Carlstadt, 90 miles west of Fort William, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, seven coaches and the caboose leaving the track. Nine passengers were injured, one of them seriously; and the caboose, catching fire from the overturned stove, was destroyed.

The names of the injured are: J. H. Richardson, Albert Nesley, Geo. Taylor, William Russell, Mrs. Russell, W. A. Holland, Mrs. James Marshall, Mrs. Buttershaw, William Patterson. They are all in the hospital at Fort William. Mr. Richardson is the most seriously injured, his foot being so badly crushed as to necessitate amputation.

HAMILTON MEN RELEASED.

Street Railway Rioters Will Be Freed From Prison.

Ottawa, March 20.—Mr. Zimmerman, M. P., has been notified that the Minister of Justice has signed an order for the release of those parties who were convicted and sentenced in connection with being concerned in the riots over the street railway strike in Hamilton. Mr. Zimmerman has been pressing upon the Department of Justice this matter for a considerable time past. The order for release went to the Governor-General yesterday.

Peasants In Revolt.

Bucharest, Roumania, March 20.—The Agrarian movement in North Meldavia, where the peasants are in revolt against the exactions and tyranny of the farmers and the new taxes recently voted by the Roumanian Parliament, is rapidly spreading, and is causing much anxiety to the Government. The Town of Botosahni was raided Monday by two thousand peasants, who plundered the Jewish quarter and maltreated the Jewish storekeepers. Troops have been sent there and to other points where disturbances have occurred. The Government is preparing to take energetic measures to suppress the agitation.

Decides On Redistribution.

Ottawa, March 20.—The report of the special committee on the redistribution of the electoral districts of Saskatchewan and Alberta was presented to Parliament yesterday by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and is unanimous in favor of the following: Battleford, 18,051; Saskatoon, 27,751; Prince Albert, 20,878; Humboldt, 23,903; Mackenzie, 25,898; Qu'Appelle, 30,590; Moosejaw, 23,581; Regina, 29,705; Assiniboine, 35,263; Calgary, 26,402; Edmonton, 26,391; Macleod, 25,927; Medicine Hat, 22,363; Red Deer, 31,000; Strathcona, 29,431, and Victoria, 23,888.

Charged With Bigamy.

Sherbrooke, March 20.—Stephen Liddell was committed to the Court of King's Bench Monday by Judge Mulvean on a charge of bigamy. On Dec. 8th last the accused married a young Montreal girl named Bella MacDonald. At that time he was bandmaster of Cookshire band. The fact later leaked out that he already had a wife and family in the old country.

King Leopold Unconscious.

New York, March 20.—A despatch from Brussels says that, notwithstanding official denials, King Leopold, who is visiting the Riviera, had a cerebral attack a few days ago. He was unconscious for some time.

Ship Blown Over; 400 Aboard.

Copenhagen, March 20.—The Danish training ship Viking, with 400 workmen aboard, was blown over in a ship building yard in a storm here yesterday, ten men being injured.

Sunday Law In Montreal.

Montreal, March 20.—Montreal bids fair to have a liberal Sunday observance law within the limits allowed by the act passed at the late session of the Quebec Legislature, which was the only Parliament to take advantage of the Dominion act to enact legislation of its own with regard to Sunday observance.

Notice of motion has been given to the city council by Ald. Lapointe, who is identified with the licensed victualers, of his intention to move for a clear definition of the law as it applies to Montreal and for the repeal of several bylaws and their substitution by others.

Ald. Lapointe does not admit that it is the intention to make Montreal wide open so far as Sunday privileges are concerned, but it is not believed the mover's purpose is to place anything further in the way of restrictions. They may go as far as public opinion will permit.

Child Used For Beer Contests.

Ottawa, March 20.—There is a saloonkeeper in Hull who is said to use his 5-year-old son as an advertisement.

It is complained against him that he puts the child on his bar and challenges his customers to beer drinking contests.

The boy, it is reported, will drink as many as 20 glasses of beer in an afternoon.

Lord Beresford In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, March 20.—Lord Charles Beresford arrived from the Pacific coast yesterday and left for New York on the Soo line last night.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"There is a Mme. Blufort, who might perhaps feel some natural anxiety—" he began.

"The whims of women have never influenced me, senor, I assure you," replied Don Q. "I have made up my mind that Senor Blufort shall paint me. Can you tell me what the British nation paid him for this picture of Don Tommy?"

"Two thousand guineas, I believe," said Sir Graham, naming a big sum at a venture.

"Good. I shall offer him 3000. I will write at once and perhaps you, senor, will be good enough to add a postscript to say what you think of my hispitality?"

Sir Graham hesitated once more. Then he spoke firmly.

"You know how grateful I am for all the kindness you have shown me," he said. "Your hospitality leaves nothing to be desired. I do not know when I have enjoyed myself so much. But if I were to write as you wish, I should in a manner be pledging myself that you would send Blufort back to his wife safe and sound. If you can give me your word as to that, I shall be delighted to add to you note."

A frown crossed the pallid forehead of the chief, but faded again.

"True," he said, "you have reason. For I can by no means warrant this gentleman's safe return to the plains. Suppose I do not like the character of his work? Suppose I am not pleased? What then?"

"Precisely, what then?" echoed Sir Graham dryly.

"Ah, as to that," Don Q. shrugged his pointed shoulders, "who can say?" He bowed over his glass of black coffee. "I perceive your difficulty, senor. I will with your permission, however, send my invitation at once."

"You can but ask him," responded Sir Graham, relieved.

Don Q. turned abruptly.

"Do you mean he would be so unwise as to refuse?"

"Not if he knew you."

"I trust senor, for his own sake, he will not dream of doing so."

The upshot of this conversation was that Don Q. wrote a charming letter to the great French portrait painter. He praised his work, praised it in such words as to show that he was something of a connoisseur. He went on to say that a great artist needed a great subject. He instanced portraits of Napoleon and others. He pointed out that Monsieur Blufort's chance had come out to meet him, and he rejoiced that he, Don Q., should be the individual to afford to supreme genius a supreme opportunity. He ended with polite assurances of hospitality and the pleasure with which he looked forward to making the acquaintance of the painter.

Days went by during which Don Q. always spoke of the coming of Blufort as certain. Sir Graham was lucky in that the chief liked him, and he has since said he seldom enjoyed any period of his life more than that he spent in the sierra while awaiting the arrival of his ransom. For Don Q. sent him ibex shooting under parole and with Robledo, whose knowledge of the haunts and the habits of the wild cabra montes was exhaustive. These expeditions resulted in half-a-dozen good and one remarkable head.

It was at the end of such a day's sport that Sir Graham returned to find the demeanor of Don Q. unaccountably altered. He was no longer the courteous and charming companion, the perfect host.

All that was changed. Don Q. sat silent, brooding, with a vicious gleam in his eyes if he raised them; he was in fact plunged in one of those black fits of depression to which his followers had grown accustomed. His prisoner, being a man of the world, wisely accepted the position and held his tongue also. For the black fit of Don Q. always closed his lips, and he often at such times remained ten days without speaking. If he spoke some one suffered.

For three days the Englishman, living the round with which he had become familiar, entered the cave to find the brigand always crouched over his fire, always in the same position, staring into the flames with the same fierce vacant eyes and bitter compressed lips.

There was nothing for it but to wait for the dark ice of the mood to break up. And Sir Graham was almost startled as he sat reading opposite the brooding figure on the, night of the third day, when Don Q. broke his 60-hours' silence.

"Don Graham, I am about to ask your advice," he said sullenly.

The other murmured his gratification.

"I have received a letter from M. Blufort."

The Englishman nodded.

"You will remember that I wrote to him a very courteous invitation, offering him the honor of painting my portrait."

"I remember perfectly."

"You told me he was a gentleman," went on the chief accusingly.

"I believe he is considered to be one."

"His reply," said Don Q. with a sibilant inflection in his voice that his companion had never noticed before, "would lead me to a directly contrary conclusion."

"He has offended you."

"Deeply, I may say, mortally! Listen! He declines my invitation and adds that he has heard they take excellent photographs in the prisons of Spain!"

The malignant fury of the words, Sir Graham has since declared, almost cowed him. He answered something, he does not know what.

"Is it possible," said Don Q., at last in a more even tone, "that he has never heard of me before coming to Spain—or has some garbled account of my career reached him from persons in power?"

The Englishman agreed that something of the kind was likely.

"It is his misfortune," said Don Q.

"That he cannot paint your portrait?"

"Not at all. That he did not take my offer to paint it on his own terms," amended the chief.

"What do you mean?"

"That he must now do so on mine."

"But he is in Malaga—how can you?"

"My friend, there are no 'buts' in such a career as mine," Don Q. assured him.

* * * * * *

On a glorious morning Monsieur and Madame Blufort started to spend the day near the ruined tower of Camala. Monsieur intended to make some sketches, and madame had ordered a couple of his favorite dishes for the dejeuner they carried with them. Monsieur had forgotten his grievance against the sequestrador, and was feeding in the solemn silence of an habitually ill-tempered man.

All of a sudden he was aware of a handsome fellow in a costume, the picturesqueness of which almost hid its rags, who was repeating some fierce sentence in the rough dialect of the hills.

The artist raised his face from the plate to reply, when he perceived a couple of the same type behind madame. His next sensation was of two huge, hairy hands under his elbows lifting him to his feet. He turned resentfully, but the unshaven black-muzzled face that snarled back at him drove the words from his lips. The first speaker, who, in fact, was no other than Robledo, spoke again more slowly.

"My lord places himself at the feet of the senor, and desires his presence in the sierra."

"Who is your lord?" demanded Blufort arrogantly.

"He is known as Don Q. Surely the senor has heard of him? He has sent a mule for the senor to ride."

"I have written to your master that I cannot come," replied Blufort, wriggling in Gaspar's big hands. "And you can go and tell him I will not come!"

Robledo uttered some rapid words to his comrades. "Our lord said we were to be gentle unless he refused. We have been very gentle," he said regretfully, "and he has refused. Therefore, Gaspar, give him your knee in the small of his fat back while I entangle his legs. So—"

Before the prolonged syllable ceased Blufort was bound and being carried away. Madame had just regained her breath and was preparing to scream when the handsome robber approached her.

"Senora," he said, doffing his hat, "my lord bade me tell you that if you raise an alarm in Malaga and set your consul and the guardias civiles to look for the senor you will never again behold him. But if you wait bravely and patiently he may, perhaps, be returned to you in due time." He turned away.

The wonderful day was waning by the time Blufort and his captors traversed the lower ravines of the sierra.

Every now and then he would break into speech; he warned his captors that his government would make them and their master pay dearly for his detention, aye, and more, for an angry world would arise to wipe such insects out of existence. These and many other threats he held over them. Later on he offered bribes and pardon to the six trudging figures, he implored them to think of his wife's agony, he was ready to make any promise if they would but turn and convey him safely back to Malaga.

But the men made no reply save to whip up the mule to a faster progress.

Fury, a sense of helplessness, and finally alarm filled him. But by the time he had been led through echoing rock passages with his handkerchief tied over his eyes, and emerged into a pipe-fringed valley cut off from all the world, it must be admitted that fear had gained complete possession of his soul. He and his captors had rested for a few hours on the road, so that the morning sun was already visible over the cliffs when he was conducted up to the cave of Don Q.

As it happened, he saw on the terrace only a tall man lounging in a chair and giving directions in execrable Spanish about a skin that had been pegged out to dry.

Frightened as he was, Blufort resolved to take up a definite stand before the brigand of the sierra. Acting upon this idea he advanced slowly and assuming an attitude he said with solemnity:

"Are you aware, senor, that in capturing me you have committed a crime against not civilization only, but against art, sacred art herself?"

At the sound of his voice the tall man turned and looked at him.

"By George, yes!" he said, with an air of compunction.

"The man devoted to art is all compact of nerves" went on Blufort in a tone of reproach.

"I am sure Don Q. will greatly regret putting you to any inconvenience," Sir Graham said politely.

"Then you are not that horrible robber?"

"I should not speak in such terms of him if I were you," put in the other, "for his profession and the particular standing he has reached in it happen to be points on which our—host feels strongly."

"Who are you, then?"

"My name is Marks—and I am, like you, a captive—only I am about to leave and you have but just come."

"How—how does that ruffian treat one?" whispered the painter.

"As one gentleman treats another," replied Sir Graham. "I've had a ripping good time, and that's the truth."

The painter stared. "Impossible!" he breathed. "Monsieur Marks, do you know who I am?"

"I can make a guess. You are Monsieur Blufort, the great artist."

"Monsieur," said the Frenchman, his voice assuming a rumbling tremolo of excitement, "this Don Q., this thief will live to regret to-day!"

"Hush—or so may you!" Sir Graham shook his head. "There he is in the valley. Goodby. He is beckoning to me. I assure you, monsieur, you will find our friend a very decent fellow if you treat him civilly."

A very hearty farewell took place between his departing captive and the chief, who then advanced slowly up the curving path to meet Blufort.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity of entertaining so eminent a personage as Senor Blufort," he began, bowing courteously.

"We will not waste time in foolish speeches," returned the painter, whose spirit had risen after his conversation with the Englishman. "If you are wise you will release me directly and allow me to accompany that gentleman to the plains."

Don Q. spread out his palms.

"I am desolated to refuse," he said urbanely!"

"Refuse? You cannot—you dare not refuse!"

"And why not, may I inquire?"

"Because my government, France herself—"

"Ah, now we come to business," interrupted the chief with a slight gesture. "No doubt they prize you. Tell me, senor, how much do you suppose France will pay to regain you?"

"But—" Blufort began with some bluster.

The brigand held up his thin hand.

"There are no 'buts.' If France will regain you, she must give me my price. It is not a large one, considering it represents your value," said Don Q. "Five thousand guineas in English money. Sir Graham has taught me the beauty of English guineas. If I should fail to return you, I will not accept the ransom."

"Fail to return me—?" cried the horrified painter. "What, then, is your purpose?"

"Hear me, senor," Don Q. took his place in the lounge chair. "I wrote you a letter in which I made you a certain offer. I asked you to paint my portrait on your own terms. Your reply was an insult."

"I—I was annoyed," stammered the other, as the chief waited for an answer.

"I grieve to acknowledge that I was inclined to be annoyed also," said Don Q. "But, naturally, nothing could alter my decision. You are here now to paint my portrait on my terms. Do you desire to hear them?"

"They do not affect me," said Blufort sullenly.

"You are rash in saying that. For you will remain in the sierra until your task is finished."

"I shall be rescued. I have no fear."

"Senor, you are very afraid, indeed," responded Don Q. with a chilly laugh. "And rightly so. People will tell you I have dwelt here in my eyrie from time immemorial; that is a legend; and never yet has a prisoner been taken from my hands; that is an historic truth. With all the intelligence, all the art, all the genius at your command, you are about to paint me, Don Q., the sequestrador of the sierra. I have been told that four weeks have sufficed for the production of some of your finest creations. May I ask if this is so?"

"It is sufficient."

"Then you shall have four weeks in which to place my presentment on your canvas."

"I have with me nothing but my little traveling paint box," objected Blufort.

"Pardon, I should not dream of asking you to transcend all your former efforts, could I not offer you the choice materials to which you are accustomed. Everything has been brought here from your hotel at Malaga."

"I am sure I am much indebted to you," Blufort was angry, baffled. "You appear to be thoroughly proficient in your—calling."

"But naturally, since I am at the head of my profession." The chief paused before continuing—"There are heights to which you have not yet climbed in yours."

"I have painted the most notable persons of the day."

"Permit me to remind you that you have not yet painted me!" said the bandit and then, after a pause, went on—"Once I should have paid you a handsome fee for your efforts in my behalf, now, we must reverse the process, alas! At the close of the four weeks, on the 28th day if I do not find your picture to my liking, do you know what will happen?"

"You will order me to repaint it."

"Not at all."

"What then?"

"I shall cut off your right hand," said the chief.

The Frenchman turned color, his heart sank in horror. There was a light in the fierce flickering eyes, a tone in the sibilant voice that convinced him the brigand was most absolutely in earnest.

After this conversation Don Q. withdrew into the cave, and, a few minutes later men came lamobing up the steep path burdened with easels, canvases, and all the other paraphernalia belonging to Blufort.

He sat among them, sick at heart, dumfounded, resentful. "They do not tell us the half about this terrible man," he reflected. "He is the most remorseless creature in the peninsula!"

But Don Q.'s purposes never lingered hangfooted. After the midday meal, of which he partook in the company of the artist, the chief intimated that he was ready to give Blufort his first sitting.

* * * * * * *

As the days passed and Blufort found his work advancing, his hopes rose. He was a consummate master of his art, that he knew. The idea of failure, always remote, ceased to enter into his calculations. He determined to paint such a picture of the brigand as would bring tears of gratitude to the eyes of the original. He would elevate the harshness, soften away that dreadful resemblance to the quebranta-huesos, the bone-breaking vulture.

"Yes," thought Blufort. "I will paint him as he conceives himself to be!"

He begged Don Q. to be good enough not to look at the portrait until it was completed.

"No, senor, you may rely upon my word that I shall not look upon your work until it is finished," the brigand replied. "Then I will accord to it the praise or blame it deserves."

Blufort, apparently much taken up with his brush, made no reply.

"It is pleasant," Don Q. went on, "when one has lived so exceptional a life as mine, to imagine unborn generations pausing in front of my portrait and discussing some one or other of the exploits which have given me my reputation."

Finally Blufort turning to Don Q. said:

"Will you look upon my work, senor? The portrait is at last perfect!" And he said it with a glow of warm assurance as to its effect on the original.

"With pleasure, senor!" Don Q. rose from his seat and advanced to the easel.

After a long inspection the chief turned slowly to his companion.

"This is terribly sad," he said in a gentle, regretful voice, but with a marked sibilance of intonation, "terribly sad! And just as I was beginning to have something of a liking for you, senor."

Blufort started back.

"Do you mean to say—" he stammered and stopped, breathless, for there was a significance in the look fixed upon him.

"Senor," resumed the chief, "you are a very great artist? Your reputation is wide as the world?"

Blufort bowed with a beating heart.

"Yet even craftsmen as skilful as yourself have their occasional failures."

"Assuredly. But this is not one," said the Frenchman huskily and with an effort.

"Bring a looking-glass," commanded the chief.

A man hurriedly fetched one. The brigand pushed him into position beside the picture and placed himself so that his reflection in the mirror appeared close beside Blufort's presentment of him.

"Look!" he said briefly.

And truly the portrait was a wonderful piece of work. By his consummate art Blufort had, while preserving the likeness, transmuted the cruel vulture aspect into that of an ascetic. The soul that gazed out at you from the pictured eyes was a soul high, pure, intense, but not the soul of Don Q. The disparity between the mirrored face and the pictured one was flagrant.

The artist looked and turned away, shivering.

"Have you anything to say, senor?" demanded Don Q. "If I had a brother at the Vatican—this might be he! But I am not a pope. I am not the head of Christendom but of sequestradores. What have you to say?"

Blufort stood silent though mentally he called himself a thrice-condemned fool.

"I told you that if you failed to please me in the matter," went on the chief, with the same menacing urbanity, "you should lose your hand. But then I never expected this!" he pointed at the picture.

Blufort looked at him. Always two natures were struggling for mastery in the heart of Don Q. At that moment if ever the darker of the two held the upper hand.

"No?" questioned the painter feebly.

"No! I had allowed for the possibility of failure, for which I set the forfeit of your right hand. But I had not conceived the possibility of an insult."

"I have done all that could be done with a subject such as yourself!" exclaimed the artist in desperation.

"Pardon, senor. With even so unpromising a subject as myself, your brush could have been true."

"But you will release me?"

"Yes, you shall indeed be released. My men will bury you at sunset. For the present I will leave you alone with your picture in order that you may realize the full enormity of your offence."

Blufort sat for a long time absolutely stunned. When next he looked round with understanding the sun stood high in the zenith.

"And so I have painted!" he cried to himself, shaking his hand up at the sky, "painted consummately, as not another in this generation could paint!" he sprang forward and stood before the picture.

He stared at the pictured face, high-souled, ascetic, noble. The look, the expression maddened him. This man, this Don Q., had cheated him! He was to die, he, the great Blufort, alone and horribly among these desolate mountains.

He clasped his head in his arms and panted for revenge. But he was helpless—helpless! Then an idea struck him. He was condemned to die. Even these demons could do no more, could do no worse with him. He groped with hurried fingers for his palette and brushes. Yes, yes, Don Q. should learn that Blufort, the prisoner, the dying man could still sting! Swiftly he set to work upon the portrait again.

Under the artist's touch the face upon the easel quickly changed, all the flattery went out of it, and in its stead there grew out minute by minute Don Q. in his blackest mood, with the vulture physiognomy, the bitter, sneering jaw, a face hardly of this human world as Blufort's heart told him.

At length it was done, Blufort flung down his brushes and waited. He laughed shrilly. He threw himself into a chair.

When at last the footfall of the brigand sounded upon the inner flooring of the cave, Blufort felt his first pang of repentance. Perhaps what he had been doing would add to the rigors of his death. It was too late to think of that now, for Don Q. advanced slowly from the mouth of the cavern and his glance turned at once to the picture.

Blufort watched him furtively, till Don Q. with flashing eyes swung round upon him.

"What—what have you done, senor?" he cried.

Blufort scowled. "You did not like the ideal, I have given you the real!" he snarled. "Yes, senor, that is you—you—you! Kill me now as soon as you like."

"Kill?" repeated Don Q. with a strange modulation in his voice. "Kill a man who can paint such a picture as that, so true, so forceful? Destroy art without a parallel such as yours? Impossible!"

"Do not torment me!"

"I tell you I feel myself looking out at myself from those eyes, my spirit lies breathing upon those lips," the chief said with his strange enthusiasm. "The fire from the altar before the gods has come down upon you. Here is genius. Live, senor; I could not be guilty of depriving the world of you. Come, we will dine and drink to the health of such an artist!"

"And afterward?" asked Blufort, bewildered by the turn of events.

"Afterwards my men shall escort you in safety to the foothills."

"And the picture—"

"As to the picture it is worthy of its subject. I need say no more in its praise, senor. I shall never sit to another painter!"

HOW DON Q. PAID FOR HIS CIGARETTES.

From an expedition Don Q. was returning on a brilliant morning in the last days of March, and had halted for the noonday heat in a cave that overhung a forest of cork trees. No reflection of the sunshine entered his mood, which was one of the blackest. For no less than three days had elapsed since he had run out of material for cigarettes, and almost six since he had sent Robledo down to the plains to bring him the necessary supply.

Don Q. sat, therefore, and stared vindictively at the fire, which was always kindled to warm his chilly blood, even when winter had loosed its grip on the bleak heights.

The sun was about to set gorgeously in the silence of the sierra when a robber came to the door of the cave and crossed himself as he saw the attitude of his chief. He waited for the usual command of Don Q.

"Speak, Gaspar." Don Q. scarcely turned his head.

The big lowering rascal was about to reply, when from outside came a patter of light feet, and the next moment a tall, panting girl stood in the mouth of the cave. The men who had been running after to detain her paused on the threshold.

"I will see my lord of the mountains! Senor, let me speak with you alone," she cried. "These tried to prevent me—"

Don Q. motioned with his hand.

"Sit down," he said, indicating a rough chair which had been contrived from a barrel. Then, turning to his followers, "You will retire," he added; "but, first, what does your brawling mean? Am I to be disturbed in this fashion?"

"The orders," replied Gaspar in a low voice, "were that my lord would not be troubled until the return of Robledo. This woman—"

"Go," snarled the chief, "the senorita would see me alone."

The men filed hurriedly out of sight, and Don Q., with his head sunk between his shoulders, waited till the last footstep died away.

"You have never seen me before," she burst out. "You do not know who I am."

"Go on, dear Isabelilla."

She started violently. "You know me?"

"I fear I know nearly everything," replied Don Q., with an air of regretting an awkward circumstance. "I know, for instance, that when I send Robledo on special errands to the plains, he nearly always wastes an hour or two for which he does not account—with a guitar, Isabelilla."

At the mention of the name of Robledo the girl's eyes filled with tears.

"He will never sing under my window any more," she sobbed.

"This is exceedingly sad news," remarked Don Q. coldly. "I beg you to tell me the whole story—the true story, Isabelilla."

"O, my lord, do not be angry," she pleaded. "Four days ago Robledo came into the town, charged with a mission from my lord. When it was growing dark he went out upon that mission, and presently, in the dark, he returned?"

"With his guitar?" questioned the chief serenely.

"In order to avert suspicion," Isabelilla protested.

"Pray proceed. It is not for you to give me reasons. Give me facts very simply. I will do the rest."

"He was singing—O! a sweet song," went on the girl, in a broken voice, "when there was a sound of men running down the street. His music ceased, and he swung himself up into the embrasure of the window, where it was very dark. The men stopped and searched the shadows under my window, and one said—'He was here but a moment ago, when I warned you'—for no one dreamed he was in the window above, clinging to the bars. 'What is to be done?' they said; and one who seemed the leader, answered—'We will remain here without noise in the shadows, for of a surety this man whom we have seen this evening in the company of smugglers and thieves, will come presently with the tobacco he received to see this woman,' and he added words, my lord, that should not be spoken of a woman"—she paused, for she was crying very bitterly.

"Ah!" commented Don Q. "And after?"

"Robledo heard the words, and they hurt his heart, for he loves me. He dropped from the window on the man's shoulders, even before he had finished speaking—and Robledo had a knife in his hand."

"So the fellow died who maligned you? No?"

"I have heard so, lord. He lay upon the ground, and I saw Robledo run very swiftly up the street, and there were five yelping at his heels. They were out of sight in a moment. And doubtless Robledo would have escaped, for he is the bravest and the swiftest of all men; but they chased him into the arms of a patrol who were stationed at the end of the street, near the plaza. He wounded two, but there were ten against him. What would you?"

"So he permitted himself to be made a prisoner?"

The chief's thin smile pointed his comment bitterly.

"Yes; for there were many," Isabelilla deprecated; then resumed, in much agitation—"Next day my mother made inquiries at the prison, after her wont. None suspect her. And they say he will be taken out to the Alameda on Sunday morning and garotted."

"If you were afraid, why did you come into the mountains?"

"To tell my lord," she stammered.

"But what have I to do with the matter?"

"My lord will deliver Robledo. My lord never deserts his people," she said proudly.

"Was it while upon my business that Robledo was captured? Had it been so, doubtless I should have released him."

"But—but—O, my lord, you cannot mean you will let him die?"

"I am afraid, dear Isabelilla, that you have fathomed my meaning," said Don Q. with indifference. "It would be subversive of the discipline which I maintain among my men were I to release Robledo, who was taken prisoner while disobeying my commands."

"But he loves me," she urged.

"That also I did not command him to do."

Isabelilla stared at Don Q. She could not believe her ears. That the chief, upon whom all her world relied, should forsake Robledo and leave him to his fate was absolutely unbelievable. In her misery she stepped nearer to him, but she could see no sign of relenting in his fierce eyes or upon the sinister lips.

"But Robledo is the most faithful of all my lord's followers," she cried. "In prison he is waiting the aid of my lord. Shall he expect in vain?"

There was still no answer. Carried beyond herself with the sorrow of the moment, she turned on him.

"They will say in the plains that the arm of my lord of the sierra is grown short, seeing it cannot stretch far enough to pluck the most worthy and brave of his men from death."

"They will not say that," replied the brigand gently.

"Why not?"

"Because, my good Isabelilla, I shall take care to avenge Robledo—when he is dead."

The girl looked at him in horror. Then she burst out—

"Since I could walk," she stormed, "I have been—I, too—in the service of my lord. Who sent the news to the mountains that Don Luis was coming, carrying poison in his hat? It was I! Who did her part when my lord came down into the city by night to enter the palace of Don Felipe Majada? It was I! But why do I talk in vain? My lord knows. They say he cannot forget! But that is not true. He has altered, and can forget us now! Then listen, my lord, to Isabelilla. You have changed her from a friend to a foe. She will go down the mountains, and not smile again until she has done the thing that is in her mind. But she will laugh when she sees the lord of the sierra garotted on the Alameda, even as Robledo."

As she turned to go she flung a packet upon the ground at the chief's feet.

"Stop!" At sound of the masterful word the girl halted involuntarily.

"What is this?"

"Robledo, even in the prison, did not forget his lord," she returned furiously. "He bade me fetch this and send it by a sure hand to"—she faced him and met his glance—"my lord. For his sake I brought it, not—" she ended abruptly.

"So Robledo sent me this?" said Don Q. thoughtfully. "Pardon me, Isabelilla." He opened the packet and fingered and smelt the tobacco it contained. "It is good. Know then, girl, that my lack of cigarettes has been a very harrowing trial to me. You will take a message from me to Robledo?"

"Yes, lord."

"You will say that, as Robledo was so criminal as to waste his time under your window instead of coming straight back to me, I am determined to leave him to die."

"Ah," she wailed, striking her hands together in despair.

"And you will add that, as he had the good sense, even when he was lying under sentence of death, to remember the horrible privation I was undergoing without cigarettes, I have for that reason, and that alone, changed my intention, and resolved to forgive him, and take him out of prison on Saturday."

Isabelilla sprang to Don Q.'s side and covered his slender, bony hand with kisses.

"That will do," said the chief, withdrawing his fingers from hers. "Go; lose no time, or Robledo will begin to fear that I intend to punish him according to his deserts."

"Lord, he sent also this," she drew out another packet. "It is a plan of the prison of Castelleno."

"I do not suppose it will be necessary for me to consult it," the chief said, with a strange smile of remembrance, "but leave it here. It was wise to send it."

To be continued.

The Ideal Laxative for Children

Mothers cannot be too careful in what they give children to move the bowels. Calomel, cascara, senna, salts, cathartic pills, castor oil, and purging mineral waters irritate the bowels—upset the stomach—and eventually lead up to chronic non-action of the bowels—Constipation.

Fruit-a-tives

are the finest medicine in the world for children.

It is just like giving the little ones apples, oranges, figs and prunes — because "Fruit-a-tives" ARE the juices of these fruits—but so combined that the medicinal action is increased many times.

Fruit-a-tives are perfectly safe for the children. Keep a box always in the house.

Has Taken a Thousand

Zutoo

Always Cured Headache.
Never Affected her Heart.

Here is a testimonial from the wife of Doctor W. L. Shurtleff, K.C., of Coaticook, Que., who has taken a thousand Zutoo Tablets (the Japanese Vegetable Headache remedy.)

It should convince any doubting one, that while the tablets cure headache, they do not, like the drug cures, affect the heart, nerves or stomach. No one would or could take such a number if they were not perfectly harmless. Mrs. Shurtleff herself had to discard the drug cures.

Here is what she says:

I have always been a great sufferer from headache, and have taken a great many headache cures. I found that after taking them for a time they caused palpitation of the heart. Three years ago I began using Zutoo, I have likely taken over a thousand tablets. I have never yet felt the least ill-effect from using them and they cure my headaches as quickly as any remedy I ever took.

They are Harmless as Soda.

Of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

No other medicine for Woman's ills in the world has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female illnesses or such hosts of grateful friends as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing all forms of Female Complaints, Inflammation and Ulceration, and consequent Spinal Weakness.

It has cured more cases of Backache and Local Weaknesses than any other one remedy. It dissolves and expels tumors in an early stage of development.

Irregularities and periodical pains, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility quickly yield to it; also deranged organs, causing pain, dragging sensations and backache. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the female system.

It removes that wearing feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, dizziness, faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues". These are indications of Female Weakness or some derangement of the organs, which this medicine cures as well as Chronic Kidney Complaints and Backache, of either sex.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

ONTARIO INSURANCE.

Report of Provincial Inspector, Presented to the Legislature.

Toronto, March 20.—The abstract report of the provincial inspector of insurance for the year 1906 was presented to the Legislature yesterday. It covers only those companies making returns to the Ontario Government. These include one life insurance company (the Equity Life), purely joint stock fire insurance companies (Merchants, Queen City and Traders); weather insurance companies (the Huron Weather, Ontario Farmers' and Western Farmers'); the cash mutual fire companies, 14 in number; and the purely mutual fire companies, of which there are 69.

The fire insurance mutual companies of all classes show a gross amount at risk of $230,827,923. The surplus of general assets over liabilities is placed at $8,603,476. In 1906 the new business amounted to $85,832,695.

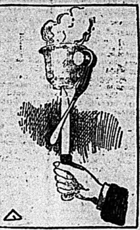
BALANCING FEAT.

How to Hold a Cup of Water on the Point of a Carver.

When you are told that it is possible to balance a cup one-quarter full of water on the point of a carving knife don't express your incredulity without giving one a chance to explain the feat.

Here is the way to do it, but nervous persons need not attempt it. Insert a cork in the handle of a coffee cup tightly, but not so vigorously as to snap the handle off. Stick a four pronged fork in the cork, as shown in the illustration, two of the prongs on one side of the handle and two on the other.



BALANCING THE CUP.

This arrangement lowers the center of gravity of the apparatus, and you may now place the cup on the point of the knife. Do this carefully to see that the cup is in exact equilibrium.

It is hardly necessary to say that the hand that holds the upright knife must be a steady one or there will be a smashup, but with quiet nerves and careful handling the feat may readily be accomplished.—Chicago News.

THE RABBIT FAMILY.

How Molly Cottontail Teaches Bunny the Ways of Life.

Does it ever occur to you that young animals have bushels of things to learn and that the length of their lives depends to a large extent upon how well they learn their lessons?

For example, we will take the rabbit. Bunny's first lesson will be in what kinds of food to eat, how to know his enemies and how to play tricks and gain useful knowledge.

Molly Cottontail, the mother rabbit, will impress upon her baby that he must lie low and mingle with the dry leaves and underbrush while he is little and helpless, because the Creator in his goodness has provided a coat the color of his natural surroundings for his special protection. She will say in rabbit talk: "Now, Bunny, one thump with my hind feet means freeze (keep quite still), an enemy is approaching; two thumps, slow, means come; two thumps, fast, wonder; three thumps, run for dear life."

Bunny is taught how to wabble his nose to keep his smeller clear, that dewdrops from the bush is the best water to drink and that he should often taste his mother's lips to make sure he is having the same kind of fodder.

Scrambled Eggs In a Hat.

Here is an old trick, but perhaps you younger boys and girls do not know it.

It is the trick of cooking scrambled eggs in a hat.

You ask the company if they would like a dish of scrambled eggs. Then you break four eggs in a hat, drop in a pinch of salt, place the hat for a short time over the flame of a candle and shortly afterward pour into a dish the scrambled eggs, quite hot.

How is it done? Why, the scrambled eggs have in reality been previously prepared, covered and placed in the hat. But when making your proposition to the company you hold the hat too high for them to see the inside of it.

Your eggs—all but one—were really empty ones, from which you had previously sucked the contents. The one solid one you should have accidentally dropped on the table, letting it break, so as to fool your company into supposing that the other four were also solid eggs.

The Enchanted Tray.

Take an iron tray and set it on top of four glasses which have been wiped perfectly dry.

Charge it with electricity by rubbing it vigorously with a sheet of brown paper.

You will presently produce sparks strong enough to leap from the tray to your finger, although you will be in no danger of a shock.

This is called the enchanted tray and is a nice thing to amuse your little friends with.

Contentment.

In summer, when 'tis very warm
  And all the folks complaining go,
It's then I like the winter time,
  Brave winter with its ice and snow.

And when the blustering [illegible]
  And it is cold as cold can be
The very hottest summer day
  Is not one whit too warm for me.

In spring I like the bracing fall,
  In autumn love the gentle spring,
So, you see, the whole year round
  I'm satisfied with everything.

PASSING OF THE BROOM.

The Day of the Vacuum Dust Remover Is Near at Hand.

The broom threatens soon to be as obsolete as the old copper warming pan, judging from the number of vacuum dust removers which are being placed upon the market. The change is one which must meet with the unqualified approval of all who know what a breeding ground of disease is the common dust of our houses.

Every housewife who is possessed of cleanly instincts should welcome an apparatus which removes dust instead of scattering it in all directions, lost to the senses, so to speak, for a time by its attenuation in air, only sooner or later to settle again on the shelves, pictures, curtains and carpets in a thin film. Moreover, the removal of dust and its collection in a receptacle by means of the vacuum cleaner permit of its absolute destruction by fire.

Bacteriological science can easily demonstrate the existence of disease germs in common household dust, and there is evidence of an eminently practical character that dust is otherwise a source of disease. There could hardly be a more effectual means of spreading the infective and irritating particles than the old fashioned broom. The method is not only insanitary, but absurd from the point of view of its application. The broom may clean the surface of a carpet, chair or curtain effectually enough, but the dust is only removed to be scattered elsewhere and to be spread over an even wider area than before.

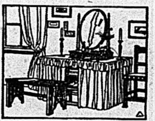
The great and important difference between the cult of the broom and the vacuum cleaner may be summed up by saying that while the former is calculated to spread disease the latter enables the dust and its pathogenic contents to be removed and destroyed by fire. The method of removing dust by means of the vacuum cleaner has therefore everything to be said in its favor, and it is to be hoped that the apparatus will become so moderate in price as to be within the reach of all. The passing of the broom, when it comes to be "un fait accompli," will be a fact of great sanitary significance.—London Lancet.

DRESSING TABLE.

This One, Made From a Packing Box, Is Quite Attractive.

A dressing table made at home from an ordinary packing case is perhaps not a new idea, but one well worth remembering, and certainly here is a very charming result that may be had with the utmost simplicity of labor.

One of the sides of the case forms the top of the dressing table, the opening being in front and covered by drapery to hide the interior. Cloth should be stretched tightly across the top and tacked on around the sides of the box. The drapery around the two sides should also be tacked on.



PACKING BOX DRESSING TABLE.

Across the front two curtains should be arranged to slide on a small rod, or even a piece of wire stretched across the top of the opening.

When the curtains have been placed in position a small flounce should be fastened on with brass headed tacks. This flounce will hide the row of tacks which fastens the large curtains and gives a finishing touch to the dressing table which is really quite smart.

Some pretty material chosen perhaps to somewhat match the color of the wall decorations would look well, and the whole cost, including case, drapery, nails and everything, should not be very great.

Of course no dressing table is complete without a large mirror, and a secondhand one might be procured and stained to match the color of the material used to drape the case. Casters should not be forgotten and can easily be obtained.—New York American.

The Thin Woman.

First of all the thin woman who wants to gain flesh must stop worrying. She must eat little and often and drink milk between meals and at bedtime. Fruit in quantities must be a part of the daily diet, cereals, starchy and sweet vegetables, Irish and sweet potatoes, peas, corn and beans and salads of all sorts, not to mention bisque and cream soups. Hot water should be taken morning and night and hot, not boiled, milk in the same manner.

Nourishing Soup.

Take about one pound of shin of beef and cut into small pieces. Wash four ounces of pearl barley and put into saucepan with meat, also a small onion cut up very fine, a few potatoes, salt, pepper and a tomato. Pour over all this about three pints of cold water. Let it come to the boil, skimming carefully. It should then simmer for about three hours. Strain, add a little milk and boil up again.

Cleaning Clothes.

The best article to use for cleaning clothes is a piece of woolen cloth. If possible use a strip of the same cloth as the garment to be cleaned. Take a piece four inches wide and eight inches long and roll lengthwise. Fasten at the middle with a stout rubber band. Soak either end with gasoline and rub the article to be cleaned. This very simple device works like magic.

Ellery's Dilemma

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay

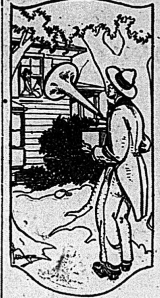
Copyright, 1906, by Mary Cunningham

"What have modern inventions done for us, I'd like to know?" said Jonas Fert, the village philosopher, from his seat on a barrel in the general store.

"They've made life easier," answered Ellery Brown. It was an old discussion of theirs, a topic they fell back on when all else failed. Jonas dwelt on the numerous accidents that were unknown in leisurely stagecoach days. Ellery talked of the wonders of machinery and electricity.

"Pooh!" sniffed Jonas. "Who's any better off for the shocks telegrams bring 'em? And as for electric lights—a pretty girl's face used to look twice as well when there were only candles shining! Not that you'd care about that," he added slyly, and Ellery reddened. Every one knew that he was the shiest man in all Elmway village.

As a child he became speechless with confusion when any one noticed him, he stammered and stuttered his way through the gawky age, and when he arrived at young manhood, though popular among his own sex, the sight of a girl's face, particularly a charming one, would send him into an agony of self consciousness, so much so that always he took the opposite side of the road when he saw a feminine acquaintance approaching. He shunned picnics and socials as if they were a pestilence. He would rather have died than taken a girl rowing or driving. His neighbors laughed and wondered what would happen should Ellery fall in love. Ellery himself never considered the subject, and that may have been the reason why love took him unawares.



"ARABELLA, I LOVE YOU."

He was sitting in church one bright Sunday in summer when his attention was arrested by the sight of a stranger in the Hardys' pew, a slip of a girl in blue muslin, with a wide picture hat trimmed with roses.

From where he sat he could see the delicately tinted oval of her cheek and the pale gold of her wavy hair. Then she turned her head, and their eyes met. Hers were dark gray, fringed with heavy lashes. Ellery's heart began a ridiculous tattoo, the hands that were holding his book trembled, and he colored to the roots of his hair.

"It's Arabella Hawkins," whispered some one behind him. Every now and then Ellery ventured a glance in her direction. The sun, slanting through one of the small stained glass windows, touched her with rainbow colors utterly dazzling. "I wish I could walk home with her," sighed Ellery. "But do I dare?"

"If you don't some one else will," his common sense said, and when the last hymn had been sung and the people were moving slowly down the aisles Ellery pressed forward, his courage at white heat. He spoke a word of greeting to Mrs. Hardy and then was presented to Arabella.

How it happened he scarcely knew, but soon he and his divinity were strolling along toward the Hardys', and she was telling him that she had come from Centerville for a two weeks' visit. She was as talkative as she was pretty and had a faculty of putting him at his ease. To Ellery it was an experience as delightful as it was novel, and he resolved to repeat it by calling the next evening.

And, though in the days that followed his footsteps were not the only ones that wended their way to the Hardy gate, he managed to monopolize the greater share of Arabella's time. His shyness was gradually wearing away, but there was one question he longed to ask and could not.

In vain he rehearsed it. Alone in his room it was easy enough to say, "Arabella, will you marry me?" Yet when he was with her the words seemed to cleave to the roof of his mouth. Over and over again he led up to it only to halt miserably when the crucial moment came.

"Could you—could you"— he stammered on one of these occasions.

"Could I what, Ellery?" queried Arabella. They had gone as far as Christian names.

"Could you—go driving with me tomorrow?" It was not in the least what he had meant to say, yet as he mopped his brow it vaguely occurred to him that perhaps in a buggy it would be easier.

But even there, with Arabella by his side, words failed him.

"Will you—will you"— he began.

"Will I what, Ellery?" said Arabella very sweetly and patiently.

"Will you—have an ice cream soda at the drug store on the way back?"

"Certainly," answered Arabella, a shade of disappointment in her voice.

She liked the broad shouldered, honest eyed young fellow more than she admitted to any one save herself, though she never had had so bashful a suitor.

And yet she knew Ellery was no coward. His townsfolk had told her of the courageous things he had done—how he had stopped a runaway horse at the risk of his own life and how one bitter winter day he had crawled to the edge of an ice hole in the river to rescue the eldest Hardy child who clung there, half frozen.

As for Ellery, he felt that time was passing and he was no nearer the goal. "It's terrible," he moaned, "to think I've gone this far and can't go further!" Matters were getting desperate.

"Better hurry up, Ellery!" his friends urged him. "There's a fellow in her own town wants her just as much as you do!"

Advice came thick and fast.

"Why don't you write it?" drawled one waggish acquaintance. "And then she'll be sure to get it."

"Modern invention has done a good many things," chuckled old Jonas Fert. "It's given us telegraphs and motor boats and automobiles, but there's one thing it hasn't done. It hasn't made it any easier to pop the question. That's just as hard today as it was a hundred years ago!"

Ellery groaned. Then his face brightened. "Modern inventions," he muttered to himself—"modern inventions! By jiminy, I've solved the problem! I'll win her yet!"

A few days later a small crate arrived for him. "Looks as if it might be a typewriter," said the station agent, but as Ellery was not given to literary pursuits this guess seemed rather improbable.

Late that night Ellery tiptoed through the Hardys' orchard, holding tight to a mysterious funnel shaped contrivance, on which he had banked all his hopes. The sleeping Arabella was wakened by a voice beneath her window. Slipping on a kimono, she leaned out to listen.

"Ellery," she whispered, "is that you?"

From the shadows beneath came his answering tones, swift and unwavering.

"Arabella, I love you. I love you more than any one in the world. I'm not worthy of you, I know, but I'll do everything I can to make you happy. Will you marry me, Arabella?"

"Yes, Ellery," said Arabella promptly. "But what's the matter with your voice? Mercy!" she ejaculated as there came a sudden whir and click. "You aren't choking, are you?"

"If I am, it's with happiness," said her rapturous suitor, coming quickly into view.

"That sounds more natural," said Arabella. There was a whispered colloquy, and later, in a happy daze, his phonograph hugged securely under his arm, they stumbled along the orchard path. "She'll never know it was done by machine," he murmured, "and since she loves me it's all right anybow, though I suppose that when I get home I'd better destroy the record or 'twill give me clean away."

At the edge of the road a familiar figure loomed in the darkness. "That you, Ellery?" said Jonas Fert. "It's too black to see a foot in front of me. And they pretend to light this place by electricity! I tell you modern inventions"—

"Modern inventions," said the happy Ellery, "are the greatest things in the world!"

Does the Sun Change Shape?

Professor C. L. Poor as the result of careful study of heliometer measurements, confirmed by that of solar photographs, decided that the sun periodically changes its figure, being sometimes an oblate spheroid like the earth, with its equatorial diameter exceeding the polar, and sometimes a prolate spheroid, having a greater polar than equatorial diameter. His idea is that the solar globe is to be regarded as a vibrating body, having an equatorial diameter on the average slightly in excess of the polar, but changing at certain times so that the ratio of the two diameters is temporarily reversed. The period of variability, he thinks, is the same as the sun spot period. The changes of figure, if they really occur, are so small that only the most delicate observations can make them manifest, but, affecting a body of such supreme importance as the sun, they must possess much scientific interest.—London Graphic.

Pecksniff.

Writing in the Independent Review, C. C. Osborne states that the original of Pecksniff was Samuel Carter Hall, "than whom," he continues, "no man, I venture to think, ever had a larger stock of tags of morality and commonplace quotations from the poets." In 1870 he was involved in a libel action, and to his great indignation several papers referred to him as "Pecksniff." He had none of Pecksniff's coarser vices, being a teetotaler, but he was vain, officious, indiscreet, self complacent, a boastful poseur, offensively voluble and overflowed with moral platitudes. However, in spite of those failings, which marked him as outwardly like to the great hypocrite, Mr. Hall bore no real resemblance to the mean, dishonest and vicious creature depicted by Dickens.

ANOTHER HIGH AUTHORITY ON EYESIGHT IN RELATION TO HEALTH.

He next fell into the hands of a specialist who operated on him for piles, assuring him that this would be the end of all his troubles, but the results were negative. He then tried massage, and electricity, but no improvement or relief from the distressing headaches. Then other specialists, and lastly his eyes were THOROUGHLY EXAMINED (they had been superficially examined before) and glasses prescribed; there was no immediate change and it seemed as though this was to be like all the rest, but slowly an improvement began, and in the course of a few weeks it was VERY REAL. His headaches disappeared for the first time, his general health much improved, he slept well and enjoyed life. But on account of the long standing and complicated nature of the eye-strain his case will need to be followed up for some time, making necessary changes in his glasses.

What Fashion's Devotees Must Wear This Summer.

Millinery Openings To-day Attracted Many Ladies, Who Gazed With Delight On Latest Creations In the Realms Of Fickle Dame Fashion.

THE RITCHIE CO.'S SPRING OPENING.

The Ritchie Co. held their 51st Spring Opening to-day, they having completed their fifty years in business in September last. They have commenced their second half-century in business with a larger and more varied stock in all departments than ever before. Their buyers have lately returned from the principal markets of the old and new world, and goods have been pouring into all the departments for the past six weeks until they are literally bubbling over with the latest products of nearly every country on the globe.

The Millinery Department, which is always the centre of interest on opening days, is under new management. Miss Sylvester, who has been head of several of the best Millinery Departments in Toronto and the west, has charge, and has associated with her as chief designer and head of the workroom Miss Oliver, who is admittedly one of the cleverest artists in Canada, and has had extensive experience both in Canada and the United States. The hats exhibited to-day are a credit to these ladies, as well as to The Ritchie Co. One would require to travel a great distance to see a finer display, and it was at once noticed that while there were a great many hats on exhibition no two are alike. Miss Sylvester absolutely refuses to make exact copies of any hats, and ladies making a purchase at Ritchie's can rest assured that they will not see a duplicate of their hat on some other person.

There are a great many hats of the Mushroom and Helmet shapes, with short front and deep back. Speaking generally, hats have a bonnet-like poise. This off-the-face idea is almost universal and is not confined to special shapes. Flowers of all kinds and particularly roses are used in the greatest profusion, and it is expected that this will be the greatest flower season ever known in the millinery trade.

Some of the New York roses are very large, and there are some strikingly new things in grasses and feather effects. Ostrich plumes and tips are very fashionable, especially in the two-toned rich colorings, and ribbons are used in almost every conceivable shape. The new Dresden and Roman stripe effects in ribbons are beautiful. Many pretty hats were shown made entirely of flowers and foliage, and nearly every hat requires one or more of the large stick pins, now so fashionable, to complete it. Some of the hats have high bandeaux, showing large crushes of malines and banked in with flowers. We cannot attempt a description of individual hats in this space, but would say that the millinery appealed to us as very charming, and, while such quantities of trimmings were used, the prices seemed very moderate. There were all black hats, suitable for mourning, and as for the children's hats, they are of a charming and picturesque description.

Besides selling trimmed millinery, the firm make a specialty of importing large quantities of shapes, flowers, ribbons, nets and all kinds of trimmings for sale over the counter to those desiring to do their own trimming.

In the Carpet and House Furnishing department, on the floor just above the Millinery, there were exquisite designs and colorings in new Carpets and Rugs, including a large exhibit of the world-famed Templeton Rugs. There is quite a tendency toward colored curtains, and we saw some lovely silk-finished French Madras, both by the yard and in pairs. The department was tastefully decorated, reflecting much credit on Messrs. Dickens and Post.

The fashionable Jackets for spring are made from Tweeds and Covert cloths, some being long and loose, but the majority are short and close fitting. A specially fine showing was made of Black Silk Jackets suitable for middle-aged ladies. These are handsomely embroidered and prettily trimmed. The Etons and Bolero coats are the most popular in the costumes, although some pretty styles are shown, semi-fitting and box. Blouses will be worn mostly with short and three-quarter sleeves, and promise to be as popular as ever; there is a very large range of new styles in these. This department is filled with new skirts, underskirts, whitewear, corsets, etc.

The new dress goods, silks and wash materials were never so pretty. In woollen materials there is a strong feeling for narrow stripes and checks, although plain Broadcloths, Panamas and Amazons will have a big run. The dainty French Organdies and Voiles are simply dreams of loveliness, and attracted much attention and favorable comment to-day from the ladies.

There were lovely new Parasols, filmy Silk and Lace Scarfs, Ribbons, Veilings, Gloves of all kinds, as well as the heavier Linens and Staple goods on exhibition.

The Men's Department is liberally stocked with all that is new in Clothing, Underwear and Furnishings for men and boys.

This is a department that is steadily growing, and the Children's clothing department is very popular with the mothers, who appreciate the opportunity of buying reliable clothing at such moderate prices.

We were informed by a member of the firm that the stock is considerably larger than ever before, and that they expect a very heavy season's trade, which they have made ample provision for by purchasing largely from the manufacturers previous to the recent sharp advance in prices.

AT MISS IRWIN'S,

Beauty and Art in Millinery.

Miss Irwin's artistic display of millinery is a delight to the eye. Fashion has never called into being more beauty, art and style combined than those shown by this house this season. The pre-eminence of Miss Irwin's millinery is established without a doubt. No wonder success has smiled upon her efforts. Many strikingly handsome and original models were exhibited, both by foreign and her own artists; the color combinations were so dainty, the ladies were fairly enraptured. Certainly it's a flower season; nature has almost been surpassed by art. Plumes in the daintiest of tones and shading are also very popular—light shades prevail. Copenhagen blues, also ceil, pinks to old rose, grays, browns, violets, greens, in fact every shade is used more or less. In shapes the mushroom leads in large and small. Jap pokes also are favorites, but there is an endless variety to choose from. Selectness and good style is a particular feature of this house.

A splendid showing of mourning goods is made, as well as hats for the little tots. Some beautiful collars and belts were also shown.

Miss Irwin keeps increasing her staff, and employs only the most competent artists. Miss Minnie Sills, who is one of the best designers in the province, has charge of the workroom, while Miss Edith McCurdy and almost a score of other competent and courteous assistants, delight in showing you the many beautiful creations. To miss seeing this exhibit is to miss a rare treat.

MISS CAMPBELL.

The display of millinery creations by Miss Campbell is certainly beautiful, and it would be almost impossible, in this space, to describe the varied styles of hats and do them justice. The predominating shape is the mushroom hat, getting its name owing to its being very drooping. Another striking creation is of rustic burned straw, banked with brown roses and touches of green velvet, and graceful feathers. Another exceedingly attractive style of picture hat is composed of mohair with a pretty Dresden crown, large cut steel buckle across the front, with two black ostrich plumes, and long velvet streamers. There is also to be seen a delicious little French shape, made of burnt chip, trimmed with brown and yellow daisies, with moss green velvet. The American Beauty rose is a trimming that is much used, and has a pretty effect. Poppies are also used, as are also the usual ostrich feathers. The tastes of the most fastidious person can be gratified at Miss Campbell's this season.

High Court Of Justice.

The first case taken up was that of Broad vs. Blackley. The parties reside in the township of Madoc. The plaintiff, Thos. Broad, seeks to recover damages from his father-in-law, Wm. John Blackley, for, as he alleges, influencing his wife to remain at his (Blackley's) place instead of at the home of the plaintiff. It appeared from the evidence that there was some trouble between Broad and his wife and for this reason she went to her parents' home and remained there. The case was in progress all of to-day. Mr. A. A. McDonald for plaintiff, Mr. Porter, solicitor. Mr. D. E. K. Stewart for defendant. Mr. S. Masson, solicitor.

The jury returned a verdict for the defendant.

Quietly Married.

Mr. Robt. T. Gray and Miss Nannie Wiggins, both of Queensboro, were this morning quietly married at Christ Church. The rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, officiated. A few relatives were present at the ceremony. The attendants were Mr. Herbert T. Wiggins and Miss Minnie Diamond. The young couple left at noon for a trip to New York.

Address & Presentation.

At a regular meeting of Maiden City Lodge, 'Prentice Boys, held in their hall last evening, a presentation took place. One of the members, Bro. M. C. Dulmage, is about to leave the city and the members took advantage of the occasion to show their appreciation of him by presenting him with a complimentary address, accompanying which was a handsomely engraved locket. Mr. Dulmage, although taken by surprise, was able to make an appropriate reply. A number of those present referred to Mr. Dulmage's going away, and regretted it. The recipient has filled various offices in the lodge, having been its Master.

Wants To Beautify The City Schools.

SCHOOL INSPECTOR MORGAN MAKES AN APPEAL TO THE PARENTS OF BELLEVILLE.

The following letter has been handed us by Mr. J. C. Morgan, School Inspector, with a request for its publication:

To the Parents of the City of Belleville:

Ladies and Gentlemen, — Your Board of Education, in the broadest and most liberal spirit, have undertaken every necessary improvement in the equipment and furnishing of your schools, with a view to giving your children the best education and training possible.

As this involves the expenditure of a considerable sum of money, the matter will come up before the City Council on Monday. As these gentlemen are as deeply interested in the welfare of your children as are the members of the Board of Education, and as, under the guidance of your progressive and public-spirited Mayor, there is not the slightest reason to believe that they can be influenced by personal "mercenary or other unworthy motives," there is no doubt that they will pass the estimates with the same cordial unanimity, not so much because they are required by law to provide for as such necessary demands as because they will gladly do what is best for the growing youth of this beautiful city. It now remains for the other partners of the firm of "Belleville, Children & Co." to do their share, and I cordially invite you as the "Co." to do what you can towards introducing beauty into our schools wherever we can.

Will you generously give your children some framed pictures or other objects of art to put in their rooms, and allow them to contribute towards hanging some pretty curtains on every bare and cheerless window, so as to give a home-like appearance to the room in which they spend nearly half of their waking hours?

In addition, if any of you are merchants, will you sell them any necessary material at cost or give a contribution, for which acts of kindness we shall all thank you most heartily?

So, after the Easter vacation, we may enter on a new era so far as beauty is concerned, and your schools will be made worthy of the city in which I am now deeply interested, and of which I should be proud to be a citizen and ratepayer.

If you ladies will take this in hand, nothing can stop it—or you.

Thanking you in advance for your hearty and cordial co-operation, I am,

Very gratefully,
J. C. MORGAN.

OBITUARY.

MRS. J. COOK.

Mrs. John Cook, a well-known lady residing on Bridge street west, died at an early hour this morning, after a long illness, borne with Christian fortitude. Deceased, whose maiden name was Miss Elizabeth Hendry, was born in the City of Glasgow, Scotland, in the year 1825, being thus in her 82nd year. She was married to her aged partner in life on December 6th, 1844, at Glasgow. Twelve years later, namely, in 1856, Mr. and Mrs. Cook came out to this country, and located in this city, where they have since resided. The deceased was an estimable Christian lady, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She was a member of John Street Presbyterian Church, and in former years took an active interest in church work. In addition to an aged husband, a family of five sons and two daughters survive. The sons are William and Charles, of this city; Thomas, of Kingston; Matthew, of Chicago, and George, of New York. The daughters are Mrs. J. P. Thompson, of Vancouver, and Mrs. (Rev.) Geo. Skinner, of Colchester, Vt. To the afflicted family will be extended the sincere sympathy of a large circle of relatives and friends.

MRS. B. PREST.

Mrs. Bert Prest, who resided on Pinnacle street, died last evening. Deceased, who was but 20 years of age, was a Miss Smith, of Prince Edward County, where she was born. She had lived in the city with her husband for some time. Mrs. Prest had not long enjoyed wedded life. The husband, but no family, survives. Deceased was a member of the Anglican church.

UPHOLD CONMEE CLAUSE

Railway and Municipal Board Reject Proposed Amendments.

Companies Installing Public Utilities Must Be Protected — Liberals Oppose Assistance to University—Municipalities Must Not Sell Surplus Electric Power—Prison Labor on Roads or Farms.

Toronto, March 20.—In the course of the budget debate which occupied the attention of the Legislature at the afternoon and night sessions yesterday, Hon. Mr. Whitney, the Prime Minister, took occasion to emphasize the continued opposition with which the assistance to the university and schools of Ontario was being met by the Liberals in the House. He expressed surprise at it and thought it was time the people should be cognizant of the position which the Liberal party were taking. As for the Government, he was well satisfied that the aid given to education and agriculture was among Ontario's best expenditures.

The Prime Minister laid on the table a report of the Railway and Municipal Board in respect to several proposed amendments to the municipal law, introduced last session, particularly some introduced by Mr. McNaught with the intent of repealing the so-called "Conmee clauses." The Board reported against the latter proposition on the ground that many municipalities, rather than instal public utilities, used their influence and held out inducements to companies to construct them at a time when they would not pay. The companies, having operated the works in the lean years, municipalities should not, when the works were beginning to be remunerative, be permitted to construct a competitive system without acquiring the existing plant on fair terms. The Conmee Act provides that municipalities can acquire such works by arbitration at their actual value, making due allowance for depreciation, wear and tear, but allowing nothing for franchise or prospective profits. It appears to the Board that it would be more in the interests of municipalities to acquire existing plants on fair terms than to duplicate them and to have competition that might render the operation of municipal plants unprofitable and use the funds at large in order to make up the loss in an unremunerative business. The clauses are not regarded as in any way being a barrier to municipal ownership.

Selling Electric Power.

The Board also reported against an amendment allowing the construction by municipalities of conduits and the erection of poles for the conveyance of telegraph, telephone, power transmission and other wires and the renting of the same to public utility companies. This was regarded by the Board as a hazardous and unprofitable undertaking.

The Board was likewise adverse to municipalities contracting for more electric power or gas than they required and selling the surplus to consumers, or otherwise acting as middlemen. This should be left to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. They also reported against power being given to municipalities to construct street railways on streets not covered by existing operating companies, on the ground that it would be a duplication of systems and a waste of capital.

Resumes Budget Debate.

Col. Atkinson (North Norfolk) resumed the budget debate. He took up at once the question of prison labor, advocating compelling the prisoners to do work on the roads or farm which would not come into competition with farm labor. The old Government's Montreal pulpwood concession was defended as in the best interests of the settlement of the Province. Col. Atkinson drew a picture of the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Col. Matheson, as the fortunate inhabitant of a palace, "surrounded by orchards, vineyards and groves," which he had not builded, and "receiving gold, silver and precious stones" which his predecessors had earned.

Referring to the Provincial loan the speaker pointed out that a temporary loan should have been negotiated until the close of the South African war when money would have been cheaper. He would have renewed every six months until this time, if necessary.

Believes In Cheap Power.

The colonel expressed his belief in cheap power, but he feared the progress promised was not being made. He questioned whether it could be made. If the people were living in a fool's paradise in the matter, he believed in tearing away the veil.

The colonel closed by touching briefly in criticism on the local option clauses, the Toronto investigation into license matters, the employment of Mr. Thorne, "a thorn in the flesh," and the amendments to the Public Schools Act. He severely deprecated the uncalled for innuendoes concerning the late leader, now Senator Ross, to whom he paid a eulogistic tribute as the developer of the school system and the builder of the Government-owned Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

Mr. Allan Studholme, the Labor member from East Hamilton, followed. First he took a few rounds out of the Government on its prison labor contract, then he turned round and eulogized Hon. Adam Beck and the Government's power policy. Then he lapsed into a personal explanation. When he was accused of speaking too much, the press and the members forgot that he represented "the great army of wage-earners in Ontario, the bone and sinew of the Province." Mr. Studholme was proud of being a working man and of representing his fellow workers. On the six o'clock adjournment the Hamilton man was still speaking.

Opposition Criticism Weak.

Mr. G. Pattinson (South Waterloo) followed Mr. Studholme in a splendid address at night. Mr. Pattinson said that praise of the Provincial Treasurer or the budget from him might seem prejudiced. He preferred rather to direct attention to the fact that the Opposition criticism had been the weakest on record, in fact there had been no criticism at all.

Mr. Pattinson, who is a member of the first Hydro-Electric Commission, went into an endorsation of the power policy, correcting the impressions that seemed to have misguided Col. Atkinson.

"Oh, no," put in Hon. Mr. Mackay.

"I will convince the hon. member from North Grey that he is mistaken," said Mr. Pattinson.

"Impossible," declared the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Mackay in unison.

"Surely not," quoth Mr. Pattinson, "while the lamp holds out to burn, the greatest sinner may return." (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Pattinson, continuing, took up the question of agriculture, the greatest of all Ontario questions and advocated further development along agricultural lines.

McINTOSH BROS.

JUDGE SCORED PRISONER.

Convicted of Heinous Offence He Is Sentenced to Twenty Years.

Brandon, March 20.—A severe sentence was pronounced on Jesse Perriman, an English farm laborer, convicted on a charge of outraging an 11-year-old girl.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Richards said: "Considering the horrible circumstances, I may say I seriously thought of ordering you to be hanged, and though I am not doing so, I may tell you that murder is not more deserving than that heinous crime with which you are charged. Unfortunately I can't emphasize your sentence by flogging. Why the Legislature has not made such a provision under this count I can't say, but I greatly regret I cannot order you to be flogged three times during your term of imprisonment. I order you to be imprisoned in Manitoba Penitentiary for 20 years."

FIGHT AGAINST HOME RULE.

Unionist Campaign Was Formally Opened Yesterday.

London, March 20.—The Unionist campaign against the legislation, which the Government proposes to introduce after Easter, giving partial Home Rule to Ireland, was formally opened yesterday. A strong deputation of residents of Ulster, including about fifty leading anti-home rulers, headed by the Duke of Abercorn and Lord Lansdowne, had a conference with A. J. Balfour, the Opposition leader, and urged the necessity for an active propaganda to combat the Government's Irish policy. Mr. Balfour declared himself authorized to pledge every member of the Unionist party to fight everything in the nature of Home Rule. He added, that he believed the sentiment of the country had not varied on the subject since the defeat of the late Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule measure.

FRENCH TROOPS IN ACTION.

Had a Serious Reverse in Upper Guinea.

Paris, March 20.—The Echo de Paris publishes a despatch from Konakey, capital of French Guinea, West Africa, saying that a French column suffered a serious reverse in Upper Guinea while attacking the Thomans tribesmen, who were strongly fortified in a village. Seven French officers were badly wounded and eight sharpshooters were killed and 25 were wounded. The column entrenched itself and is now awaiting the arrival of artillery.

Brassaville, French Congo, March 20.—A French punitive expedition has administered defeat to the revolted Taddiah tribesmen at the Village of Tialo. Sixty-two of the tribesmen were killed, while the French column lost four men.

Who Said Dinner?

There are many people who can see nothing good in a doughnut except the hole. For them there is nothing in this world but calamity. Their greatest trouble is to have to eat three times a day. The stomach is in rebellion, and this is immediately shown in the man's face. A man to be successful must have sunshine inside. The world already has too many dyspepsia faces that breathe disaster and gloom.

Stomach trouble is the most common cause of discontent, sour face recklessness, disgust and lack of ambition. A bad stomach — there is the secret of many a failure. Anyone can have a good stomach, a strong stomach, a stomach that can take care of anything and everything that is put into it, no matter whether it is a very bad stomach or not.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. One ingredient of these little tablets digests 3,000 grains of food, and no matter how bad your dyspepsia or indigestion, they will digest everything in your stomach, thoroughly and completely, and better and more quickly than a good strong healthy stomach can do it. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will quickly cure loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, nausea, heartburn, eructations, loss of vim, and energy, bad memory, and dyspepsia and indigestion in their very worst forms.

No other little tablets in the world can do so much. You should carry Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets around with you wherever you go and take them after meals. Then only will you realize what it is to enjoy a meal, and what perfect digestion means. Your whole body and your mind will feel the effects: your vim will increase, you will be more satisfied with what the world does, you will think happier and be happier and your face will be one of supreme contentment. That will bring you success and then more success. Your face will bring you dollars. Try it. It will cost you just 50c for a package of these wonderful Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 82 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

LABOR DISPUTES BILL

Passed in the House of Commons Yesterday.

Efforts to Refer It Back Were Futile—Government Accused of Emasculating the Bill In Interests of Railways—Railway Employes Included In Its Provisions—Power Export Bill Goes Through.

Ottawa, March 20.—On the motion for the third reading of Mr. Aylesworth's bill, to regulate the export of electric power, Dr. Sproule asked that this stage be postponed until to-day, when W. F. Maclean (South York) would move the amendment, of which he had given notice.

Mr. Aylesworth was not aware that any notice had been given.

The House, therefore, proceeded with the bill, and R. L. Borden offered an amendment, vesting the licensing power in the Railway Board, instead of the Governor-in-Council. He favored enlarging the Board.

Mr. Aylesworth thought the Railroad Board already had too much to do. The amendment was lost on division.

Dr. Sproule presented the amendment of which notice had been given by W. F. Maclean, requiring the power companies to provide the same facilities in the way of transmission lines for the people of Canada as they furnish to the people of the United States.

Interferes With Export.

Mr. Aylesworth objected to the amendment as unreasonably interfering with the export of Niagara power. He opined that one company could supply all the needs of Canada. Then why interfere with the other companies exporting their entire output to the United States? It seemed a wasteful policy.

Dr. Sproule was unable to see how there could be any Canadian customers if no transmission lines were built in Canada. The Maclean amendment was lost on division.

Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln) proposed an amendment forbidding any export of power over and above the amount retained in Canada, and also requiring a surplus of 25,000 horse-power to be kept in Canada.

Mr. Aylesworth would not accept the amendment.

Mr. Cockshutt believed that 200,000 horse-power could soon be consumed in Ontario. He anticipated the electrification of the present steam railways. Power could be produced at Niagara Falls for $5 per horse-power.

Upon division the amendment was voted down—yeas, 38; nays, 102 — a party vote.

The bill was then read a third time and passed.

Labor Disputes Bill.

Upon the motion for the third reading of Mr. Lemieux's labor disputes bill, R. L. Borden pointed out that the railways' labor disputes bill was sufficient, in his opinion, for preventing and settling strikes upon railways. The railway employes in the main were opposed to having saddled upon them this new legislation. At any rate, they demanded, and they had a right, to be heard.

He moved that the bill be not read a third time, but that it be referred to a special committee with instructions to grant a hearing to all classes affected thereby.

Mr. Lemieux opposed this. It was the duty of the state not to permit a strike upon any great railway system until after here had been a most thorough public investigation. He understood that another coal strike in the West was imminent, and it was therefore important to pass the bill as soon as possible.

Mr. Bourassa thought that this legislation was largely experimental. It would soon have to be amended. He would therefore vote against the Borden amendment.

He also protested against the pressure being brought on members of Parliament by the railway brotherhoods. He thought that the bill had been largely emasculated by the Minister for political reasons.

More Trouble Coming.

After some further discussion by Messrs. Devlin, Pacquet, Verville and Ralph Smith, the latter not only supported the Government's policy, but expressed the hope that the bill would be rushed through quickly, as there was very serious possibilities of industrial troubles within the next three weeks.

Mr. Claude Macdonell said that the resolutions of all railwaymen were against the bill. They urged that the bill should be laid over until next session and opportunity given to them to place their case before a special committee.

Mr. Borden's amendment was defeated: Yeas 48, nays 106, a party vote, except that Mr. Pacquet (Conservative) voted against the amendment.

Mr. Armstrong (East Lambton) then offered an amendment excluding the railway employes from the operation of the act.

The House again divided. The amendment was defeated: Yeas 45, nays 105, a party vote, except that Barr and Pacquet voted against the amendment.

Mr. Lennox offered the same amendment in another form and it was defeated: Yeas 44, nays 104, a party vote.

The bill then passed.

Discussion On the Joint Stock Companies' Bill.

Clauses Dealing With Incorporation, Re-Incorporation and Amalgamation, Go Through Committee — Shareholders and Auditors' Reports — Bills Passed Final Reading — Mr. Craig Opposes Lady Dentist.

Toronto, March 21.—There is no let-up to the Government's diligence. Again, yesterday, the Legislature held afternoon and night sessions. The time was earnestly devoted to advancing a number of bills of a non-contentious character and such speechmaking as resulted, was largely of an explanatory and technical character.

Mr. Kerr moved that a Select Committee be appointed to enquire into and report upon the claim of George O. Hays, of the Township of Roxborough, to Lot No. 9 in the 9th Concession of the Township of Marmora in the County of Hastings.

In speaking to the motion Mr. Kerr said the motion was made with a view to having this long outstanding claim finally passed upon.

The Prime Minister stated that he had interested himself in the case and on the advent of the present Government to power, had secured a payment of $200 for Hays in full of account, which he had accepted. Mr. Hays' claim arose out of an alleged discovery of gold in 1867, but he kept the discoverey secret. In view of the facts the Prime Minister could not endorse the motion, which was withdrawn.

Bills Finally Passed.

The following bills were given their third reading, and finally passed:

Mr. Crawford—Respecting the marriage settlement of Robt. Woods Priltie and Jane Priltie.

Mr. Jessop—To confirm bylaw 1,839 of St. Catharines.

Mr. Duff—To authorize the Mercantile Trust Co. of Canada to do business in Ontario.

Mr. Fraser—Respecting the City of Niagara Falls, also to confirm bylaw 9 of Port Colborne.

Mr. McNaught's bill respecting pawnbrokers, and Mr. Clark's bill to amend the election act were referred to the legal committee. Mr. Craig withdrew his bill to amend the municipal act.

Mr. Downey's bill to amend the assessment act by giving the appellant costs in a successful protest against an erroneous assessment got its second reading and was referred to the municipal committee.

Will Oppose Lady Dentist.

When the bill to permit Miss Sadie Holmes to practice dentistry went through committee Mr. Craig gave notice that he would challenge the measure on its third reading.

Other measures which went through committee were: Mr. Pratt's bill to incorporate the Policy Holders' Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Mr. McGowan's bill respecting the town of North Toronto; also two railway bills, Mr. Fraser's to incorporate the Niagara Peninsula Railway Co., and Mr. Morrison's to incorporate the Thurlow Railway Co.

Hon. Mr. Mackay objected to a clause in the latter measure. Companies, he claimed, should be permitted to locate their head offices wherever they chose.

While the House was in committee on Hon. Mr. Cochrane's bill respecting Burlington Beach, Mr. Reed (Wentworth) opposed the measure on the ground that it was not satisfactory to Saltfleet Township. Mr. Hislop (Huron) agreed with Mr. Reed.

The Prime Minister said no petitions had been received against the measure. He consented, however, to let the bill stand.

Mr. McDougal (Ottawa) said the measure was dangerous as it stood. If a change were desired there should be a special act creating a new municipality.

Hon. Mr. Foy's three measures governing the technical consolidation of the statutes were put through committee.

Joint Stock Companies.

The Joint Stock Companies Act was then taken up in committee, and ere the six o'clock adjournment had put through the non-contentious clauses dealing with incorporation, re-incorporation and amalgamation.

When the House re-assembled for the evening session empty benches were plentiful. There were present in all, but three Liberals, fourteen Conservatives, the faithful Studholme and Mr. Speaker. The attendance, however, developed as the evening proceeded.

The consideration of the Companies' Act in committee was continued. The second section of clause 36 created the first brief discussion. It stipulates the matters which must be laid before the shareholders at the annual meeting. One provision sets out that, if demanded by shareholders holding five per cent. of the capital of the company, the report of the auditors must be supplied to each shareholder.

Mr. Graham drew attention to the fact that many companies were family affairs. He was not sure that the 5 per cent. went far enough.

Hon. Mr. Hanna thought the report should be supplied on demand, the per cent. requirement being eliminated. There were difficulties, however. One drygoods house might be interested in obtaining information concerning the business of another at the cost of but one share.

"And it would be cheap information, at that," was the comment of the Liberal leader.

Hon. Mr. Mackay opposed the 5 per cent. requirement. He believed it was not sufficient and should be increased.

Mr. McDougal (Ottawa) said it was the privilege of Liberals to differ. In this matter he differed with Mr. Mackay and was in accord with the Provincial Secretary.

The clause stood.

Holding of Special Mettings.

Regarding the clause which provided for the calling of special meetings on the requisition of holders of one-tenth of the stock, Mr. McDougal enquired as to what provisions were made to ensure this.

"That is a reasonable question," observed Mr. Hanna. "There is no provision now."

"Then it is just a bluff," put in Mr. Mackay.

Mr. Hanna said the point would be met later.

In concluding the discussion Mr. Mackay remarked that he had been four years in the House, and he had never seen a bill brought down on which there had been so much work. He had never seen a measure with which so much care had been taken in regard to the citations of cases, references to the Imperial act and other authorities.

Mr. MacMillan (Glengarry) has given notice that he will move for an order of the House for a return of copies of all correspondence between the Nipissing Mines Co., or any officer of it and the Government, or any member of it, relating to the property or title to the property of the said company, or any part of it situate in the Cobalt District, or to any application relating to the said property or its title, or to the operation of the mines of the company, made by, or on behalf of the company, or any of its directors or officers.

Peasant Uprising Spreads.

Bucharest, March 21.—Peasants again yesterday invaded Botosahni and set fire to different parts of the town, especially the Jewish quarters. Troops intervened and several peasants were killed or wounded.

Brigadier Gen. Tell has been placed in command of the fourth army corps, whose headquarters are at Jassy, with full powers to suppress the agrarian revolt. A number of regiments have been ordered to Jassy to reinforce his troops.

The peasant uprising already has spread over the whole of Upper Moldavia, including the districts of Botosahni, Doregoi, Jassy, Neamzu, Tutova, Baku and Roman. In spite of all precautions, the vandalism is spreading.

Japs Buy War Material.

New York, March 21.—Japan is continually receiving war material from the Krupp works, says a Berlin despatch.

Several Japanese officers are at Essen to take over guns, and Japanese engineers are employed at the Krupp works, something that concern, which maintains the greatest secrecy as to its methods, would not permit unless it had, or was desirous of cultivating, the closest and widest commercial relations with Japan.

Woman Strangles Child.

Winnipeg, Man., March 21.—After strangling her nine-year-old child with a suspender strap, Mrs. Ella Lisle, Port Rouge, yesterday attempted to cut her throat with a razor and ran screaming into the street.

The woman, who is thought to be suffering from emotional insanity, has been lodged in the provincial jail.

Two weeks ago a younger child died and there probably will be an investigation.

To Open Papal Papers.

Paris, March 21.—The Chamber of Deputies by 370 to 164 votes yesterday adopted a motion calling for a commission to examine and make public the contents of the documents seized at the papal nunciature after the expulsion of Mgr. Montagnini, secretary of the nunciature.

Hyman Soon to Resign.

London, March 21.—It was announced last night by a man in close touch with Mr. Hyman that the member for London will return to London "within a few days" and shortly after will place his resignation in the hands of the Speaker of the House.

SINCLAIR'S The Topic of the Day SINCLAIR'S

THERE is certainly good reason why people talk so much about our vast assortment of Dress Goods. We could not exaggerate the importance of our Dress Goods Department, the stocks or variety, We cannot say too much in their favor.

Three words that truly emphasize it are: "Best in Town." Without doubt we have the largest Dress Goods department in Central Ontario and in order to accommodate this big stock of dress fabrics we had recently to rearrange our store,

The dress goods department now occupies the entire south side of our store. Every part of this new dress goods section is overflowing with brightness.

The widest range of dress goods now awaits you at Sinclair's,

CRUMS ENGLISH PRINTS.

We have just received 250 pieces of Crums Celebrated English Prints, the kind your grandmothers used to buy. Nearly every store will tell you they sell Crums Prints, but this is not so. The genuine Crums Prints are stamped on the outside of each piece.

We pay half a cent a yard more for Crums Print than we would have to pay for the next best cloth.

We sell you Crums prints at the same price you pay for inferior goods. The better sort at—

They do some queer things in that "land of freedom" across line 45, as witness the fact that a Chinese has been confined in the Wayne county, Mich., jail for the last eight months on a charge of having entered the United States illegally. The man has never had a trial. As one Detroit newspaper points out, had this treatment been accorded a white man in a Russian jail there would have been a frantic outburst of protest. Happening to a Chinamen in a land wherein all men are counted free and equal, it is accepted as a matter of course. But had China a navy as efficient as that of Japan, President Roosevelt would be taking an active interest in the matter.

It was pleasant to note that the company which performed at the opera house last night, though, of course, it came from across the line, and though there were many opportunities for so doing, did not see fit to intrude "Old Glory" and offensive Yankee references on the audience, as so many travelling companies do. The final tableau, when the entire company came out in a blaze of glory, and sang "God Save the King," was very fine, and sent the audience home in high good humor.

The plea of insanity in murder trials seems to have about reached its limit in the Thaw trial now going on. As the Montreal Gazette points out: The spectacle of one lunacy expert going on the witness stand and, in answer to a question of 15,000 words, testifying that a mythical personage was insane at the time he committed a certain act, described in the question, to be followed by an equally eminent expert holding an entirely opposite opinion, is calculated to uphold the theory that all men are insane. The thing is rendered all the more remarkable from the fact that those experts who held that the person was insane at the time are firmly convinced that at the present time his condition is quite normal. Insanity, in the eyes of the law, should be of a character evident at least to all experts.

What We Know About Mars.

"It has been said," writes Waldemar Kaempffert in his article, "What We Know About Mars," in the March McClure's, "that when our earth has so far wasted away that its inhabitants will depend for their water supply upon the melting ice and snow of the Arctic and Antarctic Oceans, a gigantic effort will be made to devise some means of conducting the polar spring and summer floods to the parched equatorial and temperate zones. To Mars the unlocking of the polar seas is of as much moment as the annual inundation of Egypt by the Nile. Assuming that Mars is inhabited by beings as intelligent as ourselves, it is reasonable to infer that they would dig huge trenches to guide the freshets of the poles to those regions where water is most sadly needed. If we would find signs of Martian intelligence, we must accordingly look for trenches and sluices. In the hands of Schiaparelli, Lowell, Pickering and a few others, the telescope has revealed to us long, dark stripes which Schiaparelli called canals, and the discovery of which may well be numbered among the most noteworthy astronomical achievements of modern times.

Greenway Protests Against the New Land Bill

Probably the most important legislation proposed this session in the House of Commons is the Land Act, explained by the Minister of the Interior on Thursday. This measure came as a surprise to most western members and to the House of Commons generally. The Government is throwing open for the first time all the odd numbered sections of land in the West outside of those the Railway Company have located. Mr. Oliver says that the sections now opened comprise 40,000,000 acres of good land and bad. The Bill provides that the whole may be allotted by pre-emption to settlers who have taken homesteads beside these odd-numbered sections and have not yet perfected their titles, and to other homesteaders who may locate on any adjoining even numbered section in future. Each homesteader will be allowed to take an additional 160 acres at low price, assumed to be about one-third the market value. It will be seen that the measure gives to those settlers who happen to be on the ground in time and who have already secured 160 acres of land for nothing, the right to get another 160 acres by pre-emption.

The Minister had scarcely taken his seat when Mr. Greenway, former Premier of Manitoba, and one of the leading Liberals in the House, sprang to his feet to oppose the measure. Mr. Greenway holds that the arable land in the area now opened up is not nearly so large as Mr. Oliver represents. He predicts an immediate rush of settlers from Manitoba and the other settlements of Saskatchewan toward these lands. Men who have already had their 160 acres, will swarm into the new fields, take new homesteads, and pre-empt the adjoining quarter section. Thus the land will be all taken without much increase in the population. The people will be unsettled. In a year or two no land will be available for free grants to immigrants or for young men from the East. Everything will be secured by the men nearest to the spot, and Canada will cease to be a field for home seekers without money.

"I can conceive of no greater calamity befalling the western country," said Mr. Greenway, with intense feeling. The solemn, almost passionate appeal of the former Premier of Manitoba to the Government and the House to drop this feature of the Bill, was one of the most impressive events of the session.

In further discussion the leader of the Opposition, with Mr. Foster and Dr. Roche, Mr. Lake and Mr. McCarthy and other western members, pointed out some of the serious features of the Bill. It gives the Minister of the Interior and the Government generally enormous powers to withhold or allow privileges. No less than twenty-four clauses give discretion to the Minister alone. Under similar power all the recent land scandals in the West have occurred, and the Government is extending the discretion to transactions affecting the property, the opportunity and almost the very existence of the settler on the newly opened lands. As an election campaign policy this measure may be a great success. It will be popular among those who are in a position to obtain the land. It will give the Government, through partisan officials, power to coerce or reward electors. But it cannot be forgotten that it retains at Ottawa the power over local affairs which properly belong to the West. Or if, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier contends, the public domain of the West is the property of the whole nation, it is for the people of Canada at large to consider whether this vast area ought to be bestowed upon the special class of people who happen to be in a particular place at a particular time, and who have already received their free grant. Nothing will be left in a year or two for the sons of Eastern farmers, or for future settlers unless they buy it at market prices. Mr. Greenway says the land will be taken in one year. Again by allowing 320 instead of 160 to each farm the Government is fixing the density of population at two families instead of four to the square mile, and thus limiting the possibilities of the country.

Breaking your mirror does not remove the spots on your face.

MADE A MILLION IN FIVE HOURS.

CHICAGO BROKER SAYS MAKING A FORTUNE ON WALL ST. IS EASY.

New York, March 18. — Without moving from an easy chair in his suite at the Lakewood (N.J.) hotel, J. Brandt Walker, a Chicago broker, yesterday closed up his masterly raid on Wall street and dragged a million dollar fortune from the Stock Exchange.

The tale of the Westerner's Napoleonic bear campaign of 6 months reads like a chapter from "The Pit."

Walker is the son of Edwin Walker, one of the foremost corporation lawyers of the country. Out in Chicago six months ago the young man tired of the daily routine of a prosaic stock brokerage office and decided to make a whirlwind dash into the high finance of Wall street all by himself, with the Wall street magnates as his victims. He knew that stocks were advancing, while the bond market declined. The railways were putting out new securities and increasing dividends at the same time. Walker shrewdly figured that this combination, sooner or later, must end in only one way. So he planned his bear campaign.

In February, quietly and without any boasts, Walker went from Chicago to Lakewood and took a suite of rooms in the Lakewood hotel. A stock quotation board and a ticker were the first things he installed. Private telephones and telegraph wires followed. In a week Walker's suite looked the perfect replica of a Wall street broker's office, but, so quietly had he furnished it, that his friends of the New York Stock Exchange thought he was in Lakewood only for a rest.

Immured in his room, watching and working from the depths of a big Morris chair, the plunger began his operations. He sold Union Pacific, Reading, Steel, Copper and Canadian Pacific until he was short 200,000 shares of these stocks on the New York Exchange and abroad.

The Chicago operator suddenly began to cover. The wires buzzed and spluttered faster than ever as he executed the final move. Up to the instant that the market closed he was buying right and left. Then, at the stroke of 3, Walker sat back in his easy chair, lit a fresh cigar, and said:

"Well, I have cleared up a clean million since 10 o'clock this morning. That's good enough. I guess I've had enough fun with Wall street for a while. I'll go back to Chicago tomorrow."

Later the newest Napoleon of Finance explained something of his methods.

"It doesn't take such a tremendous amount of sagacity as you'd think to make a fortune out of Wall street," he said. "In one transaction alone today I cleared up a half million profit on United States Steel. That is but one item of my fling in the East."

While They Waited

The occasion was that of a fashionable wedding.

The hour set for the ceremony was 8 o'clock, and the church was filled but the bridal party did not arrive upon the scene until nearly 9.

The organist filled in the time by playing such pieces of appropriate music as happened to be at hand, most of them several times over, and when he had exhausted these he began to improvise.

"Grinders," said one of the vestrymen, after the ceremony was over and the congregation had gone. "I have been puzzling my brains over that thing you played just before the bride and groom came. There was a familiar strain that ran through it, but your variations effectually disguised the theme. What was it?"

"I'll tell you," answered the organist, "if you won't say anything to the preacher about it. It was 'Waiting at the Church.'"

Rheumatic Pains Relieved.

A TIMBER REPORT.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION WITH OUR AMERICAN COUSINS.

Timber consumption in the United States now amounts to about 400 feet board measure per capita, while in Europe the average is but 60 feet. The best managed German forest grows on an average about 50 cubic feet of wood per acre annually. If American forests grew as well, which they do not, they would barely furnish by their annual growth the amount of wood now used.

These figures were given by R. S. Kellogg, of the United States forest service, in a recent paper before the Western Society of Engineers, which was presented for the purpose of calling attention to the necessity of economy in the use of timber. Mr. Kellogg pointed out that in Europe the amount of timber required for many structures is very much less than it is in the United States, masonry of one form or another generally taking its place. In his opinion the time will come very soon in this country when the relative cost of masonry and wood will be much different from what it is now and in consequence the use of timber will be restricted far below the limit of the present time. He is of the opinion that methods of preserving timber will be employed far more extensively than to-day for many purposes where untreated wood is now used.

One particularly useful improvement which he anticipates, will be the substitution of woods which are now considered inferior for those of high value. An example of this is the gradual substitution in wagon boxes in place of white pine, first of yellow poplar, then cottonwood, then red gum, and to-day tupelo. Readers who are interested in this subject, and all engineers ought to be, will find a large amount of interesting information concerning the quantity of timber employed for diferent purposes, in several bulletins recently issued by the forest service. — Engineering Record.

HOCKEY.

A Muddle at Kenora.

Kenora, Ont., March 20.— As per instructions from Foran, the Wanderers arrived by special train from Winnipeg to-night, but as no arrangements had been made or officials appointed, the Thistles refused to play. The Wanderers have therefore decided to claim the game. They stated that they were in receipt of a telegram from Foran backing them up. Secretary Jennings, of the Wanderers, when asked for a statement to-night, refused to talk. Wanderers went to Victoria rink, but did not join the throng of skaters. Their action in coming down on a special when they knew there was no possibility of a game is taken as a joke here. The Thistles' management have advertised a game for Friday night, as per their proposition to the Wanderers, but it is not known if the Easterners will consent or wander home. They intend going back to Winnipeg to-night in any event, and nobody can guess what will turn up before Friday. Foran wired the Thistles to-day that the most goals in the two games would decide the fate of the cup. This is satisfactory to the champions.

Says Games are Off.

Kenora, March 20.— The Stanley Cup games are off. A conference of the managers of the two clubs was held here to-night, and no agreement was reached. Wanderers say they will return home. Kenora offered to play to-night if Wanderers could supply officials, but they could not, and said they would not play here, but wanted to play two games in Winnipeg. Kenora, of course, would not agree to such an outrageous proposition, and the Wanderers will now have to return east after a fruitless trip. Kenora offered to play an exhibition game in Winnipeg, but Wanderers would not agree.

What Trustee Foran Will Do.

Ottawa, March 20.— The sporting element in Ottawa seems all at sea to-night over the status quo at Kenora, no outside hockey event of recent years having stirred up greater interest than the present Stanley Cup deadlock. Acting Trustee Foran, though not preserving a sphynx-like silence, appears to be awaiting developments. At midnight he had heard nothing from the west, and not being officially informed of the state of affairs, had very little to say, preferring to wait until tomorrow before giving any ruling on the failure of Kenora to meet Wanderers in the first game to-night. From his remarks it may be inferred, however, that if the cup holders agree to go on in the remaining dates, without Smith and Westwick, nothing will be done by him with regard to the match which he ordered to be played to-night. The series would then probably be decided in two games, majority of goals to count. He concedes that Kenora has the right to make it a two-game series if they wish.

Wanderers were notified to-day that in the event of Kenora abiding by his decision re the Ottawa players, the challengers would be expected to meet the westerners half way in arranging other details. He would not interfere. Mr. Foran does not seem to be worrying much over the situation, and in effect, unless Kenora "comes to him" there will be no cup series, and Wanderers will be authorized to bring the troublesome trophy home by default.

Sentiment in Ottawa is pretty evenly divided over the acting-trustee's action. The two Ottawa men have thousands of friends, who would like to see them play in defence of the cup, but there are thousands of sport lovers who declare themselves satisfied that Mr. Foran's course is in the best interests of the game.

A Much Buried Musician

(Spectator.)

Paganini died at Nice in 1840, and although he made confession he did not receive the sacrament for medical reasons which the doctor stated in writing. The Bishop refused Christian burial to the body, and the son appealed to the Nice tribunal, which upheld the Bishop, but a further appeal was made to Rome. During this delay the body, incompletely embalmed, was deposited at the hospital. From thence the coffin was removed to a lazaretto at Villefranche. After a month the authorities there determined to get rid of it, and deposited it by the side of a stream formed by the refuse coming from an oil mill. After some days the Comte de Cessoles, a friends of Paganini, decided to remove the body, which he did by night, having it carried along the seashore in a storm to the Cap St. Hospice. Here it was buried and remained for two years, when the great violinist's son determined to take his father's body to Genoa to be buried there. The ship, however, was refused admittance at this place, as it had come originally from Marseilles, where there was cholera, so the body was put into a hole in the rock of a tiny uninhabited island near Cannes. Five years later the body was taken to Gajona, near Parma, and buried there on Paganini's own property. This was in 1845. In 1853, it was exhumed and re-embalmed, in 1876, thirty-six years after the musician's death, the Papal Court authorized burial in a church at Parma with Christian rites. Twice again was the body exhumed, apparently out of curiosity, and finally a pane of glass was put into the coffin to render visible the face which had been preserved.

Pray for a short memory as to all unkindnesses.

Learn Dressmaking.

IN TWO WEEKS.

We teach you everything from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate toilette that can be found in the fashion books. We show you how to put together not only the lining but all the outer goods in coats, skirts waists, wrappers, sleeves, children's dresses, collars, etc. Why spend months at a shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and then after you have served your time there, what do you know about cutting? Absolutely nothing! For you will know no more how to cut out a dress at the end of a year than you did the first day you went there; so why spend your time there; you can come and try for a week and see for yourself what it's like, and as there is nothing to be paid in advance, you certainly would not lose anything by trying.

We have taught over 2,000 in this way within the past six years, and all recommend it very highly; we teach you how to use a chart the first day you are with us; also guarantee that the waists made by this chart will not draw nor pull out of place when raising arm.

Charge for full course is only $10, to be paid when course is completed, if satisfied, including one of the most perfect fitting systems in use, which we give free.

We will teach at Belleville from April 8th to April 20th. Hours for day class from 8.30 to 5. All wishing to learn or for full particulars, be sure to see us at the KYLE HOUSE, on Saturday, April 6th, between 10 and 5 o'clock. An evening class will also be taught; in this class we teach shirt waists, sleeves and dressing sacques only. Terms $4 and hours from 7 to 9. Remember there is no pay in advance, you can all come and try.

THE WAIST THAT BUTTONS DOWN BEFORE.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

(At the recent convention of dressmakers in New York it was announced that the latest word from Paris was that the waist which buttons down behind must go.)

Glad tidings from across the sea;
  Let hope again begin to soar;
Contentment and serenity
  For every man may be in store;
'Tis published that my lady fair
Shall presently be forced to wear
  A waist that buttons down before.

Glad tidings from far-off Paree:
  Now, who will sadly sigh, "Alack!"
Or, still complaining, only see
  The world through glasses that are black?
My lady fair, my lady gay,
Is called upon to put away
  The waist that buttons down the back.

Glad tidings from across the sea;
  Dame Fortune, I will rise no more
To madly cast reproach on thee
  Or thy grim edicts to deplore.
Ho, brothers, we'll be happy yet;
My lady fair will have to get
  A waist that buttons down before.

A Toronto newspaper with a marked fondness for hitting corporations on the head, says an esteemed Montreal contemporary, points out that the total shrinkage of stocks in the recent panic reached $180,000,000, and intimates that had the railways expended one-tenth of this amount in a reasonable concession to public opinion the moral effect would have been tremendous. The making of assertions without knowledge of their meaning is a dangerous habit. A reduction of $18,000,000 in the freight rates paid by the people of the United States during the year 1905 would have effected a saving to the shipper of one cent in sending a ton of goods one thousand miles. The marked effect this "tremendous" reduction would have had may be appreciated from the fact that had the rates in force in the year 1895 been applied to the traffic of the railways of the United States in 1905, the people would have been called upon to pay $134,000,000 more than was paid. This reduction, moreover, was made despite the fact that everything the railways use in conducting their business, labor, material, supplies, taxes, etc., was from ten to one hundred per cent. dearer than in 1895. Yet all the thanks the railways have obtained for this wonderful result, not duplicated elsewhere than on this continent, is the privilege of being held up by demagogues as despoilers of the people and enemies of the public good.

Alice's Strategy

By EDWIN FOWLER

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

John Garvan did not object to Tommy Tenley except as a son-in-law. Personally he liked him immensely, and it was with real regret that he refused to give his consent to Tommy's engagement to his daughter Alice.

Tommy went out of the study feeling as blue as the enamel on the automobile that panted at the curb, but Alice took a more cheerful view of the matter.

"Don't mind father," she comforted. "I've managed him ever since mother died and I'll find a way to make him behave. He didn't tell you not to come around, did he?"

"No," was the terse response. "He told me to come around all I wanted and help him keep the other fellows off. I'll do that, you bet."

"What was his reason?" she asked.

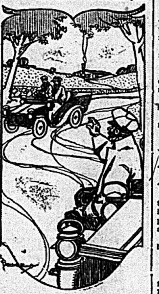
"Said I was too fond of outdoors to be a good merchant."

"Is that all?" she asked in surprise. "I thought from your face it was something serious." She patted him on the shoulder. "Now run along," she commanded. "I want to have a chat with father before he can think it over and get the idea rooted in his mind that he doesn't want you in the family."

Tenley went down the steps much comforted. Ever since they had known each other Alice had always taken the lead, and he was content to follow. He climbed into the auto and rumbled off with the comfortable feeling that all would come well.

He was not the sort of a man who is content to hold back and let a woman plan. He was willing to take the initiative when necessary, but he knew that Alice knew her father's whims better than he did, and more than once she had, with her woman's wit, accomplished more than his bulldog pertinacity would have gained.

Alice nodded wisely when he met her that evening, but he did not question her. He was confident that she had control of the situation, and as they sped along the road he waited for her to speak.



"YOU'RE JUST IN TIME!" HE CRIED.

But he was surprised when she suddenly asked him to take her father out in the automobile. One of the objections Mr. Garvan had urged was his fondness for his auto; that the old gentleman should want to ride was strange.

Alice's word was law, and the next afternoon when the blue racer drew away from in front of the Garvan house Mr. Garvan was established in the tonneau, while Alice, beside Tommy, saw that he kept down his speed. They ran decorously along for several miles until they came to the shore road, which stretched its level length for a couple of miles beside the lake.

"Want to go fast?" demanded Alice as she turned to her parent.

"Is it safe?" he demanded anxiously.

"Safe and just lovely," was the assurance. "Put on the speed, Tommy, and show papa what automobiling really means."

Tenley threw over the lever, and presently they were doing about forty miles an hour. There were no intersecting roads along the lake and no traffic, so that Tenley felt safe in letting the machine out. At the end of the stretch he slowed down and turned to see what effect the run had had on the lone passenger in the tonneau.

To his surprise he found the old man leaning forward. "Let us try it again," he urged. "It's great."

Back they flew along the broad road. Then they slowed down and headed for home. At the door Garvan turned to Tommy:

"I wish you'd drop in this evening," he said. "I want to see you about something."

Tommy nodded and drove off. A part of Alice's plot began to unfold. He guessed that the "something" was an auto, and the guess was right, for a week later a high power car found a resting place in the Garvan stables, and John Garvan devoted himself to its study. Within a month he was sufficiently expert to be able to handle the car himself.

He looked with kindlier feeling toward Tommy, who had made known to him this new delight. In his younger days he had been a horseman, and much of his objection toward Tommy had been that he had taken to the auto instead of to the trotter. Now that this objection was removed, Tommy asked for a rehearing of the case, but, to his surprise, there was the same negative.

"It's just a whim," explained Alice. "He will come around all right."

But the coming process was slow, and Tommy fretted as he followed the big red car along the roads in obedience to Alice's commands.

Then there came the hot afternoon when they made for the top of Mount Stephen. Alice, with her field glass swept the country beneath for half an hour after it was time to start back home. Then, with a sigh of relief, she slipped the glasses into their case and turned to Tommy.

"Take the wood road back," she commanded, "and you do just as I say. Will you promise?"

"Don't I always?" he parried. "How would I dare do otherwise?"

She made a bow. "I thank you," she said demurely. "Now, if ever, is the time to realize that a soldier's first duty is obedience."

She smiled to herself as they began to coast slowly down the mountain, and she smiled still more when, as they struck the level ground, there came a hail.

Just ahead John Garvan was sitting on the steps of his machine, smiling hopefully at them. "You're just in time!" he cried as they drew up beside him. "I have had a breakdown and don't know just what the matter is."

"I'll have a look," offered Tommy as he prepared to rise. Alice laid a detaining hand upon his arm.

"Tommy and I have gone into business," she announced as she leaned back in her seat. "'Tenley & Garvan, Auto Repairers,' is the way our sign reads."

"I suppose I'm on the free list since I'm in the family," grinned Garvan in appreciation of the joke. "I engage you."

"There is no free list," said Alice positively. "It's pay in advance where customers are known to us."

Garvan threw his head back and roared, but he sobered a little when Tommy made no move to leave his seat.

"What is your price?" he demanded. "If it's that necklace, you may have it, only hurry up. There is a meeting of the board of governors at the club tonight."

"I know it," she said placidly. "You never can get back in time unless we fix you up."

"I know it, too," he agreed. "I don't care what the price is, only hurry. The mosquitoes are eating me up."

"Do you consent to our engagement?" she demanded.

The smile faded, and the old man's face became choleric.

"I won't be forced," he cried sullenly.

"We are not trying to force you," was the even response.

"Then go ahead," he said stormily. "I won't pay; that's all there is to it."

"We are always willing to wait on a 'prospect,'" she smiled.

For fifteen minutes they sat there, the old man fuming over the mechanism, which never had seemed so complicated, the younger people chatting and laughing quietly to themselves.

At last Garvan looked up. "See here," he said, "let's stop this foolishness."

"Do you engage us?"

"Not on those terms."

Alice drew a package of sandwiches from a basket and handed Tommy one. It served only to remind the old gentleman of his fast approaching dinner hour. He stood it ten minutes longer, then with a snort he climbed into the seat.

"Go ahead, and be hanged to you!" he shouted. "I consent."

There was a whispered conference, and Tommy climbed down. Five minutes later the red and the blue machines were slipping down the road.

On the steps Alice paused a moment over the goodby.

"The chauffeur will be over tonight for a hundred dollars," she whispered. "I promised him he should have it if he would fix the machine for the breakdown."

"And cheap at the price," declared Tommy as he took her in his arms in the friendly shadow of the vestibule.

Cucumbers Are Ancient.

Few garden plants have been known to and cultivated by man longer than the cucumber. De Candolle has proved that this plant has been in cultivation between three and four thousand years. There is no specific remedy for the striped cucumber beetle. Direct applications of poisons, such as paris green or other arsenical, will destroy the beetles when they occur in moderate numbers. A normal crop may be placed at about 200 half barrel baskets per acre, the price varying from 50 cents to as much as $2 per basket. After the fruits have been harvested and the marketing season has closed the vines should be destroyed by gathering and burning or plowing them under, so as not to harbor or breed diseases. A point which is of prime importance in the management of the cucumber patch is that none of the fruits be allowed to come to maturity. The ripening process, which means the development and maturing of the seeds, produces a heavy strain upon the growing plant.—United States Farmers' Bulletin.

Reasonable Request.

"Yes," said the fair young widow, "I'll marry you if you'll promise to quit smoking."

"That's asking a good deal," rejoined the mere man.

"Well, that's my ultimatum," said the f. y. w. "I don't propose to give up my weeds for a man who isn't willing to give up his weeds for me."—Woman's Home Companion.

G. T. P. To Get Central.

Fredericton, N.B., March 21.—In the budget speech in the House yesterday, Premier Pugsley announced that, within a few months, the New Brunswick Coal and Railway Co. property, known as the Central Railway, and owned by the province, would be sold or leased to the G.T.P., which would use it to divert traffic to St. John from Chipman, where the Central Railway and G. T. P. connect. The run to St. John is only 78 miles, several hundred miles shorter than to Halifax.

What Red Coral is.

The red coral that is used for necklaces is a horny axis which supports a number of soft bodied, coral-like animals, or polyps, the entire structure bearing a strong resemblance to a small shrub. The fishermen, after they have brought this shrublike colony to the surface, clean the soft animal matter away, preserving the red core, or axis, which is sold as jewelry. Although red coral contains some lime, it is largely composed of a substance akin to horn and, like horn, it takes a fine polish. Horn, wool and other animal substances of this nature almost invariably change their color when brought into intense heat.—St. Nicholas.

Welsh Rabbit Fiasco.

"When I was starting my apartment," remembered the bachelor, "several of my lady friends wired me they would bring a small party of people up for Welsh rabbit. I went out and bought a chafing dish, the handsomest I could find; a dozen plates, silver knives and forks and spoons and napkins and a table to set the rabbit out on, so that the rabbit, which at a restaurant would have cost about $1 all told, cost me about $35. And then they didn't come."

His Opposite.

Jenkins—I am told that the happiest marriages are between people who are exactly opposite in every respect to each other, so I am looking for a young lady of that sort, don't you know. Miss Pert—Then you have come to the right place. Come to the other side of the room, and I'll introduce you to a bright, intelligent, well educated girl.

Deceived.

"I want to get a divorce from my wife."

"On what ground?"

"Well, I don't know the legal term for it, but she didn't tell me before I married her that she was an elocutionist."

The Cause.

Theater Goer—The love scene in your play isn't half so natural as it used to be last season. The same people do it too. Manager—Yes, but the lovers were married a few months ago.

Hard to Understand.

Gibbs — Some people get everything they go after. Gibbs—Yes, and others don't seem to get what's coming to them.—Smart Set.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"And these newspapers," added the girl, with a sly, pleased glance. "Robledo did not forget these, either."

Then she departed radiant and full of joy, praying incoherent blessings from all the saints on the head of Don Q.

Don Q. returned to the Boca de Lobo and was sitting in his accustomed place with his lamp beside him and the papers sent by the thoughtful Robledo hanging across his knee. Something he read arrested his attention. He re-perused it carefully, then, letting the sheet fall, he sat staring into the fire in his hunched, bird-like attitude, absently rolling cigarettes with deft, fragile fingers. Long-sleeping memories had evidently been awakened in his brain, for he sighed once or twice, as does a man who half regrets a vanished decade.

We have altogether failed in our portraiture of the great brigand if the reader does not by this time understand the dominant quality of freakish humor, compounded of lust of action, incredible vanity and fantastic courage, which led Don Q. into the chiefest of his exploits. Although, perhaps, he valued Robledo more than any other of his followers, he was quite capable of allowing him to die for a small disobedience, as he regarded the most trifling deviation from orders as a studied insult.

"The fellow realizes rightly enough that his life is a small matter compared with the vexatious fact of my lack of cigarettes," he had murmured to himself more than once during the last four days.

He looked down at the paragraph again; his sinister laughter broke out as he struck his hand upon his knee with the air of a man who had found what he sought.

But Don Q. never acted on the spur of a thought if he could spare time for reflection. Thus cigarette after cigarette burnt itself out in a flare between his thin lips before he called Ramon, Gaspar and Felipe up from the fires in the valley.

"Gaspar," he began, "you know the inn at Colaro, on the road to Castelleno?"

"Yes, lord."

"Proceed there, and order an excellent supper for 10 o'clock to-morrow night."

"Yes, lord."

"Go. You, Felipe, will proceed to the Castillo Negro below the mountains, and see there Valentina, who waits upon the maid of the Duquesa. You know her?"

The young man reddened, and glanced up with a furtive look of fear.

"Yes, lord."

The chief met his eyes with a contemptuous smile.

The robber crossed himself, but made no reply. "Go down and bring the girl to the grove of ilex near to Colaro. She shall say that her grandmother is dying. The grandmother who brought her up, you understand? She need fear nothing. She has pleased me." He added some further instructions.

"And you, Ramon, pick with care ten of the least repulsive looking of your comrades, saddle my mule, and wait for me at the head of the pass."

The brigands trooped off, and the chief dropped his eyes once more upon the paragraph that had given him inspiration.

It merely stated that high festivities were to be held in Castelleno on the evening of Saturday, and that the ball would be graced by the presence of the Duquesa d'Orava, who happened to be staying at her country house, the Castillo Negro, some twelve miles distant from the town. It was situated, in fact, upon the upper reaches of that river that murmured so dismally below the prison grating behind which Robledo was lying.

Beneath the sierra, which rose stark and threatening in the moonlight, ran the narrow country road connecting the Castillo Negro with the highway. Down this road the carriage of the old Duquesa must pass as she drove from her house to the ball to be given that night in the city, but the deep dust remained undisturbed in the windings of the lane as late as 7 o'clock on the Saturday evening.

Perhaps the world held no more surprised woman than the old Duquesa d'Oravo when her carriage pulled up with a jerk in the shade of the ilex grove. Perhaps, also, she was frightened; but she was a high-tempered old lady, and she showed no symptom of fear as she called out her strident commands to the coachman to go on.

Report says she was adding some full-flavored remarks when the door opened and a man in a cloak stood bowing before her, his pallid face and bald head gleaming white in the dusk.

At the sight of him the Duquesa's elderly maid began to scream.

"Peace fool! One slits the throat of a screaming hen." The sharp, sibilant tones cut across the woman's shrieks. "May I beg of you, Duquesa, to order this person to descend? I must speak with you alone."

"Certainly not! I am in a hurry. Drive on, Joaquin!"

"Pardon me," said the figure at the door, and before the occupants of the carriage had any idea of his intention, he laid a grip of steel on the maid's arm, and swung her adroitly out into the hands of a man behind him.

"It grieves me to the heart to put you to this inconvenience, illustrissima, but for the sake of performing a humane action, one would venture to plead for your forgiveness."

The old lady listened amazed. This robber had the accent, the bearing of her own class. Oddly enough, the fact further incensed her.

"What does this mean," she cried fiercely. "Who are you. A footpad?"

"Hardly, Duquesa. Your eyes deceive you in this dimness. Believe me, no man has a more profound horror of footpads than myself. To the honorable brigand the footpad is unspeakably abhorrent."

Perhaps the fiery old heart sank at this, but a laugh cackled on the night air.

"A very courtly ruffian," she said insolently. "What is your name?"

"I have for many years past been known as Don Q.," he answered ceremoniously.

"You are the sequestrador?" she said at last.

"Such is the calling I have the honor to follow."

"I have heard that you have never held a lady to ransom."

"Ah! you gratify me. It is quite true."

"Then, what is it you want of me?"

"I came to beg a favor."

"Tell me quickly what it is, for I am late and must proceed."

"I am desolated; but to proceed—that is impossible."

"What do you mean? I am then, your prisoner?" she asked brusquely.

"By no means. Only my guest for twelve hours in a charming valley, where I have made ready for so distinguished a visitor. In the meantime I will ask you to be so good as to lend me your carriage."

"Most assuredly I shall do nothing of the kind!" She brought her palms sharply together to emphasize the refusal.

"It will save a life!"

"Pooh! The life of some baseborn outlaw such as yourself? No, I say. To-night I accept the hospitality of the Santolallas. They fete our great Gen. Ubrique—Don Edmelo Ubrique."

"Do not fear to accept mine, illustrissima." Don Q.'s courtesy remained unruffled. "My birth is infinitely more noble than that of Santolalla."

He was about to move away as men in the livery of the duquesa emerged from among the trees and took the places of her servants. The sinking moon was beginning to shine upon the road under the ilex trees, and the duquesa's haughty old face peered out keenly.

"These are not my people," she said with imperious finality. "I demand my own servants and to be allowed to continue my journey to Castelleno."

Don Q. turned back.

"That is impossible, my dear lady. Within limits my men are quite at your service. They are not, believe me, as villainous as their looks would seem to indicate. To-morrow morning your own servants and your carriage will be returned to you."

The rage of the duquesa's temper had by this time run up to high pressure.

"I will not submit to this insolence! Who are you that you should put your commands upon me?" she demanded. "How dare you pretend to noble birth? A valet in his master's coat would cut a better figure!"

The chief stood before her silent.

"I order you to let me go! I shall have you whipped in the streets of Malaga, thief!" and with the word a withered hand shot out into the moonbeams, but Don Q., with a slight movement, avoided the fan meant to strike violently across his face.

He was aware of his men's eyes upon him. He bent forward almost into the carriage and spoke to the duquesa.

"Emilia"—the sudden whisper froze her—"do you forget two blows given long ago—first the fan, then the knife—and whose arms were round you after?"

The wind sobbed in the trees; the mysterious night noises made themselves heard; while the Duquesa d'Orava sat stiffly upright without a word or sign. How had this man, this brigand, learned the secret of her tragic girlhood?—and spoken in a voice she seemed to remember!

Don Q. softly closed the door, and waved his hand to the coachman; then, as the wheels rumbled away into the distance, he stepped into the shadows, and once more the little road lay empty under the waning moon.

• • • • • • • •

"Enough, my child. I am satisfied with your work. You will have your reward in good time," said Don Q., who, under the skilful fingers of Valentina, had assumed more or less the aspect of the Duquesa d'Orava.

"I have done all I can, lord," stammered the girl, "but the light of a ballroom, it it brilliant—too much for—"

"I do not mean to tempt it. Now, arrange upon my shoulders that horrible garment with feathers placed upon its edges to torture the wearer. I really no longer wonder at the violent moods of women."

The presence of the Duquesa d'Orava at the splendid entertainment given by the Santolallas was regarded as second only in importance to that of the great general himself. After midnight her non-appearance began to breed comment. For, although she rarely missed a ball, she as rarely staid at the Castillo Negro, spending most of her time in Madrid and at other resorts where people of her world congregated according to the season of the year.

As the duquesa's well-known carriage, with its sweating horses, drew up in the patio, servants ran to open the door and usher the guest into the house with all the ceremony due to her rank; but the lady swept away the fingers of the nearest.

"No, no, no!" she cried in a hoarse, excited whisper, "have you heard nothing?—Gen. Ubrique?"

"The illustrious general is here," said the man, who had thrown open the carriage door.

"What—here? Is he then still alive? Alas, poor general!"

The choked words amazed the man. He stared stupidly at the great lady, who seemed to be trembling with agitation in the dusky interior of the coach.

"Come, come," croaked the voice, "an answer, you rogue, or I will deal with you—I mean I will request some caballero to beat you soundly in my name. Come, answer me, is the general still alive?"

"Illustrissima, he was but now dancing in the saloon," stammered the servant.

"I am in time! Quickly, go and beg his excellency to speak with me here. Be off, or I will make you regret—"

But the man was gone.

Gen. Edmelo Ubrique was a personage whom Spain delighted to honor. Risen from a lower rank of life, he had already attained eminence. Suave, strong, unscrupulous perhaps, but both courageous and able.

On receiving her message, he hurried out bareheaded to see her.

"Come, my friend, come," moaned the duquesa, "get in beside me, I dare not risk descending! Come, I will relate to you the whole plot," she added in a whisper. "O! how frightful have been my sufferings, lest I should be too late to save you!"

Ubrique hesitated. He hardly knew what to think of the information the duquesa had sprung upon him.

But the duquesa stopped him.

"I have no need of words. Come, general, enter." She laid her slender hand on his wrist. Looking down at it, he recognized the blazing diamond in the marquise ring on her forefinger. After all, he must humor her.

He bowed his dark head and got into the carriage, taking the seat opposite to his old friend with her inconvenient tears and anxieties.

"Don Edmelo, a plot has been formed against you." The duquesa bent forward and laid her hand affectionately upon his as the carriage rolled slowly out of the patio and took its way back through the Alameda. "I could not exist without giving you—"

There was a strange, muffled sound, for the duquesa had flung the cloak with its insufferable feathers over her companion's head, unseen hands had drawn his feet from under him, and he fell into the bottom of the carriage, half-smothered, but struggling desperately.

Meantime the coach increased its pace.

Far outside the town on a wooded hillside it stopped, and in the darkness Gen. Ubrique found himself, still gagged and bound, carried through the trees and laid on the ground in a little choza where a lantern burned dimly.

After the lapse of a little time a man wrapped closely in a cloak, in the manner of all Spanish men after nightfall, came to the doorway and stood looking down at the prostrate figure. Then he stooped and slipped the gag from Ubrique's mouth.

"What is the meaning of this outrage?" Ubrique exclaimed.

"It means that there is a small matter to be settled between us in the next half hour. I am Don Q., and, lest you should unwisely forget the fact, remember you are my captive. As long as you are that, I demand civility, otherwise you will die."

Ubrique pondered.

"How long do you propose to keep me? It is a matter of ransom, of course?" he said at length.

"It may be called so. But the affair is a little out of the common. For your life I ask the life of another man. In the prison of Castelleno lies a certain Robledo, condemned to death. He must be restored to liberty."

"I met the governor of the prison this evening. This fellow is a desperate character. Special precautions—"

"I know that minutely!"

"He is to die to-morrow morning."

"For you sake, I hope not; because, whatever the fate of Robledo, that will be exactly your fate."

The general smiled slowly.

"Ah! and what do you want me to do?"

"Merely to write a letter hinting to the governor that you have absolute evidence of Robledo's innocence. Avoid details."

"In other words, you wish me to procure the release of Robledo in exchange for giving me my life?"

"Precisely, senor."

"Unloose my hands and bring me pen and paper."

Gen. Edmelo Ubrique wrote rapidly for a few moments.

"Shall I tell you what I have written, senor?" he said; and, as Don Q. bowed, he added, "my letter is naturally to the governor of the prison. I have told him how I was brought here by a stratagem; that my death is certain unless the condemned felon Robledo who I find belongs to Don Q.'s own band, is released by way of exchange for my life. You follow me?"

"But certainly. It is to the point;" and the chief laughed in his least attractive fashion.

The general glanced sharply up at him.

"Listen further. 'Such a suggestion proves this brigand's incapacity to understand the code of honor which rules the life of a gentleman of Spain. I beg you will at once have this Robledo put to death."

"You have done absolutely as I expected you to do. Pray accept my congratulations. It is the act of a brave man! More, also, it is absolutely the letter I myself, Don Q. of the sierra, would have written in your place, if"—his livid-looking glance fixed itself on Ubrique and held his eyes—"if I had not been rather less of a fool than you are!"

Perhaps there is no man living who would not have admired himself in the position Don Edmelo Ubrique had chosen to take up. He had accepted death for the sake of honor. It is little wonder that he turned furiously on Don Q.

"I could not expect you to understand. You, who are——"

"Hush!" the word hissed out like a bullet. "Listen, before you rashly condemn. I know much about you, Don Edmelo. I have watched your career with attention—if I did not fear to unduly elate you I might almost say with interest; I think you might yet do much for Spain. But if you die here to-day what will the world know of you? That you were taken by a grotesque stratagem, duped by an impersonation you should have been keen enough to fathom. In every fonda the story will be told against you. You will be mourned, not with tears, but with laughter. You were a brave man, perhaps, but a fool, they will say; and Don Q. bamboozled you—that old vulture of the mountains masquerading as the proudest duquesa in the land! Man, die if you will, but do not ruin your reputation!"

Ubrique's color changed to a chilly pallor as he listened. It was true, all that this mountain wolf said; that was the horror of it, it was true! Death, which atones for so much, could not cover him from the ridicule of the people! It was more than he could endure; he turned his eyes to the floor and groaned.

"There is also another matter I would urge upon you. The Duquesa d'Orava is concerned in this affair to a certain extent. Her name, too, will be roughly mouthed when the details are known. I have reason to believe that she would give much to bury all that has passed this night in silence—"

"The duquesa? I had forgotten! What have you done with her?"

"She is safe in a valley yonder. Will you be advised? There is but a short time to spare. I would rescue Robledo if possible—he buys my tobacco for me."

"He is a smuggler?"

"No, not exclusively," Don Q. assured him, as if anxious to bear witness to the good points of his follower. "He is, moreover, young, brave and ambitious, as you are yourself. Why not spare him?"

Ubrique set his teeth. The ridicule of Spain—of Europe! Already he seemed to hear the derisive story—the inextinguishable laughter!

"Go on. What have you to propose?" he muttered between his teeth.

"Simply this. A little note to the governor saying that for reasons of state, Robledo must be set at liberty and sent at once to the Castillo Negro, where the duquesa would question him as to certain matters she has gained knowledge of. This will tally with your"—Don Q. smiled—"with your appearance at the palace of Santolalia. You will be credited with discovering a conspiracy and cleverly stamping it out at its birth. You and the duquesa."

Ubrique considered. "I hate it! It is unworthy!"

Don Q. shrugged his shoulders.

"As you will, but you have only five more minutes in which to decide."

Sullenly the general drew the writing materials to his knee again, and in silence handed the note to the chief.

"From this moment the affair is lost in oblivion. Your reputation is saved, general. I offer you my congratulations," said Don Q. "The government have complained that I do not pay duty on my cigarettes. I am paying it this time—in my own coin, perhaps, but what would you?"

HOW DON Q. HAD DEALINGS WITH A USURER.

After Robledo's pardon, amongst the few who actually reached the Boca de Lobo was Juan Sorio, and he was led by Robledo himself to the mouth of the famous cave.

"You desire, Juan Sorio," Don Q. said, "to become one of my children?" By this term the famous brigand often designated his followers.

"Yes, lord, I desire it."

The new recruit, little more than a boy, met the chief's eyes without flinching.

"And why do you desire this?"

The lad was full-grown, though he looked hunger-bitten. His brows met in a scowl.

"Because I have an enemy."

"It is conceivable that you imagine your private enmities will be forwarded by entering my service?" inquired Don Q. harshly. "Those who join us in the mountains forget their own desires, for they realize from the moment of enlistment that their sole excuse for existing lies in furthering mine."

The lad's face whitened.

"Down there in the plains many told me differently," he answered. "They said that my lord of the sierra held a wonderful scale of justice—the only one in Spain in which the rich man and the poor were fairly weighed one against the other."

Don Q. dropped the end of his cigarette into the fire.

"I perceive you have a story to tell me. Tell it shortly."

"The beginning of it goes back 20 years, to the time of the great snow. My lord remembers it; how we poor ones made holes through the snow into our dwellings. At that time my father and my mother had not long been married. My father was a shepherd, and, like many of our people, he spent much money on his marriage feast. Who could have expected such a winter?"

Don Q. nodded.

"In spite of the cold and the hunger, lord, those two were happy. But the days grew darker and the cold more bitter, and it seemed they must starve. I have no skill in the story. As it happened, so I tell it—not otherwise. At the last my father went down into Malaga, where he heard there lived one who lent money to the poor."

"And by what name was this usurer known?"

"They call him Senor Iapoulo, lord. And to him during that winter my father was forced to go more than once or twice—you would not have had him see his wife die! Sometimes Iapoulo would not give money, but a barrel of dried fish or a bag of flour. These Iapoulo gave to my father, always making him sign papers. In six months, so it was written in the papers, each barrel bred another barrel. Thus, lord, the debt grew, and became very heavy." The lad paused a moment and sighed. "Yet when the sun shone again we were happy, and my father paid the usury year by year, though we were often hungry. I do not know, lord, how many times over my father paid his debt to Iapoulo—more than 60 times that which he had borrowed, I have heard him say. But the debt remained on the papers—sometimes more—sometimes less."

"Ah, unhappy ones! it is always so," commented the brigand.

"Then, senor of the mountains, my father died two years ago, and I, who lived alone with my mother, swore to gather the full price of the debt, that we might be free. I journeyed into Malaga to the house of Iapoulo, and they told me the sum of the debt, that remained, and the day on which I should pay it and be free. So, lord, we worked early and late, late and early, and we gathered the money. And on the appointed day I entered Malaga and went to the place where Iapoulo does business. They said he was not there, so I asked if any could give me quittance of my debt, and they told me no, but that I should return on the morrow and see the senor. On the following day I was early at his bureau, and they brought me in before him. 'Ah, Juan, have you brought some of the money due?' he said. 'All of it, senor,' I answered very joyously, but he frowned when I counted it out before him. 'It is not enough,' he said; 'yesterday it had been enough, but not to-day. Why did you not come yesterday as you were bidden?' Then I told him of my coming the day before, and how they had denied him to me, but he would not believe, and he called me many names and clutched his knees with his fingers, and his eyes were like black beads when the firelight shines into them."

"How did it end?" demanded Don Q.

"I cried to him that indeed I had come, whereat he sent for those who refused me entrance. They came, lord of the mountains, and with oaths swore that never before had they beheld me, and then Senor Iapoulo grinned, well satisfied, and said. 'Give me the money you have brought and I will forgive your lies. Go, be industrious and render to me next year what has accrued. It is the law.'

"Then fury seized me, and I cried out that if this was the law, then would I be a lawbreaker forever, and I swore that for that thing which he had done to me Iapoulo should yet come to die. He feared, lord of the mountains, for he called aloud for help, but I broke away from them all, and because I could not see my mother's face when I should tell her of our wrong, I ran to the mountains, and—"I have come to demand justice of my lord."

"The story you have told me does indeed show this Iapoulo in a very villainous light," remarked Don Q. sadly. "I fear the fellow is an incurable ruffian, for I have heard similar tales of his doings before. To rob a rich man, or rather, I should say, to ease him of part of the burden which he carries, is an act of merit; to rob a poor man is a crime; but to rob a woman, most of all a poor woman, one of those kindly ones on whom is based the very life of this Spain of ours, that is a deed which cries aloud for punishment. Know you if this Iapoulo ever travels in the mountains when he moves to and fro upon his business?"

"Never, lord; he never leaves Malaga. Beside, the governor has warned all travelers, and Iapoulo has made a vow never to approach within 20 miles of this place."

"Why should this be?" asked the brigand.

"He fears my lord."

"Ah!" said Don Q., shaking his head, "such a fear shows that he carries a bad conscience. When a man pointedly avoids me, I almost always find he has something on his mind for which I could give him absolution, in this world at any rate. Now, in the matter of Iapoulo, you think he cannot be enticed into the mountains?"

To be continued.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Are Steady—Hogs Are Lower at Buffalo.

London, March 20.—Liverpool and London cables are steady at 11c to 12¼c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 8½c to 9c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 20.—Receipts were 410 cattle, 50 milch cows, 500 hogs, 200 calves. Altho supplies of hogs were much smaller the demand was not strong enough to absorb them and some holders had to have them slaughtered for their own account. There was an easier feeling and sales of selected lots were made at $7.12 to $7.25 per cwt., weighed off cars. There was no extra Easter beef offered and the butchers bought sparingly, preferring to wait until Monday's market, when liberal supplies are expected. Prime beeves sold at 5¼c to 5½c per lb.; pretty good cattle, 4½c to 5c and the common stock, 3c to 4c per lb. Milch cows, sold at $25 to $55 each. There were no really good calves on the market and prices ranged from $2.50 to $8 each.

$400,000 Stolen From Mails.

Paris, March 21.—An American mail bag, the contents of which was valued at approximately $400,000, has been stolen. The theft occurred either on board a steamship running between New York and Havre or between Havre and Paris.

The postal authorities have just placed the affair in the hands of detectives, although the theft occurred a fortnight ago. A cable enquiry to the New York postoffice brought confirmation of the fact that the mail bag in question had been embarked at New York.

The name of the steamer by which the mail bag was shipped has not yet been disclosed.

Leopold and Cabinet.

Brussels, March 21.—An acute disagreement exists between King Leopold and his Cabinet over the question of the Congo Independent State, the King considering the concessions made by his Ministers to the Parliamentary Congo commission to be unwarranted.

A special envoy from the Belgian Foreign Office has had an audience with King Leopold at Beaulieu, France, the result of which was unsatisfactory. It is believed in well informed quarters that the resignation of the Cabinet is certain as soon as the King returns to Belgium.

Duellist Hurt Each Other.

Paris, March 21.—A duel with swords that went to six bouts was fought here yesterday between Emmanuel Arene, Senator from Corsica, and Adolphe Brisson, a well-known journalist. Both contestants were wounded slightly.

A CLEANLY AGE.

Twentieth Century Ideas Incline Toward Sanitation and Preventatives.

Nowadays scientists believe that in cleanliness lies the secret of prevention of diseases.

To prevent a disease remove the cause.

Just as unclean habits breed many diseases, so careless habits will breed dandruff. Improper use of another's brushes, combs, etc., will surely cause dandruff, and in time, will just as surely cause baldness.

It's microbic infection, nothing more nor less.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, and causes hair to grow luxuriantly. Herpicide is absolutely free from grease or other injurious substances.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Five Cent Book That Sold For A Large Sum

New York, March 20.—As a result of a stroll along the Seine in Paris, where the sellers of old books have their stalls, an investment of five cents of our money was made one day last summer by a New Yorker, now a resident of Paris. For the coppers he got a little volume of 40 pages. That volume was sold in this city yesterday afternoon for the extraordinary price of $2,900. In addition to bringing such a price, the book has the rare distinction of being the only one of its issue, so far as is known, that ever has come to public sale. In all the records of bibliophiles only three other copies of the work are noted as in existence. No one informed on the subject of Americana ever expects another copy of the book to turn up at this day, three centuries after its publication.

The book is a copy of the excessively rare first issue of Champlain's "Des Sauvages," which the explorer caused to be printed in Paris in 1603, immediately after his return from his first journey to Canada. The three other copies are in the Lenox Library, the John Carter Brown Library, and the British Museum, respectively. The copy sold yesterday in the Merwin-Clayton company's salesrooms was bought by Dodd, Mead & Co., for a client, understood to be a Brooklyn collector of Americana.

Tetter, Salt Rheum and Eczema.

These are diseases for which Chamberlain's Salve is especially valuable. It quickly allays the itching and smarting and soon effects a cure. Price, 25 cents. For sale by all Druggists.

Sun Set Bed Afire.

(Spirit Lake, Ia., corr. St. Paul Pioneer Press.)

Roy Farnham, a druggist, believes he had a narrow escape from being burned to death in his bed in a peculiar manner. Before retiring the man took a drink of mineral water from a large bottle which he kept in his room, and set the bottle, which was almost full of water, on the sill of his window. He slept late next morning and was not awakened until he began to smell smoke, and upon investigating found that the bed clothing was on fire. He quickly extinguished the blaze and little damage was done.

Farnham for a time was unable to account for the fire, not being in the habit of smoking in bed and having no light in his room. He happened to glance at the window, however, and the mystery was solved. The water bottle had acted as a burning glass and had concentrated the rays of the sun upon the bed clothing, setting it on fire.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Very Busy Man.

A school inspector went to investigate the case of a man who, although he could well afford to keep his children at school, had obtained labor certificates for them all and was taking frequent holidays while the poor little fellows worked to keep the home on.

To his wife's plea that the youngsters' wages were useful when "feyther" was out of work the inspector replied:

"A mere quibble, ma'am. Your husband has constant work, but is too lazy to do it. His employer told me so."

"Then it's a wicked story, and I'm not particular who hears me say it!" cried the woman indignantly. "My husban' is the busiest man in England, bar none. Why, he was up at daybreak this mornin' teachin' my youngest lad to swim, an' he's walked ten miles across plowed fields to fly a pigeon an' won a bounce ball contest an' a boxin' match since dinner, an' now, to wind things up," she added as a final proof of her husband's amazing industry, "he's down in the wood yonder trainin' his dog to catch an' kill rabbits without leavin' the marks of his teeth on 'em. If you want more work than that crowded into a day, you must be a regular nigger driver."—London Tit-Bits.

When Buttons Were Big.

Bachaumont writes in his "Secret Memoirs," Nov. 18, 1786: "The mania for buttons is today extremely ridiculous. They are not only of enormous size, some of them as big as six pound crowns, but miniatures and pictures are made upon them, and this ornamentation is extremely costly. Some of them represent the medals of the twelve Caesars, others antique statues and still others the Metamorphoses of Ovid."

Isabey, in his biographical notes, says that when he came to Paris he worked for a living by making copies of Vanloos and Bouchers on the lids of snuffboxes and that for these medallions he was paid from 6 to 8 francs each. "As it was still the fashion," he said, "to wear buttons as big as a five franc piece, upon which Cupids, flowers and landscapes were cut in cameo, I went into that business. I got 12 sous for each."—Paris Figaro.

Why Some Countries Are Uninhabited

A mere glance at our maps impresses a few general facts upon us. We see that the largest areas of the unknown are now in lands that are too dry, as in the Sahara, the desert of Arabia, and the steppes of Mongolia; lands that are too wet and hot, stimulating almost impenetrable forest growths, as in parts of the Amazon and Kongo basins; lands that are too cold and bleak, as portions of the northern areas of America and Asia. Even the characteristics of the inhabitants influence the extent of the unexplored. In proportion to total area there is more unknown surface in Liberia than in any other political subdivision of the world, because the Liberians, content to live along the coast, have scarcely entered their vast forest maze, though they teem with rubber and other resources.—Cyrus C. Adams in Harper's.

Let another praise thee and not thine own mouth: a stranger, and not thine own lips.—Book of Proverbs.

Coal Dust Valuable.

Great are the uses of coal dust in Belgium. A system for compressing coal dust into briquettes and oval forms is successfully dealing with the large masses of coal dust of Belgium's mines and sheds. The briquette industry of Liege has become important, the exportation reaching almost all the coal consuming countries of the world, amounting for the first seven months of the past year to 253,911 tons. The Belgium state railways alone consumed about 250,000 tons in one year. The domestic use of briquettes is increasing yearly. Many persons use them for kitchen stoves as well as for furnaces.

WOMAN'S WORLD

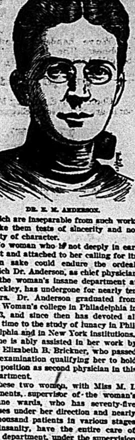
DR. E. M. ANDERSON.

Head of Woman's Insane Department, Philadelphia Hospital.

Dr. E. M. Anderson is a woman with a high medical reputation in Philadelphia, where she holds a responsible and trying position under the municipal government.

Perhaps of all the positions the city can offer to women none calls forth the need of the womanly qualities of patience, tenderness and tact to such a degree as those dealing with the poor and unfortunate in the almshouse and the municipal hospital.

In these two places woman has found her sphere, and it is that of an angel of mercy and compassion. As every one knows, the berths in these institutions are not sinecures—the poor pay, the long hours, the disagreeable incidentals which are inseparable from such work, make them tests of sincerity and nobility of character.



DR. E. M. ANDERSON.

No woman who is not deeply in earnest and attached to her calling for its own sake could endure the ordeal which Dr. Anderson, as chief physician in the woman's insane department at Blockley, has undergone for nearly ten years. Dr. Anderson graduated from the Woman's college in Philadelphia in 1893, and since then has devoted all her time to the study of lunacy in Philadelphia and in New York institutions.

She is ably assisted in her work by Dr. Elizabeth B. Brickner, who passed an examination qualifying her to hold the position as second physician in this department.

These two women, with Miss M. I. Clements, supervisor of the woman's insane wards, who has seventy-five nurses under her direction and nearly a thousand patients in various stages of insanity, have the entire care of this department, under the supervision of one of the heads of the institution.—Philadelphia North American.

You Can Cultivate a Pretty Foot.

All feet may not be naturally small, but all can be made to look small. All feet are not naturally slender, but all can be made to look slender. And all insteps can be made to look arched.

The woman who wants to make her foot look small should try to wear the high heel. At first it will make her muscles ache, but after a few days they will adjust themselves to the new state of affairs, and the high heel will be more comfortable than the low. It will support the instep better.

There are women who cannot wear high heels, and for them there is not very much hope. The feet will never look very small unless, indeed, they be naturally little.

If you want your feet to look small you must buy your shoes very carefully. Shoes ill bought will look big and ugly no matter how small they may be. The woman who wears a No. 4 shoe can, if she buys her shoes correctly, make her feet look as though they were clad in No. 2's. And the woman who wears a No. 3 can make her foot positively tiny. There is even hope for the woman with the No. 6.

"Don't settle down to a state of big feet even if yours happen to be large," says a dealer. "Select shoes with low vamps; wear your heels high and broad and don't forget that pointed toes are always good."

Crossing the knees is never permissible unless one be of the very petite type. The little girl of five feet one or two, slender as a reed bird and graceful as a little swan, can cross her knees and look pretty, but the tall girl cannot do this.

Crossing the feet is apt to be pretty if one does it prettily. It is a graceful thing to stretch out one's feet so as to show the line of the skirt and to cross the feet. This gives a very pretty pose, and one that makes the feet seem smaller.

Feet placed close together always look smaller than feet that are stretched wide apart. Feet placed at right angles to each other look smaller than feet that are placed side by side. Feet prettily posed in any position look smaller than feet carelessly posed or awkwardly placed.—Boston Traveler.

Her One Regret.

Some years ago there passed away one of those lovely souls whom we call "saints on earth." Her whole life had been one of inspiration and help to all around her, and her end was not less triumphant. One by one her friends were summoned to her bedside to receive her farewell blessing, and each felt as she left her that she had been on hallowed ground. One day her niece, who cared for her, said, "Oh, aunt, what a wonderful thing it is that you can look back over your long life and find that there is absolutely nothing you have ever done that could cause you regret!" The feeble old lady smiled a little sadly and said:

"But there are things I regret."

"You, aunt!" cried her niece, incredulous. "What could you find to regret?"

"I regret," she replied, "the good times I might have had and did not!"

There is a deep lesson in this. The conscientious housewife is apt to be a Martha, "cumbered with much serving," and in her absorption in her daily routine she lets the opportunities for change and recreation slip by her. This is a wrong to her household as well as to herself. She owes her family the cheering atmosphere that can only come from a happy, well balanced nature. To keep at her best the homemaker must have an outside stimulus, so begin the domestic year with the resolution that you will not let imaginary obstacles stand in the way of your enjoyment.—Harper's Bazar.

Dining Room Chairs.

Unless a dining room be finished in Gothic style, with massive sideboards to match, there is no reason for buying high backed dining room chairs. The present way of serving by having things passed at the left while the plate is withdrawn from the right is unhandy enough for both servant and person at table without a high backed chair to provide additional chances for trouble. People do not lean back at formal dinners, and low backed chairs that do not reach the shoulder are correct. In the simple home the prestige of larger chairs may be given to the father and mother at table, while if there be an invalid or aged person the stay at table should be made as comfortable as is possible by the use of cushions and shoulder rests.

Buttermilk a Beautifier.

Good buttermilk, the country cousin of the sophisticated, city dairy variety, is a sure charm to capture beauty. It should be welcomed both internally and externally, and its continued use will make beauty more than skin deep. A true milk peptone is the real buttermilk and is very easily digested. It is also a decided laxative, and for kidney trouble, diabetes and dyspepsia it has no rival in the drug store. Rheumatism flees before it and gall stones lose their sting if enough of it is taken. With one's "works" in good order the complexion naturally clears up, but even more swift is the return of rosy cheeks if the buttermilk is also applied externally.

Glass Candlesticks.

Glass candlesticks are much in demand. The pressed glass can be had at remarkably low prices, while the cut glass is not prohibitive in price. Many persons object to touching any brass object and also dislike the labor of cleaning brass. Glass is more desirable on this account and looks very pretty upon the dining table, either with or without shades. It is growing to be more and more a glass age. Glass shelves are used in cabinets and china closets, and in up to date bathrooms even the tub is of heavy glass.

Cleaning Knives.

After the knives have been washed and wiped moisten a little ordinary knife powder with water. Then take a clean cork, dip it in the mixture and rub each blade quickly up and down on both sides several times. Every stain will disappear, and the blades will be brighter than if rubbed on the board in the usual way. They will want another rinse in water and a final polish with a cloth. If the knives do not seem quite sharp enough by this plan, a weekly rub on the steel will do all that is required.

To Brighten Up a Carpet.

A carpet looks much cleaner and brighter if just before sweeping some salt is thrown upon it, or if, after it has been swept, it is wiped over with a cloth or sponge wrung out of clean salt water. This quite removes the dusty look which so soon gathers upon carpets and will brighten the colors. A cupful of coarse salt to a basin of water is the right proportion.

The Use of Rouge.

If a suggestion of rouge makes you look younger and brighter there's no particular law against your using it. The only trouble with things of this sort is that after a time a woman becomes careless and uses her makeup too freely, after which she may expect all sorts of unkind criticisms from all beholders.—Exchange.

For Baby's Cot.

A very nice quilt may be made for baby's cot from some old shawls. Cut all worn parts away, join the pieces together flat, and cover both sides with cretonne. Then put tapes to each corner to tie to sides of cot, and you will have a very warm and exceedingly light quilt.

Use ordinary burlap to cover a screen and you will get a pretty effect if you first have the stuff dyed some appropriate color. When fastened to a frame the burlap will look as artistic as a more expensive material.

Books with delicate bindings, which have become soiled through much handling, can be satisfactorily cleaned by rubbing with chamois skin dipped in powdered pumice stone.

The one who wishes to gain flesh can never do so if she worries, is harassed or permits her nerves to get the better of her.

Milk changed from a cool atmosphere to a hot kitchen will sour in a very few minutes.

Estimable Lady Died Last Night.

MRS. MARGARET KERR, A NATIVE OF SCOTLAND, PASSED AWAY AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

A kindly Christian lady died last night in the person of Mrs. Margaret Kerr, who passed away, after a long illness, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thorpe, Rear St. The deceased lady, who was in her 70th year, was born in Berwickshire, Scotland, in 1837, and had lived in this city for the greater portion of her life. Her end was peace, and she died in the certainty of a glorious immortality, leaving a grand example for others. The late Mrs. Kerr was a Presbyterian, and an adherent of St. Andrew's church. Following are the surviving members of the family: David, of this city, and William, of Beattle, Wash., Mrs. Fenn, Mrs. Thorpe and Miss Jennie Kerr, of this city, and Mrs Reede, of Toronto. Sincere sympathy will be extended to the bereaved relatives.

ANGLERS' LICENSES.

MAY RESTRICT FREE ROD FISHING TO RESIDENTS.

Toronto, March 21. — The Fish and Game Committee of the Legislature yesterday considered the fishing regulations of the proposed bill. One clause considered was that, except without a license, no person not a resident of the Province of Ontario shall be privileged to angle in the waters of the Province. This clause stands until the next meeting. A similar license and regulation applied last year to Nepigon district and realized $9,000.

The committee took out of paragraph B. black and grey squirrels, and classed them with quail and wild turkeys, giving them added protection.

For the killing of geese and swans the season will be May 1 to September 15, instead of September 1, as formerly; ducks and other waterfowl, from December 31 to September 15: snipe, quail and plover, December 15 to September 15 of the following year.

High Court Of Justice.

Switzer vs. Doyle.—This action was tried yesterday and the case was given to the jury to decide just as the court rose for the day. The plaintiff in the case is an old man who resides in the Township of Marmora, and the defendant resides near by. Switzer alleges that Doyle injured his character by asserting that he stole a quantity of hay. The parties in question had a transaction in which the hay was involved, and it was alleged by Doyle that Switzer took more hay than he was entitled to. Doyle, however, states that he did not publish the statement about the country as Switzer alleges he did. The case was tried at a former assize and the jury disagreed. Mr. Northrup, K.C., for plaintiff, and Mr. Porter for defendant.

The jury, after being out about an hour, returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $25 and costs.

Welsh vs. Trenton Electric Company. An action brought by the plaintiff to recover damages from the defendants for the loss of his son, owing to the latter being killed by a live electric wire, the property of defendants. The case was settled between the parties, but the terms of settlement we were unable to ascertain. Mr. Porter for plaintiff and Mr. Masson for the defendants.

Salvation Army Funeral

The funeral of the late Mrs. Margaret Cochrane, which took place yesterday afternoon, was under the auspices of the Salvation Army and was largely attended. At 3 o'clock the cortege left the family residence, on Pinnacle street and, headed by the Army band, playing sacred selections proceeded to the barracks where an impressive service was held. This was conducted by Ensign Coy, who is in command here. The barracks was filled whilst the service was going on. The remains were interred in the Belleville cemetery. Upon the casket were some beautiful floral tributes. Six Salvation ladies acted as bearers, namely, Mrs. J. Consaul, Mrs. E. Parks, Mrs. D. and Mrs. F. Wardell, Mrs. W. Bennett and Mrs. J. Young.

Belting Stolen.

Some party or parties recently broke into the mill at Glen Ross, known as Morgan's mill, and stole a quantity of valuable belting. An effort is being made to find out who committed the theft. Mr. F. M. Vanbiaricom, of this city, is one of the owners of the mill.

Grand Orange Lodge Of Eastern Ontario.

OFFICERS OF THE BLACK CHAPTER — SOME REMINISCENCES BY PROMINENT BRETHREN.

(Brockville Times.)

Last evening the delegates to the Grand Black Chapter were guests of the local preceptory at a banquet given in the Grand Central Hotel. Upwards of one hundred guests were present.

The toast of "The Royal Black and Orange Orders" was proposed and responded to by Lt.-Col. Halliwell, Grand Master; Capt. F. M. Clarke and "Father" John Kelly.

The Grand Master delivered a short but most impressive address. He spoke of the great strides that are being made in the raising of the standard of Orangeism. All objectionable features have been eliminated and there is nothing to prevent any intelligent Protestant becoming an Orangeman and there is no reason why they should not join. He felt that there was a revival among the people and right here in Brockville there is no doubt that many who have been Orangemen in the past will again revive interest and their prosperity is now assured. It is the purpose of Orangeism to broaden and educate the people, and if Orangemen live up to their opportunities and privileges others will be led to follow. Orangemen extend the same privileges to all others as they ask for themselves. It is the privilege of all to worship their God as they please, but they demand that there is only one way to serve their King.

Sir Kt. F. M. Clarke, of Belleville Grand Secretary of the Grand Orange Lodge, indulged in a few reminiscences and looked back to the great strides that had been made in the institution since he joined in 1877. The Grand Lodge of Ontario East was first organized in Brockville and at that time he had the honor conferred upon him of being chosen the first Grand Master. While the Black Order is not as large as the Orange Association, it is the cream of the Association, only those who have passed through the Orange lodge and proved themselves worthy. Orangeism does not lay claim to exclusive loyalty, but there is not within its ranks any faction of disloyalty. Time and again have they proved their mettle. In 1866 when a band of Fenians crossed the river and came over to divide the farms of Canada among themselves the protection of our country was demanded. Who were those who rallied to the call of arms. The majority of them were Orangemen or Orangemen's sons, and of the eight who were killed at Ridgeway, seven of them were Orangemen. When the call came to assist the Empire to maintain its prestige in South Africa, how did Orangemen respond? In the first Canadian contingent there were five companies of 100 men each. Three companies were assigned to Ontario and two to Quebec. Of the hundred men enlisted from Eastern Ontario, seventy-four were Orangemen or Orangemen's sons. The two Quebec companies were divided to Montreal West and Montreal East, the former representing the English-speaking people and Roman Catholic section. All the Ontario companies were full and applicants to spare. In the Montreal East company there were only thirteen applicants and the company had to be filled by the overplus from the Ontario companies.

Sir Kt. John Kelly, recognized as the father of the Black Order in Ontario, supplemented the remarks of Sir Kt. Clarke by noting that on the occasion of the rebellion of 1837 an Orange order was in session in the City of Toronto, when the word came that Wm. Lyon McKenzie was marching up Yonge street. The lodge at once adjourned and went to the City Hall and armed themselves to protect their homes and maintain the Government of the country. In speaking of the character of the Black Institution he mentioned that there are over 6600 Orange bodies in the world and only 800 Black lodges, which speaks for care that is taken in securing its membership. "Deeds Speak" is the motto.

GRAND BLACK OFFICERS.

Brockville, March 20.— The Grand Black Chapter resumed business at 9.30 this morning, Deputy Grand Master Lt.-Col. J. J. Orr presiding. The reports of committees were received and considerable routine business transacted.

Past Grand Master A. W. Gray was in the chair and conducted the election and installation of officers, which resulted as follows:

Grand Master—Lt.-Col. J. R. Orr, Madoc.

Deputy Grand Master—Alex. Grant, Tweed.

Junior Deputy Grand Master—J. A. Graham, Smith's Falls.

Grand Chaplain—Jas. Batten, Peterboro.

Deputy Grand Chaplains— Rev. S. A. Duprau, Rosneath; Rev. R. H. Leitch, Belleville; N. B. Topping, Portage du Fort.

Grand Registrar — John Kelley, Lindsay.

Deputy Grand Registrar— A. W. Gray, Westport.

Grand Treasurer—T. C. McConnell, Springbrook.

Deputy Treasurer — Robt. Lyle, Smith's Falls.

Grand Lecturer — James White, Madoc.

Deputy Grand Lecturer — Levi Locke, Brockville.

Grand Censors—F. F. Booth, Morton; T. H. Thompson, Madoc.

Grand Standard Bearers—J. W. Elliott, Lindsay; W. McMenan, Madoc.

Grand Committee — G. Godkin, Lyndhurst; F. W. Elliott, Frankville; A. S. Johnston, Smith's Falls; M. McGuire, Spencerville; J. M. Thompson, Kemptville; W. H. Craig, Kinmount; J. A. McWilliams, Peterboro.

Grand Pursuivant — E. Parrott, Tweed.

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OPENED.

Brockville, March 20.—The Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario East opened its 48th annual meeting here this afternoon, with a large attendance of delegates from all parts of the jurisdiction.

Among the distinguished brethren present were: Dr. Sproule, Sovereign Grand Master; D. Monroe, Cornwall, and T. A. Kidd, Burritt's Rapids Past Grand Masters.

A civic welcome was extended by Mayor Fulford, and a deputation of the City Council, while F. W. Fulford, county master, read a complimentary address on behalf of the Orangemen of Brockville and vicinity.

The feature of the first session was the annual address of the Grand Master, Lt.-Col. J. Earl Halliwell. After a word of congratulation on the prosperous condition of the association, he recalled that Brockville was the birthplace of the Orange Order in British America. The order had passed the stage of struggling, and the point was reached where consolidation and preparation for active, practical work was necessary. He made some valuable suggestions regarding practical workings of the order, organization, etc.

The Grand Master protested against the appointment by the Ontario Government of Dr. Coughlin to the position of superintendent of the Belleville Deaf and Dumb Institute, saying it had caused a good deal of feeling amongst the Orangemen. As Grand Master, he placed on record in a communication to the Premier, a strong protest.

He said: "There are many questions that we should ask our representatives, such as these, 'Why has no one asked for an investigation into the administration of the parochial system and the confessional schools supported by public funds in the eastern part of this province.' Why has no one brought up the question of collecting tithes through the courts under the laws of Ontario.' 'Has the decision of Privy Council in the Gratton school case been put into practical effect through this province.'"

Col. Halliwell suggested that a committee of three be appointed with instructions, in addition to watching current legislation, to examine the laws relating to education in this province, and draft such amendments as seem necessary and submit them to the next meeting of the Grand Lodge.

SATISFACTORY REPORTS.

The report of Grand Secretary Clarke pointed out that the jurisdiction now comprises 21 county lodges, 80 distinct and 377 primary, representing a membership of 13,010, and holding lodge property valued at $204,536. A dispensation has just been issued to institute another primary lodge at Peterboro. During the year there were 1,079 initiations and 129 deaths. No appeals were reported. A. W. Gray, organizer, resigned in October of last year, and George McCartney was selected to succeed him.

Robert Gordon, Grand Treasurer presented a very satisfactory report. The total receipts showed $6,014.16 with disbursements amounting to $1,315.96. Every county lodge in the jurisdiction was reported to have made returns and dues were all paid in full to date. The receipts from this source were $3,153.63.

These reports, together with the address of the Grand Master, were referred to the usual committee.

In the evening a big public meeting was addressed by Dr. Sproule, Lt.-Col. Halliwell, Controller Hocken, of Toronto, and others.

At Sign of the Scales.

ALLEGED INDECENT ASSAULT.

Mayor Sulman occupied the seat upon the bench this morning in the absence of the Magistrate. A charge of a rather serious nature was preferred against F. W. Farrow, of this city, namely, committing an indecent assault upon Mrs. Wm. Kiser, also of this city. It is alleged that the offence was committed at the opera house last evening. The accused was arrested shortly after. He claims that he is innocent. His Worship enlarged the case until tomorrow, without taking any evidence.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SERGEANT KITTY" MADE A BIG HIT.

There was a very good house at the Carman last night to see "Sergeant Kitty," the military comic opera, which proved to be one of the best attractions this season. Miss Helen Byron, in the role of Kitty, was much admired, and did ample justice to her part. "Sergeant Kitty" is given in two acts, and there was one round of fun from beginning to end. The company is a strong one, the singing being far above the average. The scene is laid in France in the year 1830, and deals with life at the camp of the 22nd Hussars. James McElhern, as the captain of the Hussars, was the principal fun-maker. His stock of funny sayings never appeared to exhaust. His songs made a big hit with the audience. Among his favorite numbers were "Dough," and "The One I Love Best Gave that to Me." Kitty gave several fine numbers, the waltz song, "Love," being warmly applauded. The duet, "Stranger Things Happen Every Day," by Kitty and the Captain, was especially good. The company is an excellent one throughout, and theatre-goers who were not present last night missed a rare treat. To see "Sergeant Kitty" was to enjoy it from start to finish.

INVESTIGATE G.T.R. CLAIMS.

Opposition Want to Find Out Where Certain Money Went.

Ottawa, March 21.—Upon consideration of the report of the public accounts committee in the House yesterday Mr. Barker (East Hamilton) moved that the report be referred back with instructions to investigate certain claims of the Grand Trunk which were presented and disallowed and to demand the production of the certificates and vouchers for said claims, which have disappeared and to send for persons and papers.

In the first account presented to the Government the G.T.P. included large payments to lawyers and others and certain sums paid for preliminary expenses for which no vouchers were produced. The matters have been published quite recently in connection with the testimony taken before the committee.

Fielding Objected.

Some of these items, aggregating $162,000, were allowed by the railway department, but were refused payment by the Minister of Finance, who ruled that promotion expenses were not to be included in the cost of construction. Now these accounts cannot be produced, and there is a suspicion abroad that a large sum was charged and sought to be collected from the Government in order to recoup the G.T.P. for money spent in securing its charter from Parliament. The Opposition are anxious to trace back and find how this $162,000 was expended.

Another curious item was a charge of $46,000 for terminal facilities. Beyond question these so-called terminal facilities included townsites, and other real estate purchases for speculation. The majority of the public accounts committee refused to allow any enquiry, and the company had forfeited this amount rather than disclose what was included in these terminal facilities. The case was clearly stated by Mr. Barker.

Not to Be Investigated.

Mr. German (Welland) reported that the public accounts committee could only investigate those accounts presented to and paid by the Government. That committee was not authorized to investigate claims presented to the Government, but disallowed and not paid. The Government had advanced to the G.T.P. on account of the western sections some $950,000. Every dollar so paid was properly subject to investigation, but what was there to investigate respecting some other claim of $162,000, which the Government did not pay and which was long ago withdrawn.

Six Months' Hoist.

Ottawa, March 21.—In the Senate last night Senator McMullen's bill to forbid American labor men from coming to Canada to direct or assist in strikes, was given the six months' hoist.

Raid By Suffragettes.

London, March 21.—The women suffragists attempted a demonstrative raid on Parliament, more important and more numerous than any other previous effort, yesterday. The police had timely warning and made preparations that resulted in making the demonstration somewhat ineffective.

The only result was some amusing disorderly scuffles and the arrest of nearly seventy suffragists, who were at once liberated on bail.

The raid was led by Lady Harberton, who was assisted by the most prominent women who took part in the previous raids.

The women drove up in wagons and, after promenading before the Houses of Parliament, stormed the entrance of the House of Commons, where the police reinforcements, drawn up for the occasion, awaited the onslaught and drove the women back.

After this first rebuff the women made a second determined attempt to penetrate the police cordon, but to little purpose. In accordance with the instructions, the police employed as little force as possible.

St. Kitts' Enquiry Closed.

St. Catharines, March 21.—The civic investigation into the bribery charges was concluded yesterday, though the argument of lawyers was adjourned till Friday.

FLOODS IN CALIFORNIA

Severe Hardships and Many Drownings Are Reported.

Citizens Had to Take Refuge in the Trees For 48 Hours—Forced to Flee From Their Homes At a Moment's Notice—Danger Over At Pittsburg—Many Gallant Rescues in Boats—Two Persons Were Drowned.

Chico, Cal., March 21.—Flood conditions are still serious. The Village of Dreadful, near Oreville, has been entirely destroyed by the Feather River. More than two hundred men, women and children were driven to take refuge in trees and on tops of houses, where they were exposed to rain and cold for 48 hours. Small boats rescued many. One boat engaged in rescue work was capsized and seven were drowned. They were Mrs. J. R. Hogue, one child; Mrs. J. F. Dallis, two children; Mrs. Legallay and Stella Legallay. A relief train from Chico, with berths, clothing and provisions was despatched over the Northern Electric Road, reaching the scene after some difficulty. The rescue work continues. Fifty people are yet on the island, and there is much suffering among women and children.

Over Half-a-Million Loss.

Oreville, Cal., March 21.—It is estimated that the loss occasioned by the flood in Oreville will be not less than $650,000. The water is now falling as far as Montgomery street. All the business houses on this street are under six feet of water. A telephone office has been established in the second storey of the Union Hotel, and that is the only method of communication with the outside world.

Two Persons Were Drowned.

Stockton, Cal., March 21.—A report from Venice Island, in the San Joaquin River, says two persons were drowned there Tuesday night. At 1 o'clock yesterday morning, the flood had reached its highest point and the water commenced slowly to subside in the city, but there is still a great rush of water through the streets. In the business section of the city it is four feet deep.

Danger Over At Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, March 21.—Clearing weather and a cold wind have checked the rising streams at the head waters and all danger of another flood has passed.

Southern Pacific Blocked.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 21.—The coast line of the Southern Pacific has been blocked by a landslide that has closed the Santa Margarita tunnel, located in the mountains north of San Luis Coisco. The line will be closed to traffic for at least four or five days.

VICTIM OF REMORSE.

Woman Suicides After Charging Her Husband With Assault.

Stettler, Alta., March 21.—The wife of a German named Stribritz committed suicide a few days ago at her home in the Notre Dame de Lavoie settlement, some 20 miles east of here, by shooting herself through the heart.

Her husband, it seems, had been confined in Fort Saskatchewan for assault upon his wife. It is believed that during his imprisonment the wife carried on an intrigue with another man, and that remorse for this, augmented by the kindness with which the wronged husband treated her, caused her to commit suicide. She had intimated to a stepson of Stribritz what her intentions were and the husband, hearing of it, had taken every precaution to hide firearms. The deed was done, however, while he was away, and the body was found in an outhouse by the dead woman's children.

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

Railway Man Shot Wife Who Had Left Him.

Boston, March 21.—John Blake, an employe of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co., yesterday intercepted his wife Mary, who refused to live with him, on Carson street, in South Boston, shot her, and then committed suicide. The woman may recover. It is said that Blake urged his wife to return to his home, and when she refused he shot her. As she fell Blake placed the revolver's muzzle in his mouth and fired four shots, causing instant death. Six children of the couple lived with their mother.

Hat Cost His Life.

Sault Ste. Marie, March 21.—During the storm Tuesday, Donald McDonald, while crossing the river on the ice bridge, tried to recover his hat, which blew off, but broke through the ice and was drowned.

S. Larson went in to try and rescue McDonald, and was swept under the ice.

He came up in another hole, after it was supposed he was drowned. He crawled out unseen and went to his boarding house.

Cashier and $68,000 Gone.

Charlotte, N. Y., March 21.—Frank H. Jones, assistant cashier of the Charlotte National Bank, is missing with $68,000 of the bank's funds. The bank has offered a reward of $1,000 for his arrest.

Affiliated With McGill.

Montreal, March 21.—Principal Peterson of McGill University announces that affiliation with McGill of the Prince of Wales' College, Charlottetown, P. E. I., is accomplished.

Lineman Killed on Pole.

Chatham, March 21.—A heavily charged electric wire crossed the wires of the G. N. W. here yesterday and D. Lozon, a lineman, was killed while working at the top of a pole.

Rome, March 21.—It is officially announced that the Pope has accepted the invitation to be godfather to the expected child of King Alfonso and Queen Victoria of Spain.

IN GRIP OF BLIZZARD.

Intercolonial System Tied Up in Worst Snowstrom For Years.

St. John, N. B., March 21.—The entire system of the Intercolonial is in the grip of the worst snowstorm in many years. It extends from Montreal to Sydney.

The snowfall was heavy on the eastern division especially, and all freight cars and specials have been taken off to avoid a blockade.

The sky cleared last night, but a blizzard is piling up tremendous drifts. Every snowplow on the line is out trying to keep the tracks as clear as possible for passenger trains.

Capt. McIntyre, assistant police clerk, who spent 3 years at sea, says he has never known the barometer to fall so low as it did yesterday morning, when it was 28.10, or four-tenths lower than when the steamer Portland was lost six years ago in the Bay of Fundy, with great loss of life.

The street car service is demoralized. A drift threw a heavy car from the track and it crashed into a saloon, smashing everything before it.

All C.P.R. trains are many hours late.

Killed in Wreck of Barn.

Acton, March 21.—A severe windstorm Tuesday night completely wrecked the Acton House new stables, killing John McEachron and severely injuring J. C. McDougall.

St. Mary's Valley Swept.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 21.—St. Mary's valley was swept Tuesday night by a storm seldom equalled in the upper peninsula. The wind blew 60 miles an hour, demolishing telegraph, telephone and lighting service, and communication with the outside world was cut off until nearly noon yesterday.

Cattle Buried Under Debris.

Jarvis, Ont., March 21.—During the severe windstorm which prevailed Tuesday night, the barn of Mr. James Hazells, situated a short distance north, was blown down. Five head of cattle were in the born. Workmen are at present endeavoring to liberate the unlucky beasts from their position underneath the debris.

DOUMA AND THE FAMINE.

Government Charged With Stealing Money Sent For Relief.

St. Petersburg, March 21.—Without any further allusion to the Ministerial declaration of policy, the Lower House of Parliament yesterday began the actual work of the session with the organization of committees, which in Russia are elected instead of appointed.

The proposal to appoint a special commission to organize famine relief led to a prolonged and animated debate, in which the various groups participated.

A peasant deputy boldly charged the Government with stealing the money intended for famine relief and referred to Assistant Minister of the Interior Gurke.

A Socialist resolution calling for a commission to investigate the whole system of famine relief for the last two years, was finally tabled by 325 to 149 votes.

The Socialists, who were supported by the Social-Revolutionists and part of the group of toil, were voted down by the Constitutional Democrats, Conservatives, Poles, Mohammedans and other groups. The Constitutional Democrats feared hasty action would precipitate a conflict with the Ministry.

Comfort and independence abide with those who can postpone their desires.—Success Magazine.

Firebugs at Work.

Toronto, March 21.—Incendiarianism is suspected as the cause of a fire which demolished the stable of Mrs. O'Halloran, occupied by J. Cameron at the rear of Mutual street last night. The damage was estimated at $1,000, and includes the loss of three buggies, three sets of harness and a quantity of rugs, etc. Three horses were rescued by the police.

CALLS THAW INSANE

Commission in Lunacy Will Likely Be Appointed.

Defence Abandons Thaw Letters In Order to Stop Adverse Witness—Court Adjourns Till Friday—Prisoner Declared To Be a Paranoiac—Expert For Defence Is Barred—Breeze Between Counsel.

New York, March 21.—The Thaw trial opened yesterday with a decided surprise, Attorney Delmas, for the defence, withdrew the offer of the letter which he wanted to put in evidence Tuesday afternoon. This letter was written by Harry Thaw to J. Dennison Lyon, a banker of Pittsburg.

Dr. Hamilton then took the stand. He is the alienist who has been under subpoena by both the defence and the prosecution at various stages of the trial. Dr. Hamilton has stated the belief that Thaw not only was insane when he shot and killed Stanford White, but has remained so. He does not appear as an employe of either the state or the defence, he has publicly declared, but has held himself ready to take the stand at any time and impartially give the results of the examinations he made of the defendant shortly after the tragedy. At that time he was engaged by the attorneys for Thaw, but when Judge Olcott left the case, Dr. Hamilton also withdrew.

Dr. Hamilton's Evidence.

Dr. Hamilton, after qualifying as an expert, under Mr. Delmas' questioning, said, that with other alienists, he had seen Thaw soon after his incarceration.

"Was there any medical or physical examination at that time?" asked Mr. Delmas.

"There was a medical examination as far as it went," replied Dr. Hamilton.

"What was that examination?"

Mr. Jerome at once objected. "This is a re-opening of the whole case," he argued. "Dr. Hamilton's evidence has no place here. It belongs in the case in chief and not in rebuttal. Dr. Hamilton has been here all the time and could have been called at any time."

"The district attorney," replied Mr. Delmas, "has on several occasions called your honor's attention to the fact that he is a quasi-judicial officer. He has no right to come in here now and attempt to shut out the truth."

"That is not so," broke in Mr. Jerome. "If the objection is made on that ground I will withdraw my objection. I am perfectly willing to re-open this whole case and let all the truth go in."

Court Adjourns.

The jury was excused until Friday morning, but Justice Fitzgerald will hold court this afternoon, to hear testimony regarding the appointment of a commission to test Thaw's sanity. On Friday morning Justice Fitzgerald will deliver his decision in the matter.

In addressing the court, District Attorney Jerome declared that if he could legally present to the court all the facts he possessed it would be shocked and horrified.

"We have no right to be trying this defendant in a court of law."

"So bitterly do I feel about this," he continued, "that I have served notice on counsel that if they have knowledge of facts I believe to be in their possession, I will call the matter to the attention of the appellate division of the Supreme Court."

Justice Fitzgerald said he would institute an inquiry before himself and not before the jury as to the present mental state of the defendant.

Jerome said he would lay before Justice Fitzgerald all the information he had and which he believed would result in a halt in the trial.

Thaw Is Paranoiac.

Mr. Jerome told Justice Fitzgerald his own experts had informed him that Thaw is a paranoiac.

Jerome, said the state's experts, while saying that Thaw knew the nature and quality of his act, thought that he is unable to advise his counsel as to the conduct of his case. When a prisoner is in that condition, the court should not proceed further.

Mr. Delmas asked if District Attorney Jerome intended his application to be for a commission in lunacy.

"I understand it," said Justice Fitzgerald.

"I make no application. I say to the court that I can prove the defendant is incapable of directing his defence. I leave the matter with the conscience of the court."

Insane Say The Alienists

Seven Of Them Sign Affidavits In Regard to Thaw.

Will Be Presented to Judge Fitzgerald To-Day--Prisoner Too Dangerous to the Public To Be at Large --Delmas Bars Dr. Hamilton From Giving Evidence--Thaw Suffering From Paranoia.

New York, March 22.—District Attorney Jerome yesterday presented to Justice Fitzgerald eight affidavits in support of his contention that Harry K. Thaw is in such a state of lunacy or insanity as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings against him, or of making his defence.

The court was in session for less than an hour, Delphin M. Delmas, for the defence, stating that their answer to the district attorney's proposition was not ready. Justice Fitzgerald allowed both sides until Saturday afternoon to file such affidavits and exhibits as are to be offered.

Neither the jury nor Thaw was in court yesterday. The jury having been excused until to-day, when there will be a brief session, and a formal adjournment until Monday morning. By Monday Justice Fitzgerald, it is expected, will be ready to announce his decision.

Dr. Hamilton Turned Down.

Jerome pleaded for permission to examine Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton orally, but, in the absence of a waiver of professional privilege on the part of the defence, Justice Fitzgerald said he would not allow the alienist to be examined at present.

Justice Fitzgerald added significantly that he would take judicial notice of everything which had been adduced in evidence during the nine weeks of the trial.

Dr. Hamilton testified Wednesday that, in his opinion, Thaw is not capable at present of directing his defence. The question was put to Dr. Hamilton by Attorney Gleason of the defence, and Jerome now contends that the defence thus waived the matter of professional privilege.

The attaches of the district attorney's office are inclined to the belief that Dr. Hamilton, having already stated his opinion to Justice Fitzgerald, the latter deemed it unnecessary to precipitate an argument as to the waiving of professional privilege. The defence seemed inclined to the view that Justice Fitzgerald held, that Dr. Hamilton's evidence could not be taken into consideration, and that, consequentally, the district attorney's position was materially weakened.

Affidavits of Experts.

Jerome's affidavits, submitted yesterday, embraced the opinion of his seven experts, and a statement by Irvin S. Cobb, a newspaper reporter, who furnished the text of the statement which Thaw issued at the conclusion of Jerome's long and severe cross-examination of his wife.

Jerome called particular attention to one signed by Dr. Carlos F. McDonald, in which he declares he is firmly convinced that Thaw is suffering from paranoia, and that he is and for some time has been incapable of understanding the proceedings against him.

The reporter, Cobb, sets forth the facts connected with Thaw's dramatic manner of issuing his statement concerning Jerome's cross-examination of Evelyn Thaw.

All these facts were narrated at the time: Thaw's insisting that the reporter should sign and seal an envelope containing the original of the statement and should compare the original with the typewritten copies which were handed to him for distribution among the other newspaper men at the trial.

Jerome Is Convinced.

Jerome occupied most of the short session with a personal explanation of the reasons which hindered him from earlier calling the attention of the court to Thaw's present state of mind. He said he had long been convinced that the defendant was of unsound mind, but he had no way of legally bringing the matter to the attention of the court until Dr. Hamilton was put on the stand by the defence.

Jerome said he could not have called Dr. Hamilton on account of the professional privilege the defence could have interposed as a bar to any testimony the expert might have had to offer.

Delmas declined again to waive any privilege with regard to Dr. Hamilton, on the ground that, if the district attorney's contention as to the present insanity of the defendant is sound, his lawyers have no right to waive anything for a lunatic.

All the attorneys were present, however, when Justice Fitzgerald took his place on the bench. Mr. Delmas alone was heard by Justice Fitzgerald. Twice Mr. Hartridge attempted to enter into the argument, but each time he was rapped down by the justice.

LABOR BILL IN SENATE.

Findings of Arbitrators Should be Accepted by Disputing Parties.

Ottawa, March 22.—In the Senate yesterday, upon the second reading of the Lemieux Labor Disputes Bill, Mr. Scott explained that the measure was drawn with the single idea of promoting peace in industrial Canada, while avoiding injustice to any individual or class.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell said he had followed in the press the comments of the employers and the unions on the bill, and as neither was fully satisfied with it, he had come to the conclusion that it must be a pretty good bill. He had noted that many amendments had been made to it in the Lower House, which had no doubt improved it, and made it more acceptable to both sides. As amendments had been accepted from the Opposition the measure was in no sense a party one.

Senator Cloran thought the bill a good one and was a credit to the Minister of Labor. The measure would remove friction between capital and labor. The country had been notified by the authorized leaders of labor in Parliament and out that the bill should go into force at once.

Senator Ferguson would have been glad if the Senate had been given more time before being asked to give second reading to so important a bill. While against coercion by labor, Senator Ferguson thought that the sympathy of the Senate should always be for the organization of labor, for capital was always organized. As the bill applied only to industries which were public utilities, which meant mines and railroads, it was probably only a tentative measure, which would be followed up by further legislation.

Senator Ferguson said he would like to have seen the bill declare that the find of the board of arbitration should be accepted by the parties to the dispute. He said that the Commons had given the bill thorough consideration and therefore the Senate might be able to get through with the measure within a reasonable time.

RUSSIAN ASSASSINS ARE PAID.

Slayers Got From $2 to $2,000 For Each Murder.

St. Petersburg, March 22.—Sensational testimony to the effect that the Reactionary League of the Russian people hired men to murder Ivan Petrunkevitch, the noted Liberal member of the first Parliament, and also contemplated the assassination of M. Ramischwill and M. Dzhaparidge, former members of Parliament, to terrorize that body, was given at the trial of the murderers of Professor Hertzenstein, the member of the Lower House, who was killed near Terieki, Finland, on July 31, which was resumed this week in Finland.

The prosecution placed on the stand a soldier named Kriks, who had been a member of the fighting organization of the reactionary party, and who testified to receiving various sums of money from M. Yushketvitch, a leader of the league of the Russian people, in order to induce him to kill M. Petrunkevitch.

Kriks gave details of various crimes committed by the group and furnished a mass of hearsay evidence, detailing the murder of Professor Hertzenstein and the plot to assassinate M. Ramischwill and Dzhaparidge. He said the prices paid for assassinations ranged from a couple of dollars for minor murders to $15,000 for killing Professor Hertzenstein.

The testimony was admitted by the court, and the trial of the defendants was adjourned until April 16.

CHANNEL TUNNEL BILL.

British Parliament Gives the Project Its Death Blow.

London, March 22.—The revived project of tunneling the English Channel received its death blow, at least for a long time to come, by the announcement of the Government's decision against the enterprise in Parliament yesterday.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman, in the House of Commons, and the Earl of Crewe, lord president of the council, in the House of Lords, made identical announcements to this effect, which were echoed and approved by Mr. Balfour, the Opposition leader in the Lower House. It is understood the bill will be withdrawn.

"Even if the military dangers could be guarded against," said the Premier, "their would be a feeling of insecurity, leading to constant demands for increased naval and military expenditure and creating a feeling of alarm, which would not be compensated for by the advantages of the tunnel."

Discussing the proposed improvements in the schools, a teacher said last night: "What ailes me is that the teachers of this city have for years been asking for the very things Inspector Morgan recommends, and the Board would not listen to them. At this morning's session of the Assizes, the Grand Jury made the following presentment:

To the Honorable Mr. Justice McMahon,

May it please your Lordship,—We the Grand Jury selected for the Spring Sittings of the High Court of Justice, at the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, having performed the duties as instructed by your Lordship respectfully submit the following report:

We visited the County Jail and were pleased to find the cells with one exception without prisoners. We further found the jail in a first-class condition. Great improvements have been made in the heating and lighting of the building. The Court House has been renovated and improved, the witness room made much more suitable and the whole building gives evidence of improvement. We wish to favorably mention Mr. T. Ketcheson, the jailer, who had everything in good order and who was very courteous in showing us about the building.

We also visited the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, Dr. Coughlin, the new Superintendent, gave us a hearty welcome, and under his leadership we inspected the different departments of the Institution and visited the classes taught there. We found this Institution in a splendid condition and it well deserves its high reputation.

We were particularly pleased with the articulation classes and the Fire drill. The progress made in teaching the deaf mutes how to articulate was witnessed with great appreciation and the skill with which the pupils carried out the Fire drill was not only a credit to the bright and intelligent scholars but also a great compliment to the officers of the Institution.

We appreciated the Superintendent's genial and courteous reception and hope he may be long spared to fill the important position he now occupies.

We visited the Hospital and inspected the public and private wards. The operating room is well equipped and the whole premises bear testimony of the good management of the Woman's Christian Association of the city of Belleville.

The people of the city and county are to be congratulated on having this institution and we would recommend that the County and City Councils give it a more generous support. We thank the efficient and capable Superintendent, Miss Green, for her kindness and assistance.

We also inspected the new House of Refuge for the county of Hastings, which is nearing completion. Situated upon the sloping shore of the beautiful Bay of Quinte, surrounded by acres of fertile land, designed by one of the leading architects, this institution presents a splendid appearance. It is a beautiful monument to the Christian spirit which pervades our nation and forms another link in the chain of charitable and benevolent institutions of our fair land.

In the matter of the dealing with persons convicted of breaking the law, we believe that the present system of incarceration now in existence in Canada can be very much improved. The tendency of our present system is to make a criminal class and sufficient inducements are not held out to improve the condition of the prisoner. The present methods have a tendency to harden the criminal and sink him to a lower depth, while it ought to encourage him in better living and elevate him to a higher level.

The best method of attaining this desired object appears to us to be by a system of indeterminate sentences with the release of deserving prisoners on parole with certain restrictions, proper supervision and a regular system of reporting. We believe the termination of the sentence should depend upon the conduct of each individual prisoner and the special circumstances of each case.

We would recommend that the present law be amended to carry out these views, the details to be settled by a committee of persons having experience and special knowledge in these matters.

In conclusion, we thank Your Lordship for your address, instructions and advice. We are thankful that you have been thus far preserved on life's journey and hope that you will be long spared to fill the high and important position you have so long and honorably filled.

All of which is respectfully submitted J. C. DALE,

Dated March 21, 1907. Foreman.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

SINCLAIR'S The Topic of the Day SINCLAIR'S

THERE is certainly good reason why people talk so much about our vast assortment of Dress Goods. We could not exaggerate the importance of our Dress Goods Department, the stocks or variety, We cannot say too much in their favor.

Three words that truly emphasize it are: "Best in Town." Without doubt we have the largest Dress Goods department in Central Ontario and in order to accommodate this big stock of dress fabrics we had recently to rearrange our store,.

The dress goods department now occupies the entire south side of our store. Every part of this new dress goods section is overflowing with brightness.

The widest range of dress goods now awaits you at Sinclair's,

CRUMS ENGLISH PRINTS.

We have just received 250 pieces of Crums Celebrated English Prints, the kind your grandmothers used to buy. Nearly every store will tell you they sell Crums Prints, but this is not so. The genuine Crums Prints are stamped on the outside of each piece.

We pay half a cent a yard more for Crums Print than we would have to pay for the next best cloth.

We sell you Crums prints at the same price you pay for inferior goods. The better sort at—

The Coming Colonial Conference.

It might be thought a fair excuse for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's absence from the preliminaries of the coming Colonial Conference that Parliament will be in session, and his attention necessary to the closing up of important business. Such meetings are gone about in the Imperial capital with much deliberation. They are preluded with banquetings and numerous social amenities. Nothing of real moment is entered upon until all parties have thus got upon a pretty easy, familiar footing.

But Sir Wilfrid decides that etiquette demands his presence as the Canadian representative, even though his Government has nothing to propose, and may take no part beyond that of a faintly interested listener.

Etiquette on this occasion opens a ready escape from the "troubles" upon which the absent Minister of Public Works tendered his heartfelt "sympathy" in December last, and which have greatly multiplied as time passed. It will afford some temporary relief from the embarrassments incident to the absence from duty of Mr. Hyman himself, from painful personal causes, and the scandalous predicament in London. This, with the divisions and asperities among his Quebec supporters, the land grafts of the Northwest, for which there can be no adequate defence, and the lesser boodlings of eastern contractors, form an irksome situation pleasant to escape from.

It is doubtless unfortunate for the party interests that Sir Wilfrid's adieu should coincide so sharply with the expected home coming of the Hon. the Minister of Public Works, as that will be an occasion demanding sage counsels and astute treatment—"to be, or not to be."

As to the Colonial Conference, Canada has not, like Australia and New Zealand, advanced anything. It has no official programme for widening trade opportunities with the Mother Country. It is keeping a free hand. The attitude of the "C.-B." Government has, in fact, created a dilemma for the conference. It came into power pledged not to enact a preference with the colonies. So long as it lasts nothing of this kind can be counted upon.

The commercial question, as the London Free Press points out, must chiefly concern itself with the development of intercolonial preference, and arrangements to this end have been going on. Colonial Ministers will be able to announce that much progress has been made on such lines. Canada has something of the kind with South Africa and has moved, but tardily, toward Australia. Each colonial tariff will have been adjusted, or on a fair way of being adjusted, to secure mutual trade, and the British tariff will prove to be the only one which has failed to adapt itself to the paramount commercial needs of an empire which is hedged in by foreign tariffs of every degree of rigor.

As regards the more outlying parts of the Empire, suggestions may come for an inter-imperial preference into which tariffs would not enter. In South Africa, New Zealand and Australia, the hampering influence of heavy steamship freights between those colonies and between them and the Mother Country, is severely felt, and various methods are considered for meeting this difficulty. If there is to be no tariff preference in England, there may be some way of counteracting the growth of foreign trade in colonial markets by preferential freight arrangements between Britain and the colonies. New Zealand, which is so strongly for Government ownership, proposes a Government steamship service with the United Kingdom. No doubt this subject will receive active discussion, but on such head Canada has less interest than others.

What Sir Wilfrid may have to suggest remains so far a dead secret. Nothing is on the agenda in way of hint or proposition from this country. Yet in the etiquette of the conference the Premier can be counted upon to acquit himself with his accustomed dignity and grace. Sir Wilfrid will have a good time; he will be away from the scene of unpleasant associations and the irksome task of Ministerial adjustments, which someone else must shoulder.

WHAT A PROMINENT SALVATIONIST OWES TO ZAM-BUK

Mr. R. C. Blurton, a prominent Salvation Army worker, who occupies the proud position of Deputy Band-Master at the Temple Toronto, has just proved how wonderfully beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of skin eruptions, pustules, etc. He says:—

"Pimples and sores broke out all over my face and neck, and notwithstanding all I did to try and remove them, they continued to increase. They were not only very unsightly, but very painful, and I was sadly troubled how to get rid of them. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and for several days I applied it to the face and neck, gently anointing the sore places. In a few days I perceived a marked improvement. The sores were not so angry and some of the inflamed patches became lighter in color. I persevered with Zam-Buk after noting this satisfactory state of affairs and it did not take long before the balm demonstrated its healing powers. I found it a splendid remedy, and it cleared both my face and neck in fine form. I would strongly recommend Zam-Buk to all who suffer from any skin eruption whatever, and I trust the publication of my experience will lead others to prove how beneficial Zam-Buk is."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, itch, blood poison, ulcers, chronic sores, ringworm, children's rashes, spots, etc. It also cures cuts, burns, chapped hands, enlarged veins, piles, and all diseased or injured conditions of the skin and subjacent tissues. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes sent for $2.50. Send one cent for dainty trial box.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

Toronto Will Have New Arena.

Toronto, March 21. — Instructions have been received here for the erection of a new skating arena on Mutual, Dalhousie and Shuter streets. The plans are very extensive and call for the erection of a building the cost of which will exceed $150,000, the entire expenditure, including the land, being in the neighborhood of $300,000.

It was first intended to leave standing the old rink and use it for the less important matches in the winter months, but this idea has been abandoned, the present intention being to use it as a hitching place and stable during the horse shows, which, it is expected, will hereafter be held in the new arena, starting next year.

The ice surface of the new rink will be 205 by 90 feet, as compared with 153 by 73 at present, and the ice will run north and south instead of east and west. Artificial ice will be used and the rink will always be comfortably heated, while the seats will be arranged arena fashion and will be capable of accommodating 10,000 people.

The entrance will be from Shuter street and the reserved seats will be arranged on either side of the ice, with twelve boxes on each side, with the general admission at either end.

Some Advice for Lindsay.

Peterboro Review: A newspaper or private individual that boasts long and loud about the hockey team of their town being the only thing that ever came over the pike, shows a sorry lack of good judgment. Lindsay's case during the hockey season just closed, furnishes a good example of this. During the winter Lindsay citizens and the Lindsay press proclaimed to the world what wonders their Midgets were, and even went so far as to offer to beat Belleville, St. Michael's Juniors and the Stratford Midgets all in one night. Yet when it all was over the Scugogville players found that the Classic City bunch were more than they could handle on a March evening not long ago. Much the same kind of youths are found in every town and village in the country. When they play hockey they play on practically the same kind of ice, wear the same kind of skates, same brand of sticks and chew the same kind of gum. Why the product of one town should outclass that of another under these circumstances is hard to be seen. Some one has to win, however, and some one does land at the top of the ash heap. But it is a good thing to remember that we, us and company are not the whole tip, and that the players from any other place on this sphere are not always "rank," "rotten," etc., etc. These remarks are applicable to all lines of sport.

Sudden Death Game for Stanley Cup To-night.

Ottawa, March 21.—Acting Trustee Foran to-night ordered Kenora and Wanderers to play a sudden-death game in Kenora to-morrow night for the Stanley Cup. That is, unless the clubs wish to make it a series of two or three games and can come to a mutual understanding to that effect. Otherwise the one deciding match rules. Mr. Foran also promulgated a few other orders, which will give the men who are engaged in the wrangling out west something to keep them awake to-night. In the first place he notified the Wanderers to get back to Kenora, and be prepared for the game. Incidentally, they are instructed that they will not be expected to play for the cup if Alf. Smith and Harry Westwick are on the team which Kenora wants to place on the ice to defend it. This has been the great stumbling block, and Mr. Foran sticks to his first decision. There will be no chance for a misunderstanding regarding officials for the game, as Mr. Foran in his wire to the clubs named Hugh Baird, of Winnipeg, as referee, and Magnus Flett, of Winnipeg, judge of play.

There was a great deal of wiring east and west to-day. There first came a squeal from Kenora placing all the blame for the failure to get together Wednesday night on the eastern visitors. Then Wanderers were heard from with a howling message from President James Strachan to the effect that Kenora wouldn't agree to anything, were responsible for all the difficulty, wanted to side step, etc., etc., and that Wanderers had decided to pike back to the east at once.

All this disgusted Mr. Foran evidently, for he took a very decisive course in the shape of a curtly-worded telegram, laying down his final rulings as already given, and letting the clubs understand that he wanted things settled at once or the Stanley Cup would become the property, for the present season at least, of the party which obeyed his mandate.

It now stands thus: If Kenora accepts the latest ruling and Wanderers refuse to go to Kenora for the game, the trophy remains where it is. If, on the other hand, Wanderers go back ready to play and Kenora holds out on the Smith-Westwick or any other point, then the Stanley Cup will come home with the champions of the Eastern Canada League.

Suicide At Kaladar.

Wm. P. Berry, who lived with his wife and son about a mile from Kaladar station committed suicide last Saturday by shooting. For some days he had been threatening to take his own life, but his threats were not taken seriously. After dinner, during which meal Berry showed no signs of mental aberration, the son left to visit his sister, who lives near, and on his not returning, the father sent his wife to bring him home.

When Mrs. Berry returned Berry was missing, and a search revealed his dead body, seated in a closet, with a Winchester rifle between his knees and the muzzle lying against his throat. The bullet had passed upward through his head and pierced the roof

THE SIN OF THE COPPENTER MAN.

(Woman's Home Companion.)

The coppenter man said a wicked word,
When he hitted his thumb one day,
En I know what it was, because I heard,
En it's somethin' I dassent say.

He growed us a house with rooms inside it,
En the rooms is full of floors;
It's my papa's house, en when he buyed it,
It was nothin' but just outdoors.

En they planted stones in a hole for seeds,
En that's how the house began,
But I bet the stones would have just growed weeds,
Except for the coppenter man.

En the coppenter man took a board en said,
He'd skin it en make some curls,
En I hung 'em onto my ears en head,
En they made me look like girls.

En he squinted along one side, he did,
En he squinted the other side twice,
En then he told me, "You squint it kid,"
'Cause the coppenter man's real nice.

But the coppenter man said a wicked word,
When he hitted his thumb that day;
He said it out loud, too, 'cause I heard,
En it's somethin' I dassent say.

En the coppenter man said it wasn't bad,
When he hitted is thumb, kerspat!
En there'd be no coppenter man to be had,
If it wasn't for words like that.

En if there wasn't no coppenter men,
We'd all have to live in the barn,
'Cause there wouldn't be any houses, en then,
Then what would be do—by darn!

En the coppenter man said a wicked word,
When he hitted his thumb one day,
En I know what it was, because I heard,
En it's somethin' I dassent say.

Nine million trees were planted in the Northwest last year. And anyone who had ever viewed that landscape o'er will bless the men who bethought themselves to graft these cheerful whiskers on the bare face of nature.

One day last week twenty-six large steamers entered the port of San Francisco laden with supplies and building material. This is believed to be the largest number of such vessels that ever entered an American harbor in twenty-four hours.

In two years the Canadian railways have killed four hundred and two people. The figures, however, are eminently satisfactory, the itemized account showing that half the victims had themselves to blame, and that the other half could have avoided trouble by staying at home.

For earthquakes that are the genuine article the Philippines so easily distance all competitors that there is no corner of the earth with a weakness for shakes that does not seem comparatively safe. During the 18 years from 1850 to 1897 the islands experienced on an average 54 earthquake shocks a year, or nearly five a month.

A pretty little custom is observed in the British navy whenever an officer gets married. Two wreaths are hoisted in the most conspicuous manner, and interlocked with them and hanging from them are colored ribbons. These hang from 8 a. m. till sunset on the wedding day. The cost of the wreaths is generally subscribed by the officer's shipmates.

The story of a weird vigil is told by a correspondent who writes from San Remo, Rome. In the vault of one of the churches there, he says, a watch is kept night and day over the body of a young Russian woman which is reposing in a coffin. The woman, who was married, was a consumptive. A fortnight ago her death was duly certified to, and her body was removed to the place where it now is. Eleven days later the woman's relatives arrived from Russia, and the coffin was opened. The body was found to show no signs of death. The skin was soft and retained the tints of life, and the lips were crimson. The eyes were wide open and conveyed an uncanny impression that they saw. Doctors were hastily summoned, but were unable to account for the strange condition of the body. It is being watched in case animation should return.

NIP IT IN THE BUD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-up cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundancy. Herpicide is now used by thousands of people — all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.

Maritime Trains Snowbound.

Moncton, N. B., March 22.—Train service on the I. C. R. is completely demoralized. No trains have arrived from the north since early Wednesday and Wednesday night's Montreal express from Halifax is still here.

Maritime expresses, both Wednesday's and yesterday's, are stalled at Harcourt.

A special with double engines left here yesterday for Harcourt to lend assistance, but got only a few miles and is buried in snow.

All branch lines throughout the province are closed. In some cases drifts and tracks range from 16 to 20 feet deep.

C. P. R. to Build More Lines.

Montreal, March 22.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy gave out a statement yesterday in regard to the lines that will be under construction by the C. P. R. and for which allowances have been made in the appropriations.

The company has in hand extensions amounting to nearly 1,000 miles of new lines, while 700 miles of double tracking is to be done, as compared with 1,000 miles of construction on the Great Northern, 1,900 on the Grand Trunk Pacific and 1,500 on the Canadian Northern.

Run Over By C. P. R. Train.

Montreal, March 22.—An unknown man was killed by a C. P. R. train yesterday morning near the Angus shops. He was badly mangled, and his head and arm were cut off. The remains were brought to the morgue, but so far have not been identified.

A Wonderful Lock.

Ninety-six million years is the time given to unlock a safe which is fastened with the wonderful new lock invented in Jamaica. The combination consists of four sets of twenty-four letters of the alphabet, which can be set to a sentence in most modern languages. When one letter is used in one alphabet and another in the second set, and so on, it becomes a most complicated matter. Then there is the initial problem of which language it has been keyed in to be solved by the man that attempts to open the safe. Furthermore, instead of letters the inventer, one Neuman Tobias, has employed four sets of numerals. Assuming that the lock has been set to a figure in the number of 3,030,303,030,303,030, it would take any one who undertook to unlock the safe 96,090,273 years 259 days 30 minutes and 30 seconds, working at the rate of 60 numbers a minute, to arrive at the proper combination. During this time he would have no time for food and sleep.

It is well for one to know more than he says.—Plautus.

BIG BILL FOR LOBBYING.

House of Commons Upholds Action of Public Accounts Committee.

Ottawa, March 22.—The House yesterday resumed the debate on Mr. Barker's resolution respecting the missing vouchers of the G.T.P. for $162,000, as brought out by examination before the public accounts committee, and Mr. Bennett (Simcoe) concluded with a strong arraignment of the methods of the Laurier Government.

Mr. Pardee (West Lambton) defended the policy of suppression. So long as the G. T. P. received no money upon the vouchers it was nobody's business what they contained.

Mr. Ames (Conservative, Montreal) said that the question was most important. It dealt with a great national work. The Government was a trustee of bonds of the G.T.P. It owed a duty to the British investors. This only required a Government to see to it that proceeds of the sale of these bonds were applied exclusively to the cost of construction.

Mr. Shannon, the accountant in the railway department, had performed a public service in refusing to approve the claim of $162,000 presented by the railway company. The only reward that he received was to be promptly transferred to another field of action. He was overruled by his superiors in the railway department, and this account was apparently approved by the Minister of Justice. Afterwards the Department of Justice receded from its position, and the Finance Department refused to pay it.

Spent In Lobbying.

The claims included vast sums—many thousands of dollars paid in bulk at various times to Mr. Wainwright. Mr. Wainwright could not, and would not, put on paper what he did with this money. He could not get or produce receipts from the men among whom this money was distributed. There was no doubt but that the money was spent in lobbying, and it must have been very sinister lobbying, said Mr. Ames.

Was it strange that some members of this House were anxious to prevent tracing that money from Mr. Wainwright to those who received it? For this reason the Government and the railway company joined hands to keep the details of that lobbying from coming to public notice. The Government had compounded a felony.

Mr. Ames pointed out that $3,500 was paid to Adolphe Caron and large sums to certain lawyers far and above the value of any legal service they might have rendered. Large sums were paid to Mr. Wainwright for "advertising," but no details were given or receipts produced in this connection.

Witness Went to Europe.

As to one item of $56,000, Mr. Wainwright refused to say what he did with it. Mr. Ames more than intimated that it was spent in lobbying the G.T.P. bill through Parliament. He believed that Mr. Walker of the G.T.P. had gone to Europe to avoid testifying before the public accounts committee.

J. C. Walsh, the newly-elected Liberal member from Montreal, admitted that the railway company had erred, but was the Government responsible?

Alex. Johnston (Liberal, Cape Breton, N.S.), the Liberal whip, repeated the argument that the public accounts committee was sufficiently occupied examining claims that were paid without chasing after claims that were not paid. He moved an amendment to the effect that it was not the duty of the public accounts committee to enforce the production of testimony not relevant to the payment of public money.

Mr. Lennox (Simcoe) scored the Government. He pointed out, amid cheers and laughter, that Mr. Shannon, the honest accountant, who stopped the steal, was now exiled at Moncton.

The House divided upon Mr. Johnston's amendment, and the same carried: Yeas 114, nays 49—a party vote. Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne supported the Government.

The bill was reported without amendment, read the third time and passed.

The Deputy Governor will give consent to bills to-morrow and the Senate will then adjourn to April 4.

RESERVES CALLED OUT.

Roumanian Government Will Suppress Disorders.

Bucharest, Roumania, March 22.—All the army reserves have now been called out to join the colors, with the result that the Government has at its disposal plenty of troops to enable it speedily to suppress the agrarian troubles. Large numbers of Jews from Jassy, Vaslui, Botesahni and other Moldavian towns, which have been terrorized by the excesses of the peasantry, have arrived here, seeking refuge and assistance. They assert that the Russian portion of the population largely participated with the peasants in the plundering and incendiarism at Botesahni. According to the latest advices received here from that town quiet has been restored there.

Precipitated a Riot.

The calling out of the army reserves at Berlad, Moldavia, led to serious rioting. The men, as a rule, were peasants who sympathized with those who had been raiding the country, and some 350 of them, before donning their uniforms, paraded the streets of Berlad, smashing windows by wholesale and plundered several shops. The police ultimately restored order.

The reinforcements now going on to the front are large drawn from Wallachia, so as to avoid the possibility of the soldiers fraternizing with the disorderly peasants.

Nurses Indicted For Cruelty.

Cleveland, March 22.—Six former or present attendants of the state hospital for the insane here were indicted for attacks on patients by the grand jury yesterday.

Thunderstorm In Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, March 22.—Winnipeg had its first thunderstorm of the season yesterday. There was considerable rain and the snow is fast disappearing.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"It is impossible, lord," replied Juan. Don Q.'s gaze flickered angrily over him. "I begin to believe I must ask you to do away with yourself," he said harshly.

The lad stepped back in dismay, one hand catching at the neck of his ragged coat.

"How have I offended my lord?"

"You have used a word that I have not heard spoken in connection with myself for many more years than you can number. Go, I will pass it over for this time, but remember that in the mountains all things are possible and most things come to pass."

Long after the young man had left him, and far into the night, Don Q. sat brooding over the points of the story he had heard, and the problem of Iapoulo's dislike to venturing within reach of the mountains, and then sent for Robledo, the most trusted of all his followers.

"Robledo, I am about to assign to you an errand. Listen therefore very carefully." He paused for some moments before resuming. "You, although a man grown, cannot remember the day when I was not in the sierra. And I still am here to-night. During that period, so men say in the plains, I have amassed much treasure, and some have lost their lives in seeking for it. Is not this so?"

Robledo inclined his head.

"It is, in fact, true that I have held many great and notable persons to ransom, as well as those of the lesser rank. Men of wealth have gladly paid me half their fortunes for the privilege of bidding me goodby. To regain men of genius, the world has pulled wide its purse strings. Some few captives have indeed remained forever in the sierra.

"Now, although I have never allowed myself to be influenced by sordid considerations," went on Don Q. in his sibilant voice, 'I have in truth without effort, collected riches that might perhaps vie with those of the count of Monte Cristo, with whose fame, I fear, you, Robledo, are unacquainted. Much of this wealth lies buried in the mountains."

"I have at various times secreted it in three hiding-places to which I have given the names of Padre, Madre and Nino. You follow me? Good. The treasure Padre is infinitely greater than the one named Madre, and Madre in turn exceeds by a hundred times the baby, the treasure Nino. Here is a paper upon this table. It contains a plan, by which any seeker can find the spot where Nino lies buried. Further, whoever finds Nino will find also a second plan leading them to Madre, and he who has the courage to seek Madre will discover a third plan leading to Padre. I had these plans made for my heirs, but I have now changed my mind." He rose, and, walking to the table, took up an envelope.

"Here is the plan to Nino. This document, my child. I am about to give into your charge. You will carry it down into the city, and lodging with, it may be the uncle of Isabeljilla"—Robledo looked sharply up—"you will, with much discretion and care, sell this plan to one Iapoulo, a usurer, whose dwelling is within a stone's throw of the bull ring. To this man you will represent yourself as a traitor to and a hater of me. You will not let this plan go under a good sum, Robledo—20,000 pesetas is the lowest price to be accepted—and Iapoulo can pay you when he returns to the city after finding the treasure."

The young man waited, for it was evident that Don Q. had more to say.

"Yes, Nino is worth far more than 20,000 pesetas, but that is to be your price. My child, would you betray me for 20,000 pesetas?"

Robledo lifted his face, reddening under the tan.

"My lord knows," he answered with passion.

Don Q. looked at him curiously.

"I almost believe I can trust you, Robledo," he said; and, indeed, never had he in all his career permitted himself to speak thus to one of his band. "But you must refrain from becoming sentimental, Robledo," he added. "I fear if you become sentimental I should be obliged to rid myself of you."

Having lodged himself as Don Q. had foretold, he very soon managed to open up negotiations with the money lender Iapoulo.

It is sufficient to say that a bargain was soon struck, especially as the payment, though large, was not to change hands until the treasure had actually been found and brought into Malaga. So it happened that Iapoulo did buy Robledo's secret; did, with infinite precautions, steal up into the bush-grown ravine not far above the foothills, and bear away the treasure named Nino.

Instead, however, of proving his gratitude to Robledo, no sooner had Iapoulo re-entered Malaga, after his successful robbery, than, recalling the fact that he owed the ex-brigand 20,000 pesetas, the usurer at once put the police on his track. It may be that Iapoulo's countenance had not inspired Robledo with confidece, or perhaps he received due warning through a friend, but, at any rate, when the police raided his poor quarters the man had vanished.

He passed up into the mountains, glad again to feel the free winds upon his cheek, and coming to the Boco de Lobo, told the history of his dealings with Iapoulo to Don Q.

Meanwhile, and while these things were going forward to such fortunate issues, no more delighted man than the usurer existed in Malaga. He held the plan to the second treasure, which the rascally brigand, who had sold (here he laughed) the secret, declared to be at least ten times as large. Without delay he must carry off the rest before Don Q. discovered his earlier loss.

Iapoulo at this period, and for some ten years previously, had held in his power an unfortunate man whom he used as his confidential clerk. This man, who was known everywhere in the city by his nickname Simio, was nearly six feet in height, with a pair of long and crooked legs, and a big hairless face, flat-nosed and undershot. He had also the largest appetite in Spain, and was in the habit of complaining that he could number on the fingers of one hand the few occasions on which he had reached the harbor of satiety. He led a shifting life, for he generally tried to lodge en pension.

Together with his enormous appetite, Simio was possessed of immense muscular strength. On account of this excellent quality, and also because Simio could not for many reasons betray him, the usurer fixed on the clerk as his companion on his trips into the mountains. Realizing that safety possibly lay in haste, the pair found themselves five days later among the stony bleakness of the higher sierra.

Between his anxiety to hide himself from the imagined eyes that beset the solitude, and the fear of breaking his neck, Iapoulo's orders grew more confused with every movement. But when the lowest point of the track was reached Simio halted and looked about him.

"There, master," he said, nodding his head to the right.

Iapoulo, crouched upon the mule, saw above him a strange rock, shaped like a fungus; behind which rose the cliff. In that gray place each little deformed bush had whipped a hole on the hither side of it, worn by that ceaseless beating of the branches as they flipped and struggled in the unpitying wind.

"Forward! Hasten!" said the usurer in a hoarse whisper.

They tied up the mule at a little distance, and Iapoulo followed Simio into the grotto. It was an ordinary cave enough, but Iapoulo was not used to caves, and the lurking shadows on all sides, the low frowning roof, and the mysterious drip, drip of water, now on one side, now on the other, shook his quivering nerves. The lantern he had brought seemed only to add to the terrors of the place.

"Let us to work. Where is the map? Hold the lantern steady fool!" The usurer studied the plan for a moment, then, hurrying across the dusty floor, plunged his hand into a crevice in the corner and drew out a rusty nail.

"This is the sign. Come, let us dig."

Big crooked Simio whirled up a pick-axe, and between his blows Iapoulo struck excitedly at the rocky earth with a spade; but progress was slow. The night deepened into the small hours; still they labored until the pick-axe, pioneering its way downward, struck and stuck in the wood. A few more cautious efforts, and a long and dirty box was disclosed. Iapoulo, too impatient to wait for it to be raised, bade Simio wrench off the lid.

It was done. A whitened skeleton lay stretched out within. The empty jaws grinned up at the two men as they stood stiff with the shock, gaping down upon it! Then across the lantern's light a shadow leaped to Iapoulo's feet and a touch fell on his shoulder.

With a yell he wrenched his head round to see he knew not what. The color had drained from his damp face. his eyes shone white like those of a vicious horse, his upper lip was drawn back in a grin of fear. He stood immovable, his clutching hands still outspread, while the drops gathered and fell from his bald forehead, as he stared back at a cloaked figure bearing a singular likeness to the brooding carrion birds which he had seen on his journey into the mountains.

"May I inquire upon what you busy yourselves, senor?" asked Don Q.'s suave, sibilant voice at last.

In the long pause Iapoulo collected his wits a little.

"This man," he indicated Simio, "implored me to come and dig out some treasure which long ago he said he had buried here."

"Pah!" Don Q. spat out with disgust. "Do I not know you, Senor Iapoulo? You bought my secret and would now steal my treasure. Did I not see you in the little wine shop of Malaga where the girls danced, while you whispered in the corner with a man whose brows were bound about with a handkerchief of yellow? Corpse of a scullion! My ears are keen. I can hear the eggs break when the quebranta-huesos hatches its young in the sunshine!" Don Q. turned to the men behind him. "Pull this man out of the hole and set him before me!"

Iapoulo's bullying temper mounted.

"I have been trapped!" he snarled. "This villain has betrayed me!"

"No, master, no!" wept Simio urgently.

"Peace!" Don Q. raised his hand. "You have in truth been betrayed, Iapoulo, but by your own greed. Only the passion to possess could have drawn you here beneath my shadow. You robbed me once of a hoard, and became brave enough to try and rob again. I will leave you to think over your crimes. Good-night."

Iapoulo would have rushed forward, but Gaspar's big hands held him. "Am I to be imprisoned in a hole?" he shrieked.

Don Q. turned back. "By no means," he returned politely. "You have come up of your own free will into the sierra, and although I cannot offer you my own hospitality, I can recommend this posada," he waved his hand round the grotto. "Juan, bring here your bill of fare. This, senor, is the patron."

The fact that his helpless young creditor should hold a place in this nightmare adventure seemed to Iapoulo scarcely surprising at the moment. Yet he spurned the paper held out by the lad, and spoke again to Don Q.:

"You will set me free. I have done you no harm. I have been betrayed, I tell you:" The brigand stopped on his way to the entrance and turned slowly about.

"The meals in this inn are served but once a day," he said coldly. "If you will not choose now, you cannot eat for 24 hours."

"Oh, master, master, and I am hungry," wailed Simio.

The usurer took the bill of fare ungraciously, but as his glance fell upon its items he gave a cry.

"Explain, Juan," commanded Don Q.

"This is my posada," said the young man sullenly. "Those are my prices. If the senor would eat, he must pay my price."

"One night's lodging, 2,000 pesetas each guest; fire, 2,000; black bread, 2,000; sausages, each 5,000 pesetas," Iapoulo read aloud. "I shall not pay. I am here against my will. Legally——".

"Will the law feed you and warm you, and give you to drink?" asked Don Q. "Moreover there is no law here—merely equity."

"But you dare not starve me!"

"Why not? You can buy and eat if you will."

"But I have no money," retorted Iapoulo desperately.

"Then you must send for some."

Iapoulo groaned.

"Your orders, senor," said Juan.

"One small loaf, half a sausage and some water," demanded Iapoulo.

"And for this gentleman?"

"For Simio? Nothing!"

"O, master, would you starve me?"

"If you cannot pay you must starve," said Iapoulo.

Simio howled aloud. This fate far exceeded his worst fears.

"Senor," interposed Don Q., "you have yourself appealed to the law. By the law therefore you must hold. A master is bound to provide food for his servant under circumstances such as these, for you persuaded him to follow you for your own purposes into—I fear—an inhospitable region. He is, moreover, a man of twice your size and will therefore require on a just computation double as much food. Come, we must see justice done. Hear me, Juan, when the senor orders food for his own repast, you will bring double the quantity for this poor servant, who weeps for hunger."

"Will my lord pardon me?" A tall young mountaineer stepped out from the rank of Don Q.'s followers. His brows were bound with a yellow handkerchief, and his dark eyes gleamed as he set the butt of his musket on the floor and rummaged in his shirt for a moment.

"What is this, Robledo?"

"I should like my account settled, lord. This senor bought from me a certain precious thing in the plains, for which he promised me a payment of 20,000 pesetas, which he failed to pay." Robledo brought out a ragged paper from his vest. "It is written here, lord."

Don Q. took the paper and glanced over it. "A fair demand," he remarked.

"What have to say, senor?" he addressed Iapoulo.

But Iapoulo had no answer ready. He recognized the handsome face, the bold air of the mountaineer he had betrayed.

"Speak!" The sharp command startled the usurer.

"I have no money," he replied bitterly. "When will you let me go?"

"As soon as you have paid your just debts, senor. This man"—he laid a slender, yellow finger on Robledo's shoulder—"I will permit to be your messenger. To-morrow, at the first light, you will deliver to him a letter for your agent in Malaga. By the way, Juan, the senor wants paper, pen and ink."

Juan at once produced them.

"The pen is 1,000 pesetas, the ink 500 and each sheet of paper is 1,000," he said, as he handed them to Iapoulo.

"I do not need them." The usurer believed he could score a point. "If I refuse to write what can you do?"

"The alternative is simple," replied Don Q., and bending towards Iapoulo he whispered a few words in his ear.

"No, no, I will write!" cried the man, tearing a sheet of paper in two. "You see, I use but half," he added.

"Pray do not be hasty, senor," implored Don Q. "Rather, be very careful to ask for enough money, or perhaps we shall be forced to speak together again of alternatives."

Then in an instant they were gone—the vulture-faced brigand and his swarthy grinning band. Iapoulo found himself in the darkness. He felt each limb. He was sound and free, therefore surely he could escape. He rushed towards the opening of the cave, and against a grating that had been silently fastened over it. He clung to the bars, listening to the wind and to the strange sounds that float about mountain sides in the nighttime. The world he knew lay five days of hard travel away, beyond many treacherous and desolate gorges. He did not heed the powerful snoring of Simio, who had seized on the loaves and sausage the brigands left behind them, and having eaten and come to the conclusion that there were worse folk abroad than the vulture of the sierra, had fallen contentedly asleep.

Presently Iapoulo became lost in a maze of calculations, which he worked out with knitted brows. Five days must be allowed for the messenger to go to Malaga, five to return, also one to spend in the city—that made eleven in all. Each day he would eat half a sausage and half a loaf of black bread. Simio—here he turned a savage look upon his sleeping retainer—would eat a whole sausage and one loaf of black bread. Between them they would drink three small bottles of water. Their daily lodging cost 4,000 pesetas. Thus he computed that each day in the mountains would cost him 19,500 pesetas. He moaned, rocking himself to and fro at the thought of such a sum. But when he multiplied it by eleven, the tears trickled down his discolored cheeks, for, alas! to this total he must add the debt owing to Robledo.

It was long before he found courage to name the whole amount, even to himself. When he realized that a monstrous slice of his fortune was slipping away from him he hid his face in his hands, and for some moments told himself he would prefer death. But as the dreadful words whispered by Don Q. flashed back upon his memory he lifted the paper and wrote out the form of his letter, leaving one space blank.

"I am in the grip of Don Q.," the letter ran. "Send me at once——pesetas by the bearer, without question or delay. Do not inform the authorities, for if an attempt be made to rescue me I shall be nailed to the pine tree that grows nearest heaven upon the mountain above the place of my imprisonment."

This note addressed to his representative in the city, he sat down to the hardest struggle of his life—the figure at which he should place the sum to be sent. Doubts assailed him. He did not wish to send for more money than was absolutely necessary, for he trusted not at all in the honor of the brigand, who he believed—and in this Iapoulo judged by himself—would break all his bargains and seize the uttermost farthing. Yet on the other hand, it might prove awkward to have less than the necessary sum; accidents might happen, the messenger might possibly not hurry himself, he might be twelve days on the journey. So the dawn come and the full day drew on, and still the usurer sat trying to make up his mind, when Robledo stood before him.

"Is the letter ready that my lord commanded me to take?" demanded the young bandit.

"Will you make very great haste on your errand?" asked Iapoulo.

"On my lord's errands one always hastens," replied Robledo.

"If your are back within eleven days, I will give you—I will give you ten, yes, ten pesetas for yourself." With these words Iapoulo wrote rapidly on the paper and gave it through the bars into Robledo's hands, crying out—"Go, go, before I repent!" and rushed into the darker end of the cave.

Early on the eleventh day Juan announced the return of Robledo, and a little later Don Q., with a few of his followers, entered the cave. Robledo laid a bag of pesetas and a roll of paper money at the usurer's feet.

"Now, senor, count your money," said the brigand, "and your creditors shall come in before you. Juan, stand out."

The lad at once stepped forward, bearing a long bill in his hand.

"How much does it amount to ?" inquired Don Q.

"By careful counting, lord, it adds up to 234,500 pesetas."

Refusal to pay or any cavilling at the items being out of the question, Iapoulo, with many sighs, paid over the money.

"Now, Robledo, what is owing to you?" went on Don Q.

"20,010 pesetas, lord."

"No, no, no! The bargain was for 20,000," cried the usurer.

"What does this mean, Robledo?" asked the chief sternly.

"The senor made me a promise of ten pesetas, lord, if I returned by the eleventh day. I am here."

"It is false!" Iapoulo could not bear it, every peseta was dear as a drop of his own blood.

"You disappoint me, senor," said Don Q. quietly; "for although you could not see me, I heard you with my own ears make the man this promise. The debt is, indeed, 20,010 pesetas. Pay him quickly."

The last coin had scarcely passed from Iapoulo's reluctant fingers, when he wrapped his worn cloak about his neck. "Now I am free! I will go."

"Not too quickly," interposed Don Q. "Our little business is hardly yet concluded. You have paid your debt, senor, it is true, but not the interest, the usury."

"The interest?" screamed the money lender.

"Yes," said Don Q. "Our debts in the mountains double themselves every three days. It is a bad custom which you in the plains have taught to us. You still owe these two men enormous sums. I fear Robledo will have to make a second journey to the plains."

"Senor, this will ruin me. I cannot possibly pay it."

"So?" The brigand shrugged his shoulders regretfully. "Well, there is always the pine tree."

"You had decreed my death in any case," cried Iapoulo.

"No," returned Don Q. "You shall indeed pay as far as your fortune allows. But, since I know you cannot discharge these debts in full, I am about to offer you another chance of escape. You will cause to be delivered to Robledo all papers concerning all the debts owing to you."

"This is ruin." Iapoulo stood up obstinately. "I will not do this thing."

"You prefer the tree?"

"Yes."

"Bring him out, my children. You, Gaspar, I perceive, have already prepared the hammer and the nails."

Iapoulo was hustled to the entrance. He stood there a moment, gazing up at the great tree that creaked and swooped above him in the gale. The last remnant of defiance went out of the man. The love of money died in the struggle with the love of life.

"I will consent. But you are leaving me a beggar."

"Better a beggar than a dead man," observed Don Q. urbanely. "I congratulate you, senor. A moment more, and it would have been too late. Now I foresee that you and I will have a merry time burning all those documents that have pressed so heavily on the poor. Or, stay; better still. The season verges toward the New Year, and with your help, Senor Iapoulo, we will, by sending back these papers, put a ray of light into many of the homes of our good and kindly peasants."

HOW DON Q. FOUGHT FOR HIS NAME.

During his life of brigandage in the sierra, Don Q. earned for himself a name for relentless cruelty, but he was cruel only because cruelty was a necessary part of the equipment of a sequestrador. Wealth he despised, save as a means of power; for his life he cared little; indeed, he was wont to say that only when it stood in danger did it become endurable to him.

But there was one thing he valued, a possession held in the secret of his heart, cherished, guarded, beloved above all else the world contained. To this secret he could turn for solace during his long fits of despondency when the bitternesses of the past surged back to torture him. This secret, which he believed to be inviolate, set safe and high, far beyond the snatch of fate, which he never dreamed could again be jeopardized, was yet to cost him some of the fiercest moments of his life.

On an evening of late winter, Don Q., rising from his fireside, drew his cloak more closely round him, and, going out to the terrace before the cave, began pacing up and down. As he walked, he read from an old book of Spanish legends deeds of high emprise, carried through with a stateliness of courage that lends so great a distinction to many tales of Spanish chivalry. Presently he closed the book upon his finger, and as he walked amused his mind by comparing his own career with the mighty performances of old.

In the midst of his thoughts he drew up to peer curiously downward at a young man who was making his way through the groups cooking, gambling and smoking round the fires in the valley. He rushed up the path to the terrace, holding a mountaineer's leather bag at arm's length, and laying it carefully at Don Q.'s feet, sprang back to some distance.

"What is this, Felipe?" The chief's tone was an ice-douche.

Felipe, with terrified eyes glued on the bag, gasped—"A bottle, lord."

"Corpse of a scullion!" Don Q. snatched at his knife. "Fool! speak before I cut the words from your tongue!"

"The fathers from San Pedro sent it. It was found in the chapel before the altar yesterday. No man would carry it hither, for all said it must be an infernal machine. Then came Maria, the wife of Tomas, to confession. She brought it, lord."

Don Q. laughed till the young man winced and colored.

"So it came by the hand of a woman, after all! Maria shall not be forgotten. Show the bottle to me."

Felipe jerked up his head and shivered like a frightened horse.

"It will blow us to fragments, lord."

The chief drew out his knife and pricked the man sharply in the thigh. Felipe started, cast one glance at Don Q. and caught the flickering malevolence in his eyes, then leaped to obey.

He raised the bottle with shaking hands. It was of a curious shape, made of some dark-stained thick glass; the cork, well rammed home in the neck, was further secured by a strip of paper fastened over it. On this slip of paper was written, "Al Senor Don Q."

"Lay it down." The chief stood for a moment brooding. This was probably some new scheme against his life. "Felipe," he said at last, "tap that bottle with the hilt of your knife until you break it, then we will judge whether it be indeed an infernal machine."

The lad hesitated. But his chief's eye compelled. White-lipped he stuck at the glass till Don Q.'s short patience gave way. He seized Felipe's hand over the knife-blade, forcing a strong blow. From the shivered fragments of the bottle fell out a letter.

Don Q. glanced at him.

"Hand me the letter and go!" he said.

By the crimson light of the sunset the brigand examined the letter.

"Senor," the letter ran, "I invite you to meet me on Sunday at midnight at Las Lechuzas. For the sake of the name you once bore, you will not fail me, and you will come alone."

Don Q. looked at the seal and looked again, then with a groan turned to seek his cave.

Crouched over his fire he brooded long. Here was a blow well aimed, and the more perilous because he was absolutely at a loss to know whose hand delivered it. "The name you once bore." He repeated the words under his breath, and the first fear of his reckless life crept cold and small about his heart.

The pride of his youth and of his young manhood passed before him. His loveless marriage day, the birth of his children, and then the dark hour when he knew but one day remained to carry the honor of his ancient name clear, and that was to give up all his great possessions and to die.

And in the eye of the world he had died, but the fierce blood in his veins had called to him to live somehow, in some fashion—hidden and unknown for ever, but secretly building up again those fallen fortunes of his house.

At length the brigand sighed heavily and sank back into his seat.

"It is sealed with my signet ring. I could not mistake it, the ring I gave to—her on that evening of calamity. You grow old, Caesar," he whispered to himself; "this has shaken you. Who possesses the ring now?"

After a while he brought out his autobiography and began to write—

"My name is threatened. It seems incredible, for I have been long in the sierra; so long that I myself can scarcely number the years. During those years but three men have suspected the name I once bore. A name of splendid traditions. I buried the third of these men 15 years ago. When I turned from his grave, I thought I had had my last dealings with such menaces. I felt safe. I reveled in my security. It appears, alas! I was mistaken, and that is why I must now go down to Las Lechuzas alone.

"It may be a trap for my life, and that will mean defeat to all my hopes and my plans. I could indeed remain in safety here and let them guess as they pleased perhaps, but for one thing. I am alone in the mountains, but in the world I am not quite alone. There is one other of whom I must think. If these animals know my name, of a surety they must know of her existence. If they can be base enough to bait a trap for me with my heart's blood can I imagine they will show mercy to her? It may be they guess only and have no certain knowledge of facts, but I must make sure, and further if chance befriends me, take means to close for ever lips that can babble so murderously."

Don Q. sat bleak and solitary upon his horse. He had come to the end of his journey. For two days he had been riding downward through the mountains to keep rendezvous with his unknown enemy—a terrible ride, tortured with memories and harassed with suspense.

He was absolutely alone, for he had no companion whom he could trust. As for the men in his band, with the exception, perhaps, of Robledo, he divided them into two classes—the first, whom he could rely on a little, for though wolfish they were fools; the rest, endowed with low cunning, he would not depend on at all.

He had come to the conclusion that his correspondent must have in view one object—gain. He would endeavor to force hush-money from the brigand whose immense fortune was the common talk and envy of the plains. Such a secret, affecting as it did the honor of a noble family, could not be trifled with, and, indeed, it was certain that Don Q.'s enemy had by some means become possessed of real information that blown abroad would render decades of solitude and self-sacrifice vain. The chief's plan was a very simple one. To come face to face with his adversary, and to kill him. If he himself perished, what matter, so long as this great work was done.

Neglecting no precaution that his long years of guerilla warfare had taught him, he lay watching in the thicket until night fell. No living thing approached Las Lechuzas or came from it. Yet against the murk of darkness the chief saw a spark fly and die over the building, and knew that a fire was being kindled on one of its deserted hearths.

At once he began to move. To arrive before one is expected frequently disconcerts an enemy's tactics. Tying up his horse as near to the edge of the wood as possible, that it might be easy to find, Don Q. crept up to the building, through the ruined gateway, and across the courtyard. Within all was dark, silent and mysterious.

As he moved stealthily forward along the stone passage where the night seemed solid, a chill wind came after him, gathering up the deathlike odors that cling about places man has inhabited and forsaken. His fingers had rounded a broken corner of wall, when a rush of warmer air brought him the pungent smell of kindling wood. He thrust out his head and saw the entrance to the great central hall, against which a broken door, torn probably from one of the outbuildings, was propped; through and behind this the light of a fire leaped and sank.

It has been said that Don Q. was a famous hunter; he crept noiselessly to the makeshift door and listened. Five minutes passed. No sound came from within but the intermittent anger of the fire as it roared and crackled among the wet wood. The brigand slipped off his coat and wrapped it shieldwise round his left arm, then thrust the door backward. It shook, rose, poised a second, and flapped upon the floor, flinging up a cloud of dead old dust as it settled.

Don Q. slipped into the opening, and, seeing nothing but a high wooden screen that hid the fire, stood with his back against the wall until his eyes became accustomed to the light.

Still no sound.

After waiting a few minutes he walked softly and swiftly round the screen. A great fire roared up the chimney, an empty stool was by the hearth; no more. Yes! He made out a figure drawn up into the darkest corner, between the screen and the outjut of the chimney; a figure, cloaked from head to foot.

"I have come," said Don Q. at last.

"With your knife in your hand," said a vibrating voice. "That is well."

Don Q.'s arm fell to his side. A woman!

She threw back her cloak and advanced into the full blaze—a tall girl with a passionate beauty that matched well her poignant voice.

"Pardon, senorita, I expected to meet with a different person."

"But you are Don Q.?" she asked.

The brigand swept his sombrero to the floor.

Her tragic eyes lit up.

"And you came to kill!" she exclaimed.

"Or to be killed."

"No! Don Q. will not belie his reputation," she rejoined. "He may yet kill some one to-night—if he dares!" she added suddenly.

The brigand eyed her for a minute.

"There are men allied to brave women, men who are cowards and who choose to be represented on occasions which they themselves fear to face. I have received a letter bidding me to come here. Do you know anything of it?"

"All, since it was I who wrote it."

The chief eyed her for a minute.

The chief shrugged his shoulders. "May I be permitted to inquire—under whose orders?"

She smiled. "I am here alone, as I wrote alone. Hear me, for there is not time to spare." Don Q. made a gesture of polite attention. He was keenly suspicious, though there was a simple urgency of woe in her face that almost compelled belief.

"I will tell you my name—I am Anita del Vilar," she went on, "and you are not Don Q. but—"

The chief flung up a fierce hand. "Hush, not even dead walls must hear it!"

A strange look came over her face.

"I judged rightly! You are the man who once bore—that name. My life is in your hands. Now I know that you will do for me all that I want." She bent near him. "There was once a young girl, loving, happy, and oh, so lovely." Her voice broke. "My little Lucia, my sister. She was mine from the day our mother died. We are of the nobles, as you know, but secretly, 'we stabled the lean horse,' as the saying is—the lean horse, misfortune. He carried us to the verge of ruin, but we hid our troubles well."

Don Q.'s gaze held her; he had stabled that horse himself.

"Then a man, a lover, came to my Lucia. He was ambitious and her fortune meant much to him; but you see it was all gone. The marriage was arranged; then my father could no longer hide the truth." She faltered. "I thought my darling—she was younger than I, senor—would break her heart. Ah, but worse came. They met secretly and she went away. For a long time we did not know where she was. My father died of grief. Then I got a message from a stranger, and I hurried to Paris, but I found her dead, my little Lucia; dead of want and sorrow, with her lover's letters on her heart." She touched the chief's breast.

He took her hand and kissed it with a fine reverence.

"You who never saw her dear face, are sorry for her." The girl's voice had the penetrating thrill of a harpstring. "I would have killed Diego Palomoro with my own hands if I could; but I was helpless until I thought of a way."

A prevision of irremediable evil came upon Don Q. He made her a gesture to continue.

"I had one weapon left. Do you blame me that I used it? I knew a secret I learnt seven years ago in a convent in Castille, where I was brought up, I meant to keep it, O, believe me, I meant to keep it, but—"

"First—how did you learn it?"

"From the mother superior of the convent."

A dreadful change passed over the chief's face.

"Enough! You are lying to me!"

She fell on her knees before him.

"Hear me. I swear—let me tell you how I heard it. It was when she could not hide it. She was ill. I was always her favorite, and when she feared delirium, she directed that I alone should stay with her. In the night she wandered, and I—heard—all."

She hesitated, then rushed on.

"I promised her I would never speak. O, Mother of Heaven, forgive me! Afterward she gave me the signet ring to bury out of sight, for it was to her an occasion of mortal sin. I loved her, senor, she was so sad and beautiful. I could not part with it I kept it for her sake because I loved her."

"Yet you could betray her!"

Dona Anita rocked upon her knees in a passion of sobs. Then suddenly she sprang up, defiant.

"If it were to do again I should do it! A thought came to me that I had one weapon left. You forbade me to whisper that name to these dead walls. What if I have told it to living ears? I was right!" she laughed exultantly. "I went to Diego; I spoke to him of Lucia. He mocked me! Then I told him the secret—your secret."

"Why?"

"Because I knew that by doing so I was securing on my side the fiercest champion in Spain!"

Don Q.'s head fell on his breast. "You might have done the one without the other," he said sadly. "But finish."

"I told him because I knew the man who heard that secret must die. You will kill him?" she cried out. "I boasted to him that it would be his death sentence."

"And he?"

"He swore on the contrary that I had made his fortune," she wailed.

The chief moved alertly. "Good! He will not share his knowledge until he first tries to make use of it with me. When did you see him?"

"To-day. He is at his farm, six leagues away, where he came to look over the herd of bulls he bought from—"

"Yes—yes. Farewell, Dona Anita. I wish you had trusted me before you betrayed me."

She clasped his arm. "Kill me. I deserve it! But for Lucia's sake I would do the same again! Kill me!"

Don Q. gently pushed away the clinging hands.

"I cannot deny that you have deserved punishment," he said, "for you have done more than kill a man; you have perhaps killed a very ancient and noble name. Yet you were mad with your sorrow, and you are but a woman. Farewell, Dona Anita. I go to find this Diego, who has indeed committed frightful crimes—the first, in deceiving and deserting your sister; the second and greater, in learning my name."

The sound of his light footfall had scarcely died away when Dona Anita heard a confusion of voices, a pistol shot and a cry. She started to her feet and hid herself in the dim corner by the chimney, drawing the screen closer.

As Don Q. was stepping from the great gate he stumbled against a rope tied across it. In spite of his fragility, and the fact that he borrowed his strength rather from the spirit than Nine-Tenths Of The Deaths From Consumption Could Have Been Avoided.

Dr. W. A. Evans, an eminent practitioner of Chicago, in a recent address, emphasized the importance of physicians recognizing the symptoms of tuberculosis in its early stages. Dr. Evans says that nine-tenths of the deaths attributed to consumption could have been prevented if the patients' symptoms had been accurately interpreted when first made manifest.

The only safe method is to assume from the very first that consumption really is present in all cases where there is the slightest reason for suspecting its presence, and to prescribe in accordance with that theory.

Coughs and colds, soreness in the chest or difficulty in breathing should have prompt treatment, as the lungs are then in a peculiarly receptive condition for the tubercular germ.

A noted specialist, whose camp for consumptives in the Pine Woods of Maine has attracted great attention, because of the remarkable cures there, advises the use of the following simple formula, which is said to break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable: Take one-half ounce Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), two ounces of Glycerine and eight ounces of good Whisky. Shake well and take in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost, and are easily prepared. The patient should be careful to secure the Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) in the original half-ounce vials, put up expressly for druggists to dispense. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario, plainly printed thereon. It is always well to remember that the object of an imitator is to deceive. There is no known substitute for Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure.)

By the Barrel.

She is an English woman and a new domestic in a boarding house. She was rolling a heavy barrel along the basement hall when one of the boarders passed her.

"What have you there, Annie?"

"The hash barrel, sir."

"The what?"

"The hash barrel."

"Great Scott! I knew we ate a lot of it, but I didn't think she bought it by the barrel."

Highest Kite Ascension.

A string of six kites sent up from the German aeronautical observatory at Lindenberg recently attained an elevation of 21,096 feet, or almost exactly four miles, says The New York Sun. This is the highest elevation yet reached by kiteflying, and it illustrates remarkable progress during the last two or three years in this method of investigating the conditions in the upper air.

Progressive Amir.

The Amir of Afghanistan has engaged an electrical engineer to install electrical machinery in the factories in the new town which he is building thirty miles north of Cabul. The arms and ammunition factories will probably be moved there and manufacturing industries started.

Australia Prosperous Again.

Australia is in the flood tide of prosperity. Her revenue is nearly half a million sterling in excess of the estimate, and for the coming year the various states will receive back from the Commonwealth Government more than £300,000 above the minimum to which they are entitled. The distribution would be larger still but for the very right decision of the Government to establish penny postage at home and with the rest of the Empire. Australian trade is booming. Exports exceed imports by nearly £20,000,000.—London Saturday Review.

A Whistler Retort.

"At Point Aven, in Brittany," said a contemporary painter, "I met Mortimer Menpes, who is chiefly famous for his friendship with Whistler. 'Whistler,' Menpes said, 'was not a conceited man. He was a joker. As jokes, not as serious speeches, most of his remarks were to be taken.' Thus a lady said one day to Whistler, 'Do you think, Mr. Whistler, that genius is hereditary?' 'I can't tell you, madam,' Whistler replied. 'Heaven has granted me no offspring.'"

Red Tape Dispensed With.

Directness and simplicity are found in the Canadian law courts, says The Penny Magazine. A magistrate will not disdain to call out the names of prisoners and administer the oath himself to save time. There is no red tape. Not long ago a Canadian magistrate, after disposing of forty cases in as many minutes, explained to a visitor that he never allowed a point of law to be raised, his court being a court of justice and not of law! "Not long ago," said he, "a young attorney wanted to quote law against me—he wanted to quote Matthews. 'Well,' said I, 'Matthews may be a great authority on law, but I guess he hasn't got as much authority in this court as I have. Your client will go to prison for six months.'"

Electrification of Steam Railways.

It is reported that the Canadian Pacific Co., says The Scientific American, has decided to await the outcome of experiments by the New York Central and New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway Companies before taking steps for the electrification of any part of its system. Both the latter railways are spending enormous sums upon experiments, the former with a direct and the latter with a single-phase alternating current. The line from Montreal to Quebec will in all probability witness the first installation. All the electric power necessary can be obtained from the Shawinigan Falls.

Grand Orange Lodge Of Eastern Ontario.

BUSINESS TRANSACTED YESTERDAY — THE OFFICERS ELECTED — UNION JACK MUST HEAD PARADES IN FUTURE.

Brockville, Ont., March 21. — The Orange Grand Lodge put through a lot of routine work to-day.

The Committee on Correspondence noted that the order had suffered heavily during the year by the removal of members to the Canadian Northwest, but the opinion was general that they were joining lodges there.

The action of the Grand Master on the appointment of Dr. Coughlin to the Belleville Deaf and Dumb Institute, was commended.

A series of by-laws was adopted providing for the establishment of sick and funeral benefits, whereby members so desiring may enjoy the benefits of such a fund within the ranks of the Orange Association.

FLAGS AT HEADS OF PARADES.

Hereafter, a Union Jack must be carried at the head of all public processions held, under the jurisdiction of the Orange Lodge of Ontario East.

A grant of $200 was voted to several Protestant missions in Quebec, to be divided equally.

The Grand Lodge concluded its labors to-night.

A unanimous vote was passed extending to the Orangemen and Protestants of Ireland sincere sympathy in their struggles to resist the attempt that is being made to inflict upon them a system of so-called Home Rule, which was characterized in reality as Rome rule.

THE NEW OFFICERS.

The following officers were elected and installed: Grand Master, J. W. Boyce, Merivale; Deputy Grand Master, James Berney, Kingston; Junior Deputy Grand Master, Lt.-Col. John Hayes, Clarke; Grand Chaplain, Rev. R. H Steacy, Bell's Crossing; Grand Treasurer, Robert Gordon, Tweed; Grand Secretary, F. M. Clarke, Belleville; Deputy Grand Treasurer, Jas. White, Madoc; Grand Director of Ceremonies, F. W. Forde, Ottawa; Grand Auditors, Lt.-Col. J. R. Orr Madoc, and W. Tandon, Melcombe; Deputy Grand Chaplains, Rev. W. G. Swayne, Oxford Mills; Rev. R. R. Neeco, Port Hope; Rev. S. A. Dupreau, Roseneath; Rev. R. H. Leitch, Belleville; Rev. R. J. Robinson, Vars; Rev. A. W. Brace, Peterboro; Rev. J. B. Sincemes, Cornwall; Rev. G. S. White, Napanee; Deputy Grand Secretary, T. C. McConnell Springbrook.

SETTLED COLDS.

DANGEROUS BECAUSE HARD TO CURE.

An Offer to the People of Belleville From Our Well Known Druggist, J. S. McKeown.

Our well known druggist, J. S. McKeown, claims he has a cure for colds and coughs, and if it fails he will refund your money. The remedy is Vinol, and we have heard such wonderful results from it that we advise every person in Belleville who is suffering from a cold or cough to try it on his guarantee.

A hard cold and hacking cough may be the means of undermining your constitution and terminate in consumption. Cough syrups, while they temporarily allay the spasms of coughing, owing to the opiates they contain, upset the stomach and do not cure the cause; old-fashioned cod-liver oil and emulsions are so nauseating that few can take them.

Vinol is delicious to take, and contains all the active curative principles of cod liver oil in a highly concentrated form, and it is, therefore, the greatest specific known, for coughs, colds and bronchial troubles.

You would not eat an egg, shell and all. For the same reason you should not take old-fashioned cod liver oil or emulsions, just to get the medicinal curative elements which they contain.

The Vinol manufacturers separate them for you, throw away the useless oil and give you in a delicious, concentrated form all the healing and life giving elements which are to be found in fresh cods' livers. That is what gives Vinol its wonderful power to cure coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles, and makes it the greatest tonic reconstructor known to medicine. J. S. McKeown, druggist.

THE LAUREATE'S LATEST.

Mr. Alfred Austin, the Poet Laureate, contributes a poem, entitled, "Christmas Bells," to The Manchester Daily Dispatch, from which the following stanzas are taken:

The envious nations and their rulers keep Armed watch upon each other all the while
They prate of friendship, lulling fear to sleep
With treacherous smile.

O finer souls, of penetrating ken,
Poets and preachers, in our hearts instil
Humility afresh, and bring to men
Peace and good-will.

So that our Christmas be no pagan feast,
But we again may grow more like to them,
The reverent kings who journeyed from the East
To Bethlehem.

THE BRITISH SQUARE.

Probably Its Greatest Test and Triumph Are Found In Waterloo.

So many of our great battles have been fought and won with the troops formed into square that the British square has become a famous phrase in the history of war. Such a formation is almost obsolete nowadays, so much have modern rifles and artillery changed the whole face of military tactics. In the days when it was used it was employed mainly in pitched battles where it was a question of resisting the charges of an enemy on an open plain, and presenting a solid front in whatever direction he attacked. In certain circumstances it could still be employed against savages.

It was a British square, for example, that finally broke the power of the Zulus under their King Cetewayo. Our troops learned some lessons in savage warfare from that dusky monarch, especially when the ill-fated 24th regiment were caught unawares by overwhelming hordes of savages at Isandula and practically "wiped out." But when at last a little British army in "square" met the whole of the Zulu forces at Ulundi the war was ended. In yelling myriads the savages charged and charged again, but the square stood firm, and, under a ceaseless and withering fire, the foe at last melted, broke and fled.

Again, in the Soudan the British square proved its mettle although in some cases the frenzied dervishes, absolutely careless of their lives, charged right up to the muzzles of our rifles, and even once broke through the British ranks. The few who did were speedily despatched, but they had done what no civilized troops had ever been able to accomplish—they had "broken a British square."

Probably the greatest test to which the "square" was ever submitted was, when Napolean, finding artillery and rifle fire in vain, sent the flower of his troops—the Cuirassiers and the Cavalry of the Guard—and finally, the famous "Old Guard" itself—against the stubborn British ranks. In the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, is a splendid painting, by Felix Philippoteaux, showing the Cuirassiers charging our own gallant Highlanders in this fashion. In those days the square was composed of three lines; the outer line of soldiers lay prone, behind them the men knelt on one knee and behind these, in turn, stood men on foot, so that their volleys were delivered, so to speak, in three tiers—a triple line of fire—the bayonets, in resisting a charge, striking upwards and forwards. Nowadays, as already mentioned, the "square" is practically an obsolete formation, and may never be seen again—in civilized warfare, at least.

Wireless Electric Light.

Before an audience of some of the best known scientific men of the day, Mr. Valdemar Poulsen the other night at the Queen's Hall, London, demonstrated some of the wonders of his new system of ethereal electricity, to Sir William Preece, the chairman, described it.

Sir William said that the lecturer's discovery sounded the death knell of the old "spark" telegraph, and Mr. Poulsen in his paper explained that his form of electricity was capable of no fewer than a million vibrations per second, thus giving a practically continuous wave of energy. The "spark" form of electricity might be likened to a series of explosions, and the Poulsen system to a continuously vibrating tuning-fork.

Some wonderful demonstrations, illustrating the capabilities of the new electricity, were given. A set of six electric incandescent lamps were lighted "wirelessly" by its energy, a lamp was lit through Mr. Poulsen's body, copper wire was melted in mid-air, but the most beautiful sight of all was the swinging copper wire fixed to the top of an induction coil, which, in the darkened hall, seemed like a waving scimitar of violet flame when the ethereal energy was applied to it.

In addition to its advantages in wireless telegraphy (which include absolutely perfect "tuning" and the impossibility of tapping), the inventor expressed himself confident that it would be found to solve the problem of a wireless telephone.

Wild Beasts of New York City.

As a matter of fact, it is not very generally known that wild trout may be taken and wild game killed within the corporate limits of New York city. Certainly I have found but few that seemed to know that foxes, and not always foxes bred for the purpose, but the genuine wild Reynard, are chased on Staten Island. The city limits are very extended. A good slice is taken off Westchester county at the north, the whole of one end of Long Island at the east, while Staten Island entire is included at the south. There are wooded districts within these boundaries—brushy hills and swampy thickets—some of them well nigh inaccessible. There are fresh water streams and lakes, and there are vast areas of salt water; also there are wide set meadows or marsh lands where the waters of ocean and bay and sound swept long ago and where salt creeks and inlets still make and ebb with the tide. Such haunts as these are ideal, and the creatures that have held them against three centuries of civilization are not to be easily driven away.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Metropolitan.

The Hardest Blow.

An artist who has attained fame and an income was telling some friends of his early struggles. "I had spent eight weeks on the picture," he said, "and had put my very soul into it, and we were penniless. My wife was hungry and in rags, the baby was sickly and I was discouraged. I hawked that picture about town desperately, only to bring it home that night. No one would have it."

"I suppose that was the hardest blow of your life," suggested a sympathetic friend.

"Oh, no, it wasn't, either. I could stand that. I knew I was right. But next day I went out to answer every promising advertisement. The last on the list read, 'Dishwasher wanted.'

"I felt secure of that, so saved it for the last. But when I applied the greasy proprietor of the restaurant looked me over with a critical eye.

"'Ah, yes,' he said, 'and what experience as a dishwasher have you had?'

"Of course I hadn't any, and he would not take me. I've never forgiven him for that awful jolt to my pride."

The Reform Fell Through.

A Great Engineer.

Sir Alexander Kennedy is one of the foremost figures in the engineering world. It was in 1875 that Sir Alexander devised and established the engineering laboratory at University College, which was the first of its kind in this country. He has acted as chief engineer to the Westminster Electric Supply Corporation, Limited, since its formation, and designed the whole system of its various stations. A great number of Scottish and North of England towns owe their system of electric lighting to Sir Alexander's schemes. The South London, electric tramways, and the Waterloo and City Electric Railway are other enterprises for the success of which this distinguished engineer is in the main responsible. But possibly Sir Alexander's greatest claim to public gratitude was his unflinching attitude in the matter of engine and boiler trials at sea. He emphasized the necessity of separating the boiler trials from those of the engine, and although his ideas were received with great opposition, he eventually obtained permission to carry out such trials.

We love to expect, and when expectation is either disappointed or gratified we want to be again expecting.—Johnson.

'Tis Alleged That the Green Eyed Monster Raged In Trenton

INTERESTING CASE TRIED AT THE ASSIZES YESTERDAY — MISS MABEL BONTER SUED MRS RICHARDSON FOR ALLEGED SLANDER.

A case of considerable interest was commenced at the Assizes yesterday afternoon, and concluded to-day. The parties were Bonter vs. Richardson, and they reside in Trenton. The plaintiff in the case, Miss Mabel Bonter, is a prepossessing young lady of 21 years, and the defendant, Mrs. Richardson, a middle-aged lady. The action was brought to recover damage for alleged slander.

From the evidence of Miss Bonter it appears that she was in the employ of the Gilmour door company for some time last year, and Mr. Richardson was one of the foremen of the concern. One day last October a young lady named Miss Fryer was coming to Trenton from some other town to work for the Gilmour company, and Miss Bonter and Mr. Richardson, it appears, went to the station to meet her. Mrs. Richardson appeared at the station at the same time and Miss Bonter says that she was there slandered by the defendant, and accused of intending to elope with Mr. Richardson. Witness said she heard Mrs. Richardson say to her husband, "you never smiled as sweetly on me as you did on her." Mrs. Richardson asked her husband where he was going and when he said "To meet Miss Fryer," she said, "No, you are not; you and Miss Bonter are going away." Mrs. Richardson's loud talk and actions at the station attracted the attention of many who were about the platform. Witness did not work any more that day, as she and Miss Fryer went to witness' home to spend the afternoon. The next day witness was asked by several people about the affair at the station. As witness was going to the office next morning she saw Mrs. Richardson, who ran after her and caught hold of her as she was in front of Dr. Titus' office. Mrs. Richardson said, "What were you doing at the station with my husband? You and him were going to elope." She also said "You little tramp, I would like to hit you with this umbrella." Mrs. Richardson also said there were a lot of tramps like witness running about the streets. Mrs. Richardson also said that she had lived for 25 years with her husband and he had never smiled so sweetly on her as he had on witness at the station. Witness heard from several persons that she and Mr. Richardson were going to elope. Mr. Richardson the same day spoke to witness and said he was sorry for his wife's action. He said she was of a jealous disposition and this caused her to act and talk in the manner she had. Witness was afraid to meet Mrs. Richardson, as she might do her harm. At the post office later Mrs. Richardson and her husband were in there when witness was there and Mrs. Richardson said witness was an old thing and said to her husband, "Why don't the old maid get married and not run after married men?" This was the last time witness had seen Mrs. Richardson.

The defendant denied that she used the words attributed to her, and in the statement of defence it is alleged that the plaintiff told the story to several people, and in this way it became general talk.

Mr. A. A. Abbott for plaintiff, and Mr. Porter, counsel; Mr. T. A. O'Rourke for defendant, and Mr. S. Masson, counsel.

After the evidence for the plaintiff's case had been submitted, Mr. Masson asked for a non-suit, and after commenting upon the evidence, His Lordship dismissed the action with costs to plaintiff.

AFTERMATH OF DYNAMITE EXPLOSION AT POINT ANN.

Bowler vs. Belleville Cement Company. — An action for damages for loss of son. The plaintiff in the case, Mr. Geo. Bowler, seeks to recover from defendants $2,000 for compensation for loss of his son. On October 20th of last year, George Bowler, a young man, and Wm. Rion, two employees of the Cement company, were killed at the works at Point Ann by a dynamite explosion. It is alleged that the company are responsible for Bowler's death, through negligence. The action is brought by the father. The company contend that it was an accident and they were not liable. The case was called last evening and was continued to-day. Mr. Porter for plaintiff and Mr. O'Flynn for the defendants.

The meeting adjourned for two weeks, when Director Hunt commences a ten weeks' course of instruction.

Anthracite Coal Found Near Kingston

CLAIM MADE BY MR. ROMAINE MOSIER, OF WOLFE ISLAND.

Toronto, March 22. — Mr. Romaine Mosier, of Wolfe Island, was at the Parliament buildings yesterday and had with him a considerable sized chunk of anthracite coal which, he says, came from a big vein running under the St. Lawrence River in the vicinity of Kingston. Mr. Mosier, who has travelled extensively over the country in search of minerals, uses a divining rod for that purpose. He uses chemical processes for the ends of his wands, by which it is claimed that he is able to locate various minerals and gases.

Municipal Grants To Public Schools

A CORRESPONDENT SENDS US SOME ILLUMINATING FIGURES.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Mr. Editor,—In view of the fact that our Council will be called upon for an extra grant of, possibly, $5000 for furnishings and equipment for our Public Schools, the figures mentioned below may give our citizens an idea as to what other municipalities in the province are doing towards providing their children with education. In looking over our own auditors' report it is apparent that we have not spent any money on appliances such as are recommended by the Provincial Educational Department as necessary for the equipment of a first-class school. No doubt the citizens will be glad to have the Council make the necessary appropriation to put the schools in first-class shape:

City.	Number Pupils Attending School.	Municipal Grants.	Teachers' Salaries.
Belleville	1341	$12,101.74	$9,203.62
Chatham	1572	27,247.74	14,205.20
Berlin	1616	21,932.01	15,553.93
Port Arthur	820	13,278.24	7,159.62
Galt	1299	20,000.00	11,740.11
Peterboro	2385	24,000.00	18,515.88
Kingston	[illegible]	28,080.00	21,190.38
St. Catharines	1410	15,873.00	10,520.40
Stratford	1554	18,500.00	14,558.00
Guelph	1608	24,940.00	10,664.03

The above is statement from 1906 report.

Yours truly,
F. S. DEACON.

STOP CHINESE LABOR

"Asiatic Ordinance" to Be Introduced in the Transvaal.

New Government Makes Strong Pronouncement — Will Exclude All Asiatics—Employment of Chinese to Cease as Soon as Possible—Britain Must Sanction It—Aliens Will Be Repatriated.

Pretoria, Transvaal, March 22.—The first Parliament of the Transvaal colony, under the newly-granted constitution, met here yesterday morning in the hall in which the late President Kruger presided for so many years over sittings of the Upper Volksraad of the South African Republic.

In a speech at the opening of the Legislature, the Earl of Selbourne, High Commissioner for South Africa, said:

"My Ministers have resolved that the employment of Chinese in the mines shall cease at the earliest possible moment. As to the Chinese already employed there, my Ministers will not take any steps to prevent their repatriation at the end of their indentures, unless they are convinced that such repatriation will have to take place before an effective substitute, either in the form of other unskilled labor or improved mechanical appliances, has been found."

The disposition of the new Government of the Transvaal to exclude all Asiatics from work in the mines is shown by the fact that the "Asiatic ordinance," recently disallowed by the Earl of Elgin, Secretary of State for the Colonies after it had passed the late Legislature, is again published in The Official Gazette here, indicating that among the first acts of the new Parliament will be a re-enactment of this measure, in spite of the opposition of the Imperial Government.

Dare Not Disallow It.

London, March 22.—The "Asiatic ordinance" which the Transvaal Parliament proposes to re-enact, although at the present time aimed specially at British Indians, who are ousting the small white traders in the Transvaal, is equally intended to exclude the Japanese or other Asiatics who are immigrating to South Africa in increasing numbers.

Sir Gilbert Parker, who represents colonists in the House of Commons on this question, is quoted yesterday in an interview as saying:

"If, as I am sure it will, the Transvaal Parliament re-enacts the Asiatic ordinance, the Imperial Government will hardly venture to disallow it again, as over 99 per cent. of the whites in South Africa thoroughly approve of it."

A.O.U.W. OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Fewer Changes Made In Constitution Than For 20 Years.

Toronto, March 22.—All the principal officers of the Grand Lodge of the A.O.U.W. were re-elected yesterday, and Toronto was again named for the next place of meeting. The officers:

Past grand master, Ald. J. M. Peregrine, Hamilton; grand master workman, C. E. Cameron, Iroquois; grand foreman, S. D. Morris, banker, Rodney; grand overseer, Major J. J. Craig, M. P. P., Fergus; grand recorder, M. D. Carder, P.G.M.W. for the 29th year, Toronto; grand treasurer, F. G. Inwood, P.G.M.W., Toronto; grand solicitor, A. F. G. Lawrence, Toronto; grand medical examiner, J. Milton Cotton, M.D., Toronto; grand guide, W. Charles Mikel, barrister, Belleville; grand inside watchman, W. W. Burgess, Mimico.

Fewer changes were made in the constitution than in any year for two decades, as general satisfaction exists.

SUICIDES TO ESCAPE WOMAN.

Englishman Hears His Brother's Wife Is Coming to Him.

Montreal, March 22.—Jack Freebody, a well connected Englishman, committed suicide yesterday because the girl who had jilted him in England and married his elder brother had changed her mind and was on her way to Canada to seek him.

He killed himself in the boarding house of H. Waugh, 167 St. Antoine street. He was about 25 years of age, and had been employed by the C.P.R.

Mr. Waugh went to No. 6 police court and informed Capt. Bourgeois that a man had just cut his throat. Capt. Bourgeois went back with Mr. Waugh and found Freebody dead on the floor of one of the bedrooms. At the left side was a knife and a razor.

In the pockets were $24.23, a gold watch and ring, and in his grip were letters from his mother and sister in England.

EXPLOSION IN A SCHOOL.

Plumber Took Lighted Match Too Near a Leaky Gas Pipe.

Chatham, March 22.—A plumber with a lighted match and big leak in the gas pipe at the Collegiate Institute were the cause of a terrific explosion here yesterday that shook the whole school and tore up gas pipes all over one room. The plumber was severely burned about the head and hands, and had a narrow escape from being burned to death. There was a panic in the school, but this was soon allayed.

The school house at Charing Cross, near here, a frame building erected 25 years ago, was burned to the ground last night. Loss $3,800.

Perished In the Storm.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., March 22.—This morning Oliver Mason, a prominent farmer and horse-dealer, aged fifty-two, of Hopetown, near Charlottetown, was found dead in a field near his home. He perished in last night's storm. He left Charlottetown in the evening, and after crossing Hillsboro River it is presumed his horse ran away. This morning the animal was found near Hillsboro Bridge.

BRITISH WON FIGHT.

But Natives Put Up a Hard Battle Losing 300 Men.

London, March 22.—News has arrived of a fight in December between a British force and a robber band of Tibuks, west of Lake Tchad, Africa.

The British besieged a fort, which was captured with difficulty and with the loss of 11 killed and 42 wounded. Among the latter were two officers. Most of the casualties were caused by arrows.

The Tibuks lost 300 killed and wounded.

BIG BLAZE IN MONTREAL.

Firms on Notre Dame Street Lose $100,000—Fireman Injured.

Montreal, March 22.—Fire which caused $100,000 damage broke out in Notre Dame street at five o'clock yesterday morning. The firms interested are the Canada Tag and Label Co., D. Morrice, Sons & Co., wholesale woollens and cottons, and the Hudson Bay Knitting Co.

Joseph Bernuer, a fireman, fell 70 feet, from the top floor to the cellar, the man escaping with but a few scratches.

The loss to the Canada Tag and Label Co. will amount to $50,000; to the Hudson Bay Knitting Co., $30,000; to D. Morrice, Sons & Co., $10,000, and to the buildings, $15,000.

British Steamer Beached.

Hakedate, Japan, March 22.—The British steamer Farnley, from Tacoma, Feb. 10, for Taku, has been beached near here after having sustained extensive damage. It is supposed that she struck a floating mine in the Strait of Tsugaru. Divers are examining the vessel which must discharge her cargo before proceeding.

Famine Riot Menaces China.

London, March 22.—A special despatch from Shanghai says Viceroy Tuanfang of Nanking predicts a general uprising in the famine stricken districts unless prompt relief is provided. The viceroy, it is added, has memorialized the throne for $1,000,000 to purchase rice in Siam and Annan.

A Voice From The Stomach.

A BLOODLESS FIGHT BETWEEN A TABLET AND A HABIT—THE TABLET WINS.

At the age of 22 Clarence had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn apple-skins into good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be profuse about the waist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds appetite—and every good thing is abused.

His pictures showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on.

At the age of 26 Clarence married and went to boarding. On top of all this, he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16 1-2 to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarence began to hear an inward voice—a warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a heavy thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit down at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat.

He would often feel a gnawing unsatisfied "still hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And he suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-of-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c box at a drug store, and took the whole box. When he started he had little faith—and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith — and more appetite, and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensations, heartburn, nausea, eructations, bad memory, or loss of vim and vigor.

Remember, one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarence.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how lusciously good everything will taste to you.

Heed the call of the stomach now! There's a world of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—at any drug store, 50c.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 81 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

NEW JOINT STOCK BILL

Reported in Legislature and Now Ready For Final Stage.

Succession Dues Exemptions—Bequests to Charitable and Educational Institutions Not Dutiable—Will Consolidate Dairy Schools—Liability For Misstatements in a Company Prospectus.

Toronto, March 22.—Hon. Mr. Hanna's bill respecting joint stock and other companies was reported in the Legislature last night, and is now ready for its third reading.

Succession Dues Exemptions.

In committee of the whole Hon. Mr. Matheson carried two amendments to the bill to consolidate the Succession Duties Act. Bequests to charitable and educational institutions are not now dutiable, and the exemption will be extended to subscriptions for such purposes remaining unpaid at the subscriber's death and paid out of his estate.

It was also decided to make the bill exempt from duty insurances not exceeding $5,000 written in favor of preferred beneficiaries. This will facilitate the payment of fraternal and other insurances, and convenience persons of small means. Preferred beneficiaries include husbands, wives, parents, children, sons and daughters-in-law and lineal descendants.

Bills Sent For Burial.

Bills to amend the High School Act, introduced by Mr. Clapp and Mr. McGarry, were relegated to the burial yard of the legal committee.

Mr. Craig's bill to amend the same act got a second reading.

Second readings were given Mr. Craig's and Mr. Macdiarmid's bills to amend the Municipal Act.

Third readings were given the bills respecting the Village of Port Perry, the Village of South River and the Town of Kincardine.

The Government bill to amend the Surveys Act passed committee.

Hon. Dr. Reaume's bill respecting colonization roads got its second reading.

Consolidate Dairy Schools.

In reply to Duncan Ross as to the intentions of the Government in regard o the Western Dairy School at Strathroy, Hon. Nelson Monteith stated it was the intention of the Government to consolidate the two dairy schools in the western part of the Province, and after this year to carry on all instruction work at the Central Dairy School at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Nothing had yet been decided upon as to the disposal or future use of the building at Strathroy.

Joint Stock Companies.

Consideration of the Joint Stock Companies Act was again proceeded with in committee of the whole.

Liability of a promoter for misstatements issued in a prospectus was discussed and led to an amendment which exonerates him when the promoter is acting solely in a professional capacity and without personal share in the company. His status would be similar to that of a lawyer pleading a cause.

Hugh Clark enquired what was in the bill to prevent the evil of overcapitalization. It caused more trouble than anything else in company methods. He suggested that the number of shares in a company should be limited, their value varying with the amount of the company's capital.

Province Responsible.

Everything that could be thought of in the way of precaution, said Mr. Hanna, had been done in connection with companies operating municipal franchises. The province was responsible and had the power in such cases, whereas the Dominion had joint jurisdiction in the case of mining and manufacturing corporations. To impose too strict terms upon these companies would drive them to Ottawa, and, incidentally, deprive the province of revenue.

Hon. Mr. Graham also favored limiting the number of shares. Regardless of the Dominion, the Province should declare itself against overcapitalization. Other Parliaments would be compelled to follow the lead. Closer scrutiny might be exercised over applications for increase of capital.

All the conditions in applications made could not be considered, thought Hugh Clark.

Mr. McDougal thought that shares should not be sold below par. People getting $1 shares for 15 cents thought they were getting a dollar's worth, which of course they were not. The capital should be so limited that the shares could not be sold under par. Watering of stock was accomplished by issuing shares at a discount and then endeavoring to pay dividends on the par value. A New Jersey company coming into Ontario should not be permitted any powers not belonging to an Ontario company, he thought, replying to J. P. Downey.

Public Takes the Chance.

Dr. Lewis did not think the public could be protected. Mining stock sold at ten cents to poor men often became very valuable in the following year. Another mine where the vein petered out might not be worth ten cents after selling at a premium.

Part twelve of the act, dealing with companies operating municipal franchises and public utilities, which is very largely new, was stated by Hon. Mr. Hanna to differ from the first draft of the bill. Sir William R. Meredith and Mr. Justice Anglin had given special attention to the clauses and unless particular reason could be shown, he would be very slow to change it. Mr. Hanna mentioned this in replying to Mr. McDougal, who objected to what he considered might be the possible operation of section 157, which reads:

"The Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may direct the issue of letters patent in terms and conditions different from those applied for."

How's your Roof?

Is it Lightning-proof, Fire-proof, Water-proof?

If not, you should learn all about our "Safe Lock" Galvanized Steel Shingles. They are proof against every element. The lock, on all four sides, makes it impossible for rain or snow to back up under the shingles and rust the nail holes and raw edges. This feature has been imitated, but is found in its perfection only in

Our "Safe Lock" Shingles.

Don't use wood shingles. Nowadays, they are expensive and very inferior. They catch deposits of dust and dirt, which soon rot the shingles. Then the roof begins to leak. Patch all you like, you can't keep ahead of the leaks. There's no economy in a wooden roof.

Users everywhere are delighted with "Safe Lock" Shingles. Talk to them about the roofing question. We'll send you names of users in your own vicinity, if you drop us a card.

Slayer Of Famous London Merchant To Hang.

Rayner, the Man Who Shot William Whiteley, Sentenced--Was Not His Son--Tried, Convicted and Doomed in a Few Hours--Counsel Sets Up Insanity Plea, But Judge Waves It Aside.

London, March 23.—Horace George Rayner was arraigned in the Central Criminal Court yesterday, charged with the wilful murder of William Whiteley, the dry goods merchant, of Westbourne Grove, on January 24th. The general interest taken in the case was evidenced by the crowded court room, many women being among those present. In his opening statement, counsel for the prosecution, whose assertions were subsequently corroborated on the witness stand by Louisa Turner, who lived under Mr. Whiteley's protection, disposed of the fiction that Rayner was an illegitimate son of the man he killed.

The rest of the evidence presented in behalf of the prosecution was merely a repetition of the Police Court testimony regarding the murder.

George Elliott, counsel for Rayner, in his opening speech for the defence, said it was not part of his case to prove that the prisoner was a son of the late Mr. Whiteley. Rayner, rightly or wrongly, believed he was his son and counsel was going to show that Rayner was insane, in the legal sense that he was a degenerate, whose mind was tainted, defective and weakened by the over-indulgence of two generations of his family in drink.

The jury, after being absent nine minutes, returned a verdict of wilful murder, and Rayner was sentenced to death.

OCEAN CLAIMS TOLL.

54 Ships and 199 Lives Lost During the Winter.

Boston, Mass., March 23.—A total of 199 lives and 54 ships have been sacrificed to the storms and treacherous coasts of New England and the Maritime Provinces for the winter just ended, according to the statistics compiled by the Associated Press yesterday. Of the vessels, no account has been taken of the dozens that have been driven ashore, but later refloated, and the figures do not include the loss in Connecticut waters. The long list of dead is swollen out of all proportion to those of many previous years by the sinking of the steamer Larchmont in Block Island Sound the night of Feb. 11, with an estimated loss of 150 lives. This was the one great disaster of the year in these waters, the largest loss of life in any other single wreck occurring in the foundering this month of the Newfoundland schooner Harry Louis, with her entire crew of eight men.

As usual, the Nova Scotia coast has proved the most disastrous to shipping this year, claiming 16 vessels, but Newfoundland was not far behind with 14 craft. The American coastwise fleet was the heaviest loser, with 35 ships and 175 lives, while the British loss was 18 ships and 24 lives.

A TERRIFIC INDICTMENT.

Chicago Labor and Bridge Whist Parties.

Vancouver, March 23.—Claiming that investigation into the labor market shows the supply of labor in the Province equal to the demand; that society women who want the Chinese poll tax reduced want it so that they may have more time to enjoy bridge whist parties, pink teas and other unproductive frivolities; that the importation of cheap workmen is designed to cheapen labor and save employers from the necessity of raising wages to a figure in keeping with the advanced cost of living, that the Provincial Government is controlled by employers, and that the importation of cheap labor will cause industrial troubles and an exodus of Canadian workmen, the Trades and Labor Council passed a series of resolutions condemning the Provincial Government's immigration policy. Copies were sent to Premier Laurier and the Premier of each Province.

BERESFORD NOT SULKING.

Denies Report That He Will Run For Parliament.

Chicago, March 23.—While passing through this city Lord Charles Beresford was shown a cable despatch, dated Feb. 13, which said he was in a huff, declined to rule the Channel Fleet, and might run for Parliament.

In comment, the Admiral said he did believe ships for reserve service should not be withdrawn, and felt that the Home Squadron should be under his command as Admiral of the Navy.

"As for running for Parliament," he concluded, "that is beyond my intention. It sounds too much like sulking and a sea dog like myself will not sulk."

Wireless 'Phone Works.

Berlin, March 23.—Count Arco, in his wireless experiments, has succeeded in obtaining distinct exchanges of words in a tolerably natural voice at a distance of two miles, by using poles 30 feet high.

Rear-Admiral Manney, who was a delegate of the United States to the international congress on wireless telegraphy at Berlin, and Lt.-Commander Howard, U. S. N., the American naval attache here, have been present at a series of private exhibitions of the wireless telephone apparatus and have been able to talk with each other at somewhat less than three miles.

PEASANTS DRIVE OUT JEWS.

400 Homes Devastated and More Than 100 Shot By Troops.

Vienna, March 23.—The seriousness of the situation in northern Moldavia, growing out of the agrarian disorders, has not been exaggerated, according to the latest telegraphic reports reaching here from Czernowitz, on the border.

From the estimates of the damages made last night, it appears that 400 farms in Moldavia have been devastated, 8,000 fugitives have fled over the Russian frontier into Austria, and a total of 10,000 Jews left homeless.

The number of dead and wounded cannot be given accurately, but the reports of yesterday give a total of about 85 men killed and 150 wounded.

The outbreak seemed to have been partially suppressed yesterday. The Roumanian Government is still sending troops into the afflicted district. Practically the entire Province of Moldavia has been involved.

Revolt Against Trust.

The movement is really more agrarian than anti-semitic. The peasants are in revolt against the great farming trust, which has leased half the cultivable land in Moldavia. The absentee landlords who control the trust are Jews, which fact brings the ire of the peasants down upon any and all Jews that they meet, and to this antipathy is added strong racial feeling.

On Thursday 500 peasants tried to invade Michailoni. Despite the fact that there were sufficient Roumanian troops there to stop the rioters, the peasants at first got the upper hand, because the soldiers, acting upon the orders of the prefect of the town, were not permitted to open fire.

In the face of the menaces of the furious peasants, however, some of the soldiers did fire, killing 15 of the rioters and wounding 45, whereupon the peasants withdrew.

Town Set On Fire.

A more successful attack was made at Vaslui, south of Jassy. Two thousand peasants forced their way into the town. The prefect of Vaslui did not have sufficient troops to stop the onward march of the infuriated countrymen. He stood by a helpless witness while the rioters plundered practically all the buildings on the three principal streets of Vaslui, and then set them on fire, which completed the work of destruction.

The prefect appealed for reinforcements, and the peasants, in ignorance of this step, remained in the town until the soldiers arrived. Then ensued a serious fight up and down the burned streets. The soldiers were victorious, but 20 rioters were killed and many wounded.

The entire Roman district was up in arms. The authorities were powerless and the peasants pillaged, burned and devastated everywhere. All the buildings in the villages of Halancesti, Herlesti, Holeisteni and Ninolusen were demolished.

MAXIM'S LATEST DEVICE.

New Safety Detonating Fuse Invented After Ten Years' Experimenting.

New York, March 23.—Hudson Maxim, inventor of high explosives, made the dinner tendered by the Canadian Club last night to Sir Percy Sanderson, the retiring British consul-general at this port, the occasion of the first announcement about a new safety detonating fuse which he has invented after ten years' of experimenting.

He declared such a device has been the aim of inventors for years. By means of it, he said, it is at last possible to send an armor-piercing shell through armor and cause it to explode at exactly the distance behind the armor desired by the gunner. It will not matter whether the armor is one-inch or 12 inches in thickness, the inventor asserted.

FAST TRAIN DERAILED.

No One Injured—Track Was Tampered With.

Pittsburg, March 23.—Train No. 23, the Chicago Limited from New York for Chicago, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, while going about thirty-five miles an hour, was wrecked early yesterday at Stewart, Pa., about seventeen miles east of here. The engine and the first five cars were derailed, but not one was hurt, and the passengers were transferred to the three rear cars and bought to this city where another train was made up and they continued their journey. It is said that evidence leading the officials to believe that the track had been tampered with was found at the scene of the wreck.

Found Dead From Gas.

Toronto, March 23.—John Mackenzie, aged 26 years, was found dead from gas on the floor of his bedroom by his wife yesterday morning. Mackenzie came home in an intoxicated condition and his wife, fearing his violent temper, took her two children to her sister, in Weston, where she spent the night. She returned to her home in the morning. In order to get in she was compelled to crawl through a window. The house was full of gas, and investigation revealed Mackenzie lying face downwards in a corner. He had evidently risen from bed to turn off the gas, and had lost his balance, dragging the fixture down with him.

Mr. Hugh Walker, at the Board of Education meeting last night, took occasion to refer to some remarks which appeared in this great family journal, in which a local teacher was quoted as saying "What riles me is that the teachers of this city have for years been asking for the very things Inspector Morgan recommends, and the Board would not listen to them. Now they jump at his suggestion." What there is in the above for Mr. Walker to wax so virtuously indignant over we fail to see. It is significant to note, however, that while he scolded the teacher for talking, he did not deny the truth of what he said.

In our humble opinion, without pretending to be such an authority on ethics as Mr. Walker, the school teachers of this city have a perfect right to make known the fact that, for years, they have been dissatisfied with the school equipment. What more natural than that people should say, when they read Inspector Morgan's condemnation of conditions, 'What kind of teachers have they in Belleville, who did not protest against a state of things like that?"

• • •

It will be noted that two members of the Board agreed with the teacher quoted in The Intelligencer, but, in justice to the Board as a whole, we will quote a few remarks made by the Chairman, Mr. Geo. Bennett, this morning. "I do not deny," he said, "that supplies have been needed, but I do deny that any teacher has appeared before the Board and asked for anything without receiving it. The trouble in the past has been that the Board has authorized—nay, instructed—some of its members to purchase necessary supplies, and they have in their wisdom, failed to do so. But the Board as a whole is not to blame for that."

Jos. Phillips, of York Loan Fame, On Trial

BEGAN IN TORONTO THIS MORNING AT 11 O'CLOCK — WHAT HE IS CHARGED WITH.

Toronto, March 23. — The case of Joseph Phillips, of York Loan fame, began this morning at 11 o'clock, in the Criminal Sessions, before Judge Winchester. Phillips has to stand trial on two charges: one of theft and the other of conspiracy to defraud.

The indictment for conspiracy reads as follows:

"That Joseph Phillips in the years 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905, did conspire combine, confederate, and agree with Lillian Hudson, Georgiana Hudson, Eleazer John Burt, and Geo. Robert Burt, and with others whose names are unknown, by deceit and falsehood, to defraud the shareholders of the York Loan and Savings Company, and did thereby commit an indictable offence contrary to the provisions of the criminal code."

On this charge the Grand Jury brought in a true bill on October 5th, 1905, and on the 31st of the same month Phillips pleaded not guilty. The case came up for trial at the December sessions and was traversed.

The charge of theft is "that Joseph Phillips, on or about the 30th day of December, in the year 1904, unlawfully did steal the sum of $2,500 of the moneys of the York County Loan and Savings Company."

On this charge, also, the Grand Jury returned a true bill on October 2, 1906. Phillips pleaded not guilty on the following day, and the case was traversed from the December to the present sessions.

It is not expected that the case will take up very much time in the hearing.

FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm. H. Wrightmyer will take place from the residence of Mr. Arthur Wrightmyer, Octavia street, to-morrow (Sunday) morning, 24th inst., at 10 o'clock. Services at the house at 9.30 a.m. Interment at Deseronto.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jas. Brennan will take place from the residence of Mrs. Gunyon, Pine St., thence to St. Michael's Church, at 8 o'clock Monday morning. Interment in St. James' cemetery.

Changes In Picton Jail.

A Picton despatch says it is understood that William Patterson, county jailer, and Turnkey S. E. Harris were to-day notified by Sheriff Gibson to resign their positions by April 1st. Mr. Patterson has held the office for thirty years. It is said that Abraham Huycke, chief county constable, will be the new jailer and Andrew Gibson turnkey.

Leg Injured.

A man named Traverton, who was assisting in moving a house up Victoria avenue, yesterday had the misfortune to suffer an injury to his right leg. It appears that a chain broke and one of the broken ends struck Traverton on the leg, cutting it quite severely. He was taken to the hospital, where the injury was attended to.

A Queer Story.

Winnipeg, March 22. — Archbishop Serafin, the head of the Russian Orthodox Church in Canada, who last year excommunicated nine of his priests for banding themselves together in unauthorized consistory and being in the pay of the Presbyterian church, has this week excommunicated twelve more for the same offence. The Archbishop is taking strenuous action to offset the propaganda of the Presbyterian church, which, through its missionaries, has been making great headway among his people.

The gates of heaven come a little nearer every time a man stoops to sympathize with a child.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

SINCLAIR'S The Topic of the Day SINCLAIR'S

THERE is certainly good reason why people talk so much about our vast assortment of Dress Goods. We could not exaggerate the importance of our Dress Goods Department, the stocks or variety, We cannot say too much in their favor.

Three words that truly emphasize it are: "Best in Town." Without doubt we have the largest Dress Goods department in Central Ontario and in order to accommodate this big stock of dress fabrics we had recently to rearrange our store,

The dress goods department now occupies the entire south side of our store. Every part of this new dress goods section is overflowing with brightness.

The widest range of dress goods now awaits you at Sinclair's,

CRUMS ENGLISH PRINTS.

We have just received 250 pieces of Crums Celebrated English Prints, the kind your grandmothers used to buy. Nearly every store will tell you they sell Crums Prints, but this is not so. The genuine Crums Prints are stamped on the outside of each piece.

We pay half a cent a yard more for Crums Print than we would have to pay for the next best cloth.

We sell you Crums prints at the same price you pay for inferior goods. The better sort at—

That "Scientific" Tariff.

Nearly three months ago the Canadian people were cordially requested to raise their voices in glorification of the Minister of Finance and his newly-introduced "scientific" tariff. It seems after a lapse of ninety days or so that the tariff is so highly scientific and complicated as to baffle the understanding of Hon. W. S. Fielding and doubtless the three other eminent statesmen who paraded up and down the country, sleeping in their seats, securing data and handing out to Grit newspaper reporters ready-made interviews with a lavish hand. No, the tariff seems to be far from being a finality. The Minister of Finance has cogitated for three calendar months and has decided that in respect of no less than a hundred and twenty items he was all wrong. So he arises in Parliament and requests the House to shove duties up here, pull them down there, wipe them out utterly elsewhere and add a bounty to them in another place. This is high finance; this is scientific tariff making by a gentleman, who, we are told, possesses the ability of Thiers, Gladstone, Pitt, Peel and John D. Rockefeller all rolled into one.

The cold truth, as the Winnipeg Telegram points out, is that what W. S. Fielding and his compeers most earnestly desire is an adjustable tariff, which they can swing around, remodel, dilate and diminish just as they please. And their very human endeavor is to be allowed to do this without let or hindrance or criticisms from the Parliament of Canada. In a word they want to manage the tariff by Star chamber methods; they want to be able to shove on taxes—when it pays them—and to take them off—also when it pays them—exactly as was the fashion in the good old days of Thomas Cromwell and Wolsey. The latter financiers, it must be allowed, were responsible to the King. The Laurier-Fielding clique desire to be responsible only to themselves. Thus, by means of their "intermediate" tariff stratagem they can make a ten per cent. cut in the ordinary tariff, and a twenty-five per cent. inroad on the British preference whenever, to suit their own or their party's need, they choose so to do. All that is necessary, should a manufacturer become restive, is for the Cabinet to announce that it will make a reciprocal arrangement with one of half a dozen countries producing goods like those made by the Canadian. That is all that is needed; Parliament, under this beautiful Fielding fiscal system, need not be told a word about the change. The manufacturer will wake up some morning and find his business destroyed—that's all.

Of course, another part of the Fielding scheme is to be able to coerce Canadian manufacturers by threats of setting the big American dog on them. Campaign funds are going to be required more and more at Ottawa and no matter how profitably boodling operations can be carried on by means of Arctic steals and deals by which the Government buys lands at an enormous price—a percentage to be returned to the party funds—there will be a call from Ottawa for more and more. The intermediate tariff is to be used as a means to get money, not alone from the manufacturers, but from farmers and gardeners and miners and smelters.

Grand Master Halliwell.

(Brockville Times.)

Lt.-Col. J. Earl Halliwell, who is completing his second year as Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, an office he has filled with dignity and honor, is a barrister by profession and one of the leading men of the Ontario bar, enjoying a lucrative practice at his home town in Stirling. He has long been identified with the Orange Order of this jurisdiction and no man is better or more favorably known to the rank and file, in addition to being Grand Master of the Orange Lodge he has just finished his second term as Grand Master of the Black Chapter.

Col. Halliwell has had a long and distinguished career in military circles. He entered the ranks of the 15th Battalion, Belleville, a young man and when he was placed on the reserve list last November he had completed twenty-six years' service, advancing from the lowest ranks to that of commanding officer. He is a veteran of the Northwest rebellion of 1885. He had command of a company in the Midland Battalion, which led the eventful charge on the Riel forces at Batoche. For four days he was exposed to the fire of the enemy and during the last twenty minutes of the engagement which ended the rebellion he was shot through the left breast, the ball penetrating and shattering the shoulder blade.

This has not been his only trying experience. Seven years ago he was run over by a railway train and given up for dead. He was terribly cut and bruised from head to foot, one foot being crushed to a pulp. From the shock of this accident he never fully recovered. Now he is nursing a broken leg sustained by a fall on an icy sidewalk.

Col Halliwell is a prominent member of the Church of England. His father was a clergyman who was rector of Lyn when Col. Halliwell was a small boy. He was educated for the ministry himself but after taking an arts and divinity course

QUARTER CENTURY SUCCESSFUL RECORD

A WONDERFUL REMEDY DOING A WONDERFUL WORK.

Money can buy advertising space, but it can't buy twenty-five years' successful record in curing the most difficult and intricate diseases—many of them pronounced incurable by the ablest doctors. This is the remarkable record of Psychine. It has probably accomplished more really marvellous cures than any medicine placed before the public. It quickly and permanently cures all forms of coughs, colds, catarrh, pleurisy, pneumonia, night sweats, emaciation and consumption. It is certain and reliable in its action, aiding digestion, strengthening the stomach, building up the entire system. Try it and be convinced.

"Years ago I was suffering with lung troubles. Friends and neighbors thought I would never get better. I began to despair myself. Losing faith in my physician, I procured another one, who recommended the use of PSYCHINE.

"It was surprising beyond description the effect it had. I seemed to gain with every dose. Inside of two weeks I was able to attend to my housework again.

"There are no symptoms of consumption about me now.

"MRS. HENDERSON, South Musquash, N.B."

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is for sale at all druggists at 50c and $1.00 per bottle, or at Dr. Slocum's Laboratory, 179 King street west, Toronto.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Weather permitting, the Park Nine and Marsh & Henthorn baseball teams will play a match on Good Friday.

Acting Trustee Foran has made an important decision in regard to the Kenora-Wanderer match at Winnipeg If Kenora play Westwick and Smith, and the Wanderers play against them, he will demand that the Stanley Cup be returned to Ottawa, to await a decision by the trustees as to its disposal.

Stratford's champion hockeyists are to be well treated by the citizens of that town. The players on the senior team will be presented with diamond rings, and the Juniors with gold watches, which, with the senior and junior O.H.A. sets of medals and the J. Ross Robertson and the Cosby Cups, ought to make a pretty good evening for jewellery. About $400 has been collected to date for the purpose.

The Midland Baseball League will meet for organization on Good Friday. Why not enter a team from Belleville this year?

The Stanley Cup games are to be played at the Arena Rink, Winnipeg, to-night, and Monday night. The majority of goals scored in the two games will decide the winner.

St. John, from which port they sail on April 5 for England, on board the Empress of Britain. They will arrive on April 12 and expect to set sail for Canada again on May 17, landing a week later.

OCEAN WAVES.

The Height and the Length of the Deep Water Mountains.

How long and how high are the great waves of the ocean? The longest wave in the records of M. Bertin, a well known naval architect who has been making a careful investigation of the matter, measured 2,590 feet from crest to crest, and its "period" was twenty-three seconds. The long waves, however, are not unusually high, and in deep water the height of a wave of 2,590 feet in length would be not more than one-fiftieth of its length, or about fifty feet. Observers, particularly those who were situated on small vessels, claim to have seen waves much higher than this, but their observations are not of much value for the reason that the deck of such a vessel floats parallel to the surface of the waves instead of parallel to the plane of the horizon, and the inclination of the deck will thus give the observers an exaggerated impression of the height of an oncoming wave. Records taken where this source of error was carefully eliminated show the highest waves in open water to have measured fifty feet from trough to crest, although M. Bertin is of the opinion that in the southern seas waves of even greater height than this may occasionally be met.

As the waves enter shoal water their "period" decreases and they become higher, so that on striking a shoal a forty foot wave will climb to a height of fifty feet or more. Should it meet an obstacle that approaches the vertical it may easily be thrown up to a height of 100 feet or more, as at the celebrated Eddystone light off Plymouth, England, where solid green water has at times been known to reach a height of 100 feet.

Although the period of the longest wave may occasionally reach twenty-three seconds and its length 2,590 feet, such waves are exceedingly rare, the common length of a long wave being something over 500 feet and the period ten seconds. The average period is from six to eight seconds and the length from 160 to 320 feet. It is rarely that the height exceeds thirty-three feet.—Chicago News.

Doctors and Medicines.

According to a Philadelphia druggist, trade in his line is now undergoing some radical changes. "Doctors used to give their patients prescriptions for everything," he says, "and of course the druggist filled them. Nowadays, however, most doctors keep a considerable quantity of remedies in their office and give them to the patient direct. These remedies, mostly in the form of pills and powders, are of course all right in themselves, but the practice is knocking the prescription business hard. Doctors still give some prescriptions, however, and so we have to maintain a prescription department as of old, but it is getting to be a smaller and smaller part of the business. Many of the remedies given out by the doctors in this way are proprietary medicines, but as long as the patient doesn't learn the name of them he has to go back to the doctor for a fresh supply."

A Patriot With an Appetite.

A report recently reached Tokyo that in a village of the province of Echigo there was an old man who lived on worms picked up from the ground. The rumor reached the ears of the authorities, and a police officer was sent to the village where the strange gormand lives to investigate. He found that the rumor was true and that the man ate not only worms, but also snakes, centipeds and other insects. He reported to his superior, asking for instructions. The latter, after consulting in vain the laws of Japan for a provision forbidding the eating of insects, replied, "Schikata ga nai," which means "Nothing can be done." The old man with this rare appetite is moved, he says, by humanitarian considerations, being desirous of delivering his country from those insects by eating them. All Japan wishes him a long life and a good appetite.

Evolution of the Horse.

The Peabody museum at Yale is soon to place on exhibition a series of fossils upon which Professor Lull has been at work for several months. They represent a series of the changes in the evolution of the horse covering six geological periods and tracing the animal from the period when it was a foot high up to the present horse, these changes being indicated by the head, teeth and feet, the last named originally showing a three and four toed horse. The collection was originally made by Professor O. C. Marsh, who showed it to the late Professor Huxley when he came to lecture in America thirty years ago and who as a result of his investigation changed his opinion as to the origin of the horse from Europe to America. The series includes nearly a hundred specimens.

Odd Use For Talking Machines.

An unexpected use has been found for the talking machine in the Pacific islands. The natives have shown a reluctance to engage themselves for the Australian labor market. Some of those already employed there have been induced to speak into a recorder about the high wages they earn and the other attractions of life on the plantations. These records have been reproduced to wondering crowds of islanders with highly successful results.

What Is Paranoia?

New York, March 22. — District Attorney Jerome says Thaw has paranoia, a statement which may not enlighten the lay mind. The Standard Dictionary's definitions are;

"Paranoia — Chronic mental instability, or unsoundness; hereditary or acquired; sometimes monomania; demonia with delusions."

(I should designate his trouble as paranoia, which I consider a better name than monomania. — N. Y. Tribune, Dec. 1, 1891.)

Everybody Agrees

that COD LIVER OIL and IRON are beyond question the greatest medicines known. Then why does not everybody take Cod Liver Oil and Iron? Simply because most people cannot take the Oil and few can digest the Iron in any ordinary form. These difficulties have been entirely removed by the introduction of FERROL, in which the Iron is scientifically combined with the Oil, rendering the Oil palatable and the Iron digestible. While is manufactured from the best quality of Cod Liver Oil (the whole of the Oil) and is richer in oil than any other emulsion, and while it contains just the right quantity of the best form of Iron and Phosphorus, it is so scientifically prepared that not one person in a thousand finds any trouble in taking it, and infants digest it without difficulty. Moreover the well-established value of the Oil and Iron is immensely enhanced by the process of manufacture, and as the formula is freely exposed it is not to be wondered at that physicians everywhere have fully endorsed FERROL and used it largely in their practice. FERROL is invaluable for the treatment of any kind of Lung or Bronchial troubles, while for wasting diseases it has no equal, and Learn Dressmaking.

IN TWO WEEKS.

We teach you everything from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate toilette that can be found in the fashion books. We show you how to put together not only the lining but all the outer goods in coats, skirts waists, wrappers, sleeves, children's dresses, collars, etc. Why spend months at a shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and then after you have served your time there, what do you know about cutting? Absolutely nothing! For you will know no more how to cut out a dress at the end of a year than you did the first day you went there; so why spend your time there; you can come and try for a week and see for yourself what it's like, and as there is nothing to be paid in advance, you certainly would not lose anything by trying.

We have taught over 2,000 in this way within the past six years, and all recommend it very highly; we teach you how to use a chart the first day you are with us; also guarantee that the waists made by this chart will not draw nor pull out of place when raising arm.

Charge for full course is only $10, to be paid when course is completed, if satisfied, including one of the most perfect fitting systems in use, which we give free.

We will teach at Belleville from April 8th to April 20th. Hours for day class from 8.30 to 5. FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.
I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flushes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home

POOR DAD.

Dad never has a moment's rest,
He always has to work;
Poor, weary dad, with care oppressed,
Can find no time to shirk.
For five long months he's shovelled coal,
And watched the pile get lower;
But spring won't ease his troubled soul,
He then must run the mower.

All winter long he's fed the fire,
And sifted ashes, too;
But now the sun is climbing higher,
He still has work to do,
The furnace may be out, but he,
Can't rest as you suppose;
For every evening now you'll see
Dad wrestle with the hose.

Oh, pity dad, the poor old man,
Who never makes complaint,
His life is but a busy span,
With window screens to paint,
Each season brings its many chores,
Enough to drive him mad;
He's busy staining hardwood floors,
Oh, don't you pity dad?

Pimples Off In 5 Days.

THE NEW CALCIUM SULPHIDE TREATMENT DOES WONDERS TO EVERY KIND OF SKIN ERUPTION.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient, the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it to-day, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggists.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 95 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WORK OF RAILWAY DEPT

Hon. H. R. Emmerson Claims Surplus of $61,915 on Year.

Intercolonial Line In a Flourishing Condition — May Be Extended to Toronto — Heavy Expenditure on Canals—Mileage of Canadian Lines —Freight Rates Cheap on I. C. R.— 1907 Promises Great Prosperity.

Ottawa, March 23.—The extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Toronto was the hope expressed by Hon. H. R. Emmerson in reviewing the year's business of that road yesterday.

He also said he looked forward to the day when the road would stretch from sea to sea.

The Minister of Railways claimed a surplus of $61,915 on the year's operations.

Mr. Emmerson made his annual budget speech. He pointed out that heretofore this speech had been confined to a financial discussion of the I. C. R. He felt that this year the speech should be extended to a review of all the more important work of the Railway Department. It was a vast department, employing nearly 14,000 men, and under its jurisdiction was included not only the Government railways and its system of canals, but also the new transcontinental railway.

The expenditures upon canals were large, and the money was voted without complaint by Parliament. During the past ten years there had been expended upon capital account not less than $24,000,000. During this period, $1,452,000 had been expended on the Lachine Canal, $1,005,600 upon the Sault Ste. Marie Canal and $3,076,000 upon the Welland Canal. Upon the Trent Valley Canal, now open from Healy's Falls to Lake Simcoe, there has been expended during the past ten years $3,738,663, which included the cost of surveys.

Mileage of Canadian Roads.

Turning to railways, the Minister pointed out that the total mileage of Canadian railways in 1896 was 16,387 miles and subsidies granted by the Dominion Government between 1867 and 1896 amounted to $90,395,692. In 1906 the total mileage had increased to 21,518 miles, and the total subsidies from Confederation to 1906 had increased to $105,734,201.

Taking up the I. C. R. Mr. Emmerson reminded the House that the road as completed and equipped in 1876 was long since out of date. The Government had been compelled to virtually rebuild the road and to buy new rolling stock throughout. This had been done on every trunk line in America during the past ten years. He was glad to say that the I. C. R. had kept pace with the best, except that not enough had been done towards reducing grades.

Expansion on I. C. R.

Referring again to statistics, Mr. Emmerson pointed out that the mileage of the I. C. R. had increased from 1,172 miles in 1896 to 1,477 miles in 1906. In 1896 there were 204 locomotive engines; in 1906 the number had increased to 347. The number of cars had increased from 6,667 in 1896 to 10,819 in 1906.

The engine mileage during this decade had increased from 4,714,000 to 7,304,511.

"Freight rates," said the Minister, "are cheap on the Intercolonial Railway."

Taking the I. C. R. as a unit, or one dollar, the United States roads charge $1.83, New Zealand $1.79, and Victoria $1.88 per ton mile.

The gross revenues of the I. C. R. for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, were $7,643,829, gross expenses $7,581,914, surplus $61,915.

To this surplus was to be added the profits of the Windsor branch amounting to $31,966. From this total should be deducted the net loss for the year on the Prince Edward Island Railway of $36,962, but this deficit of the Prince Edward Island Railway showed a betterment of $116,000 over the year terminating June 30, 1905.

Mr. Emmerson, at the evening session, assured the House that, prosperous as had been the past years, the current year would be even more prosperous. For the first six months the gross receipts had been $4,047,556, a surplus of $377,656. True, there must be faced an expenditure on capital account of $1,000,000 for rebuilding the shops destroyed by fire at Moncton. He showed by elaborate statistics that passenger and freight rates were quite low on the Intercolonial Railway and then sought to forecast the future of the road.

From Sea to Sea.

There were several propositions. One was to divide the system between the C. P. R. and G. T. R. He asked if this policy was favored by the Opposition. Personally, the Minister looked forward to the day when the Intercolonial Railway should stretch from sea to sea, but soon, and very soon, he hoped to see it start for the West. He hoped soon to see it extended to that splendid industrial capital of Canada, the City of Toronto. (Applause.)

Hon. John Haggart said that the speech was unsatisfactory. What was the Grand Trunk Pacific going to cost? Was it to be built, as the Premier promised, for $13,000,000?

As to the International Railway, was it true that since 1897 there had been expended the tremendous sum of $25,000,000 on capital account?

Mr. Emmerson claimed a surplus of $61,915. Did it exist? How about capital expenditure? During the past year this country had sunk $3,765,000 on the Intercolonial Railway, and calling it "capital account" did not help the matter. This country had spent during the past year more than $3,000,000 upon the Intercolonial Railway over and above the earnings of the road.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women
Make Healthy Women.

Upon being taken into the stomach, the various ingredients are absorbed by the blood, and then find their way to every organ and tissue.

Some reach the uterine system. These allay inflammation, stop all drains on the system and make women regular.

Some strengthen the stomach. They help digestion and increase the appetite.

Others act on the bowels. They cure constipation.

Other ingredients stimulate the liver and kidneys in carrying off impurities from the system.

Others reach the nerves. These tone up the nervous system and supply vital energy, thereby curing the nervousness, irritability, and melancholy, to which so many women are subject.

The full effect of all the medicaments in the tablets is to arouse the entire female system to renewed life and vigor.

Improvement is noticed the first week.

A Proven Cure For Indigestion

"A healthy stomach does two things.

1st—gives up enough gastric juice to digest food—and —2nd—churns food, by means of its muscular action, until digestive juice and food are thoroughly mixed.

An unhealthy stomach is either too weak to properly churn the food or it does not give up enough gastric juice to make digestion complete.

Then you have Indigestion—Heartburn—Distress after Eating—Sour Stomach—Headaches—and finally chronic Dyspepsia.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia because they give you a healthy stomach.

"Fruit-a-tives" actually strengthen the muscles of the stomach—increase the power of the churning movement—and also enable the stomach to excrete sufficient gastric juice to completely digest every meal.

Thousands have been cured of Indigestion and Dyspepsia by "Fruit-a-tives" alone.

"Fruit-a-tives" also cure the Constipation and Biliousness with which so many Dyspeptics suffer.

"Fruit-a-tives" are intensified fruit juices, combined with tonics and antiseptics—and are an infallible cure for all Stomach Troubles. Try them. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. At all dealers or from

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

the body, he was not an easy prisoner to capture. He leaped rather than fell into the courtyard, but a stone crashed after him, striking him on the head, yet as he sank down his mind telegraphed danger to his hand, and he fired his revolver at one of the three dim shapes towering above him.

When Don Q. came to himself he found he had been carried back into the great hall and laid within the circle of firelight. His weapons were gone, his hands and feet bound, and the blood was already drying upon his face. At first he half believed it must be a dream, but remembrance roused him thoroughly—was he not fighting for his name?"

Now, in all his life Don Q. had never been in bonds before, and it may safely be declared that the danger of his position was entirely swallowed up in the sense of the indignity thus put upon him. Two men stood talking by the fire, while a third lay upon the floor behind him. He could hear faint groans, from which the brigand gathered that his shot had not gone so far astray.

"Impossible!" The exclamation broke loudly from one of the two at the fire. "Why, the man's dead, heaven knows how long ago!"

"So it was given out," said the other, "but in any case, Nicanor, this fellow will be worth something, for he is undoubtedly Don Q. "Did you see how he fought?"

"So would you, my dear Diego, under the same circumstances," laughed Nicanor.

"True, but not so adroitly as he did. This is an expert in the struggle for existence. Come, if he is not sufficiently awake to question we must rouse him."

"If this be really Don Q.," put in Nicanor, "it would be safer to kill him as he lies."

"All in good time. First let us extract the dollars." He stepped across to the brigand and kicked him. "Wake up, rascal, I would speak with you."

The chief opened his eyes and closed them again feebly. He recognized the lean, fine-featured face with its light, sinister eyes as that of Palomoro.

"Come, bandit, you will drowse no longer when you hear it is a question of your treasure. I hold you captive, as you have held many a one I know, and it is your turn to pay ransom."

The chief lay silent.

"Dona Anita lured you here and I followed Dona Anita; only just in time, or you would have escaped us. The fact that you are Don Q. is proven; we have the witness of your features." Diego pulled the brigand roughly up by the collar and held his face to the light. "The quebranta-huesos cannot be mistaken for a crow." The other man joined in Palomoro's laughter. "Where have you hidden your hoard."

Don Q., propped against the stool, answered with toneless civility—

"Many men have asked that question."

"Many men have searched for your treasure," retorted Don Diego. "The good fortune of finding it has been reserved for me."

"Perhaps," replied Don Q. "But let us to business. How do you propose to learn where my treasure—presuming I have a treasure—is concealed?"

"By a method you understand—compulsion."

"But how?" the chief's politeness was unaltered. "Will you torture me? Or, it may be, threaten me with death?"

"Your courage is reputed to be unassailable," answered Don Diego, "though I may be driven to try conclusions with you in that way if gentler means fail. But I propose to begin on another basis. I happen to be the lucky holder of a secret belonging to your past life."

The brigand made a contemptuous gesture. "You are credulous, senor."

"Caramba! I know it to be true. Has any other bait tempted you into the jaws of a trap? No! But this was successful. As I followed the pretty Anita here, I realized that if you came at her call, whatever gods there are had delivered you into my hands. You must buy our silence—my friend's and mine."

"And what of the gentleman I have been so unfortunate as to wound?" inquired Don Q.

"Manuelo? Pooh! my groom. He is dead by now; you shot too straight. Come, our terms are simple."

"Go tell your secret in the streets of Malaga; you will be none the richer."

"We cannot haggle like a couple of old women in the market place. Make up your mind. If you lead us to your treasure we will give you our word of honor as gentlemen to preserve your secret inviolate."

"Senor, pardon me. You would sell [illegible] honor? Is it not so?" questioned [illegible] Q. with exceeding suavity. "For [illegible] part, I cannot afford to buy it."

"[illegible] against your principles?" [illegible] Don Diego with angry contempt; [illegible] sequestrador, who holds to ran-

Don Nicanor burst into oaths; the other man stood deadly still.

"I am about to teach you, brigand," he said icily, "the lesson you have taught many a better man—the fact that you are after all no more than flesh and blood. Strip him, Nicanor." He stooped and plucked out from amongst the heap of wood beside the hearth a bar of iron still imbedded in a broken window-sash. As he thrust it to heat in the flames, there was a movement of the heavy screen, and Dona Anita rushed out from her concealment.

"You would torture him!" she shrieked. "You shall not! You shall not!"

Don Diego's smile was not pleasant to see. "My dear lady, I fear Don Q. has to thank you only for his present position."

"Look at the door—in the doorway!" she screamed.

Both of the men swung round, and, taking advantage of the instant, Anita threw herself upon Don Q. and began to saw at the bonds with a delicate-bladed dagger.

The men pulled her off savagely and dragged her toward the door in spite of her frantic resistance. Of all that the brigand had to endure on that night, perhaps this moment was the worst, while he was forced to look on at the rough handling of this lady.

He heard the men say there was an upper room where they could shut her in. The noise receded. He was alone.

He looked around. Dona Anita's dagger was not to be seen, but his eyes fell on an iron bar already hot. He rolled toward the fire, pushed the bar out of the embers with his bound feet, and held the ropes upon his wrists down upon it until they charred and he could jerk them loose. Scarcely conscious of the horrible burns on his hands and wrists, he untied the knots about his ankles and stood up free, unarmed indeed, but yet free. Then he endeavored to stamp out the fire, but hearing footsteps he flung an armful of damp wood upon the glowing ashes, effectually darkening the hall.

It was Don Diego who entered. "Hullo, how dark it is! Help, help, Nicanor!" he shouted.

For Don Q. was on him like a cat. Springing at his neck from behind, he kicked his knees from under him and brought him heavily to the ground just as Nicanor came running into the hall.

"Robledo, Gaspar, to me! I have the other here," called Don Q.

Nicanor was deceived. He could see nothing but the outstretched form of his friend, and he imagined that the brigand's men had come to the rescue of their chief. He turned to escape. Don Q., snatching Don Diego's knife and pistol, started in pursuit.

Nicanor leaped out across the snow to where his horse was tethered. Cutting his friend's loose, he flung himself upon his own with a yell and a blow.

Hot after him followed Don Q. The night was now full of a pale luminosity, for a white-rimmed moon had swum up over a world that lay a-cold. Some moments were lost in reaching his horse in the wood, and by that time Nicanor was out of sight; but the chief knew his enemy would make for the nearest village, some four leagues distant. If Nicanor once gained its shelter he must escape, carrying with him the desperate secret.

With spur and voice, Don Q. urged his horse forward. The snowbound chase sent no sound up to the dim heaven; a magic circle might have been shutting in these two gasping riders and their passions. But Don Q., being much the lighter man, was gaining surely upon the other. Nicanor, peering back over his shoulder and seeing only one pursuer and that one overtaking him, fired again and again at the figure with the flying cloak bent so closely over his horse's neck.

No shot came back in reply. "He is without a pistol, this brigand," thought Nicanor, and turned at bay, wheeling his blown horse behind a thicket laden with snow. The chief swept nearer and nearer, then his horse seemed to stumble or rear. Don Nicanor could not clearly see what happened, but Don Q. was thrown from his saddle. He lit upon the ground not far from the thicket, and by the impetus of his fall rolled over and over to within a few feet of it.

Don Nicanor, spying through the branches to take good aim, passed forever from the light and consciousness of earth, for a little tongue of flame licked upward from the tumbled figure upon the snow, followed by a smack of the striking bullet, a sound unlike any other in the world.

Instantly the chief was up to run in upon his foe, but Nicanor was hanging dead half among the bushes, his feet still lodged in the stirrups.

"A very simple trick, good Don Nicanor, but it sufficed for you," said the brigand, as he pushed the body to the ground.

Climbing upon his horse, he glanced up at the moon, and saw with satisfaction that by its light he could ride at a but the danger to his long hopes and hereditary pride still loomed darkly ahead. Diego was a man of cunning and malevolence, and one who did not lack courage. Perhaps he had not yet recovered consciousness, or he might have departed, taking the secret with him, or most likely of all he was lying in wait for Don Q., whose return he very well knew he might safely count on.

Yet who could say what turn Don Diego's enemy might take? Suppose he recognized the fact that his deepest revenge lay in spreading abroad his knowledge to befoul the honor of that kingly name! At the thought Don Q. drove his horse on, but a cloud drifting up obscured the moon, and in a moment horse and rider were wrapped in a blinding squall of snow. It was impossible to tell the direction in which they were traveling, so for a maddening hour Don Q. plodded slowly on, consumed with impatience and anxiety, keenly alert to every sound, yet benumbed by cold and wind.

In the midst of his despair, he found himself on the mound of Las Lechuzas.

Hurriedly tying up the horse, he groped his way into the building, through the silent passages to the hall. In the dull glow of the fire it seemed empty.

Empty, empty; nothing to be seen but little fitful flames, feeling about the freshly piled wood on the hearth! Diego no longer lay where the brigand had left him. Don Q., keeping in cover of the great screen, waited, for it was clear that during his absence his opponent had recovered consciousness.

But the fire languished, and cast long deceptive shadows on the floor and rugged walls. Watching, the chief at length made out something black and round, from which a dull gleam was struck at intervals.

All was very still, save those weird noises that wander forever in old habitations. The brigand crawled nearer and nearer to the dark object. All at once a flame leaped up, and showed him Don Diego's dark, well-groomed head lying within hand reach.

On the brow the death chill had gathered, and in the strong throat was thrust a dagger. Don Q. felt for the hilt; it was slender and delicately fashioned. Quickly he sought the dead man's right hand; it was empty, though a revolver lay beneath it; but among the fingers of the left he found coiled a strand of long, dark hair.

The chief started up. What, then, was become of Dona Anita? For a moment he forgot to exult that his name was once more safe from that world where people talk. The next he had kicked the fire into a blaze and looked around.

The girl lay half on the ground, half propped against the wall, with her hands clenched in her lap, her white face set in a tangle of dark hair, her great black eyes wide.

In an instant Don Q. was beside her.

"Diego shot me," she whispered very faintly. "He wanted to force me to give up your ring as proof—but I saved it." Gently Don Q. took it from her failing fingers. "When I am dead," she went on, "you will perhaps forgive me, and carry me away from this place and lay me in some niche in the sierra, with the pure snow about me, where I can sleep well at last."

* * * * * *

An hour before the dawn Don Q. began his journey back to the mountains, and across the saddle bow, wrapped in her long cloak, he carried Dona Anita to the burial she had desired. Scattered snowflakes struck at him and at his burden, for a wind had arisen; but far way from whence it came one star began to shine and sparkle through the snow-wet night.

HOW DON Q. STOOD AT BAY.

Winter was breaking and the plains were already gay with flowers, when Garth Lalor returned to the Boca de Lobo as Don Q.'s guest. An invitation from so uncommon a source might not have been accepted by every one with the eagerness shown by Garth Lalor. Don Q. wrote that he had need of a friend, and Lalor responded by setting out at once, for he had long ago grown to like Don Q. for many of the remarkable points in his strange character.

Lalor, as will doubtless be remembered, had accompanied Don Q. on that eccentric tour of justice, during which summary vengeance was dealt out to a certain Gen Don Basilio; and the brigand's conduct had inspired Lalor with unmitigated respect for him and faith in his promises.

He had already spent nearly a month with the famous sequestrador, but during the last couple of weeks his host of the sierra had remained plunged in a mood of melancholy, shot and illuminated by flashes of cold rage.

One morning as Lalor sat on the terrace sunning himself in the brilliant air, Don Q. joined him. Chilly as usual, the chief, wrapped in his cloak, his sombrero pulled low over his brows, sat for a few moments in silence, then he disengaged one meagre hand, and pointing downward at the men gathered in groups in the valley below, he told a story in his sibilant voice. It was the first break in his silence of several days.

"One of these wolves, these mountain apes," he began sourly, "has dared to play a little part in imitation of a man—of me, in short—with the grotesque result one would expect from such a travesty. As regards the animal himself, it matters not at all. But he has injured me in a degree so monstrous that his blood alone cannot wash out his crime!"

"One Pablo has captured and held to ransom a lady of wealthy though not noble family. It came to my knowledge as all events ultimately come, and I descended the mountains and caught the fellow red-handed," the chief went on. "Perhaps, senor, you did me the honor to miss me at the desayuno yesterday? I returned, bringing both Pablo and his captive with me. The senorita had been frightened, even maltreated! Psst!" Don Q. emitted a hiss of such contempt and malevolence that Lalor involuntarily rejoiced that it was not directed against himself. "Then I considered what I should do."

The outcome of these terrible musings appeared to be a letter that Don Q. now unfolded before the young Englishman.

"What do you think of this, senor?" he asked. "I will read it to you, omitting the compliments of greeting with which you are familiar. I address myself to the governor of the prison of Castelleno."

"What!" ejaculated Lalor, "not the man whose ears—"

HELPING MOTHERS.

"I always tell my neighbors who have children how good I have found Baby's Own Tablets," says Mr. L. Reville, Gawas, Ont. Mrs. Reville further says: "I would not be without the Tablets in the house for I know of no medicine that can equal them in curing the ills from which children so often suffer." It is the enthusiastic praise of mothers who have used the Tablets that makes them the most popular childhood medicine in Canada. Any mother using Baby's Own Tablets has the

HUMOR

PETE'S STATISTICS.

There Was a Slight Mistake That His Attention Was Called To.

"I assure you, lady," began Panhandle Pete as the farmer's wife came to the door with a scowl on her face, "I ain't no common tramp. I'm a gent author wot's writin' a book uv his travels round de world."

"You don't look much like an author," she coldly replied.

"No, ma'am, but I'm dressed up dis way so as ter study de life, yer see. I'm doin' a world tour on a bet, an' if yer'll give me a little assistance I'll put yer in de book."

"What's the name of the book?"

"It ain't named yet, lady. I'm jest takin' some interestin' notes as I go on me way, an' den some day I'll set down an' put 'em all tergether."

"You fellows tell such tales," she suspiciously remarked as she looked him over.

"Dat's wot dey do, lady," he replied as he took out pencil and paper and began to write. "Scuse me while I put down dat a kind an' beautiful lady, or five turkey sandwiches an' some roast beef an' a couple uv mince pies an' a pitcher or two uv cider. I got some interestin' notes here, lady. So far on de trip I've had 302 pieces uv punkin pie, 892 pieces of mince, 116 dogs hev bit me, 262 kind ladies, includin' yerself, hev"—

"Wasn't it you who was here working the book swindle about this time last winter?" she interrupted him with.

"Me? No, ma'am. I wuz jest startin' on me trip about dat time an' biddin' me old gray haired mother goodby. Ah, lady, yer should hev seen de tears she shed as she parted from her only son! But, as I wuz sayin', de feed yer gib me will"—

"Just a minute. There's a little mistake in your figures, I think."

"As—as ter how, lady?"

"Why, as to the number of dogs that have bitten you. You said 116, didn't you?"

"Y-yes, lady."

"Well," she said as she came out into the yard and started toward the barn, "you want to change that, because Carlo will make the one hundred and seventeenth. Here, Carlo! Here, Carlo! Carlo! Carlo!"

But Panhandle Pete had leaped the fence at the very first call and was half a mile down the road before the dog caught sight of him.—A. B. Lewis in Judge.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE.

Getting After Customers Who Can Be Caught by Bargains.

"Make me some cheap shoes, good lookers, that I can sell for bargains in February or March." This is a usual order given to the shoe manufacturer who can make a shoe that looks like a shoe—and that's the best one can say about it. The dealer uses these shoes—ashamed of their name to sell at a profit to people who are not his regular customers. Ever buy a pair? Then you know them to be as worthless as a shoe that's been through a fire.

The man who knows how to conserve his earned income buys the shoe upon which is stamped the Seal of Certainty, and he likes to see the ladies, too, buy the real Slater shoe. They are made and marked by the Slater Shoe Company.

CONSPICUOUS IN A BALLROOM.

Flakes of Dandruff on the Collar and Shoulders of a Gentleman in Full Dress.

This is the thing you quite frequently see in the ball-room—a man's black dress-coat literally covered with dandruff.

It must be annoying to the wearer, and certainly not a pleasant thing to observe. But dandruff can be eradicated. It is a germ disease that will some day cause baldness.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the hair-destroying germ, and stimulates the hair to a rich, abundant growth; it does more — keeps the hair soft and pliant.

Furthermore, Herpicide is a most pleasant toilet accessory; of pleasing odor, and cooling to the scalp.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

WOES OF DRUNKENNESS — GOLDEN TEXT: "WINE AND NEW WINE TAKE AWAY THE HEART."

Historical Setting.

Time.—About B. C. 725, two or three years before the tragic end of the northern kingdom, B.C. 722.

Place.—The prophecy was spoken in Jerusalem to the Jews there, but in part with a reference to Samaria and the northern kingdom.

Place in Bible History.—2 Kings 17: 1-23; 18: 1-12; 2 Chronicles, 29, 30.

Kings.—Hezekiah, king of Judah; Hoshea, king of Israel.

Vs. 1-4. The Prophet, seeing the danger threatening his own nation from their unrighteousness, urged them to look beyond the walls of Jerusalem over to the northern kingdom and observe what was going on and take warning.

Palestine lay between the two great nations of the then known world — Assyria on the northeast and Egypt on the southwest. Neither could reach the other without going through Palestine. Each wanted this narrow intermediate country, both as a defense against the other and as a safe place where they could gather their forces for attack. The Assyrians from the north were at this time in northern Israel trying to capture Samaria and devastating the country. Jerusalem, a strong fortress, a very Gibraltar, rarely captured, and outside of the great highways between the two great nations, felt safe. Egypt was making overtures to Judea, and the latter had made an agreement with them, which the prophet calls a "covenant with death" and an "agreement with hell or the grave," because it was "an unhallowed, underhand intrigue, accomplished by much swindling and false conceit of cleverness," "a secret agreement with the southern power (Egypt), while the open treaty with the northern (Assyria) was still in force." It was a covenant that came from moral death, and was certain to lead to national death and destruction. But the Jews seemed to be blind to the facts and unconscious of their danger, as Jonah dreaming in the storm that was overwhelming the ship; and Isaiah is calling to them, "Awake, awake thou that sleepest."

The overwhelming scourge of the Assyrian hordes was devastating the glory of Israel. The semi-savage armies were overrunning the country with all wanton crimes and cruelties, destroying everything good.

They were sweeping away cities and villages, farms, cattle, orchards — everything. The Prophet sees them drifting as in the rapids of Niagara swiftly toward destruction. He sees the storm-clouds on the horizon threatening tempest and lightning blasts and destruction.

Within three or four years Samaria, the capital, was captured, and the northern kingdom swept out of existence by the Assyrians.

Here, as elsewhere, there were two sources of wealth. The God-given wealth was from fruitful fields cultivated in peace, from flocks and herds and orchards, and from legitimate commerce. This God-given wealth was blessed. It reached all classes. It was possible to all who were industrious, moral and economical.

The other source of wealth was the spoils of the nations they conquered. They gathered in the flocks and herds of other lands. They brought to their houses the luxuries of foreign palaces and the garnered wealth of conquered cities. This wealth was sudden, unevenly distributed, from unjust sources, connected with cruelty, selfishness and crime. As always, the Cain-mark was on its forehead, it bore a curse in its heart, and it brought an atmosphere of moral poison. It was unblessed. The natural results on character and morals we learn from Amos and Hosea and Isaiah. Drunkenness, debauchery, corruption, oppression of the poor, murder, profanity, lying, stealing ran riot among all classes of the people.

Isaiah saw the gathering storm in the northeast. The Assyrian empire was still "maintained by a standing army of veteran soldiers, commanded by able generals," and soon their legions would sweep like a hurricane over Israel, beat upon Samaria, and Judah could not wholly escape its fury. Isaiah therefore raised his voice to the magnates of Jerusalem: "Lift your heads from your wine-bowls; look north. The sunshine is still on Samaria, and your fellow-drinkers there are reveling in security. But the storm creeps up behind. They shall certainly perish soon: even you cannot help seeing that. Let it scare you, for their sin is yours, and that storm will not exhaust itself on Samaria. Scorners of religion and righteousness, except ye cease being skeptical and drunken, and come back from your diplomacy to faith and reason, ye shall not be saved!"

Hence the prophet kept before the people the promise of the Lord, the glorious purpose for which he had raised them up, to be the makers of the kingdom of God. If many refused, yet a "residue" would receive the "crown of glory" and the "diadem of beauty" which the Lord himself would be to those who obeyed him; would receive the fulfilment of all the promises to Abraham, and the patriarchs, growing

7. But they also. The people of Judah, who had been specially chosen of God. Have erred through wine. The American Revision translates "Reel with wine, and stagger with strong drink." "The point is not that the nobles and priests and prophets present disgusting spectacles of drunkenness, but that by reason of their convivial habits they take the wrong road, commit errors, miss the trail, lose their course. The older translations are correct, 'err,' 'are out of the way,' 'are gone astray.'" They err in vision. Strong drink not only perverts the natural vision, but the moral vision. Intemperance perverts the vision of right and wrong, the business judgment, the views of truth and duty. Men do under that influence what they would not do in their right mind.

8. Filthiness. Strong drink produces filthiness of mind and body.

"Palestine was in antiquity famous for its vines and wine. There are ten different names in the Old Testament for the vine, and twelve for wine, and at least ninety texts in which drunkenness and drinking are mentioned."

9. Whom shall he teach knowledge? What right has Isaiah to talk to us thus? Are we babies just weaned from the milk? Are we mere school children to be chided and warned in this way?

10. For precept must be upon precept. "For it is precept upon precept." The prophet is telling the same story all the time, continually repeating, everywhere, all the time, in season, out of season, the same old warning.

11. "Nay." Here begins Isaiah's reply. This seems monotonous to you, but you will have another kind of monotony if you do not give heed to my words. For with stammering lips. "But by men of strange lips, and with another tongue," that of the Assyrian hordes, will he speak to this people (12) to whom he said, this is the rest. God had pointed out to them how they might have rest and prosperity, yet they would not hear.

13. Therefore by the Assyrian invasion they should find precept upon precept, etc., a monotonous teaching by afflictions and sorrows, till they . . . fall backward, and be broken, as came to pass in later years.

SPRING ADVICE.

DO NOT DOSE WITH PURGATIVES AND WEAKENING MEDICINES — WHAT PEOPLE NEED AT THIS SEASON IS A TONIC.

Not exactly sick — but not feeling quite well. That's the spring feeling. You are easily tired, appetite variable, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Or perhaps pimples and eruptions appear on the face, or you have twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order, that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble. Don't dose yourself with purgative medicines in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system, and weaken instead of giving strength. What you need is a tonic medicine that will make new, rich, red blood, build up the weakened nerves and thus give you new health and strength. And the one medicine to do this speedily and surely is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which makes weak, easily tired and ailing men and women feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring try Dr. Williams Pink Pills and you will never regret it. This medicine has cured thousands in every part of the world and what it has done for others it can easily do for you.

The headquarters for the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in Canada is Brockville, Ont. So-called pink pills offered by companies located at other places in Canada are fraudulent imitations intended to deceive. If your dealer does not keep the genuine Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People send to Brockville, Ont., and The Dr. Williams Medicine Co. will mail the pills to you at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Deaths On the Rail During Two Years.

In a summary given respecting accidents on railways during the time covered by the report of the Railway Commission from February 1, 1904, to March 31, 1906, it is shown that 403 persons were killed and 141 injured. On the G.T.R. 167 were killed and 40 injured; on the C.P.R. 185 were killed and 59 injured, and on the C.N. R. 27 were killed and 21 injured. Of the total killed 109 were trespassing on the tracks, 43 were killed at level crossings, 38 employees were killed while shunting, and 15 passengers were killed while attempting to get on a train while in motion. Fifteen passengers and nine employees were killed from head-on collisions, and twenty-five passengers and three employees injured. From rear-end collisions seventeen passengers and fifteen employees were killed. Of the total fatalities seventy-three were passengers. 168 employees and 161 are classed as "other persons."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How Herring Grow.

Some new facts concerning the herring are contained in the scientific section of the annual report of the fishery board for Scotland. According to a paper by Dr. Wemyss Fulton, certain theories as to the growth and age of the fish which have been accepted for the last quarter of a century are not well founded. It now appears that the herring is a fish of slow growth and is barely two and one-quarter inches in length when one year old. It does not reach maturity and spawn until five years old and is then of an average length of nine and three-eighths inches. Herrings over twelve inches long, like the large Loch-Fyne fish, may be ten years old and more, and the large specimens that are occasionally caught, measuring from fourteen to fifteen inches, are probably over fifteen years old and may be twenty.

BOARD OF EDUCATION PASSED ITS ESTIMATES.

Will Carry Out Recommendations Of Inspector Morgan and Issue Debentures For $3,000—Meeting Was Well Attended and Important Business Was Transacted.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening and considerable business was transacted, including the passing of the estimates for the year, which, after all, are only, in round figures, $1,000 in excess of last year. Three thousand dollars, for improvements, however, are to be raised by debentures. Those present at the session were; Messrs. G. A Bennett, chairman; J. H. Anderson, P. Harrison, W. Johnson, B. Mallory, W. S. Morden, H. Naylor, C. M. Reid, A. A. Roberts, W. R. Taylor, H. Walker, Dr. Sprague, Rev. A. L. Geen and J. Wallace.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Dr. Dyer, of Albert College, asking the co-operation of the Board in fittingly celebrating the Jubilee year of that institution. — Laid on the table.

From Mr. S. Wedden, caretaker of Queen Victoria School, asking for an increase of salary owing to increase of duties—Referred to School Management Committee.

REPORTS.

A report was presented from the joint committee of the School Management and Printing and Supplies committees, making the following recommendations;

"That the sum of $1,000, as recommended by the Inspector, be set aside for the supply of 21 slate blackboards, maps, charts, etc.

"That $2,000 be expended for reseating the schools with modern seats.

"That the City Council be requested to issue debentures for the sum of $3,000, for the addition to Grier street school.

"That, in accordance with the plans of Mr. Walter Alford, architect, the Grier St. School shall be heated by a furnace, and that the architect proceed to complete plans for the same.

"That the Printing and Supplies committee have printed 2,000 copies of Inspector Morgan's report, for the purpose of distributing the same to the ratepayers.

"That the requisition of the Principal of the High School be granted, he asking for necessaries for the chemical room."

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts, and also the passing of the estimates:

F. Slater	$ 3.20
W. McGie	30.00
E. T. Cherry	4.00
Gas department	67.00
Downey Coal Co.	26.25
Downey Coal Co.	130.35
T. S. Carman	2.50

The Estimates.

Amount required for paying teachers' and other salaries and domestic science	$10,850
For repairs, printing, stationery, fuel, insurance, supplies and keeping in order the school premises	5,609
	$16,459
Less Government grant and other income	$ 3,148
Total levy by the City Council for Public schools	13,311

HIGH SCHOOL.

Amount required for paying teachers' and other salaries	$ 5,030
For repairs, printing, stationery, fuel, insurance, supplies and keeping in order the school premises	1,225
	$6,255
Less Government grant and other revenue	$ 1,555
Total amount to be levied by the City Council for High School purposes	4,700
Total amount to be levied by the City Council for school purposes	18,011

The committee recommend that the City Council pass a by-law to provide for borrowing the sum of $3000 for the erection of an addition and enlargement to the Grier Street School, and to provide for the issue and sale of debentures for that purpose, which debentures and the money to be so raised to be chargeable only upon the property of tax-payers who are supporters of Public Schools.

That a levy of $257 be made upon the Thurlow township for school purposes.

On motion the Board went into committee of the whole on reports, etc., Mr. C. M. Reid in the chair.

THE REPORT ADOPTED.

The joint committee's report was first taken up, and was unanimously adopted without any discussion.

The estimates as presented were adopted after a brief discussion.

Mr. Walker stated that, although there were a number of extra items wanted, only $995 more was asked for this year than last. This, he considered, was not by any means an excessive sum.

Mr. Morden thought that, if the report was adopted, the Board was tying itself up in reference to any increases of salary to the teachers, if it was decided to make any increases.

Mr. Walker said that, as far as the teachers' salaries were concerned, they could not be increased until September next, as that was the end of the teaching year. There would then be only four months teaching for the present year.

Mr. Morden moved, seconded by Mr. Anderson, an amendment that $500 additional be added to the estimates for teachers' salaries.

After some further discussion the amendment was withdrawn, it being understood that the matter of salaries would be adjusted at a later meeting.

Mr. Walker took occasion to refer at some length, to an item in The Intelligencer in reference to a teach-asked for necessary supplies, which they did not get.

Mr. Bennett instanced the fact that some globes were asked for two years ago and were not procured.

This concluded the discussion upon the estimates, which were unanimously adopted.

ALD. MARSH SPEAKS.

Ald. Marsh, who was present, was given an opportunity to speak. He complimented the Board upon their estimates and the fact that the amount asked from the Council, outside of the $3000 debentures, was only $1,000 in excess of last year. The increased assessment this year would meet the extra demand made upon the Council, and the Board's estimates would not affect the rate to any extent. He, as chairman of the Executive Committee, was much pleased.

The committee rose and reported. The report was adopted.

INTRODUCTION OF BY-LAWS.

Two by-laws were introduced, namely, one relating to the estimates as passed and one asking the Township of Thurlow to levy the sum of $257 on that portion of the township that is annexed to the city for school purposes.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Rev. Mr. Geen spoke in reference to the High School, and said he did not think that all the taxpayers of the city should be called upon to pay such a heavy tax when they did not all get the advantage for their children of a classical education. The High School might be made less burdensome to some ratepayers.

Mr. Walker said the Legislature would have to make any change if such was made.

TO REDUCE SIZE OF BOARD.

Mr. Johnson moved, seconded by Mr. Roberts, that the Legislature of the province be requested to so alter the composition of Boards of Education that they be composed of not more than 12 members, and that those who represent the Public School section shall be elected by ballot by the Public School ratepayers of the city and in the same manner and at the same time as the Mayor and Aldermen are elected. And that this memorial be presented to the member for the Riding, and he endeavor to have such legislation passed at this session.

Mr. Johnson said he made the motion because he considered the citizens were in accord with it. The reduction in the number of Aldermen had been beneficial to the city, and he believed that it would prove equally beneficial to the Board of Education in this city. He believed it was a move in the right direction.

Mr. Walker was rather surprised at the motion made by Mr. Johnson. He did not think that there should be the same number of High School trustees as there would be of those who would be elected by the votes of the whole city. This he thought was unequal. He hoped Mr. Johnson would withhold the motion until the next meeting, to consider the matter.

Mr. Morden was of the opinion that other cities should be consulted in this matter. There was no hope of such a measure being put through the Legislature this session.

Mr. Johnson: "Let Belleville lead in this reform and present it, and see what becomes of it." It was not too late to present it to the Legislature at the present session.

Mr. Anderson was of the opinion that the motion was a step in the right direction, but he would favor a larger representation of Public School trustees than High School trustees.

Mr. Mallory was of the opinion that it would be better to have the co-operation of other school boards in this matter.

After some further informal discussion the latter clause of the motion was struck out and a clause added inviting the co-operation of other city boards in having the number of representatives reduced.

A motion prevailed that the matter be left over until the next meeting for further consideration.

WILL ASSIST IN JUBILEE.

On motion it was decided that the Board would co-operate, so far as it could, in assisting Albert College to celebrate its jubilee year.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Moved by Mr. Johnson, seconded by Mr. Walker,

"That the members of this Board at the first meeting after his death desire to express their sorrow at the demise of Lieut.-Col. Thomas Wills, ex-M.P.P., an ex-chairman of this Board, and for nearly forty years one of the most indefatigable and faithful members this Board has had.

"That to our late member's family we extend our sympathy in the loss they have sustained, and that a copy of this resolution be sent by the Secretary-Treasurer to the bereaved family."

The mover and seconder spoke to the resolution, and referred in an eulogistic manner to the late Mr. Wills and the services he had rendered in the matter of education.

The motion was carried by a standing vote.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Moved by Mr. Johnson, seconded by Dr. Sprague, that a special committee be appointed to obtain information from other Boards of Education and Public School Boards, as to the basis of the salaries paid to the teachers of the High and Public schools. That this special committee consist of the Finance and School Management committees, and that Mr. H. Walker be the convener of the committee.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

Veteran Of '37 Dead.

MR. WILLIAM H. WRIGHTMYER PASSED AWAY AT GREEN OLD AGE.

Mr. Wm. H. Wrightmyer, an old gentleman who resided with his grandson, Mr. A. Wrightmyer, Octavia street, died last night. Deceased had been ill for some time and his demise was anticipated. Mr. Wrightmyer, who was in his 85th year, was born in the County of Prince Edward. All his life was spent in this and the adjoining county. During the troublous times of 1837-38 the deceased did duty in defence of his country at the front. He was a man who was known to many, and was esteemed for his many sterling qualities. For many years he had been a member of the Methodist Church. An aged widow and one son, Mr. Gilbert Wrightmyer, of this city, survives. The remains will to-morrow be taken to Deseronto for interment.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

CONCERT AT MASSEY HALL.

Another successful entertainment was given last night in Massey Hall, Albert College. It was in aid of the athletic funds of the college, and the students turned out en masse, several, as they entered, being received with the joyful acclamation of their comrades. There were two unique features in the programme, to which special attention should be directed, viz., the Eastern Temple Drill, given by nine young ladies, and the Toy Symphony, which showed what harmony could be got from unusual musical instruments, and also furnished much amusement to the audience.

The following ladies and gentlemen contributed to the programme:

Piano solo — Miss Mabel Radford
Reading—Miss Myrtle Field.
Vocal solo — Miss Annie Mair.
Piano solo—Miss Dora Spencer.
Reading—Miss Athol Beatty.
Vocal solo—Miss Molly Munns.
Piano solo—Miss Ettie Esmond.
Reading—Miss Lulu Dyer.
Piano duet — Miss Ethel Jones and Miss Hattie Pringle.
Violin solo—Miss Joy Riggs.
Eastern Temple Drill — Misses Dawson, Winter, Pettingill, Gunn, Scott, Van Cott, Upper, Beatty, Dixon.
Vocal solo — Miss Flossie Thorndyke.
Vocal solo—Miss Flossie Moon.
Reading—Miss Jessie Tuite.
Vocal solo—Mr. Jas. S. Dyer.
Reading—Mr. Reginald Piper.
Vocal solo—Mrs. A. P. Allen.
Toy Symphony — Piano, Misses Doxsee and Hunter; Violins, Misses Higgs and Benjamin; Nightingales, Misses Dyer and Callan; Locust, Miss Thompson; Triangle, Miss Turner; Cuckoos, Miss LaVoie and Mr. Perkins; Trumpet, Mr. Bruce Hunter; Drum and Cymbals, Mr. D. A Cameron; Quail, Mr. J. S. Dyer.

A FINE MUSICAL COMEDY.

"My Wife's Family," a three-act musical farce comedy by Stephens and Linton, will be at the Carman on Thursday next. This last season's greatest of musical farce successes will probably attract large audiences, for it was a most popular hit last year. Many new and attractive musical numbers, witty dialogue and absurd situations have been added by the authors, with the result that the show is even better than before, and that is saying much.

High Court Of Justice.

Bowler vs. Belleville Cement Co.—This was an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages from defendants for the loss of his son, Geo. Bowler, who was killed by a dynamite explosion on defendants' property at Point Ann. After considerable evidence had been taken, at the suggestion of His Lordship, the case was settled between the parties. We understand that a substantial sum was paid to the plaintiff by the defendants. Mr. Porter for plaintiff, Mr. O'Flynn for defendants.

Weese vs. Best—An action brought for damages for malicious prosecution. The parties reside in the village of Bancroft. This case was settled between the parties. Mr. G. G. Thrasher for plaintiff, Mr. Porter for defendant.

SELECTIONS

FREAKS IN NATURE.

The Stone Man, the Brittle Man and the Poison Proof Man.

When she is in a freakish mood nature seems to revel in making human beings who defy all her most cherished traditions and are a constant mystery to their fellow creatures. Such a man is Herr Schwarz, "the armor plated man," who is such a puzzle to the doctors of Europe. Herr Schwarz has been for some years undergoing an ossification of the whole of his body and is rapidly developing into the hardness and immobility of a statue. His back has now become quite rigid, the muscles standing out hard and immovable. In fact, he seems to be enveloped in a kind of armor plating, consisting of surface bone as hard as stone. He is no longer able to move his jaws and is compelled to take food in a liquid form through a tube, some of his teeth having been removed for the purpose. And yet, singular to say, this osseous man enjoys excellent health and not long ago was married to a charming young Berlin woman.

In curious contrast to this indurated man is Herr Stahl, whose bones are so brittle that he can scarcely move without fracturing one of them. By simply stepping on a pavement he has broken a leg more than once. A hearty handshake has broken his arm, and a slap on the back not long ago laid him up for weeks with a fractured shoulder. Herr Stahl has only numbered twenty-four years, yet he counts two fractures for every year he has lived —in fact, as he humorously says, the only safe place for him is a glass case.

Captain Vetrio, an American, is a freak of another order, for he can make a hearty meal off poisons which would provide work for quite a large number of undertakers if others were to partake of it. Not long ago in Berlin he sat down to a dinner which consisted of a plate of verdigris, a liberal portion of ultramarine and a compote of sulphur and borax, followed by a dessert of white sulphur. These edibles were washed down by a solution of strychnine and a bottle of patent rat killer made of powdered glass, arsenic and atropine. This meal he devoured with evident enjoyment, to the amazement of the government officials and doctors who looked on and who to a man declined the captain's invitation to join him in his repast.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The New Drug Stovaine.

According to a Birmingham newspaper, quoted by Consul F. W. Mahin, a new drug, called stovaine, has come into use in England and abroad to prevent pain in surgical operations. It does not produce unconsciousness. A patient who has nerves strong enough can watch a surgeon operate while under its influence. Stovaine is injected into the lumbar region of the spinal canal and acts on the roots of the nerves entering the spinal cord. The injection produces a certain amount of shock, as well as occasional sickness and headache. How long the effect of this anaesthetic will last is not stated, nor whether further injections may be made during an operation. Presumably the duration of the effect is not great, and only one injection is deemed prudent, for a recent instance is noted of a surgeon speeding an operation to the safety limit in order to outstrip the recovering nerves.

HORSE RACING AT FAIRS.

Provision For Legal Action Against Societies Violating the Law.

Toronto, March 23.—Yesterday was a typical Friday afternoon at the Legislature. The attendance was slim, there were no discussions and a limited amount of routine business was put through. As previously intimated the hope to finish the session by Easter has been abandoned, and the House will adjourn next Thursday afternoon over the holiday. Arrangements are being made to enable the members to visit the Agricultural College at Guelph on the Tuesday following Easter.

On motion of Mr. Downey Toronto Junction's terminal railway bill, reported against the previous day, was referred back to the committee for reconsideration.

Mr. Graham said he had no objections, but the course was unusual.

Desired to Be Fair.

The Prime Minister said it had been shown that some parties interested had not had an opportunity of being present, and it was the desire to be fair to all.

Mr. McMillan (Glengarry) secured an order of the House for a return, of copies of all correspondence between the Nipissing Mines Company, or any official thereof and the Government, or any member thereof, relating to the property, or title thereto, of the said company, or any part or parcel thereof, situate in the Cobalt District; or to any application relating to the same; its title, or to the operation of the mines of the company, made by or on behalf of the company, or any of its directors or officers.

Hon. Mr. Monteith, Minister of Agriculture, introduced a Government measure to amend the agricultural societies act. It gives legal status to Mount Forest, Chesley, Peterboro, McKellar Township and Forest agricultural societies, and amends the act of last year by providing that legal action can only be taken against societies by members of the then current year and the previous year where the clauses prohibiting horse racing are alleged to be violated.

No amendments were offered to Hon. Mr. Foy's bill respecting the printing and distribution of the Statutes, and it passed through committee.

Road Bill Stands Over.

Mr. Graham called attention to the illness of Mr. C. N. Smith (Sault Ste Marie) and in compliance with his request Hon. Dr. Reaume's bill respecting Colonization Roads was not given its final reading.

The following bills were given their third reading:

Mr. Pratt—To vest certain lands in the rector and churchwardens of Trinity Church, Waterford.

Mr. Pratt—To incoporate the Policy Holders' Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Mr. McCowan—Respecting the town of North Toronto.

Second Readings.

Bills read a second time were:

Respecting the Pembroke Southern Railway Company; respecting the City of Hamilton; respecting the Canadian Niagara Power Company; to confirm bylaw No. 33 of the board of trustees of the Roman Catholic Separate Schools of the City of Ottawa; respecting the Town of Cornwall and the Morden Bedstead Company; respecting the Township of Cornwall; to confirm bylaw No. 729 of the Township of Cornwall, and bylaw No. 634 of the Township of Charlottenburg; respecting the Windsor Gas Company, Limited.

MAYOR HITS MEMBER.

Blows Struck In Corridor of Halifax House of Assembly.

Halifax, March 23.—In the corridors of the House of Assembly yesterday afternoon J. A. Johnson, deputy mayor of the City of Halifax, struck and knocked down Dr. March, a member of the House of Assembly and representing the County of Lunenburg.

Dr. March accused Johnson of taking away some business from him in connection with insurance matters, the accusation leading to wordy altercation, when Johnson struck March three heavy blows. March fell in a heap on the floor.

March was under the influence of liquor at the time. The altercation took place while the House was in session. It is understood the matter will be brought to the notice of the Legislature and Johnson will be called before the bar of the House to answer for his conduct.

Actress Beats Customs.

Port Huron, March 23.—A young man from Sarnia appeared at the Government's auction sale of smuggled goods here yesterday and bid in a seal skin coat for $200 against all comers.

It was learned that the coat was seized a year ago, when Mrs. Hamilton of Brantford, a pretty Canadian actress, tried to cross the border with it in company with her fiance, a Brantford physician. She refused to pay the duty.

The coat cost her $400 originally, but, even with the extra $200, she believes she has beaten the customs for once.

Mrs. Booth Frees Murderer.

Auburn, N.Y., March 23.—James Flaherty of Brooklyn, who has been in prison since Nov. 29, 1882, serving a life sentence for the murder of his wife, received notice yesterday that he had been granted a special commutation by Governor Hughes. The commutation was secured largely through Mrs. Maude Ballington Booth. Flaherty is 60 years of age.

British Reject Metric System.

London, March 23.—The House of Commons yesterday, by 150 to 118 votes, rejected the bill proposing to introduce the metric system in Great Britain.

Fonthill Merchant Self-Slain.

Fonthill, March 23.—Max Root, a business man, killed himself by shooting yesterday. He was about 24 years of age and leaves a widow and a child.

Oklahoma's star will be added to the flag on July 4 next year if the formal admission of the state to the Union takes place before that time. The war and navy departments have agreed upon the arrangement of the forty-six stars to accommodate the new one and to make it easy to add two more when New Mexico and Arizona are admitted. The plan provides for four rows of eight stars each and two rows of seven stars each. The rows of seven are the second and the fifth. The rows of seven can be made into rows of eight when the other territories are admitted, and the arrangement will then be absolutely regular.

To Owners Of Bad Breath—

FOUL ODOR OF INDIGESTION, SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING STOPPED AT ONCE WITH STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odors which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood —every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 53 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Four Killed By Dynamite.

Helena, Mont., March 23.—Four men were blown to atoms Thursday night in a Northern Pacific tunnel near Lombard, as a result of a careless workman tamping a hole with a steel instrument. The names of the dead were unobtained.

Transvaal Bars Asiatics.

Pretoria, Transvaal, March 23.—The Upper House of Parliament yesterday passed the "Asiatic ordinance" providing for the exclusion of the Japanese and other Asiatics, who are immigrating to South Africa in increasing numbers.

FAMINE RELIEF WORK.

Premier Stolypin Admits Government Has Made Mistakes.

St. Petersburg, March 23.—After a long debate yesterday in the Douma on the formation of a "Famine Relief Commission," in which the Social Democrats and other Radicals fought the Centre party, who defended constitutional control of the commission, as proposed by M. Roditcheff, Constitutional Democrat, Premier Stolypin announced that the Government fully joined in the proposition made by M. Roditcheff, and would give its full assistance to the work of the commission. M. Stolypin's speech was delivered in a conciliatory manner. He admitted the Government had made many mistakes in the famine relief work.

The Premier's announcement of the Government's agreement with the Constitutional Democrats was the first approval by the Government of the policy of that party.

FOR PENNY POSTAGE.

Australian Government Open For Reciprocal Arrangements.

Melbourne, Australia, March 23.—The Federal Government has decided to introduce a bill during the next session of Parliament establishing a two-cent rate of postage on letters not only throughout Australia, but with all parts of the British Empire and all foreign countries that will deliver two-cent letters from Australia.

Bridge Swept Away.

Southampton, March 23.—Denny's bridge, on the Saugeen River, two miles east of here, was carried away by the ice at noon yesterday. The river is now jammed full of ice for a mile up from the mouth, and fears are entertained for the safety of the Victoria street bridge.

The Saugeen Electric Light Company's plant, which supplies light for Southampton and Port Elgin, was also damaged, and last night both towns were in darkness owing to the high water.

Train Struck Street Car.

Detroit, Mich., March 23.—Two persons were fatally injured and nine others, all girls, were more or less seriously hurt yesterday when a street car was struck at the Fourteenth Avenue crossing by a Michigan Central railway train. The fatally injured are James C. Smith, aged 55 years, Detroit; Miss Charlotte Martin, Mason City, Michigan.

Newly Discovered Work of Menander

A highly interesting discovery is announced from Egypt. M. Lefebvre, one of the inspectors in the service of the Egyptian department of antiquities, has been fortunate enough to disinter a large number of leaves of a papyrus codex of Menander, containing upward of 1,200 lines. The publication of this most welcome discovery should enable modern scholars for the first time to form an independent judg-

JEROME WILL APPEAL

If Judge Is Opposed to Appointment of Lunacy Commission.

Generally Thought That Thaw Will Be Sent to Mattewan—Jury Are Excused For Four Days—Counsel to File Affidavits—Commission Will Consist of Alienist, Lawyer, and Layman—Prisoner Very Uneasy.

New York, March 23.—A perfunctory session of the Court was held yesterday morning. Judge Fitzgerald excused the jury until 10.30 Wednesday morning, pending his examination of affidavits in the insanity issue.

Harry Thaw came in very nervously, and nodded jerkily to his friends.

His wife was in court, dressed in blue and looking quite refreshed.

Mr. Hartridge appeared for the defence.

Thaw left the court when the jury retired. He was very uneasy during his short appearance.

Delmas Was Away.

Mr. Delmas was not absent yesterday through any disagreement among counsel, but simply owing to the unimportant nature of the proceedings.

Behind the action of District Attorney Jerome in getting on the record at the Thaw trial the statement that the defendant is insane lies a determination on the part of the prosecution to make one of the most bitter legal fights ever known in this country, and have the question of Thaw's sanity settled beyond any and all doubts before his fate shall be placed in the hands of the jury. This means the decision of Judge Fitzgerald will not play such an important part as was generally supposed.

Jerome May Appeal.

An adverse decision on the District Attorney's suggestion that a commission be appointed will not stop Jerome in his efforts to have such action taken. It will simply spur him to greater activity along these lines. Mr. Jerome is thoroughly convinced that Thaw is in such a mental condition at the present time that he should not be on trial, and there is more than one legal road open to him to accomplish his purpose. The easiest and most simple is a direct appeal to the appellate division of the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to restrain the jury from any further consideration of the case of Thaw until the appellate division has passed on a motion for the appointment of a lunacy commission.

Thaw's Peculiar Desire.

Thaw yesterday, in his cell, is protesting against the naming of a commission in lunacy. He insists that his lawyers permit him to address a memorial to Judge Fitzgerald. They have refused to allow it. They evidently fear that the memorial might prove dangerous to their client.

Lunacy Commission.

If Justice Fitzgerald decides to appoint a Commission in Lunacy it will consist of three members, an alienist, a lawyer, and a layman. The alienist must necessarily be one who has not figured in any way in the case. The Commission, if chosen, will examine Thaw, and report to the court. If it were to find him sane, the trial would be resumed; if otherwise, Justice Fitzgerald would be obliged to order Thaw's confinement in the Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Mattewan.

BOY'S HEAD CUT OFF.

Four Year Old Lad Run Over By Street Car.

Toronto, March 23.—Ronald Young, the 4-year-old son of Albert Young, was run over and killed by a southbound Dovercourt car in charge of Motorman William Hurst, yesterday afternoon.

The baby's head was severed from its body and the right arm was crushed.

Little Ronald was playing on the sidewalk in front of his home. He wandered down the street and made for the tracks.

The people on the corner did everything to attract Hurst's attention, but to no avail. The car came on and, as Hurst applied the brakes, 60 yards below where the child was struck, the jar threw the baby off the fender under the wheels.

Family Frozen to Death.

Bathurst, N. B., March 23.—On Wednesday afternoon, during a heavy gale, the roof and the upper portion of John Comeau's house was blown down. The family had to leave the house.

Comeau took one child to the nearest house, a quarter of a mile distant, and was returning for the rest of the family when he got lost in the storm.

Reaching the house the following morning, in a very exhausted state, he found his wife and three children in the snow, frozen to death.

Alleged Count Decamps.

St. Catharines, March 23.—John Moreland, an alleged Russian count, who secured a position as a window-dresser and has been cutting a considerable swath in social circles here the past few weeks, is gone. His popularity led him into all kinds of excesses and he "flew high."

Yesterday he hired a team of horses and drove to the Falls. He didn't return and the team was located at the bridge.

Moreland is supposed to be a graduate of a Swedish university.

Tried to Save McKinley; Mad.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 23.—James Parker, who attempted to save the life of President McKinley by striking the arm of Czolgosz as the latter fired the fatal shot at the President, is in jail here, a raving maniac.

Fleet to Visit Quebec.

Quebec, March 23.—Four ships of the first cruiser squadron of the British navy, namely, Good Hope, Armyll, Roxburgh and Hampshire will visit Quebec this summer, likely about the middle of June.

Wrecker Of York Loan

Sentenced to Five Years In the Penitentiary.

Nemesis Overtakes Joseph Phillips After Two Years--Pleads Guilty to Making False Statement of Mortgages and Liabilities--Other Charges Are Dropped--Scathing Remarks of Judge Winchester.

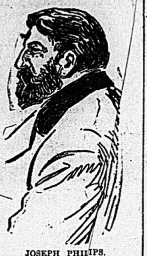
Toronto, March 25.—To the surprise of even Crown Attorney Drayton, Joseph Phillips, former head of the York County Loan and Savings Co., pleaded guilty in the Sessions on Saturday to a charge of making a false return.

Phillips was indicted for publishing a false statement, viz., the annual statement of the year ending Dec. 31, 1904, in which the company's mortgages on land were overstated by $6,465.20, and the liabilities to shareholders were understated to the extent of at least $1,000,000.

Five years in the penitentiary was the sentence.

How He Took It.

Although his gaze only dropped to the floor when it was pronounced



JOSEPH PHILLIPS.

Joseph Phillips received the sentence of five years in Kingston penitentiary as a blow.

The former president and manager of the York County Loan and Savings Co. had expected a better fate; a lighter sentence. He argued that his services rendered to the National Trust Co., liquidators of the concern he wrecked, his turning over to them the shares of the Toronto Life Co., aggregating $58,000, would count for him. Instead, at the end of a long address delivered to the shifting Phillips, as the latter stood, clad in his heavy overcoat, in front of the prisoner's dock, Judge Winchester handed out the maximum penalty for the offence to which Phillips had, a few moments before, pleaded guilty.

122,000 Victims.

In passing sentence Judge Winchester said in part: "There are about 122,000 poor people, servant girls, widows and others, who put their savings into this company and have been disappointed. Had you taken them into your confidence and asked them to wind up the company when the Government took away your lapses, you would have escaped these charges.

"The evidence shows you were using the funds of the company and the shareholders could not have reached them if you had succeeded.

Must Punish Fraud.

"All the frauds must be punished if the public is to be protected.

"The charge is a most serious one. Our national institutions must be carried on with all honor and honesty. In this you have failed.

"I will only pass sentence on the false statement to which you have pleaded guilty, but I have considered all the others and the fullest penalty of the law should be inflicted. You will be imprisoned in the penitentiary for five years."

The other charges were dropped by the crown attorney.

O'Brien Buries Hatchet.

London, March 25.—William O'Brien, Nationalist member of the House of Commons for Cork, has announced his intention of absenting himself from the present session of Parliament, in order to avoid further friction with the Irish party, which has now virtually accepted the Government's proposals for Irish legislation. Thus there is no longer any serious divergence, Mr. O'Brien explains, between himself and the party. It is understood further that Mr. O'Brien and his friends have decided to drop all pending litigation with the followers of John E. Redmond.

$30,000 Fire at Kingston.

Kingston, March 25.—Soon after two o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in McKelvey & Birch's store on Brock street. The fire brigade kept the flames in the hardware and stove departments but the three floors were entirely gutted. The plumbing department and workshops were untouched.

The loss is $30,000 on stock and building, with a fair amount of insurance. The fire started from a defective electric wire.

Editor Left $22,000,000.

Breslau, Prussia, March 25.—Heinrich Von Korn, proprietor of The Schlesische Zeitung, is dead. He was 78 years of age and left a fortune of about $22,000,000. The paper has been in the family for 175 years. It is Conservative in politics and represents the views of the landed nobility.

To Hang April 9.

London, March 25.—The high sheriff has fixed April 9 for the execution by hanging of Horace George Raynor, convicted of the murder of William Whitely.

Provincial Appointments.

Toronto, March 25.—The following license commissioners have been appointed:

Prescott—Robert Rown McEvoy, Francois Xavier Cadieux, Octave Martin.

East Middlesex—James Crockett, R. Ambrose Powell, Frank R. Shore.

West Nipissing—J. F. Templeton, David Laporte, Adrien Deslauriers.

Jonathan Hall Shields succeeds William Hixon Young, resigned, as police magistrate of Halton County.

William George Mahaffy, Bracebridge, and George Herbert Sedgewick, Toronto, solicitors, have been appointed notaries public.

Robert Edwin Stevenson, Bradford, succeeds W. R. Strong, resigned, as clerk of the second division court of Simcoe County.

George McDonald, Pembroke, succeeds William Jewell, resignel, as bailiff of the first division court, Renfrew County.

Laurier Sails April 5.

Ottawa, March 25.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated yesterday that he fully intends to said for England on April 5.

The Opposition will do nothing to delay his departure, and should the Bourassa resolution regarding "women; wine and graft," on Tuesday prove too troublesome Parliament will be prorogued for forty days.

This will give the Premier time enough to go and return from London.

R. L. Borden is suffering from a throat affection that threatens him temporarily with loss of voice, but he expects to be fully recovered by Tuesday.

The general impression here, for some reason, is that the threatened exposures on Tuesday will fizzle out. Tremendous social pressure is being brought to bear upon both sides to "forget."

May Succeed Strathcona.

Ottawa, March 25.—It is stated on the best of authority that Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia and Defence, in the very near future will succeed Lord Strathcona as Canadian High Commissioner in London. This is conditional.

Should something happen here within the next few days, the Minister of War will not go to London, but, if that something does not take place, Sir Frederick is to take the High Commissionership.

All this will, it is said, come to pass in the face of Lord Strathcona's pronounced disinclination to relinquish the office he has held so many years.

Judge Fitzpatrick to Retire.

Ottawa, March 25.—It is rumored to-day, and apparently upon good authority, that Chief Justice Fitzpatrick is to retire from the bench on May 1.

Mr. Aylesworth is entitled to the succession, and it is said that the number of judges will be increased at the next session so as to provide room for one or two additional judges from the Province of Quebec.

Suicides In Lodging House.

Toronto, March 25.—A most deliberate suicide came to light on Saturday night at a York street lodging house, when an unidentified man, who had applied for a room Friday night, was found dead in bed.

One end of a piece of tubing was in his mouth, the other being fastened to the gas jet. Every mark of identification had been carefully obliterated.

Hot In Washington.

Washington, March 25.—All previous records for hot weather in Washington for March were broken yesterday, when, according to the officials of the weather bureau, the thermometer at 2.40 o'clock registered 92 degrees.

Dainty Wash Materials

An inspection of our advance WASH GOODS showing is like a foretaste of summer days. Only an inspection can give you an adequate idea of the comprehensiveness and beauty of our new assortment.

Our assortment is not only large but conservative, as each pattern is exclusively ours—and coming in short lengths of from one to two dresses will not be common.

Ideal buying conditions enable us to purchase our goods at much better prices than is possible to those not enjoying such conditions. The advantage we offer you in our moderate prices.

If you have wash goods needs of any description, we feel confident of our ability to give you as wide a selection at every price as is obtainable in this city or elsewhere. Make your selection while the assortment is at its best now.

TIMELY TOPICS.

In another column will be found the advertisement of the Toronto and Belleville Rolling Mills, of this city, which establishment advertises for young men to learn the rolling mills business. The facts of the case are that the rolling mills management desires to increase its output by running double shifts, or night and day, and find the labor problem a hard one. They now find that, in order to secure skilled men, they must train those men themselves. Hence the ad. The Company prefers local young men if they can be obtained. The chance appears to be a splendid one, which young men of good physique, fair intelligence and proper ambition should jump at.

It is gratifying to note that the whirligig of time has brought many changes in this city. Not many years ago the complaint was heard that Belleville could not keep her young men, who grew up, secured their education, and then had to go elsewhere to earn their daily bread. Things are changed with a vengeance when a local institution finds it necessary to advertise for young men, offering them, as an inducement, the opportunity to learn one of the best-paying trades known in any country, and steady employment at the same. Not the least gratifying feature is the evident prosperity of the rolling mills, which are managed by wide-awake, progressive men. Long may they wave! Belleville's Black Eye has become Belleville's Pride.

Not all the members of the City Council, it would appear, are in favor of issuing debentures to raise that extra $3000 needed by the Board of Education. One prominent member of the Council is quoted as believing the money in question should be raised along with the other income from taxes. Get it over and done with at once, he says, we have more than enough twopenny-ha'penny debentures lying round now. The Board of Education, of course, won't care how the money is raised, so long as they get it.

It must be disquieting to globe trotters to learn that steamers in Japanese waters are still reported to be striking floating mines sown in the sea during the war. The matter is one that might reasonably receive the attention of The Hague Tribunal. If such devices are to be regularly used it will take years after peace is proclaimed to fix the loss a war may cause.

The temperance people of Collingwood will ask the Town Council to raise the license fee for saloons to $25,000. That ought to hold them for a while.

• • •

Speaking on Saturday night a member of the Board of Education said: "I know of several cases where school teachers have purchased supplies out of their own pockets. I told them to send in the bills for the supplies to the Board, and I would personally try to have them paid, but they declined." They were probably afraid of calling down upon their heads the splutterings of some self-constituted autocrat, who fails to realize that the world moves, and that people must move with it, or be shoved aside.

There will be little sympathy for old Joseph Phillips, President of the defunct York Loan Company, who on Saturday was sentenced to five years in the pen. by Judge Winchester. Some of the victims may have received a small dividend before he gets out. But are no others besides him to be punished? He may be the chief swindler, but, judging by what came out when the company smashed up, he was not the only one, oh! dear no.

• • •

It is to be hoped that the Sanitary Inspector is getting busy these days, looking after some of the back yards. So soon as the ground dries up he should insist that such places are given a thorough cleansing. It is the duty of the city and of every individual citizen to guard against disease, and one of the most effective means of doing this is to maintain a condition, approaching as near as possible to perfect cleanliness. Disease germs may lurk in millions in the very places in which their presence is least suspected. At this season a thorough inspection should be made of all open closets in the city, and the owners should be required to thoroughly cleanse and disinfect such places. The practice of depositing refuse in certain localities within the city limits and permitting it to accumulate, and the custom of filling up pits, etc., with the same material is a sure means of breeding disease, not only in the places in which the refuse is deposited, but also on the thoroughfares along which the stuff is carted to its destination. Clean up, by all means, clean up.

The Peterboro Review man must have been hit pretty hard, when he breaks out like this:

"Miserable man! No sooner will he get over the spasm of buying his wife a new spring bonnet, than he will have to beat carpets and put up with two or three weeks of spring housecleaning annoyances and disturbances. This is indeed a trying world."

Seventy-five suffragists, who made a demonstrative raid on Parliament, in London, England, were arrested for brawling and will each spend a month in jail. Thus will the tongue of these would-be female voters be silenced for thirty days.

• • •

The man on the next block will be glad when Lent is over. He gave up ice cream during the period of penance.

• • •

For some time efforts have been in progress to wind up the York Loan. But now it looks as though President Phillips has been wound up first.

• • •

Talking about Lent, the West Belleville people came near giving up the footbridge yesterday.

• • •

It might be well, now that the bridge has received such a shaking up, to rebuild it entirely. It has been a shaky old institution for some time.

• • •

The McMaster band, so far as noise is concerned, is not "in it" with the Salvation Army. They haven't even got a big drum.

• • •

The fact that 900 old soldiers were poisoned by hash, and the London Lancet is shouting for a Government investigation of the sausage, shows that many a joke turns out to have grim earnest not far behind it. Now, if somebody found that poison lurked in the prune, what would boarding-house keepers do?

"MY WIFE'S FAMILY."

It is seldom that a play meets with the universal endorsement of managers, theatregoers and the press in general on its initial production, but an exception last season was that of "My Wife's Family" which comes to the Carman next Thursday. The company presenting the comedy, interpreting the three acts of fun and music, is one of the best on tour, while the costuming and stage setting and electric and mechanical effects are correct in detail. There are two dozen musical numbers, all of the whistling order, to be heard in "My Wife's Family."

The McMaster Band

MADE A GOOD IMPRESSION ON A LARGE CONGREGATION IN THE BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT

The McMaster Evangelistic Band opened a two weeks campaign in the city yesterday, and a large congregation assembled in the Baptist church last night to hear them. The service consisted of hymns, musical features by members of the Band, and brief addresses, also by members of the Band, which, by the way, is composed of the following young men:

W. A. Cameron, B.A., leader,
C. S. Edwards, B.A.
J. M. Warner, B.A.
V. A. Ray, B.A.
D. H. Williamson.

They are all, with one exception, graduates of McMaster University. The exception has not yet taken his degree, but will return to college to do so.

The tour on which the Band is at present engaged began last September, and will close in June.

As to last night's service, probably one of its most impressive features was the evident earnestness of the young fellows in the limelight. It was a most serious matter with them, that was plain to be seen. It was pleasant to note, however, that there were absolutely no sensational methods, and none of the speakers indulged in what are vulgarly known as "fireworks." Just a bunch of bright-faced young chaps, eager to tell, in a cultured way, the Old Old Story. The leader, Mr. Camron, has a fine voice and good delivery, coupled with a rather neat sense of humor. In outlining the future programme in Belleville he said there would be no long sermons (the sigh of relief which went up was not quite so loud as a March zephyr). They were not all preachers, he said, but believed it was time that men of all walks of life should do what they could to win souls for Christ. The musical features were excellent. Messrs. Cameron and Williamson sang a duet, "I Heard the Voice," Mr. Williamson sang "The Pilot Song" in a way which marked him as a fine vocalist, and the male quartette gave "Beautiful Land" in a very finished and harmonious way. In his address the leader asked the co-operation of all denominations in the mission. They hoped to have a choir of at least seventy-five, and possibly an orchestra.

The sermon of the service, short and very much to the point, was preached by Mr. Warner, whose text was

"To-day, if ye hear His voice, harden not your hearts."

It was an earnest call to all not to neglect present opportunities, and at its conclusion the leader remarked, "I wish all lawyers would preach sermons like that."

The McMaster Band has had great success in other places, and hopes to have the same in Belleville. They are fairly sure to arouse and hold interest in this city, for they are evidently young men full of zeal, who tell, in speech and song, the old fundamental truths in an up-to-date and interesting way.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

A Policy Of Secrecy.

There seems to be a conspiracy of secrecy at Ottawa to prevent the Opposition finding out the particulars in connection with accounts presented by the Grand Trunk Pacific, amounting to $162,000.

Three times by a straight party vote the Committee on Public Accounts refused to send for the statements and vouchers covering the original claim made against the Government for construction work in the prairie and mountain section. The auditor of the Grand Trunk who made up the account was summoned to appear, but disregarded the summons and sailed for the Mediterranean. His assistant testified that the statements presented to the Government and kindly returned to the company had been destroyed. The accounts from which it was made up remained, but when the witness was asked to produce them Mr. Fielding and Mr. Emmerson, supported by a Liberal majority in the Commons, voted down the motion. As the account presented called for nearly a million dollars, and the suppressed items amount to $162,000, and cover outlays for promotion, legislation and preliminary expenses of doubtful character, the country has some right to know who got the money.

Why is it that the Government is so determined that the country shall not know how it happened that, just at the time the Ministry was giving out this extraordinary railway contract under which the company gets a transcontinental road practically at the expense of the taxpayer, the Grand Trunk has to pay $162,000 in "preliminary expenses?" Why is it that the Government keeps these expenses so secret? Why is it that the entire force of Parliament is exerted to prevent us from knowing who got the money?

The Spring Assizes.

In addition to the cases already noted by us from day to day during the sittings, the following cases were disposed of:

Garnsey vs. Jess. — The action is for slander. Both parties are farmers in Sidney, the plaintiff being a tenant on defendant's farm. Action settled between the parties. A. A. Abbott for plaintiff; Porter & Carnew for defendant.

Welsh vs. Trenton Electric Co. — This case awakened considerable interest, having arisen through the plaintiff's son, a young man, going out on St. Charles street (where one of the defendants' electric light wires had fallen across the street), to protect the public from coming in contact with the wire, which was a live one carrying over 2000 volts. While thus engaged in protecting the public he himself came in contact with the wire and was instantly killed by the shock. The plaintiff alleged negligence on the part of the company in not securely fastening their wires to the pole and allowing the fastenings to become rotten, whereby the wire fell. The case was settled by, the defendants paying a very substantial sum for damages and costs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; S. Masson for defendants.

Weese vs. Best. — The parties live in Bancroft; plaintiff was tenant to defendant of Queen's Hotel. By the lease plaintiff was to pay taxes, which he failed to do. Defendant sued him in Division Court for the taxes, but failed, owing, as alleged, to the plaintiff swearing that he had settled the taxes with defendant and it was shown in an agreement signed by the parties but which was not produced. The defendant contended the agreement, notwithstanding the plaintiff's oath to the contrary, had nothing to do with the taxes and they were not mentioned therein. Upon finding the agreement it showed defendant's contention to be the right one, and it did not mention the taxes at all. Defendant then summoned plaintiff before Police Magistrate Jarman for perjury in swearing the agreement did mention and settle the taxes. On the trial the plaintiff was discharged, as alleged for lack of corroborating evidence as to what he had sworn to in Division Court, and brought this action for damages for malicious prosecution. The action was settled by the plaintiff withdrawing the case. G. G. Thrasher for plaintiff; Porter & Carnew for defendant.

Bird vs. Davis. — The plaintiff is widow of Rev. W. Bird, who died here about ten years ago. The defendant was formerly an agent, selling stock in Hastings Loan Co., and is now interested in a Cuban Land Co. Plaintiff alleged that defendant had wrongfully procured her to transfer to him 10 shares of $100 each of stock fully paid up in the Hastings Loan Co., and without any consideration or advice and improvidently. Judgment declaring the transfer null and void and revesting the shares in plaintiff. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff. Mikel & O'Flynn for defendant.

Bird vs. Goldsmith. — This case was similar to the last case, plaintiff being the same person and defendant Dr. Goldsmith, of this city. Plaintiff charged that the defendant had wrongfully procured her to transfer to him 28 fully paid up shares of $100 each in Hastings Loan stock, and also to deed to him certain Park lots near Albert College, without any consideration and without her knowing or understanding what she was doing. Defendant contended she made the transfers of her own free will. Judgment setting aside the transfer of both the stock and land and revesting them in Mrs. Bird. Plaintiff to pay costs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff, Mikel & O'Flynn for defendants.

Lucas vs. Gordon, Milligan vs. Brenton, Kennedy vs. Dunkley; all these cases were laid over to the non-jury sittings in May next.

Bayside Wedding

On Wednesday, March 20th, a very pleasant event occurred at the home of Mr. Alex. Kincaid, Bayside, when his granddaughter, Miss Nina Palmer, was united in marriage to Mr. Ed. Jeffrey, of Sidney. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Stella Palmer, of Wellington, while the groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Frank Jeffrey. The Rev. H. W. Foley tied the nuptial knot. The bride looked her best in a dainty wedding gown, and carried carnations. After the ceremony about fifty guests partook of a most sumptuous supper, provided by the hostess. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain, and to the bridesmaid a pin. The many and pretty gifts to the bride indicate the high esteem in which she is held by a host of friends in White's Church and the surrounding country. The happy couple are spending a few days among acquaintances in North Hastings before taking up their home on the Vandewater farm, near Hogle's school. Mrs. Jeffrey's many friends wish her much joy in her new home and surroundings.

Remember that Gorman's are specialists for men's and women's fine shoes.

There will be a public meeting in the City Council Chamber in the City Hall, Belleville, on Friday, the 29th of March, 1907 (Good Friday) at 2 p.m., which will be addressed by Mr. A. E. Sherrington, of Walkerton, and Mr. M. R. Baker, B.S.A., from the Fruit Division, Ottawa. These gentlemen will discuss the question of "Co-operation" among the fruit men, which is now becoming such a prominent feature in connection with fruit growing in all parts of the Dominion, and will also deal with different other practical subjects in connection with the actual growing of the fruit, pruning, fertilization, cultivation, spraying, etc. The Dominion and Provincial Governments have sent out gentlemen to give this instruction for the benefit of the fruit interests of the country, without expense to the people in the districts where the meetings are held, and both Governments are naturally anxious that fruit growers should take an interest in these meetings, and make it a point of attending them, if possible. Kindly make this matter known to any fruit growers in your locality.

Lincoln and Mrs. Pickett.

In her book "Dixie After the War" Mrs. Myrta Lockett Avary tells the following Lincoln story in connection with General Pickett, who led the charge at Gettysburg: Mr. Lincoln had taken warm interest in young George Pickett as a cadet at West Point. During his hurried sojourn in Richmond Lincoln's carriage and armed retinue drew up in front of the old Pickett mansion. The general's young wife came out, with her baby in her arms, and said, "I am General Pickett's wife."

"Madam," Lincoln answered, "I am George's old friend, Abraham Lincoln."

"The president of the United States?" she asked.

"No," with a smile, "only Abraham Lincoln, George's old friend."

The child reached out his hands, and when Lincoln took him in his arms he kissed the president.

"Tell your father," said Lincoln, "that I will grant him a special amnesty—if he wants it—for the sake of your mother's bright eyes and your good manners."

FIND PREHISTORIC BONEYARD.

Excavations Reveal the Largest Mastodon Ever Uncovered In Alaska.

What is perhaps the largest mastodon ever uncovered completely in Alaska was uncovered during the last six months at a place near Circle City by Max L. Lohbrunner. The exact place of the location of the mastodon is on Alice Creek, a tributary of Mineral Creek, which flows into Woodchopper Creek.

To judge of the other dimensions of the animal it must only be said that one tusk of the mastodon which is still intact is over nine feet eight inches long, and has a circumference of eighteen inches. The jaws of the animal still have teeth four in number in the jaw. Each of these teeth, which have been taken out and replaced, weigh fifty pounds apiece. The other parts of the mastodon are in a poor state of preservation compared with the tusk, although the bones that have been collected weigh in the neighborhood of 1,000 pounds.

Lohbrunner, who got the bones, dug them out at a depth of eighty feet below the surface of the ground. It took a great amount of care and pains on his part to see that the bones were not burned to charcoal while he was excavating and thawing the ground.

Lohbrunner has moved part of the animal into storage at Circle City and will hold it there until the spring time, when it will be removed to Seattle, where it will be put together and eventually find its way into the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, if the Smithsonian Institution does not get it before that time.

In speaking of his find Lohbrunner said: "Alice Creek, where I found this mastodon, is perhaps one of the most wonderful on earth, from the standpoint of research. It seems to be the boneyard that a lot of the prehistoric animals made for in order to die or to be killed. We have found on the creek the skeletons of mastodons, muskox, caribou, bear, and other animals. If this creek ever goes into a hydraulic mining proposition the world will be astounded with the many finds of bones of animals of prehistoric times."

ALASKA'S BIG BEARS.

The Largest Flesh Eating Animals In the World.

Very few persons really know that the largest flesh-eating animals in the world are found in America. People generally believe that the African lion is the king of beasts, but he is not nearly as large or as powerful an animal as the large brown bear of sub-Arctic America.

The bears are not as ferocious or combative as the lions, nor are they nearly as vicious as they are given credit for being, but the largest of them are much larger and more powerful than any of the lions. It is safe to say that the largest of the brown bears of the north would weigh three times as much as the largest specimen of lion, and is beyond all question greatly superior in strength.

If brought together in combat, the bear would at first appear very clumsy. It would not be capable of the quick rush or the catlike spring of the lion.

It would not attack, but would remain entirely on the defensive, meeting its adversary with blows of such rapidity and terrific force as at once to illustrate its superiority not only in strength, but in action. I do not believe that there is an animal in the world that can act more quickly or effectively or can aim its blows with greater certainty than the bear.

The large brown bears of the Alaska peninsula, south of the Behring Sea, are among the largest bears of the world, and it is evident that there is no part of the world outside of America in which such large flesh-eating animals are found. The bears are flesh-eaters, or carnivorous, yet there are none of them that depend upon flesh for food, and with most of them flesh comprises but a very small percentage of their food.—Scribner's Magazine.

Railways of Canada.

The total number of miles of railway in operation in Canada in 1906 is placed at 21,353, as compared with 20,487 for 1905. But seventy-four miles of iron rails now remain as a relic of former days. As indicative of the expansion in transportation facilities it may be pointed out that 3,071 miles of railway were under construction on June 30 last, as compared with 1,066 on the same date of the preceding year. The total number of locomotives is placed at 2,931; first-class cars, 1,239; second-class cars, 716; cattle and box cars, 61,929. The grand total of cars of all classes in use is 99,874. Of these 91,015 are fitted with automatic couplers and 85,616 with air brakes.

Statistics of traffic show 27,989,782 passengers carried last year, and 57,966,713 tons of freight. The number of passengers increased by over two and one-half million, and the number of tons of freight by over seven millions, as compared with the preceding year. The total earnings of railways for the last year were $125,322,865, as compared with $106,467,198 for 1905. The capital invested in Canadian railways has reached the large sum of $1,332,498,704. The records of fatal accidents last year shows a death list of 16 passengers, 139 employes and 206 others killed in various ways, a total of 361, as compared with 468 in 1905. Only one passenger in 1,749,361 was fatally injured. In respect to passenger traffic earnings the report shows total earnings of $33,392,188, for a total train mileage of 28,071,648, giving earnings per mile of $1,189. Electric railways show a total mileage at the end of June last of 813 miles. Ontario has 441 miles, and Quebec comes next with 198 miles. Net earnings for the year totalled $4,291,834. Twelve passengers were killed, as compared with 30 in 1905.

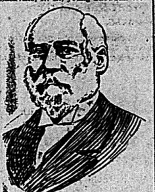
DIED IN HARNESS.

Lieutenant-Governor Snowball's Useful and Honorable Career.

Hon. Jabez Bunting Snowball, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick who dropped dead last week in Fredericton while on his way to attend service in the Cathedral, had had a long and useful career in Canada. He had not been very well for more than a year, but was able to attend his public duties. He opened the session of the Legislature on February 14, and had since been daily at his office in the Parliament Buildings.

On February 5 last Hon. J. B. Snowball completed his five-year term as Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, but was still in the office when death came. He was born in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, in 1837, his father being Rev. John Snowball, a divine of the Methodist Church. After graduating at Mount Allison Academy at Sackville, N. B., young Snowball took up his residence at Chatham, and entered into partnership with John McDougall in a general store. Later he became interested in the fishing industry, and the company, of which he was later president, now controls lobster factories along the whole Gulf coast. As a lumber operator he was probably at his best. He owned the largest saw mill on the Miramichi river, and ranked second only to Alexander Gibson as a manufacturer and exporter of lumber in New Brunswick. About four years ago Mr. Snowball formed his business into a joint stock company, under the title of the J. B. Snowball Co., Ltd. His sons, William B. and Robert A. Snowball, are respectively, manager and outside manager of the company. Between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 feet of lumber are cut by the company each year. Mr. Snowball also assisted in the building of the Canada Eastern Railway, and the branch of the Intercolonial to Chatham, and to the time of his death he controlled the latter branch. For some years Hon. Mr. Snowball sat in the Commons, and when he retired, in 1891, was called to the Senate, retiring in 1902, to accept the Lieutenant-Governorship.



LATE HON. JABEZ BUNTING SNOWBALL.

SUNDAY IN CANADA.

What Our Neighbors Across the Border Think of Us.

The New York Times says of Canada's right to keep Sunday exactly as it chooses there is no doubt at all, and not much about its right also to make the day one of complete rest—and tedium—to such foreigners as venture into the territory ruled by that not recently mentioned but probably still existent Lady of the Snows. Nevertheless, Canada's new Sunday law does have a most ancient and archaic odor, and one cannot help wondering if it represents Canadian opinion to any great degree than did our own passage of a law abolishing the army canteen.

Everybody who has ever been in Canada knows that people who believe in keeping, and especially in making others keep, Sunday with Scottish rigor are not rare there. People of that sort have somehow managed to survive in Canada in much greater numbers than in New England, for instance, where they were once the whole population. We question, however, if they are anything like a majority, and can only explain their success in bringing about this legislation on the theory that they have terrorized the Canadian politicians exactly as our prohibition ladies terrorized our Congressmen. The Province of Quebec, being equally conservative in another way, has stuck to its own notions, and the result is that there the continental Sunday will be found with moss-grown Puritanism all around it.

Oh, well, Canada is a great country, and its people are a fine people. They are good neighbors now, and they will be better neighbors when in name as well as in fact they decide to become a self-governing nation.

The Climate of the West.

In a recent issue of a Toronto paper, describing the death of some family from the cold in Saskatchewan, there was a despatch from Port Hope, Ontario, telling of the freezing to death of brother and sister near that town. They had run short of fuel and the former was evidently unable to travel to the nearest village to secure the necessary supply. Harrowing tales are told of the losses of cattle in Southern Alberta. Would it have been possible for them to have kept alive if they had been left out in the fields of Ontario all winter to get their own food? The losses have occurred simply because the Albertan winter climate is so mild as an ordinary thing that many did not take the precautions to guard against an exceptional year.—From the Edmonton Saturday News.

Large or Small Cows.

Large cows are not always the most profitable. It costs more to keep large cows than small ones, and they don't always give enough extra milk to pay it back; but, generally speaking, large cows have more vitality than small ones, which helps them to make good use of food. Whether large or small, a cow to be profitable must be healthy.—Farm Press.

CHILD LABOR IN CANADA.

The Rising Generation Must Be Protected From Lurking Dangers.

Canada is on the threshold of a great industrial development. Now is the time to place the conditions of industry on a sound basis, before the evils that have grown up under older civilizations have made headway. Great Britain has had to deal with the evil of child labor in factories. In the Southern States of the Union the employment of children has become a great abuse, and Senator Beveridge is making a strong effort to protect children by legislation. The speech of Mr. T. H. Preston in the Legislature was timely, and a prudent reminder that the same problem must be taken up here.

Mr. Preston says that Ontario has fallen behind in this respect, instead of taking a true position in the van of civilization. The age limit provided in the Shops Act, ten years, should be made to conform with the age limit in the Factory and Truancy Acts, 14 years. Ten years is too young for employment in a store. No educational standard is required of children before they are permitted to work, and many illiterates are employed. The law says that a girl under 18 must not be employed for more than 10 hours a day; but there is no limit for boys, who may be employed for any number of hours, either night or day.

Another defect is that the provisions of the Factory Act do not apply to work done in the home. Dwelling houses are often the worst of sweatshops, and in New York children three years of age have been found making artificial flowers. Again, the Ontario laws do not provide for dealing efficiently with street trades, such as the selling of newspapers. In some cities boys under 10 and girls of any age are forbidden to sell newspapers; yet a six-year-old boy was found at night telling tales to excite the sympathy of customers, and a newsboy of eight years was run over and killed.

Mr. Preston also says there should be a law forbidding boys under 16 to work in any place where liquor is sold, and a law defining what are dangerous occupations for children. Abundant evidence has been produced and that well-considered measures are required.

CANADA IS VICTIMIZED.

German Cutlery Sent Out As Sheffield—Produce Market Good.

Some valuable hints to Canadian producers and shippers, as well as to importers, are contained in a report to the Trade and Commerce Department by the agent at Leeds. He notes the arrival of a consignment of Canadian Baldwin apples, packed in boxes of 125 apples each, which were remarked as being far ahead of New Zealand fruit. They brought from $1.44 to $1.56 per box. Canadian bacon and hams are reported to be in good demand, as is also hay of the proper quality at $20 to $24.50 per ton.

He says that Canadian pig iron, if of more uniform quality, would command 50 per cent. higher prices. As it is it sells for 110 shillings per ton, as against 54 to 60 shillings for Middlesborough. Swedish, however, sells for 130 to 200 shillings. In the matter of the cutlery trade he says: "I am informed, that a very large amount of German cutlery, razors, etc., is shipped from Germany to Sheffield and is then exported and sent to Canada as Sheffield goods."

The West Is Moving.

C. R. Morden of Regina, Sask., recently spoke of the outlook for the west as follows:

"The west is a moving country. I have seen great development in the last two years both in rural and urban places. It is wonderful, the improvements in Regina in the last seven months. I think there are several reasons why the west is being rapidly developed. For instance, no country has ever been advertised the way the Canadian west has been advertised, as the means of international advertising is in a more perfect shape today than it ever was before. Again, it is the last west, and the people are convinced of that.

"The means of transportation are more thoroughly equipped than at any time and people can make their desired home with less resistance than it was possible before. Lack of opportunity in older countries induces large numbers to come to this land of opportunity. Steam plows, traction separators, self-binders, wide drills and other farm labor-saving devices are bringing about the quick development of this country and consequently a quick rise in land values. No fencing or fertilizing problem confronts the westerner, which gives the land a strong earning power.

"They are cosmopolitan people. They are there from all over the world. For instance, I conducted an auction sale of oxen and furniture in the City of Saskatchewan and there were people at that sale from the Argentine Republic, South Africa, Australia, the United States, England, Scotland, Germany and Russia.

"I think the Hudson Bay Road is bound to be built. I suppose we westerners are what you consider an unconventional class, and we are not strongly tied with old party prejudices; and we are convinced that the way to get what we want is to demand and vote for it; so you can be sure that the Hudson Bay Road will be built. I do not know that it will make any difference with the eastern cities; probably it will in some ways, but with the growth and prosperity of the west, the eastern cities will manufacture, and to supply the western area will be kept good and lively. There will be a network of railways all through that country in a very short time. The grading is a simple matter over that level country and the Hurley track-laying machine is a quick operator, so you see the construction is comparatively simple and the business is already there for them."

SAFEST WAY.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

Speak gently to your peevish boss;
  Have nothing mean to say;
Hand back no talk when he is cross,
  Lest he cut off your pay.

Speak gently to the surly "gents,"
  Who come into the store;
Their ire is apt to wax intense,
  In case you make them sore.

Speak gently to the women folk,
  They are a captious crew;
And you will find it is no joke,
  If they get after you.

Speak gently to these people all,
  Throughout the daily strife;
And then go home and vent your gall
  Upon your helpless wife!

A Yankee who says he went to bed intoxicated and woke up married furnishes a strong argument in favor of total abstinence.

Harper's Weekly says: Daniel Webster—a very thoughtful man—loved to fish. Grover Cleveland loves to fish. Theodore Roosevelt can hit the line a pretty good lick, but we don't believe he could fish if he tried ever so hard, though he might cut bait.

The King's hats, which are of a pattern peculiar to himself, being a trifle higher and more curly in the brim than those worn by most of his subjects, took the fancy of the Parisian gilded youth, so that the "chapeau Edouard" may now be seen adorning the heads of many well-known boulevardiers.

Tar and feathers are not a peculiarly American punishment. Richard the Lion-Hearted first proclaimed this punishment. It was when he was setting out for the third crusade that he gave warning that a "robber who shall be convicted of theft shall have his head crippled after the fashion of a champion, and boiling pitch shall be poured thereon, and the feathers of a cushion shall be shaken out on him, so that he shall be known."

As a matter of fact, the great weakness of Tommy Atkins is not for the mean music hall song, but for sentimental ditties bordering on the maudlin. Anyone who has attended a soldiers' 'singsong' will know what we mean, and we have it on the authority of a war correspondent who went through the Natal campaign, that the most popular of all the camp songs, was a dolorous song called "Mother." Tears and tomb and blighted affections form the staple of the songs which appeal most effectively to the private soldier.

When one reads of a short horn bull selling for one thousand guineas ($5,220) he must naturally conclude that there is plenty of wealth in the land where this happens. This was the price obtained at Perth, Scotland, for Achilles, a first prize senior yearling, in February. This, of course, was a special animal for whose possession there was quite a struggle at the sale. The next animal in the same class brought three hundred guineas. In the junior yearling class the first prize bull sold for nine hundred guineas, and there were others in his class which brought six hundred, five hundred and four hundred guineas. A total of three hundred and ten bulls averaged £63 17s. an animal—an aggregate of one-half a million of dollars. Pride as well as wealth must have much to do with the making of such prices.

They do say that an American heiress of well-known name is never by any chance allowed out of sight of one or more responsible persons, who act in the capacity of a bodyguard or secret service men. The luckless girl can never move outside the domicile for a run in the park or a trip down the avenue or to pay a visit to another girl unless accompanied, not merely chaperoned. Chaperones do not count nowadays. And wherefore these precautions? Simply because mademoiselle is such an heiress she is a quarry for fortune-hunters and a recognized class of conspirators who stick at nothing in their social brigandage. Formerly it was the detrimentals whom mamma feared; now it is a much bolder schemer that may swoop down any moment and carry off the dove of millions. Funny, is it not, that such a state of things should have developed in America?

Why not get a better clerk—if the present one don't "make good?" Want-advertise for one.

FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

For All Such People in Belleville We Guarantee Vinol Will Create Health, Strength and Vitality, or Return Money.

Hundreds of old people right here in Belleville need just such a strength maker and body builder as our delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol; and we simply cannot understand why they will continue to drag out a half-dead and half-alive existence, when we guarantee Vinol will infuse new life, invigorate every organ in the body, stop the natural decline and make them well, vigorous and strong.

Vinol is not a strong stimulant which reacts on the system, but it is a genuine tonic and body builder which creates strength by building up every organ in the body to do its work as nature intended, and makes rich, red blood. In this way it stops the natural decline and replaces weakness with vigor. We wish every old person in Belleville would try Vinol on our guarantee to return money if it fails. Take a dose of Vinol after each meal and every night before retiring and note its beneficial effect. J. S. McKeown, druggist.

DOCTOR ASSASSINATED

Mob in Morocco Attack French Mission Station

Europeans Besieged In Their Houses—British Consul Fires On Crowd—Two Men Killed—Troops Sent to Dispose the Mob—Two Warships Despatched to Tangier—May Precipitate Change In Policy.

Tangier, March 25.—Despatches from Morocco City say that the killing by a mob of Dr. Mauchamp, who was connected with the French Geodotic Mission, was followed by a general attack upon the Europeans besieged in their houses, and that the British consular agent was forced to fire and killed two persons.

The pasha finally sent troops to drive off the mob. The troops are still guarding the houses, although comparative calm has been restored.

French Warships For Tangier.

Toulon, March 25.—The armored cruiser Jeane d'Arc, and the third-class cruiser La Lande, sailed yesterday for Tangier.

French Cabinet Called.

Paris, March 25.—Premier Clemenceau, Minister of Foreign Affairs Pichon and Minister of War Picquart conferred yesterday concerning the Morocco situation and it was decided to summon an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet for to-day.

Public opinion is greatly exercised over the assassination of Dr. Mauchamp, which, it is argued, should be the signal for a complete change in the French policy in North Africa.

MURDER FOLLOWS CRITICISM.

Man Slain For Commenting on Child's Nervousness at School.

Carmi, Ill., March 25.—Rehearsal of closing exercises at a country school house near here Friday ended in a tragedy and the arrest of a farmer for the murder of a man who had been his friend and neighbor for years.

George Nicholson and John Kurd were seated together, listening to and criticizing the recitations given by the children. Both had little daughters taking part in the program, and there was no hint of trouble until Nicholson's little girl started to say her piece.

Kurd made a remark on her nervousness, which Nicholson resented, and in a moment both men were quarrelling. Nicholson drew a revolver, and, pressing it against Kurd's side, fired. Kurd died instantly.

BONES OF FAMINE VICTIMS.

Prospectors Discover Skeletons of Indians Who Perished Years Ago.

A party of St. Lawrence Island prospectors have just returned to Nome and tell of the finding of skeletons of a native tribe that perished as a result of famine more than twenty years ago. There were 150 skeletons in all, bearing evidence of the suffering which the victims must have endured at the time. The weapons found with the bones were of the most primitive sort.

A native guide told them that the victims knew of other settlements of natives farther south, but that there had been a feud between them for nearly 100 years before the winter in which all had perished.

The guides said a whaling vessel had come to the southern portion of the island during the summer previous to the famine and that instead of spending the season in hunting and fishing the natives had idled away their time. The catch of seal and walrus that year was very poor and the tribe found itself at the approach of cold weather practically unprovided for.

The winter was severe. One heavy blizzard followed another all through the season, and the natives were unable to hunt or fish. Gradually they died, and before the warm weather came again all had perished.

The prospectors say the tale of the guide seems borne out by the discoveries.

Jap Colony In Canada.

Apparently Canada has no fear of a Japanese invasion. A scheme is on foot for creating a Japanese agricultural colony in the heart of Alberta. Well to do Japanese farmers are to be taken out to turn their attention to the raising of wheat and the cultivation of sugar beets and anything else which will thrive in the climate. The negotiations are being carried out by B. R. Nagatany, who proposes, according to the China Telegraph, to buy 50,000 acres from the Canadian Pacific.

SUNDAY GAMES O. K.

Bishop of Carlisle Speaks of Artificial Sins.

London, March 25.—The Bishop of Carlisle declared himself in favor of Sunday games in the course of a speech which he delivered at Carlisle, at a meeting in support of the National Sunday Observance movement.

"I am distinctly in favor of opening museums and picture galleries on Sunday, but I would have people of leisure act as custodians and guides to visitors to these places," he said.

"It is the same with Sunday games. Recreation is not a sin. We have enough sins in the world, without going about manufacturing artificial sins."

Lid On At Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 25.—The new Lord's Day Alliance law was strictly enforced yesterday at Niagara Falls.

Not a souvenir, ice cream or tobacco and cigar stand was open yesterday, nor an American paper sold in the city.

Many of the residents wended their way to the American city and spent the day and their money there, and the Canadian city was as quiet as a churchyard at midnight.

Rev. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, was here last week.

Ontario Girls to Beware.

Hamilton, March 25.—The Hamilton police have been asked by the American immigration authorities at the Falls to investigate reports of girls being taken from Hamilton, Toronto, and Brantford, and other places in Ontario, to Buffalo for questionable purposes.

The traffic in young girls between here and Buffalo is said to be astounding, according to information furnished the police.

Shaken Again.

Kingston, Jamaica, March 25.—A violent earthquake shock occurred here at 6.40 Saturday evening. The people were panic-stricken. A number of walls damaged in the previous quakes were thrown down. So far as known nobody was hurt. The tourists on the steamship Bluecher just missed the experience, as she sailed shortly before the shock was felt.

You have No Reason for Not Using

Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that the drug cures do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo.

Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy. One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach, when they had sick headache. And there is nothing better.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It wont hurt you any more than will the soda.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time.

If you are using a drug remedy, why not discard it?

Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all must sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain.

If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

Don Q. bowed in his courtly manner. "Whose ears I regretted being obliged to add to my little museum up here in the mountains—the same, senor." He began to read—"Don Q has the honor to send herewith the person of Pablo Gomez, formerly of his band, who has committed the unpardonable indiscretion of holding to ransom, on his own responsibility, the Senorita Dona Inez de Lucas. Don Q., as all who acquaint themselves with the great events of the day are aware, has never during his long, memorable and blameless career, held to ransom a lady. Don Q. trusts that his excellency the governor of the prison of Castelleno will, as a man of honor, clear the name of Don Q. of the stigma cast upon it by the horrible action of the scoundrel, Pablo Gomez, and garrote the fellow on the highest point of the prison roof in the sight of all the world.' After that the usual greetings of farewell. Does it appear to you, senor, that I have made my meaning plain?"

"Very much so," replied Lalor.

The chief clapped his hands and Robledo came running up the path to the cave. Giving orders to bring Pablo and the senorita into his presence. Don Q. resumed—

"You must understand, dear friend, that the rabble of the plains are but too glad to soil the record of a man so much better than themselves. I could naturally cause Pablo to be killed in many excellent ways. I could, for instance, blindfold him and request him to walk 10 paces forward—the ninth step including a fall of 400 feet. This little promenade, when explained beforehand to the person of whom there is question, causes a highly unpleasant quarter-of-an-hour, I can promise you, senor."

In a moment a group of men, haling with them a reluctant captive, appeared climbing the path. In front of them walked a handsome girl of, perhaps, 20 years of age. She had the graceful gait of her nation, and the droop of her shapely figure, her extreme pallor, and the appeal in her beautiful eyes seemed to touch the long-chilled heart of the chief.

He rose, and with conspicuous elegance of movement, swept his hat to the ground.

"Senorita, I kiss your feet."

The girl grew whiter as she gazed at the baldbrowed vulture aspect of Don Q. She turned to Lalor, and, reading pity in his glance, she begged him to plead for her.

"There will be no need senorita," replied Lalor, in halting Spanish. "Don Q. is your best friend.

"I beg you, senorita, to accept my most humble apologies for the indignity with which this miscreant has treated you." The chief pointed to Pablo. "I have written to the governor of the prison of Castelleno to deal with him to the utmost severity of the law, while you shall be conducted with all care and tenderness to your family."

"You are about to set me free?" cried the girl.

"Doubtless, you have heard many things of me, Dona Inez," replied Don Q. sadly. "Have those stories ever included one of cruelty or imprisonment imposed upon a woman?"

"No, no, senor. You are good, you deprive me of words!" she faltered. "How can I thank you?"

"Very easily, most beautiful flower. Be good enough to make it well known in the plains that in whatever manner I may deal with men, my bearing toward ladies is above reproach. Cruel falsehoods have been spread about me down below there. You will more than repay any small service I may have been fortunate enough to render you, if you will clear my reputation of the slurs certain unworthy creatures have thrown upon it."

"I will tell them. I thank you with all my heart, senor."

Don Q. turned to Lalor.

"Amigo," he said softly, "you will go with this lady to the lower pass. You can reassure her as these rough ones never can."

On Lalor's return a few hours later to the cave, he found Don Q. in unusually good spirits.

"By this time the guardias civiles have charge of our good Pablo," he remarked, "Robledo will see him enter the gates of the prison, and in a day or two will bring to us news of the execution. Perhaps, dear friend, you think I have shown weakness in allowing that rascal to get off so cheaply, considering his crime in causing distress to the senorita, who is indeed as beautiful as rumor declared her to be. But what will you? I, of all persons, cannot afford to lose my good name."

"You have never thought of retiring from the sierra—from your profession?" inquired Lalor.

Don Q., who had been huddled by the fire, sat up. The glancing flames played over him, and never had the contrast between his fragile body and fierce heart been so apparent.

"But senor, you appear not to comprehend this matter!" he exclaimed, his thin voice taking on the sibilant sound of anger. "Your question is ill-considered. It proves that you have failed to understand the motives which led me to adopt my present profession. In business, perhaps, as in that of the wineseller or the dealer in vegetables, which has as its object the amassing of a competence, one hears of persons retiring. But have you ever heard of a poet, an author, an artist retiring?"

Lalor hastened to acknowledge that he had not.

"The same rule applies to me," pursued the chief haughtily. "The excitements of my life and the greatness of my career are as dear to me as ever, and the idea of leaving them is intolerable!

"A man of my eminence cannot disappear. No, senor, the feud between the law and myself will never be ended until I am dead. And when the names which to-day appear notable in the land, are forgotten, men will still speak of Don Q. My fame and my doings have enriched the Spanish language."

"Senor, have you no fear of capture?" Lalor could not withhold the question.

"Ah, no, my dear friend, none," the thin claw-like fingers were spread to the blaze, "none whatever. I shall die at my own time and in my own fashion."

The young author sighed. He had grown almost attached to the strange inhuman outlaw, whose nature, as he now knew, could be touched to such fine issues.

"Why do you sigh?" Don Q. asked in his courteous way.

"Pardon me," exclaimed the young man impetuously, "but who of us can say that luck will forever be on his side? You are here alone. Those about you are wolves—you have called them so. And wolves will drink each other's blood. Listen to me: England offers a safe retreat. Come there—"

The delicate yellow hand went up to deprecate further urging.

"I thank you, Senor Lalor. As for me, have no fear. When I die, it will be here. And unborn men will fear to linger alone among the sierra, where the great chief of the sequestradores lies asleep."

* * * * * *

On the third day reports circulated that Pablo Gomez, the brigand of the sierra, had expiated his many crimes.

Robledo was free to return to the mountains, but one little half hour must still be snatched to further his own affairs. Perhaps those who read may remember a certain Isabellila with a fine ankle and lustrous eyes, also those dark eyes were lit with lovelight for the ragged, brave and picturesque Robledo. The thought of her tempted him to delay. It was nightfall when he strolled into a narrow lane to sing a serenade of passion and farewell under a barred window, but a sound of hurrying footsteps coming down the street, Robledo and his guitar were at once swallowed up in the darkness of a neighboring doorway.

Two men appeared striding swiftly along the line of shadow, but as they drew near Robledo's hiding place, a shaft of moonlight through a break in the house roofs caught the half-muffled profile of one of them. Robledo first started and crossed himself, then with a quick, monkey gesture he put out his hand and touched the cloak of this person as he passed. It felt rough and real enough to thrust all notions of ghosts out of the brigand's mind.

This was no apparition, but Pablo Gomez very much in the flesh.

Robledo comprehended that this portended serious trouble against the whole band of the sequestradores in the sierra. He himself could not guess what it might be, but he would hasten back with the news to Don Q., who knew everything, who could defeat every stratagem.

Robledo inserted one lean brown hand behind a bar and drew himself up to the window until a comely, powdered face and his own sun-browned one were close together, and a brief whispering ensued. Two minutes later he dropped down, wiped some powder from his lips, and slid away through the shadows. On the second day he was urging his mule at a speed it had never before attained through the Boca de Jabili.

"Well, my child," said Don Q., gently, when Robledo once more stood before him, "you have fulfilled my commands or you would not be here?"

"Yes, lord."

"And the vile Pablo has been garrotted?"

"No, lord."

The chief's livid eyes flickered ominously at the young man.

"Corpse of a scullion! You have dared to disobey me!"

"No, lord, no! On the third day it was spoken on authority from the prison that Pablo was dead, and that his excellency the governor had given 50 pesetas to pay for masses for his soul."

"Go on."

"I desired to see the dead body, and I went with the crowd to the prison, but none were admitted. So I waited, for it is not good for a poor man to bring news on hearsay to my lord."

The chief nodded impatiently.

"When dark fell I went to the house of my cousin, for I was doubtful," Robledo went on with nervousness.

"With a guitar?" sneered the chief venomously.

"It is true, lord." The robber crossed himself, for Don Q.'s knowledge always seemed uncanny. "I carried my guitar in order to make those who met me believe that my service was to a lady's eyes, not to my lord of the sierra."

"And the name of the cousin is Isabellila, is not that so?"

"Yes, lord." Robledo was apprehensive, but the importance of his news gave him courage. "While I waited two men came down the street. One was the porter of the prison gate, and the other had the face of Pablo."

A spasm of fury seemed to shake Don Q.

"Ah, infamy!" he whispered half to himself, then louder—"And what did my good Robledo think? That he had seen a ghost?"

"No, lord, for I spoke to my cousin at the window—no more. Isabellila had heard—for her mother has the washing from the prison of the laces and the linens of her excellency Dona Catalina—that one said at the prison that Pablo had been spared, and another executed in his name. That is all!"

Don Q.'s peaked nose sank from sight in the breast of his folded cloak, and he sat brooding in his bird-like attitude for many minutes.

At length. "Robledo."

"Yes. lord."

"You will give this money—it is $500—to thine Isabellila."

Robledo bowed and muttered his eager gratitude.

"And you will forget all you have told me."

"It is forgotten, lord."

"Also there is a message for Isabellila."

"Yes, lord."

"Say to her that if she fails to procure the earliest news of all that passes in the prison I will cut off the nose of her cousin Robledo. . . . Go!"

"The governor of Castelleno is, in truth, a vain fellow, but I believed in his honor. I have been too generous. Never again, senor, will I trust in the motto of noblesse oblige."

Lalor inquired what he supposed the authorities meant to do.

"They have given Pablo his life on the condition that he betrays me. That, of course, is clear. Pablo Gomez is to lead them here to the Boca de Lobo!" he laughed with sibilant mockery. "So the governor dreams of my capture—dreams that Pablo will guide him to my unknown retreat? It is well! For Pablo will find no path to follow. And more, senor, I say to you that before many days are over the monks of Castelleno will have grown husky with singing masses for the soul of that very infamous caballero and calumniator, Don Hugo, governor of the prison of Castelleno."

Days passed, and spies departed from the valley and found their way back again; ragged goatherds and charcoal-burners came cringing and crossing themselves into the presence of the chief, who seemed to tear out the inmost soul of each with a brief question or two and the glare of his malignant eyes. Lalor listened, marvelling more and more at the intuition with which Don Q. pierced to the bottom of every man's knowledge.

News from the plains grew more and more ominous. Stories floated up of infantry arriving and encamping outside the town of Castelleno because the barracks were full. Military maneuvers were publicly discussed, though the troops assembled hardly amounted to the number necessary for even a fragmentary rehearsal of the tactics of war. Then in the dusk of one starlit night half-a-dozen messengers followed upon each other's heels with the news that a systematic movement had begun towards the sierra.

In fact, Don Hugo, the governor of the prison, had gained from Pablo Gomez a fairly clear knowledge of the topography of the Boca de Lobo, the valley in which Don Q. had always found safe retreat, baffling the expeditions sent out against him. It was approached by a tunnel-like passage and, as far as the band knew, had no other outlet. The governor boasted that the capture of the great brigand was now but a matter of time. He would be bottled up in his valley and secured by an overwhelming force. After this the governor promised to put him in a cage in the grand Plaza of Castelleno for the crowd to gaze at. Upon the third day he would be garroted in public with much ceremonial to impress evil-doers.

All these sayings were faithfully carried to Don Q.

"Imagine this animal without honor to whom I sent Pablo!" he exclaimed to Lalor. "Truly I took an overhigh view of humanity! As to my garrotting in public—" he laughed. "Come with me, Senor Lalor, and see how Don Q. begins to stand at bay."

He went out and stood on the edge of the terrace and clapped his hands. The valley was unusually full, for all outlying parties of the band had been called in. From the fires and shelters the men hurriedly collected in a group looking up at their chief.

"Place yourselves in your ranks, my children," the sibilant voice cried softly, and the three-score and odd picturesquely-clad figures fell into line. The chief examined them slowly between his eyelids before he spoke again.

"My children, there are many soldiers and many of the civil guard coming from the plains against us. I am told that 300 hope to stand where you now stand before three days pass. We shall see."

The men broke out into a tumultuous defiance of words and gesticulations. For a moment only, and then the yellow, meagre hand again imposed silence.

"We are 70. I shall not need so many to protect me. Every alternate man fall out, and stand together."

They did so. Don Q. looked them over in their turn.

"Thirty-four. That is well," he said. "You will scatter, you will go down into the plains and lose yourselves in the towns. Go where you will, but, my children, remember, lead always honest lives, give none occasion to speak against you. And when I have destroyed the army of the governor of the prison of Castelleno, I will in due time send for you again."

The wild faces were painted with astonishment and awe. Who but Don Q. would prepare to resist a powerful force by half disbanding his own? The very act added to the mysterious reputation he already owned.

Next morning a similar scene was gone through. Again the chief carefully examined the men, gave orders for every alternate one to fall out, exhorted them to lead honest lives and dismissed them with the same formula.

By this time Lalor noticed that, with the exception of Robledo, the chief had got rid of all the staunch and most reliable men of his band. It seemed strange that in a moment of such peril, he should retain the least loyal about his person. He ventured presently to ask Don Q. a question on the matter.

"I have my little design," replied the chief, smiling with a cruel inflection of his thin lips. "You perceive that I have already made an immense impression on my people—when they come to hear all, it will be yet deeper. As for these wolves, these jackals, rather," he pointed a scornful finger at the fellows remaining in the valley, "they are quite good enough for the purpose I intend them to serve."

"What are we going to do then?"

"Senor," said the chief, turning his bald-browed peaked face to the young man, "we—that is, you and I—are about to part. Perhaps the hour of my death draws near. Should you be sorry, tell me?"

Lalor caught the sad smile on the other's lips.

"I believe I should," he said.

"Then, senor, if I die yonder, you will grant me a favor I am about to ask of you?"

To be continued.

An Autocrat of The Poultry Farm

By Otho B. Senga

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

Josiah Preston always had been of a despotic disposition, but his natural tendency in this direction seemed to strengthen after his remunerative experiments in poultry raising.

Josiah's mind apparently held but one thought—his hens. The earth was made for the sole purpose of providing them with a scratching ground. The sun rose to give them light and warmth; night followed day that they might have time to rest.

When Flower Preston, Josiah's only daughter, came home from boarding school, and her father discovered by diligent questioning that the words incubator, brooder, trap nest, bone cutter elicited no answering enthusiasm, he grunted sarcastically, "A gal that's been to boardin' school for three years and don't know a leg band from a bone cutter!"

"You must learn about things as soon as you can, dear," whispered the mother nervously. "If you can't talk poultry talk with your pa you might just as well be in the desert of Sahary!"

"There's one comfort," continued Josiah; "I ain't raised the only fool there is in this county."

"There, there, pa," Mrs. Preston spoke soothingly. "What is the matter?"

"Squire Curtis' boy got home from college t'other day, and what do you think, instid of studyin' law so's to help his pa, he's been studyin' bugs. Four years in college, and don't know a thing but bugs!"

"Maybe his pa wanted him to," remarked Mrs. Preston pacifically.

"Waal," harshly, "I can't crow over Squire Curtis none. His boy don't know nothin' but bugs, and, as near as I kin figger out, that gal don't know nothin' at all. The only advantage is it took her a year less to learn it!"

When young Curtis began calling at the farm, which he did with suspicious promptness, Josiah's cup of misery was full.

"For the land's sake," he exclaimed testily to his wife, "can't you go in there and set?" indicating with his thumb the room from which came the sound of young voices and laughter. "You let that gal git boys and bugs inter that slim brain of hern and she won't be good for nothin'."

"There, there, pa, don't talk so loud. You didn't want my ma to come in and set when you used to come to see me."

Josiah's face purpled; he clutched at his collar band as if he were choking.

"You don't mean"— he gasped.

Mrs. Preston nodded.

"Don't take it so hard, pa," she murmured soothingly. "Jim Curtis is one of the likeliest young men, and"—

"I could stand it better if 'twan't for the bugs," he moaned feebly. "If he didn't want to be a lawyer like his pa, why didn't he take up somethin' sensibler than bugs? What good is a bug? Bugs—millions on 'em—couldn't hatch out one chicken!"

"He's studying bees now, pa, and they're good for honey," appeasingly; "he has ever so many hives—newfangled ones—in his pa's back yard."

Josiah only groaned.

"And, pa, it's all arranged, only I said he'd have to be old fashioned enough to ask your consent, and Flower, like a good girl, said she'd never marry anybody without her pa's consent. That's a good deal nowadays, pa."

Perhaps it was because of Josiah's reputation for irascibility, perhaps because the young man felt that he could express himself more satisfactorily in writing, that his formal application for the consent of the autocrat reached Josiah by mail.

The old man read the letter several times, groaning and grunting. When he rose there was a grim smile on his face and a look of determination in his keen gray eyes.

This was on Thursday. In the evening Mrs. Preston reminded him—"Aren't you going in to see Jim, pa?"

"Dunno's he's callin' on me," testily.

"But you—his letter"—

"I ain't in no hurry to answer it. I'm makin' up my mind."

A similar reminder the next evening met with a like rebuff.

But on Saturday evening Josiah did not want to be reminded. He marched into the "best room," carrying a small basket, and displayed its contents—twenty large eggs, fair and beautiful, to the astonished young persons.

"There, young man," he growled, "there is my answer. Three weeks from tonight, if you bring me fourteen chickens out'n them twenty eggs, I'll give my consent."

"All right, Mr. Preston," returned the young man, easily, "I shall be on hand."

"Pa Preston," cried Flower, indignantly. "Jim doesn't know anything about chicken raising, and"—

"Time he did, then," sharply. "He'll have a chance to show what four years of science is good for. And any little thing he don't happen to know you can learn him," and with a sardonic chuckle the autocrat tramped out, leaving a greatly perplexed young man and a dismayed, tearful girl.

"He knows you can't do it," she sobbed. "Three weeks from tonight."

"Good thing he gave plenty of time," observed Jim, cheerfully.

"Plenty of time!" echoed Flower despairingly. "Why, Jim, don't you know that twenty-one days are required to hatch chickens?"

"Well, I'll buy a hen on my way home and put her right to work," with twinkling eyes.

"There's very little chance of your being able to get a sitting hen," gloomily.

"Is that a particular breed?" innocently.

"Jim Curtis! Don't you know that you must have a hen that wants to sit? You can't make one hatch eggs if she doesn't want to."

"Well, I can buy an incubator," undauntedly.

"You'd be four or five days late by the time you could order one and have it shipped here. And tomorrow is Sunday. Oh," she cried understandingly, "pa had it all planned—that's the reason he wouldn't see you until tonight."

"I know, Flower," with sudden inspiration, "I'll make an incubator. Come out and show me one of your father's, so I may get an idea of the principles involved. Come!"

Slightly encouraged, Flower led the way. Meeting her father, she asked coolly: "Have you any objections to my showing the incubators to Jim, pa? He's going to make one to hatch those eggs."

Preston grinned.

"No objections. Not in the least. Go ahead! Show him all about 'em, and tell him everything you know. 'Twon't burden his brain none. He might put the eggs into cold storage while he builds the incubator."

On Tuesday of the third week the autocrat remarked sarcastically: "I saw Jim this morning, Flower. I told him if he brought the chickens I'd announce the engagement in the county paper an' give you $300 for weddin' folderols."

Flower set her red lips in a firm, straight line. She had not inherited all her characteristics from her submissive mother.

"Lend me your pencil, pa. I want to make out a list of wedding folderols."

Saturday evening came, but Mr. Curtis did not appear.

"Where's the bug professor, Flower?" asked her father tauntingly.

"He's wrapping the chickens up in cotton so they can't take cold," retorted Flower spiritedly.

The old man smiled grimly, but the smile died away as Curtis entered the room.

"I'm a little late, Mr. Preston," he said cheerily, "but here are your birds."

He handed the autocrat a flat wooden box, which the latter opened with trembling fingers. He removed a sheet of cotton, displaying a number of fluffy, sleepy, peeping chickens.

"There are eighteen," remarked Jim carelessly, "four more than you asked for, but I put them all in for good measure."

"Them chicks didn't come out'n the shell today," he declared with conviction.

"No," answered Jim quietly. "They came out Thursday."

Josiah gazed at him in actual consternation.

"I hope, Mr. Preston," courteously—"I hope there is no doubt in your mind that these chicks came from the eggs you gave me?"

Josiah shook his head mournfully.

"No," he said slowly. "They're all right. I know the strain."

He sat in silence pondering over the mystery.

"'How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour,'" suggested Curtis, smiling. "Bugs are good for many things, Mr. Preston."

The autocrat sprang up excitedly.

"Jumping gingerbread!" he exclaimed. "I'll bet a dime you hatched them eggs out in the beehive."

Jim laughed pleasantly.

"I surely did, Mr. Preston. When Flower showed me the incubators three weeks ago tonight, I observed that the temperature was similar to that in my beehives. I verified this on reaching home by placing a thermometer in a hive. So I put the eggs in the upper section of the hive, separating them from the working apartments of the bees by a cotton cloth. I was positive they would hatch, but you may imagine my surprise when they began chipping the shell in nineteen days."

"I guess I'll put 'em in a brooder," said Josiah, recovering himself somewhat. "These chicks has cost me $300—too expensive to be allowed up dissipatin' at this time in the night."

He bore the precious peepers away, muttering wonderingly:

"Bugs! Hatched by bugs! And two days ahead of time!"

Later the autocrat announced in the county paper the engagement of his daughter to the "brilliant young scientist, James Curtis."

Told Her Woes In Song.

A stately woman of middle age was telling her troubles to a younger woman as they were on their way to an employment agency.

"I have had all sorts of servants," said the stately matron, "and they have done all sorts of queer things, but the colored girl I have now embarrassed me so last night that I really didn't know what to do. My dear, I was so angry I could have cried. Company came in unexpectedly to dinner and there was hardly enough to go around. I served every morsel of all that was on the table, and there was nothing left for the maid. When she came in to clear the table for the dessert she took in at a glance the emptiness of the dishes and her face fell visibly. Then, seizing the crumb tray and beating a tattoo on it with the crumb brush, she danced around the table singing:

"My lord, they've licked the platter clean.
My lord, they've licked the platter clean.

"Of course, I stopped her as soon as I could regain my composure, but not before she had given it away to my guests that they had eaten me out, so to speak. I'll discharge her just as soon as I can get another girl."—New York Press.

MEN ADMIRE

a pretty face, a good figure, but sooner or later learn that the healthy, happy, contented woman is most of all to be admired.

Women troubled with fainting spells, irregularities, nervous irritability, backache, the "blues," and those dreadful dragging sensations, cannot hope to be happy or popular, and advancement in either home, business or social life is impossible.

The cause of these troubles, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs. It acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms. No other medicine in the country has received such unqualified indorsement or has such a record of cures of female ills as has

CHAMPLAIN CENTENARY

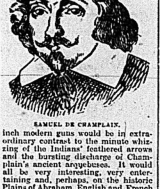
TO BE COMMEMORATED BY A NATIONAL CELEBRATION.

Fleets of the British, United States and French Navies May Be Present — Contrast Between 12-Inch Guns and Whizzing of Feathered Arrows—Champlain Was Founder of Quebec and a Huguenot.

The citizens of Quebec are planning a great tercentenary celebration of the founding of the Ancient City by Samuel de Champlain in the summer of 1608. The project as planned calls for a fund of $650,000, which is a guarantee of the breadth of the program. It is contemplated to have the celebration take place the week of July 3, 1908, and an interesting feature includes the possible presence of fleets of the British, United States anh French navies. The unveiling of a monument to Bishop Laval; a national Canadian parade, tournament, sports on land and water, anniversary services in the churches and brilliant social affairs would add to the visitors' entertainment. The Dominion, the Quebec Legislature and the City of Quebec have been asked for substantial contributions and will probably respond generously. The proposal to invite naval representatives of the three great friendly powers which, in days gone by, fought each other bitterly for the possession of the city, which has been termed the cradle of western civilization, has aroused the keenest interest and the liveliest national satisfaction.

Grand Naval Display.

A naval display, such as friendly rivalry would inevitably suggest to the nations concerned, would form a powerful attraction, and the international aquatic sports which would naturally result from the close association would add immensely to the general program. The booming of 12-inch modern guns would be in extraordinary contrast to the minute whizzing of the Indians' feathered arrows and the bursting discharge of Champlain's ancient arquebuses. It would all be very interesting, very entertaining and, perhaps, on the historic Plains of Abraham, English and French marines would honor, together, the memories of their heroes—Wolfe and Montcalm—whose lives were sacrificed upon the same battlefield in the same engagement. The quaintest old city in British North America will lend itself admirably to such an anniversary held in midsummer.



SAMUEL DE CHAMPLAIN.

Greatest of Canadian Heroes.

Samuel de Champlain, the founder of Quebec, is certainly the first and greatest of Canadian heroes. There is an air of romantic sincerity about him as a discoverer and as a colonizer in new France. He was a man of singleness of purpose and saw the possibilities of America in a marvelously inspired way at the outset; and he set out to accomplish as best he could the dreams of empire that he had in his mind. He knew the Indian character and associated freely with the natives. He was the first to begin war with the Iroquois; and he was also the first to recognize the possibilities of western navigation by the Ottawa rather than around by the southern lakes at the time. He is also the original discoverer of the Province of Ontario, having entered this province from the Ottawa and Lake Nipissing, and having come south to Lake Ontario.

Kingsford, the Canadian historian, gives an interesting sketch of Champlain and tries to prove he was really a Huguenot, certainly his Christian name would help to bear this out; but whether he was a Huguenot or not he recognized the state religion and did his best to establish it in America and to propagate it among the Indian tribes.

Buried In Quebec.

He died and was buried in Quebec, and it is a surprising thing that his place of burial has been lost. Kingsford records that some fifty odd years ago when a trench was being cut for the purpose of a sewer, an unknown grave was encountered by the workmen. The coffin and remains were taken some place, where nobody remembers. But this is now considered to have been the body and resting place of the hero of Canada. There is a magnificent statue of Champlain in the City of Quebec commemorating the foundation of that place by him 300 years ago. Of the great Frenchmen who are identified with the Government of Canada for 150 years, Frontenac and his great rival, Laval, stand out prominently, but neither was the devoted son of Canada that Champlain was. He loved Canada for Canada's sake and is far beyond anyone else, the true founder of the Dominion.

A Chamberlain Who Is Different.

Arthur Chamberlain, the eldest brother of the great politician, is very unlike his brother in many ways. For one thing he is opposed to him in politics; also he does not wear an eyeglass. Seeing, however, that a Chamberlain would not be a Chamberlain without some mannerism, he invariably wears the pinkest of pink neckwear.

CHINOOK HAS FAILED.

Sunny Alberta Has Suffered Severely From the Extreme Cold.

This winter has proved a disastrous one to "Sunny Alberta." The extreme cold and the abnormally heavy snowfall have wrought great havoc amongst the cattle on the ranches; and while it is not wise to accept the extreme statements that find their way east, the fact remains that the situation is sufficiently serious Alberta has often had snowfalls that were fairly heavy, but the warm chinook soon laid bare the grass again, and the ranches suffered little loss; but this year the chinook has failed, and cold and starvation have done their work all too well. This may mean a setback to ranching in the west, although it does not mean that ranching will be to any large degree given up. Possibly it may be shown that to some extent provision may be made against conditions produced by just such unusual winters as the present. The check at the worst will prove but temporary, as the country is to rich and fertile to be allowed to remain idle. This is but one of the reverses that pioneers everywhere may expect to meet, and while we sympathize with the losses of our western ranchers we utterly mistake their character if one hard winter will suffice to discourage them.

REINDEER AT LABRADOR.

Dr. Grenfell Points Out Advantages of Their Introductions.

At a recent dinner given by the Canadian Club in Toronto, Dr. Grenfell, the famous Labrador medical missionary and author, spoke of his plan to introduce reindeer into Labrador. The inhabitants at present, he said, rely chiefly on the fisheries as a means of subsistence, and in the winter they have nothing to do, and in consequence of this there is much suffering. Reindeer, according to Dr. Grenfell, could feed upon the rich growing mosses, and supply the people with milk, food, and, besides, could be used as a means of transportation. The experiment had been tried in Alaska with great success, and Dr. Grenfell thinks he can raise the necessary funds to bring reindeer into Labrador.

Japan's Women Toilers.

Four-fifths of the operatives in Japanese mills are women, probably due to the fact that they will work for less than the men, who can do better outside. Men are only employed when absolutely necessary, such as for bosses, loom fixers, the heaviest card room work, etc. Weaving in Japan is almost entirely a woman's job, as spinning is with us. The fact that the looms are run almost entirely by women was of considerable advantage to the mills during the war, as they were not affected by the calling out of the reserves.—From a Consular Report by Special Agent Clark.

CANADA AND THE NAVY.

Would Expect Larger Share of Protection If Contributing To Its Cost.

The debate on the address recently was enlivened by a statesmanlike and tactful speech from Mr. Balfour dealing with Mr. Harold Cox's proposal that the question of larger colonial contributions to the cost of the navy should be raised at the approaching Colonial Conference.

The proposal was ill-advised. If we study the question from the colonial standpoint, we shall see that there are strong political reasons against any such a request being pressed by the Mother Country. Canada, for example, needs first and foremost the assistance of a powerful army to defend her southern frontier. That England is not attempting to give her. The Monroe doctrine incidentally protects her against aggression on the part of any power other than the United States. She knows that the British Navy is now almost entirely concentrated in home waters, and if she contributed to its costs she could scarcely be expected to acquiesce in this condition of affairs. As for Australia, that country is much exposed to foreign attack because its population is so exiguous, but even here a contribution in cash is undesirable. Far better would it be for the Australians to form a navy of their own or to train and equip a strong land force, which would be of infinitely greater service to the Empire than any tribute of gold.

Mr. Balfour pointed out that the daughter-States of the Empire incur some danger from the Imperial tie, if they also derive real advantages from it. He doubted, and with reason, whether the British Fleet could be diminished even if this country lost its colonies. Mr. Winston Churchill indicated the sound lines on which the Government will act in the Conference. It will endeavor to secure the organization of colonial forces on principles similar to those accepted in England, and it will not put forward foolish claims on account of services conferred on the Empire by the British Navy.

CROP HAS DOUBLED.

Saskatchewan last year produced did Showing In Crop Reports.

Saskatchewan las year produced 63,052,210 bushels of grain, against 46,647,464 bushels in 1905, and 27,525,272 in 1904, or a gain of very considerably over 100 per cent. in two years. This is the information which the Department of Agriculture will give officially to the world in a few days in their final bulletin on the crop of 1905, a forecast of which President Hopkins announced to the Grain-Growers' convention on Wednesday in so far as wheat was concerned.

The grain crop of the Province last year consisted of 37,040,098 bushels of wheat, 23,965,523 bushels of oats, 1,316,415 bushels of barley, 710,689 bushels of flax, and 19,480 bushels of speltz. In 1905 the figures were: Wheat, 26,107,286 bushels; oats, 19,213,055 bushels; barley, 893,396 bushels; flax, 398,399 bushels; and speltz, 35,328 bushels.

Inasmuch as the average yield per acre last year was not as high as in 1905, although higher than the yearly average for the past nine years, during which records have been kept, the figures demonstrate all the more forcibly the tremendous rate at which the fertile virgin prairie lands of the Province are being brought under cultivation.

The area sown in wheat last year was increased by 600,502 acres, oats by 189,975, barley by 20,619, and flax by 50,690, the latter being an increase of 200 per cent. Out of a total area of 73,048,960 acres in districts wholly or partially under settlement, only 2,501,247 acres were under crop last year, which was an increase of 860,684 acres over 1905. The number of grain farms increased from 18,102 in 1905 to 30,289 in 1906. The average area under crop per farm was 8,257 acres, as compared with 9,057 acres in 1905. The number of threshers employed increased from 1,194 to 1,947.

FROM THE EMPTY TOMB

COME VOICES OF WARNING, JOY AND TRIUMPH.

EASTER MEDITATION FOR ALL

Calvary's Three Crosses—Some Pictures of the Resurrection—Incident At Funeral of D. L. Moody—The Triumphs of Easter—Sin Shall Not Always Have Power—Christ Has Conquered Sin and Death.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 24.—Appropriate to the Easter season is this sermon, in which from the empty crosses and from the empty tomb the preacher hears voices of warning, joy and triumph. The text is Mark xv, 27, "And with him they crucify two thieves, the one on his right hand and the other on his left."

In my lifetime I have seen many pictures symbolic of the first Easter morn. Some of them have depicted Jesus in the garden walking among the lilies talking with Mary. Some of them have pictured Christ stepping out of the tomb amid the prostrate forms of the Roman soldiers. Some of them have pictured Peter and John looking into the empty crypt, where was nothing but the shroud of the risen Lord. But of all Easter pictures the one which impressed me the most was that which used to hang upon the walls of my boyhood home. In the foreground of the picture was a broad winged angel flying. He was a divine messenger bringing to earth the glad tidings of the resurrected Christ. To the right of the picture was the rising sun rimming the eastern hills. And as this sun was crawling over the eastern hills it cast its light upon six pieces of wood which had been formed into three crosses. There stood these three crosses emptied of their human burdens. The horrors of the crucifixion were over. The corpses of the two thieves and of the dead Christ had been quietly laid away in their graves. The decrees of the Roman law had been carried out. No Jesus was there. No repentant dying thief was there. No blaspheming murderer was there. Only the three silent crosses were there. They were mute signs that the horrors of the blackest of all Fridays had forever passed away. There stood the three empty crosses bathed in the glory of the rising sun of the first Easter morn.

As a little boy standing before that Easter picture I used sometimes to wonder if God really did focus the light of the rising sun upon those three empty crosses as he focused the light of the star which guided the three wise men from the east upon the Bethlehem manger when Jesus was born. Does God's sun truly reflect the joy of the Divine Father's benediction? Mr. Torrey in one of his Melbourne addresses gave a vivid description of the death and funeral of his great leader, D. L. Moody. He said in part: "When I stood up to speak, there lay the body in front of me, and there sat his wife and children with heads erect, not bowed, their eyes looking right into mine with a peaceful, triumphant light. When we sang those wonderful hymns about Emmanuel's land and the second coming of Christ, the mourners, as you call them, joined in the singing with shining faces. Then, when all had spoken and that service was over, Will Moody, the son, rose calmly in his place and, turning round to face the audience, gave a triumphant testimony to the power of the risen Christ and the Holy Ghost. Just then, as if a shutter above had swung open, the sun burst through the clouds, and every ray of sunlight that came into the church fell on the face lying still in the casket."

I wonder if it was a mere haphazard chance that the light of God's sun fell upon the face of God's redeemed dead at the funeral of D. L. Moody. I trow not. I wonder if it was a mere iridescent dream of an imaginative artist that made the flood light of the rising sun hover about the three empty crosses on the first Easter morn. I believe if the midnoon sun was able to hide its face behind the black clouds on the day that Jesus was crucified that the same sun could change the beams of Christ's cross into bars of gold on the day that Jesus was resurrected. Let us think of that Easter morn and those significant crosses.

Let us, in the first place, turn our attention to the central cross, upon which Jesus died. Why was this cross left standing amid the glories and the triumphs of Easter day? Why was it allowed to stand there to cast its dark shadow over the beautiful form of a risen Christ? I think God left it standing there for a purpose. He is coming to you and me to-day to say: "Oh, child, amid the songs of rejoicing which you are singing at this Easter season, amid the beautiful flowers with which you are decorating your churches, amid sermons of triumph with which you are celebrating your sacred festal day, you must not forget the price Jesus Christ paid for your redemption? Let the smile be on the lip, let joy come welling up out of the heart as the bubbling brook bursts out of the green moss upon the mountain side, but let the empty cross upon which Jesus died always stand near to remind you of the agony and the sufferings and the crown of thorns with which Jesus purchased your salvation." The cross—oh, the empty cross of the first Easter morn! Who would want to pull it down from Golgotha on the morn Jesus was resurrected? Who would want to obliterate all the memory of the suffering of the atonement with which Christ obliterated our sins! The cross—oh, the cross, the empty cross of Jesus Christ, changed into great beams of gold by the Easter sun! Oh, let it stand in the centre of every picture which symbolizes the joy and the gospel triumph of Easter morn!

But this empty cross of Jesus Christ teaches us another Easter lesson. It is a reminder of the glorious fact that, though for a little while, the scepter of sin may seem to have the world for its kingdom, yet in the end eternal right shall surely triumph. It implies the promise that, though for a little while Christ may be put upon the cross and hidden away in the tomb, yet there will surely come a day when he shall step out of his tomb and all his enemies shall be scattered, even as the Easter morn chases away the darkness of the midnight.

It is not the power making the greatest noise which always has the most enduring strength. Neither is it the day of evil which has the longest twilight. "What are you making such a fuss about?" I asked a bitter January wind some years ago among the Michigan hills. "Oh," answered the wind, "I am going to bring down a blizzard from the far north. Then I am going to pile these fields up with great snowdrifts. Then I am going to freeze the lakes so thick with ice that the lumbermen can drive their sleds loaded down with heavy logs over them. Then I am going to freeze up the ground so tight that it will be as hard as rock. Then I am going to stop all the traffic upon the railroad tracks. Then I am going to starve the snowbirds and the rabbits and freeze to death the deer in the forest ravines. Yes, I am going to make all living creatures tremble in terror before my scepter of ice." And well did the January wind keep its word. It blew until the blizzards came. It blew until the fences disappeared under the falling snow. It blew until it seemed as though man must flee those Michigan hills for his life. But after that north wind had exhausted all its fury and piled up the great snow banks everywhere and hung myriads of icy stalactites from every tree branch quietly and gently the warm sun came out. Then the bright sunbeams kept kissing this snowflakes and kissing that snowflake and changing this blade of ice into a bar of gold and that blade of ice into another bar of gold and burrowing here and burrowing there until after awhile that same sun brushed away every snow bank and began to woo the buds out of the trees and the grass out of the ground, and the sap began to flow, and the birds began to build their nests, and spring and summer took the place of the blizzards and the frosts of winter. Ah, no, it is not the power making the greatest noise which always has the most enduring strength.

"Aha!" cried the sanhedrin. "Aha!" cried the synagogue. "Aha!" cried the Roman profligate. "Aha!" cried all the intrenched forces of sin. "We shall forever live and triumph if we can only slay this upstart, Jesus Christ." So what did they do? They united their forces of evil. They defied and overrode every law of justice. They captured Jesus by night. They ran him to court and tried him by night, which was contrary to every known Hebrew and Roman usage. Then in the early morning they hanged him upon the cross. Then they stood at the foot of the cross and cried: "Aha! We, the powers of evil, have forever won! Aha! Jesus, our denunciator, himself is dead!" And he was dead. Have you ever seen Rubens' greatest masterpiece, called "The Descent From the Cross?" Ah, that picture well illustrates how dead Jesus was!

When your little girl died and the kind friends washed her and dressed her and laid her out in the casket, surrounded by flowers, it did not seem as though she could be dead. There she lay with a smile upon her lips, just as you had seen her lying a hundred times in her crib. As you watched her you could almost see her breast heave and see her roll over in her sleep. Then you said, "Oh, she is too beautiful to be put away in the dark grave!" But in Rubens' "Descent From the Cross" there is no doubt about Christ being dead. His skin is as ghastly white as the white sheet they are wrapping about him. The blue veins seem to be standing out like whipcords upon his forehead. His feet, his hands and his head seem to be hanging as heavy as tons of lead. He could not have been more utterly beyond restoration if he had lain in his grave a thousand years. And yet within three days within sight of his empty cross Christ arose and walked and moved and lived and had his being. My friends, like the crucifiers of old, you may be able to defy Christ for a little while, but remember the day of Christ's burial is to be followed by his day of resurrection. Remember that question of Pilate, "What shall I then do with Jesus who is called the Christ?" must find its echo in "What shall Jesus then do with me at his judgment seat?" Christ in the tomb means Christ coming to his resurrection. The empty cross of the first Easter morn proves it.

But there is another fact I want you to notice about this central cross on Golgotha hill. It proves that even after a man has sinned seventy times seven Christ is willing to pardon him of his sins if he will only throw himself upon the Saviour's grace and love. Christ is not one who claims an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a hand for a hand and a foot for a foot. He is not a Shylock demanding a full pound of flesh nearest to the human heart because "it is so nominated in the bond." But Jesus is one who is willing to give a full forgiveness for all wrong if we are only willing to come and bow at his feet and accept his pardon and his love. Let me illustrate this thought by the picture of the empty cross.

To whom did this central cross rightfully belong? To Jesus? Nay. To the one whose face must have been so pure, so true, so gentle, so loving, that all who saw it must have felt that only love and mercy could dwell there? Nay. That central cross rightfully belonged to one whose brow was scarred and wrinkled with bitterness and hate, to one whose mouth was cruel and merciless, to one whose hairy hands were often covered with human blood. That cross, that central one, rightfully belonged to Barabbas, the murderer and insurrectionist. It rightfully belonged to the brutal murderer whose heart was so hardened that he thought no more of taking human life than a tiger would of slaying a kid. And yet, after all the mockery of that farcical trial was over, after Jesus had been adjudged guilty and sentenced to death, God gave the Jews another chance to accept Christ. Then Pilate came forward and said: "Whom will ye that I release unto you, Jesus or Barabbas? You know, Jews, that once a year it is the custom of the governor to liberate one prisoner. Will ye let me release you Jesus instead of Barabbas?" Yes. Even to-day, after a long life of sin and evil, God comes to us and says: "Will ye now accept Jesus or Barabbas? Which? Which?"

Oh, the mercy of God! Oh, the forgiveness of God! Can any human love surpass it? Can any human love equal it? Aye, human love may be very great, but it is not as great as the love of my Lord and my God. Some years ago I received a letter from a lady in the east which went something like this: "I am a lonely woman who cannot do much in this world. I am what you call a 'shut-in.' But, though I can do but little, I do feel I have strength enough to care for some poor little crippled orphaned child. So if you can find one that no one would care to love send him to me, and I will adopt him and love him and look after him as if he were my own child." Was not that a beautiful letter? But how much more beautiful is this empty cross of Jesus Christ! I hear a voice from the form unjustly stretched upon it saying: "I am on this cross instead of Barabbas. Even after the Jews unjustly condemned me I was willing to pardon their sins. Oh, child, even in thy sins to-day I will pardon thee if thou wilt only come to me. Come, ye sinners. Come ye who have spit upon me. Come, and come now and find a Saviour's love and a Saviour's peace."

But there is another great lesson which we can learn from these empty Easter crosses. They prove that death for the redeemed spirit is not a tyrant. He is not one who can manacle his victims and shut them up in a leaden coffin and lock them in a tomb and bolt the door of that tomb for a thousand years. But death for the redeemed spirit is a liberator, an emancipator. He is a messenger who can fly swifter than the winds. He is one who can fly swifter than the light. One moment he is here; the next, with one flutter of the wing, he is nestling in the bosom of the great God, where are assembled all the redeemed spirits of all the ages of all times. I am never so impressed with this thought as when I stand before the three empty crosses of the first Easter morn. And as I see these three empty crosses I always ask myself this question: "I wonder which cross held the repented thief; I wonder if it was the right hand cross or the left hand cross?" Then I say, "I think it must be the left hand cross." Thus when I stand before it I say: "Poor fellow! Poor fellow!" Perhaps he was not entirely to blame for his sins. Perhaps his mother was a thief. Perhaps he was born in a camp of robbers. But, whether he was born wrong or born right, he knew that he was a sinner. He knew that Jesus was unjustly condemned, and he cried out for mercy, and Jesus said to him, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise." There was no long probation for him. No sooner had his lungs ceased to breathe than at once his liberated and redeemed spirit went to heaven. And no sooner do our dead ones leave us than at once they go to God. Aye, quicker than that! Even before their tired, wornout spirits are liberated from their prisons of clay they catch a glimpse of the joys and the raptures beyond.

Canst thou not feel that this pulpit this very day is the hill of Golgotha? Canst thou not see the three empty crosses standing here amid these bowers and wreaths and columns of flowers? Canst thou not touch these crosses now? I have often wondered what became of those three crosses after the crucifixion. By the old Roman law if a man was crucified his body was allowed to hang upon the cross, week in and week out and month in and month out, until it rotted away. But that was not the Hebrew custom. As soon as the criminal was dead then his body was taken down and buried. Thus after the first Easter morn I wonder if the disciples took these crosses and cut them into pieces and kept them as sacred relics? I wonder if they thought they had any spiritual efficacy? I wonder if we had a few pieces of one of those crosses now would we look upon those pieces of wood as having a saving grace in their touch? Perhaps we would. Perhaps that is the reason God has made all parts of those crosses disappear. Perhaps by the complete disappearance of those crosses God is now saying to us on this Easter day: "Children of the twentieth century, knowest thou not that there are three crosses in thy midst to-day? They are not empty crosses either. The centre cross holds Jesus. One of the outside crosses holds a repentant sinner. The other outside cross holds a blaspheming thief. Thou, O child, must mount one of those crosses! Thou, O child, must carry one of those crosses! Thou alone can choose which one it shall be. Which cross shall be thy friend? Thou alone must decide this question to-day. "And with him they crucified two thieves, one on his right hand and the other on his left." Oh, my friend, wilt thou not this Easter morn bravely and nobly carry the cross of the repentant thief?

Salaries of Ambassadors.

The British Ambassador at Paris receives a higher salary than any other—namely, £10,000 a year. Our other Ambassadors get at Vienna and Constantinople, each, £8,000; St. Petersburg, $7,800; Berlin and Rome, each, £7,000; Spain, $5,000. In addition to their salaries, our Ambassadors are provided with palatial residences, the expenses of which are defrayed by the country.

From Boston.

"Did you hear that?" said a young woman to her companion at a well-known Broadway hotel. "That man at the next table asked for 'mashed potatoes,' and I am perfectly sure that he comes from Pennsylvania, and that if we could hear his conversation we would find him saying 'wait on' for 'wait for,' and invariably using 'leave' for 'let,' and vice versa."

A NIGHT WITH THE RATS.

Miner's Twenty-Four Hours' Vigil in Welsh Pit.

A Welsh miner has just passed through an uncanny adventure. William Palmer, a collier, did not return home from work, and, as he had not handed in his lamp at the colliery lamp-room, it was decided to make a search for him. A party was organized, with Mr. David Davies, the manager, as leader. At a place known as Lewis's "barry," at the far end of the colliery, close to where Palmer had been working, they found him. He stated that as he was making his way towards the shaft about two o'clock in the afternoon his lamp went out. He feared to proceed further, as he thought he might lose his way in the workings. He, therefore, took refuge in Lewis's "barry," where he remained until the time of his discovery some 24 hours later. He was without food and water all the time. He was quickly brought to the surface and supplied with refreshments. Palmer has made a statement, in which he says:—"As I left the place where I was working to go on to the double parting, which would lead me to the main road, I put my foot on an iron sleeper, which caused me to slip, and the jerk put the light out. I then got along as well as I could in the darkness by holding the haulage rope, but I must have been going about in a circle for some time. I got on to what I thought was the main heading, and then I found a door and realized that I was going in the wrong direction, as I had no doors to go through to get to the pit bottom. I turned and went back, and soon found myself at the place where I had started. Then I found another door, and on going through that got to a curve on the corner not far from the main heading. I had, however, quite lost my way, and I felt bewildered. I decided that I would sit there and wait until I was found, for I did not know where I might get to. I sat down for a while and listened. Then I lay down to rest, but I had not been lying down long before I heard the scamper of rats, and one of them ran over my body, causing a shudder to go through me. I sprang up, and could hear scores of rats running about me in squadrons, galloping like horses and squeaking horribly. I clapped my hands, partly to keep myself warm and partly to keep the rats away, and I stamped my feet as much as I could so that the rats might not attack me. I remained on the curve until I was found.

HOW ALIEN ACT WORKED.

465,000 Foreigners Arrived In England and Only 489 Were Expelled.

The Board of Trade, which exercises control and supervision over all the railway lines in the United Kingdom, has just issued statistics showing the practical effects of the Alien act intended to keep undesirable emigrants out of the country.

During 1906, the first year in which the act has been in practical operation, 465,000 foreigners arrived in England. Of these 137,000 were traveling first class and 193,000 second class, so that they were exempt from the inspections prescribed by the law.

Of the remaining 235,000, about 160,000 were emigrating to other lands and only came to England in order to embark; among them were found 11,000 sailors seeking engagements.

Only 39,000 foreigners declared their intention of settling in the United Kingdom, at least temporarily, and of these only 489 were expelled according to the provisions of the act.

The cost of carrying out the provisions of the new law amounted to about $100,000, making the cost of every rejected immigrant as high as $250.

Gladstone's Oratory.

Mr. Gladstone's greatest oratorical qualification was his exquisite voice. It was singularly pure, clear, resonant and sweet. The orator never seemed to use the slightest effort or strain in filling any hall and reaching the ear of the farthest among the audience.

Somebody once said that Gladstone was the only man in the House who could talk in italics. Gladstone could by the slightest modulation of his voice give all the emphasis of italics, of small print, of large print, or any other effect he might desire, to his spoken words.

In passages of indignant remonstrance or denunciation, when word followed word, and stroke come down upon stroke, with a wealth of resource that seemed inexhaustible, the very fluency and variety of the speaker overwhelmed his audience.

He was always terribly in earnest. Whether his subject was great or small, he threw his whole soul into it. Once, in addressing a school-boy gathering, he told his young listeners that if a boy ran he ought always to run as fast as he could, if he jumped he ought always to jump as far as he could. He illustrated the maxim in his own career.

Did we regard parliamentary speaking as a mere instrument of parliamentary business and debate, then unquestionably Mr. Gladstone is not only the greatest, but far the greatest English orator of our time; for he had a richer combination of gifts than any other man we can remember, and he could use them oftenest with effect.—Justin McCarthy.

Tired Tim, Poet.

The master of a workhouse in England recently reported a decrease in the number of tramps, which was due to the improved demand in trade.

In the firewood department of the workhouse the tramps would not face the nine hours' wood cutting that the Guardians had decided they should have a day.

A tramp had apparently got very poetic over it, for the other day he had written in chalk upon the door of the wood-sawing department the following lines:

"The Lord made the bees;
The bees make the honey;
The tramps do the work;
And the Guardians get the money."

State Of the River.

SHOVE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON CAUSED SOME DAMAGE AND INCONVENIENCE, BUT NOTHING OF VERY MUCH CONSEQUENCE.

The warm weather during the latter part of last week, and the rain on Saturday evening, had the effect of breaking up a large quantity of ice in the river Moira, and a few minutes before 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon there certainly was some excitement on the river bank in the city.

At one time it was feared that considerable damage would result, but fortunately such was not the case. At the hour above mentioned quite a field of ice came down and when it struck the ice in the river, just below Cooper's dam, it caused a general break up, and in a few minutes an immense body of ice was moving on down the river impelled by a heavy rush of water. It moved down the river until a point was reached between the footbridge and lower bridge, where the ice was of sufficient thickness to stand the strain, and this checked the moving mass. The result was that the water was backed up and in a few minutes yards and cellars on the west side of Front street were filled with water and in some cases large cakes of ice were carried into the yards. It was fortunate that merchants had made provision for such an emergency, because in some instances the water rose to such a height as to pour into cellar windows. In some instances no little inconvenience was experienced in getting horses out of stables which are situated along the eastern bank of the river. In a number of stables there was from two to three feet of water.

In rear of Mr. James Wallace's place of business, on Front street, the water rose to such a height that it entered his bakeshop, which is situated a considerable distance from the river's edge. His horses, in the stable in rear of the bakeshop, were nearly submerged. Some of the frame buildings on the river's edge were slightly damaged by having boards torn off.

The break-up was responsible for inconveniencing many of the residents of West Belleville, who, this morning, came to the footbridge expecting to cross over in order to reach Front street, but were confronted by a barricade in the form of boards nailed up at either end of the structure. This was yesterday considered necessary by the civic authorities, owing to the fact that nearly all the guy wires running from either side of the bridge to the shores were torn out by the moving ice. The strain was such that the bridge, whilst not carried away, was badly bent, and some damage was sustained to it. To protect the public it was closed until repairs are made Repairs were this morning made to the footbridge and at noon that thoroughfare was opened for traffic. This proved of great convenience to the many hundreds who use it as a means of reaching their homes.

On enquiry it was ascertained that no damage was sustained to property upon the river banks above the city during the passage of the ice jam yesterday afternoon.

Death Of Mrs. Shortt.

Mrs. Lorinda Shortt, relict of the late Mr. John C. Shortt, passed away on Sunday morning, after a few days' illness, from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased, who was 75 years of age had been for the greater portion of her life a resident of this city. She was an estimable lady and had many friends. Mrs. Shortt was a member of the Baptist church. Her husband died about two years ago. The surviving members of the family are one son, Roswell, and one daughter, Mrs. A. N. Prest, both of this city.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Bridge St.

One of the most earnest and practical discourses preached in this city for many a day was that delivered in Bridge St. yesterday morning by Rev. J. P. Wilson, B. A., whose subject was "Great Men." His text was "A man great in the sight of God."

The text, of course, referred to John the Baptist, who was thus designated by the Saviour Himself. The sermon turned out to be an appeal for the Superannuation fund, the collection for which will be taken next Sunday in Methodist churches. There were two forms of greatness, the preacher said, greatness in the eyes of men, such as was enjoyed by Peter the Great, who by dint of personal endeavor, made Russia fit to take her place among the civilized nations of the world. He built the splendid city of St. Petersburg, where once a morass was, and it caused the loss of 100,000 workmen's lives. But lives counted little in the eyes of men who had worldly ambitions. The other kind of greatness was that which fell to the lot of William Taylor, the English cobbler, who, though poor and illiterate, went to India, learned the many languages of the East and began the teachings of Christianity to her countless millions. Through the poor English cobbler the great missionary work of to-day began. Surely there was a man great in the sight of God. But we did not need to look beyond the confines of our own country to find men worthy of honor. The preacher read from a Government report issued in early days. The pioneers of Methodism in Canada, it seems, had been slandered in a book published by a member of another communion, and the charges made were so serious that there was a public demand for a Government investigation into their truth or falsity. The investigation was held by a commission appointed by the Government of Upper Canada, and the result was the complete exoneration of the Methodists, and a warm testimonial to their courage, unselfishness and zeal, the report adding that Canada's progress and splendid future was largely due to the pioneers of Methodism, who, without hope of reward, and at great personal hardship, went about spreading the gospel of Chistianity and civilization. Surely those were men great in the eyes of God. There were many of them, but they were gone, and to-day even their names were unknown. They had worked for the Master, and, though their names were not written on monuments they would receive their reward when the final summing up came. Speaking of present day conditions, the preacher said the Superannuation Fund must be better kept up, or the itinerary system must come to an end. He did not believe the great majority of Methodists understood conditions, or the subscriptions to it would be larger. It was a fact that, in the Bay of Quinte Conference, there were ministers whose stipends did not exceed $450, and last conference it was shown that there was over $9,000 in unpaid salaries. How could a man whose salary was $500 or $600 expect to make any provision for his old age? The Superannuation Fund therefore was a necessity. The preacher made some good remarks on conditions of to-day. The church needs men, he said, and it says to a young man; "Here, you can go to High School for two years, and to college four years, at your own expense Then you can buy a horse and conveyance, and we will find you a circuit where the stipend will be $350 a year." It puzzled many people to know how many ministers were living and bringing up their families on $600 a year, but they were doing it, and doing it cheerfully and uncomplainingly, and surely it was the duty of all Methodists to see that the Superannuation Fund, on which such men depended for support in their old age, was kept up.

St. Michael's.

Yesterday (Palm Sunday) the choir sang the Gregorian "Mass of the Angels," the solos being taken by Mr. Peppin and Mr. Fortin, of Notre Dame Cathedral, Montreal. At the offertory Miss Pelletier, of Trenton sang Cherubini's "Ave Maria," very sweetly. At benediction "The Palms" was rendered by Mr. J. V. Doyle, in an impressive way.

Tabernacle.

At the evening service Rev. R. H. Leitch preached a sermon relating to the Woman's Missionary Society. His text was from St. Matthew, 21st chapter, 8th and 9th verses. During the service the choir furnished a very fine anthem, the solo being taken by Mrs. C. F. Nicholson. Mr. J. Dyer sang a solo entitled "I Know My Heavenly Father Knows."

Bethel Hall.

Last night the speaker compared several dogmas of the new theology with the Scriptures and showed clearly that these teachings are exactly what God's word says will appear in the last times, and just what the Apostle Paul (speaking of the Holy Spirit) said would arise in the church itself. The new theory, it was shown, made out man to be of the same nature as God and that in the end all saints would be perfected, but it was shown from the word that man by nature is ungodly, even at enmity with God, and that instead of all being perfected, some would find their portion in outer darkness for ever. The word of God is too narrow for the new theologians. They claim to have something better and even deny the conception of our Lord by the Holy Spirit, but it was shown from Scripture that man's ruin is complete and that the Gospel meets his need on Calvary, providing for him a complete Saviour, and all who accept Him are saved, and only those.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

On Saturday night Wanderers beat Kenora 7-2, and now look like sure winners of the Stanley Cup. Two games will be played, the club scoring most goals in the two matches to be declared winners of the series. The second match will be played to-night. Smith and Westwick, of Ottawa, played for Kenora, and the Wanderers played against them under protest. The match took place in Winnipeg, and the gate was nearly $7000. Winnipeg sports and the Kenora betting fraternity were hard hit by the result, an unusually large amount of money changing hands. One of the Montreal team alone pulled down $1,400.

The thirteenth game in the series for the chess championship of the world was played in Memphis, Tenn., and Lasker was the winner. The score now stands, Lasker 6, Marshall 1, drawn 6.

A curious case has been referred by the Berks and Bucks Football Association to the governing body of the game in England, the question being the eligibility of a goalkeeper who has a wooden leg. He has been a success, his team being now in the finals of the local series, and he went through the season without the question having been raised. The Council of the association has not given an answer yet, but it is hard to think that the player will be debarred as a danger.

Quietly Wedded.

A quiet wedding took place at St. Thomas' church at 10.30 this morning, when Mr. Melville N. Danham, of Vegreville, Alberta, was married to Miss Carrie V. Butler of this city. The young couple were unattended, and only two persons were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by the rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish. The happy couple left this afternoon for their home in the west.

Successful Operation

Dawn Smith, eight-year-old son of Capt. J. H. Smith, of this city, on Saturday underwent a rather critical operation for some throat trouble. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. P. D. Goldsmith and Dr. MacColl, and the child is doing nicely.

THAW DENIES RUMOR

Says There Is No Dissension Between His Counsel.

Evelyn Nesbit Permitted to Visit Her Husband for First Time on Sunday —Prisoner Sanguine as to Result of Trial—Jerome Will Rebut Affidavits of Defence — Feared Thaw Might Kill Someone Else.

New York, March 25.—Harry K. Thaw last night made public another statement, this time denying a rumor, which he believes is current, that there is a dissension among his counsel. He also refers to the affidavits filed with Justice Fitzgerald by his attorneys, opposing the appointment of a lunacy commission to examine him.

The monotony of Thaw's Sunday at the Tombs was broken by an unexpected visit from his wife. This was the first time since his detention that the prisoner was allowed to receive callers other than his counsel on Sunday.

Mrs. Thaw had come to the Tombs with a message for her husband, and was agreeably surprised when told that she might visit him. The two were together for a half hour, and when Mrs. Thaw left she said:

In Excellent Health.

"Harry is in excellent health, and is sure everything will come out in his favor."

During the afternoon, which he devoted chiefly to correspondence, Thaw received a note from Lawyer Daniel O'Reilly, explaining that none of the legal staff would call during the day, and that Mr. Hartridge and the writer were busily engaged in preparing briefs to be presented to Justice Fitzgerald to-day.

Twelve Affidavits.

District Attorney Jerome for about two hours dictated to a corps of stenographers a long statement to be used in rebutting the statements sworn to by Thaw's mother, his lawyers and his alienists, and contained in the twelve affidavits filed by the defence Saturday.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that Mr. Jerome intends to present, not only facts refuting the affidavits presented by the defence, but to submit to Judge Fitzgerald new and corroborative facts supporting the affidavits on which he originally made his suggestion to the court that Thaw's present sanity should be enquired into.

Letters to Lyon.

In his attempt to show that Thaw is insane, District Attorney Jerome filed with his affidavits a number of letters written by Thaw to J. Dennison Lyon, his banker in Pittsburg. Some were written prior to White's death, and some subsequent to it, from the Tombs. They were made public Saturday night through Assistant District Attorney Garvan.

Ill-Spelled, But Sane.

The letters are odd specimens of correspondence, being, in the main, disconnected sentences, with not a few misspelled words, yet they apparently show an appreciation of the practical matters of the life the young Pittsburg man was leading before he was locked up in the Tombs for shooting White, and his plight when he was imprisoned. The contention of Mr. Jerome is, however, that their incoherence and other characteristics, show that the writer is not sane.

Might Seek Other Victims.

The view is taken by prosecution experts that if Thaw were allowed to go free, he would likely have a recurrence of his paranoiac rage and kill some one else. Neither his wife nor Mrs. Holman would be safe. Even Jerome, who has angered the prisoner on several occasions, might be the victim of one of his delusions.

McINTOSH BROS.

900 AGED MEN POISONED.

Old Soldiers Eat Tainted Meat—One Man Dead.

Leavenworth, Kan., March 25.—One death resulted yesterday among the 900 old soldiers at the National Soldiers' Home here who were poisoned Saturday by eating tainted hash.

The victim was William J. Cook, 64 years of age, a member of the 4th Missouri Cavalry. He leaves a widow at Mexico, Missouri.

About seventy-five of the veterans are still in a serious condition, but it is not thought any of these will die. The majority of the others made ill have recovered.

A report that some of those affected were missing was emphatically denied at the home last night. The Government physician said only those who were already suffering from disabilities and were in a weakened condition were seriously affected.

The Government physicians and nurses at the home have worked to the utmost since noon Saturday, and probably have succeeded in saving a score of men who were in a dying condition when found.

The infection worked slowly, nearly four hours having elapsed between the eating of the meal at breakfast and the development of the symptoms.

Then men began to drop off by scores. Ambulances and stretchers were in demand, and many old men lay for hours without the possibility of attention.

THROWS SON TO WOLVES.

Father Destroys His Child to Save His Own Life.

Budapest, March 24.—Johann Horvath, a peasant of Kapi, yesterday threw his 8-year-old son to wolves to save his own life.

He was driving home from Eperies with the boy, when four wolves got on the track of his two-horse cart and overhauled it, the road being in bad condition owing to the melting snow.

Horvath was unarmed, and as the wolves were about to attack him he seized his boy and threw him into the road, when the wolves tore him to pieces.

Horvath escaped, and on reaching Kapi told how the horrible sight of the wolves devouring his child had so fascinated him that he kept looking back until they were out of sight.

A village council was summoned to discuss his conduct, and it was decided to lynch him by clubbing him to death in Hungarian fashion.

His life was saved by the appearance of the police, who had been informed of what was happenings, and Horvath was arrested.

YOUTH AGAIN KIDNAPPED.

Millionaire's Grandchild, Once Stolen By Mother, Disappears.

Berlin, March 25.—A despatch from Hanover says that "Eddy" Krieger, 12 years of age, son of George Krieger of Chicago, who married the daughter of Dr. Bart, a millionaire, has been kidnapped by two masked persons.

The boy's father, after securing a divorce from his wife in America, secretly brought the boy to Germany and entrusted him to a friend in Hanover, where he was educated.

The mother, who has since married a Dr. MacDonald, came to Germany, obtained possession of the boy and took him with great secrecy to Hamburg, from which place he has mysteriously disappeared.

FOUR KILLED IN SNOWSLIDE.

Eight Men Buried Eleven Feet Deep At Logging Camp.

Vancouver, March 25.—Eight men, four of whom were killed, were buried under 11 feet of snow at a logging camp at Howe Sound Saturday.

The snow fall had been so heavy that the foreman decided not to attempt to do any work. The eight men had stayed in the donkey-engine-house when the others went to their boarding-house.

A great pile of snow gave way and crashed down on the engine-house, and, when the men were dug out, only four were found to be alive.

TRAIN GOES THROUGH TRESTLE.

Plunges 25 Feet to Bottom — Three Employes Killed.

Portsmouth, Ohio, March 25.—A Norfolk & Western freight train plunged through a 25-foot trestle yesterday near Lucasville. The trestle was undermined by the flood. The train fell to the bottom. Fireman D. S. Hutton was crushed to death and Engineer J. T. Houser was fatally injured. The brakeman was caught in the wreck and his body cannot be found.

"Resolute" Victim Found.

Toronto, March 25.—What is supposed to be the body of Thomas Topping of Deseronto, the second engineer of the ill-fated barge Resolute, which went down at the eastern gap last November, was picked up in Toronto Bay by Capt. Kingston of the tug Roy Mack, Saturday afternoon.

The captain noticed the corpse imbedded in the ice, and telephoned for the ambulance. The corpse was taken to the morgue.

Although the features are scarcely discernable, Michael Haney, the mate of the Resolute, is satisfied that the corpse is that of Topping, as is also Thomas Barrett of Toronto Junction.

Big Flour Mill Merger.

St. Catharines, March 25.—A big flour mill deal has just been completed by the amalgamation of the Hedley Shaw Milling Co. and the Maple Leaf Milling Co. of Kenora.

The new company will erect the largest mill in the Dominion at Kenora, besides greatly increasing the output of both local mills.

There also will be a large number of elevators established in the west.

The Shaw Co. already has plants here, in Thorold and in Oakville.

A Voice From The Stomach.

A BLOODLESS FIGHT BETWEEN A TABLET AND A HABIT—THE TABLET WINS.

At the age of 22 Clarance had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn apple-skins into good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be profuse about the waist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds appetite—and every good thing is abused.

His pictures showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on.

At the age of 26 Clarance married and went to boarding. On top of all this, he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16 1-2 to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarance began to hear an inward voice—a warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a heavy thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit down at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat.

He would often feel a gnawing unsatisfied "still hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And he suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-of-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c box at a drug store, and took the whole box. When he started he had little faith —and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith — and more appetite, and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, nausea, eructations, bad memory, or loss of vim and vigor.

Remember, one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarance.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how. lusciously good everything will taste to you.

Heed the call of the stomach now! There's a world of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—at any drug store, 50c.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 84 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

STUDENT SPECIAL WRECKED.

Six Killed and Seventeen Injured In Crash With Limited.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 25.—A special train on the Santa Fe Railway, carrying scores of students home from an intercollegiate field meet at Claremont, collided head-on with the outbound limited train while both were moving at a rapid rate within the city limits last night.

Six persons were killed and seventeen injured, several of them probably fatally.

Weddings of Years Illegal.

London, March 25.—It has just been discovered by an official in the Registrar General's office in London that marriages which have taken place in the Chapel-at-ease, at Brownstown, near Modbury, Devonshire, during the past thirty years are illegal.

The official found that the building had never been licensed for the solemnization of marriages, and that, consequently, all those which have taken place are irregular.

The matter has been laid before the Home Secretary, and a bill is to be introduced into Parliament during the present session to give validity to the marriages.

Prisoners Should Eat Together.

Kingston, March 25.—The clause in the grand jury's report this week calling attention to the practice of handing each prisoner in the penitentiary his food and then marching him off to his cell, where he must eat it in solitude, without knife or fork, has very properly evoked a protest, both silent and printed. It is held to be no valid excuse for this inhuman practice that some time ago a few unruly men, when 500 of their fellow-convicts were at dinner in one room, attempted to use their knives and forks on a guard.

Struck by Lightning.

Clinton, March 25.—A severe electrical storm passed over this section on Saturday night. The barn of Mr. Wiltse, on the London road, was struck by lightning and burned, 29 head of cattle being cremated. Another barn on the Huron road was destroyed.

FIGHT WITH A BEAR.

Two Men Won In a Battle With Infuriated Bruin.

Vancouver, March 25.—To be suddenly attacked in dense timber by an enraged she-bear in defence of her two cubs, and without any firearms to defend themselves, was the thrilling and unpleasant experience of Mr. G. Young and Mr. E. T. Barnum at Lake Coquitlam.

Messrs. Young and Barnum are timber cruisers, and had nothing but a small handaxe and a hastily improvised club. A couple of crashing leaps through the underbrush brought the bear within a couple of feet of Mr. Barnum, who was slightly in advance. The animal reared on its hind legs and attempted to close with the man. Mr. Barnum, who had nothing but a stout stick in his hand, dealt the bear a desperate blow on the snout. This sent her head down for a moment and allowed Mr. Young to get busy with the axe which he was carrying. The two little cubs came to their mother's aid, and blow followed blow, few of them seeming to have any effect as the two men were at too close quarters to defend themselves effectively. Finally, Mr. Barnum sidestepped and distracted the bear's attention for a moment, which allowed Mr. Young to land a knockout blow just behind the ear with his axe. But the animal was game, and even in her death struggles clawed and bit savagely at the two men.

WHO KILLED BARRON?

Application to Have Murder of Hamilton Policeman Re-Investigated.

Toronto, March 25.—J. Bidwell Mills, of Hamilton, has applied to the Attorney-General to have the Barron murder investigation opened up again. The complaint is made that the case was not properly handled by the local authorities. Policeman Barron was shot by two unknown men one dark night near the Mills residence, whom he attempted to arrest.

A provincial officer may be put on the case if it is decided to open it up again. A convict, who escaped from the London jail some time after the murder and who is now serving a term of seven years in Kingston, is suspected of being connected with the deed.

About the time of the Barron murder two men were in Hamilton, and while there were in company with two girls, whom it is said the police have located. Statements made while the man suspected was in jail in London are regarded by the police as sufficient warrant to have the case opened up again.

HON. J. W. ST. JOHN ILL.

Speaker of Ontario Legislature Operated Upon For Appendicitis.

Toronto, March 25.—Hon. J. W. St. John was operated on at the General Hospital last night for appendicitis. The operation was successful, but there will be considerable anxiety for 48 hours until the patient passes the crisis.

It appears that Mr. St. John was only taken ill at 10 o'clock on Saturday night. Local applications were used, but at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon Mr. St. John was so much worse that the doctors held a consultation and appendicitis being diagnosed an immediate operation was decided upon. The patient reached the hospital at 10.45 in an ambulance, and by midnight the operation was over.

A WONDER HE LIVES.

Electrician Had 12,000 Volts Pass Through His Body At Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 25.—With his right hand and arm burned black, his face and left foot scorched, and his whole nervous system a wreck, William Reid lies in the General Hospital, a puzzle to physicians and electricians, who cannot understand how he remains alive. Reid is an electrician, and is employed by the Canadian Niagara Power Co. as a switchboard operator. Saturday while on duty he got his hand in contact with the copper part of a switch, and received a shock of twelve thousand volts. His home is in Hamilton.

FLOOD TIES UP CALIFORNIA.

Two Men Drowned By Capsizing of a Boat.

San Francisco, March 25.—Following a severe rainstorm, railroad and telegraph communication is almost entirely suspended over the greater part of California. The rivers in the interior valleys are rising, and the area of the flood region is rapidly extending.

The railroad blockade is almost complete. No regular trains are running into or out of San Francisco.

Two mail carriers, F. Griend and T. Dassonville, were drowned near Fairoaks Saturday by the capsizing of a boat.

N. S. Cabinet Changes.

Halifax, N.S., March 25.—The vacancy in the local Government caused by the election of Attorney-General Drysdale to the bench was filled on Saturday morning by the appointment of Hon. M. Pipes, formerly Commissioner of Works and Mines, as Attorney-General. Christopher Chisholm, member for Antigonish, is appointed Commissioner of Works and Mines and O. T. Daniels, member for Annapolis, appointed member of the Executive Council.

Two Dead In Fire.

Catskill, N.Y., March 25.—A hut on the mountain side of Cairo, in which resided the brothers, Henry and Rufus Denton, and their sister, all over 70 years old, was burned to the ground before daybreak yesterday. Henry and the sister perished in the flames, and Rufus, who was removed to the county alms house, is badly burned about the head and body.

Battleship In Collision.

Weymouth, Eng., March 25.—A collision occurred yesterday off Portland between the British battleship Africa and the Peninsular and Oriental Line steamer Ormuz, bound for Australia. Both vessels sustained slight damages.

Two Killed In A Wreck.

Head-on Collision Near Myrtle Yesterday Morning.

Freight Trains Crash Together--Fireman and Brakeman Killed--Two Others Severely Injured--Eighteen Cars Off the Track, Five of Them Demolished--Engines a Heap of Scrap--Mistaken Orders the Cause.

Myrtle, March 26.—A head-on collision, in which two freight trains smashed together, killing two men and seriously injured two more, occurred yesterday morning on the C. P. R., a couple of miles east of this station.

The dead are Fireman C. Jones and Brakeman H. Howe, who were caught in such a position under the debris of the freights that their bodies were not removed until nearly two hours after the collision occurred.

The tragedy was precipitated by two things — an alleged mistake in orders on the part of the conductor of the east-bound train, coupled with the fact that both trains were running at the time in the midst of a dense fog, to thick to permit either engineer to avoid the danger in time.

Scalded to Death.

The eastbound freight was hauled by engine No. 269, and it was to this engine that Fireman Jones belonged. Engineer Kyle escaped with slight injury. Brakeman Howe, who was in the engine cab, was scalded to death.

Two Injured.

The westbound train was hauled by engine No. 1488. Engineer S. Binns sustained injuries to his shoulders and arms, while his brakeman, C. Heise, was injured about the legs, shoulders and arms.

The trains were going at the rate of about 35 miles an hour. In the westbound freight there were 18 cars, all of which are reported to have been derailed. In the eastbound freight there were between 25 and 30 cars. Five cars have been completely demolished.

The eastbound freight was in charge of Conductor Cook, while Wm. Davis was conductor of the westbound train. Both men belong to Toronto Junction.

At this juncture it is said that the eastbound freight, in charge of Conductor Cook, should have crossed at Myrtle.

Bodies Mutilated.

An hour after the event a wrecking train was on the scene and strenuous efforts were made to get at the bodies of the crew. The impact reduced the engines to scrap iron and the bodies, when they were found, were almost unrecognizable.

They were badly burned, bruised and scalded. The fire that started immediately after the collision was extinguished, before it had made great progress.

BOILER EXPLODED.

Sleeping Railroad Men At Cleveland Thrown Into Panic.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 26.—Between fifty and sixty sleeping railroad men were thrown into a panic by the explosion of a boiler in the railroad Young Men's Christian Association building at Collingwood, and the temporary home of Lakeshore railroad employes, early yesterday. The building is a three-storey structure. Fire followed the explosion. The dining room was wrecked. So far as learned no lives were lost.

A Fagin At Stratford.

Stratford, March 26.—Benjamin Bearnbaum, a Jewish pedlar, who was found guilty of receiving stolen goods yesterday, is said to have encouraged boys to steal by buying the proceeds of their thefts.

A manufacturer accused a boy of shoplifting a few days ago and the case was traced to Bearnbaum.

It was brought out in the evidence that he had paid boys a few cents for small articles of brass and lead, among other things.

Judge Barron reserved judgment until to-day (Wednesday).

Collision At Dover.

Dover, England, March 26.—There was an exciting collision yesterday outside the harbor, between the Calais and Ostend mail steamers, both inward bound. The Princess Henriette, from Ostend, crashed into the Lord Warden, from Calais, making a hole below her water line, smashing her cabins, deckway, and carrying away her boats. The Princess Henriette's bows were badly damaged. The sixty passengers of the Lord Warden were landed without any of them being injured.

Close British Museum.

London, March 26.—The reading room of the British Museum is to be closed for six months beginning next month. This is necessary in order to give the two million volumes in the library a thorough inspection as well as to repair the dome, which is said to contain several dangerous looking cracks, and besides paint is necessary. According to an attendant, it has been just fifty years since the interior of the library was painted.

POISONED HER BABY.

Mohawk Waif Placed on Trial For Her Life.

New York, March 26.—Jennie Burch, a quarterbred Mohawk, who in September last poisoned the infant son of Herbert Winship, a wealthy farmer, of Cowles' Corners, Putnam County, was placed on trial yesterday for her life at Carmel, N.Y. It is her fifteenth birthday anniversary.

On the day of the baby's burial she flung herself upon the child's casket and sobbed out a confession of how she had fed the infant a poisoned peach. She said she had loved her little charge, and because of her great love had killed it.

Medical men and other men of science who have examined and studied the girl differ as to her sanity.

Jennie Burch was a waif, and was given a home by the Winship family four years ago. The farmer and his family treated the girl as one of their own.

The girl is to be tried before Supreme Court Justice Mills, who has appointed two lawyers to defend her. It is believed they will attempt to prove insanity at the time of the murder.

AGED WOMAN MURDERED.

Son Arrested On Suspicion of Having Killed His Mother.

San Francisco, March 26.—A brutal murder was discovered at North Oakland yesterday. The body of Mrs. Martha Soderberg, 64 years old, was found hidden in a closet of her home. Erland H. Sodenberg, her son, a stevedore, has been arrested on suspicion of being the murderer. Saturday night he came home intoxicated and quarreled with his mother. When found, Mrs. Soderberg's body, partially clad, was in an upright position and wrapped in a blanket. Her throat was cut, face gashed and one leg almost severed. It is thought that the murderer intended to cut the body up and carry it to the bay, a short distance away.

DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

Man Shoots His Wife, Then Jumps Through Window.

New York, March 26.—Andrew Anderson, aged 45 years, of Brooklyn, late Sunday night shot his wife, Amberg Anderson, aged 46, killing her instantly. Anderson then inflicted a gash in his own throat, and rushing madly to the roof of the 3-storey tenement, where the couple lived, jumped to the yard below. Although Anderson's skull was fractured he got up and ran for some distance before he could be taken into custody. The man was conveyed to a hospital, where he was declared to be in a critical condition. Jealousy was the cause of the tragedy.

Killed His Little Brother.

Toronto, March 26.—With its head crushed in, the 6 months old baby of Nathan Winberg of 225 Chestnut street, was found dead in its cradle at 10 o'clock last night. The infant was killed by its 6-year-old brother.

The father reported the circumstance to the police. He said he left the house at 8 o'clock with his wife, leaving the infant in charge of his 6-year-old boy, Hymie.

Returning at 10 o'clock Winberg found the infant dead. Hymie said the child began to cry and he struck it several times on the head with a stove lifter, crushing out the infant's life.

Farthest North Railway.

London, March 26.—Spitzbergen will soon boast the possession of the farthest north railway in the world, which will be built ten degrees further north than the so-called Lofoten Railway, which crosses the Arctic Circle in Northern Scandinavia. The object of the new line is to work the coal deposits of Spitzbergen, which are situated in the interior of the island. The new line will connect them with the coast. The first plan for an earth surface line was abandoned, owing to the natural difficulties. It is now proposed to construct an aerial suspension railway on the Bleichert system.

Senator Berthelot Entombed.

Paris, March 26.—Senator Berthelot and his wife, who died March 16, were entombed in state in the Pantheon yesterday in the presence of a brilliant assemblage, including President Fallieres, the Cabinet Ministers, diplomatic corps, members of the French Academy, judges, deputies, senators and deputations from the learned societies.

WINDSOR SALT. 137

What's the difference between the bridge across the Tiber, at Ancient Rome, and the footbridge in this city? Why, according to Macaulay, the Romish bridge was kept by three guys, while the footbridge was held in place by five.

DON'T TAKE 'EM OFF.

Let's welcome gentle spring,
But keep 'em on;
Let poets gaily sing,
But keep 'em on;
Warm weather's on the wing
But till winter's had her fling
It's by odds the safest thing
To keep 'em on.

A scientist, Camille Flammarion, says the sun will be chilled, and all mankind on this earth die of cold, in twenty million years. However, that's a long time off, and we have more important things to worry over. It may be remarked, however, that it would be pretty tough if the world came to an end just about the time the Belleville drill shed was completed and the School Board reduced to a baker's dozen of members. Life is full of disappointments.

The following significant paragraph appears among the Ottawa telegrams:

"Should something happen here within the next few days, the Minister of War will not go to London, but, if that something does not take place, Sir Frederick is to take the High Commissionership."

It's not necessary to explain what this means. The sooner Sir Wilfrid vacates and takes his Cabinet with him the better.

The McMaster Band

LARGE CONGREGATION LISTENED TO YOUNG EVANGELISTS IN BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A large congregation gathered to hear the McMaster Band last night. A song service was conducted by Mr. Williamson, the musical director from 7.30 to 8, and the congregation joined very heartily in the singing. Messrs Cameron, Williamson and Edwards sang a trio, entitled "Fly, for the tempest is Coming," which was most favorably received. Mr. Edwards spoke very earnestly from the text, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." This prophecy of Jesus has been fulfilled through all ages, amongst all grades and conditions of men, and Christ is still the greatest magnetic force this old world has ever seen. What is the great magnet that attracts men to Him. It is the great principle of love! The speaker earnestly besought the unsaved to allow this loving Christ to come into their hearts. Mr. Cameron, the leader, in a few well-chosen words supplemented the remarks of the previous speaker and while Mr. Williamson very earnestly and impressively sang "If you Could see Christ Standing here to'night," gave the invitation for the unsaved to accept salvation now. The meeting was closed by Pastor Emerson pronouncing the benediction.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"MY WIFE'S FAMILY."

A company of clever comedians, pretty girls and bright vaudeville stars, together with a musical farce comedy that created a sensation last season, such is the make up of "My Wife's Family," written by Stephens and Linton, which is announced for the Carman next Thursday evening. Theatregoers who are anxiously waiting for something good in the musical comedy line, will do well to keep up their spirits, for the early appearance here of "My Wife's Family" Company will satisfy the most blase amusement seeker.

Poucher's Dam Gone

The breaking up of the ice on Sunday last did some damage at Poucher's mills, Thurlow township, by carrying away the dam belonging to Mr. D Poucher. It was a very heavy ice jam, and came with a great rush upon the dam, completely carrying it away. Although Mr. Poucher may be inconvenienced, he intends to build a temporary dam and later on, when the water is low, will construct one of concrete.

Mr. Wm. Rogers, of Rawdon township, was in the city to-day.

Mr. Chas. Hayes, McAnnany street, is confined to the house through illness.

Messrs. Alf. Luscombe, Charles and Harry Dulmage left last evening for the Northwest, where they will reside in future.

Mrs. Chas. Wilkins, widow of the late Charles Wilkins, celebrated her 85th birthday on the 25th inst. Her numerous friends will be pleased to learn that she is bright and in full possession of her mental faculties. She received a large number of friends from the city, Trenton and other parts of the county, who called to congratulate her upon her 68th birthday, whom she cheerily received.

No Truth In Report.

A report was current in the city to-day that Mr. Merton Gordon, late of this city, had died in the West. Another report said that his wife, Mrs. Gordon, had died of diphtheria. Investigation showed that, at last accounts, both Mr. and Mrs. Gordon were alive and well in Calgary, though Mrs. Gordon had, about two weeks ago, suffered a slight attack of diphtheretic sore throat, from which she had, however, completely recovered. This is a great town for stories.

Died In the Hospital.

Mrs. Albert Rose died at the hospital here during last night. Deceased, who was 38 years of age, came to the city with her husband, who is engaged at the rolling mills. Mrs. Rose had been ill for some time suffering with cancer. She was a member of the Anglican Church. The husband but no family survives.

Octogenarian Dead.

Mr John Gulliver, who resided with his daughter, Mrs. Hy. Bophray, Canifton road, died last evening. For 15 years the deceased had been a great sufferer from rheumatism. Mr. Gulliver, who was in his 80th year, was born in New Hampshire. When a young man he came to this section of the country, where he had since resided. For 26 years he was a carter in the woollen mills in this city. Deceased was well known about the city and much respected. He was a member of the Anglican Church and in politics was a Conservative. Mrs. Gulliver preceded him to the tomb a quarter of a century ago. The remaining members of the family are one son, John, and one daughter, Mrs. Hy. Bophrey, both of whom reside here.

FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Gulliver will take place from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Hy. Bophray, Canifton road, on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Services at the house at 1.30 p.m. Interment at Canifton.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

THE HAIR BRUSH.

Breeds Dandruff, Which Causes Falling Hair and Finally Baldness.

Prof Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says that dandruff is as contagious as any other malevolent disease, and that one common source of the spread of dandruff is the use of the same hair brush by different persons. The way to avoid catching dandruff or any other disease from another's brush, is to insist on the use of Newbro's Herpicide. It not only kills the dandruff germ, but it is also an antiseptic that will prevent the catching of any disease whatever through contagion of another's brush. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Why Don't He Go?

In the House of Commons, on the 25th inst., Mr. Borden asked the Prime Minister if there was any foundation or not for the statements which had appeared in the press that he did not propose to attend the Colonial conference.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that he had certainly hoped to have gone, but certain things had transpired in connection with the business of the House which might lead him to cancel his trip. The matter, however, was under consideration.

What are the "certain things" which have "transpired" to prevent his going? Is the "wine, women and graft" episode keeping him in Canada?

When it was necessary, in the interests of Canada, that Sir John Thompson should attend the Behring Sea conference, in Paris, though it was in the middle of an important session, he went. The result is well known: Canada profited by his presence. But then Sir Wilfrid is not Sir John.

Hon. Adam Beck May Talk Here on Power Question

(Concluded from page 7.)

The matter dropped then.

FRONT ST. PAVING.

Ald. Panter said the Chairman of the Executive wanted the Chairmen to name their figures. In his case, as Chairman of Public Works, it depended on circumstances. If Front street was to be paved with granite macadam, as had been proposed, he would need much more money than last year. If our main aisle was to have a permanent pavement that would be paid for by debentures. What about it?

Stony silence followed.

THE ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

Under the head of enquiries, Ald. Marsh asked what about the Isolation hospital? How was it to be built? Must the sum needed for its construction be put in the estimates?

The Mayor said the money necessary would be raised by debentures.

WHAT ABOUT SEWERS?

Ald. Thompson asked what steps were necessary to provide for better sewage conditions in this city.

The Mayor said the best plan would be to engage a competent engineer to examine conditions and report. The amount necessary to pay such an official should be placed in the estimates.

AN ILLUMINATING INCIDENT.

Ald. Starling asked if the Gas Committee would continue to pipe the houses of prospective consumers at the expense of the ratepayers in general. If so, he knew several people who would like their houses piped.

Ald. Green said he did not believe they would, and while discussing that matter he would relate an incident. In 1905 a Mr. Vermilyea, of this city, desired to have his house piped for gas. He applied to the manager of the Gas department and was told the work and material would cost $12. This he agreed to pay. Then it was found that the employees of the Gas department were too busy to do the work at once. Mr. Vermilyea, like Senator Cox, could not wait, so it was agreed to have the work done by a local firm, the Lewis Company. The work was done promptly by the Lewis Company, which then sent in a bill for $23 to the Gas Committee; Mr. Vermilyea, at the same time, sending his cheque for $12 to the manager of the Gas department. The committee paid the Lewis Company's bill, but the manager of the Gas department refused to accept the $12 in settlement. He kept the cheque in his desk 'till it was discovered there recently by the new acting manager of the Gas department. This, Ald. Green said, was, he believed, only a sample of the way things were formerly conducted. It did not appear that they could do anything but accept and cash the $12 cheque. Mr. Lewis had retired from business and left the city; the former manager of the Gas department had retired, also the former Chairman of Gas. He (Ald. Green) was led to believe that in former days the Gas department charged only for pipes and did the work for nothing. The committee thought this was one good reason for going out of the piping business.

Ald. Starling asked why many city gas lamps had been left on streets and allowed to be destroyed. They were quite valuable. If the city ever lit its streets by gas the lampposts would be needed.

Ald. Green said he could not answer that question, which he had asked many times himself. It looked, in former days, as though anybody who wanted a lamppost could have one.

CITY COLLECTIONS.

Ald. Marsh introduced a motion to the effect that a committee be appointed consisting of the Mayor, Ald. Marsh, Ackerman and Green, the duties of the said committee being to devise ways and means looking to the collections of all city accounts through the City Treasurer's office. There was, the mover said, no good reason that he could see why gas, water and other accounts should not be so paid.

The motion was carried.

Council adjourned.

Employers Benefited Through An Effort To Eradicate Consumption.

A determined effort is being made in Providence, R. I., to stamp out tuberculosis, particularly among the mill hands and factory employees. The Brown & Sharp Mfg. Co., which employs upwards of 4,000 men, is actively co-operating in this movement.

The first step was to post a notice in the works, explaining the nature of the disease, the great danger of neglecting the early symptoms, and advising the most effective treatment. A physician who has made a specialty of tubercular disease was provided, free of expense, to the employee, to examine and advise upon each case.

Some employees took advantage of the privilege on their own account, others were given the benefit of suggestion and willingly followed the well meant advice, while still others had to be induced with more effort.

A number of cases were discovered among the men. Some were sent to the State Sanitorium for modern open-air treatment. Others were urged to take up open air work, and wherever possible the company found such work for them. No tubercular person was allowed to remain in the works, for his own sake as well as for that of his fellow-workmen. Sanitary precautions were taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Many of the men have already returned to work robust and generally in fine condition.

Few, if any, large manufacturing establishments are free from consumption among the employees. It is a well-known fact that pulmonary tuberculosis is so insidious in its workings that the victim seldom realizes the danger until the disease has taken a strong hold. It is among the apparently superficial colds and coughs that the incipient cases are found, and a suggestion from the employer is the one thing needed to stimulate the desire for treatment. Doubtless the future will see very strict regulations governing tuberculosis, and the progressive men who are doing this work of their own volition are only anticipating what will probably be made compulsory.

Colds often lead to serious consequences, and should not be neglected. There is no more effective remedy for colds and coughs than the simple formula, prescribed by an authority on lung trouble, that calls for a half pint of Whisky, two ounces of Glycerine and a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure.) These ingredients cost little and can be purchased of any good prescription druggist and mixed at home. Mix well and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is put up for dispensing only, in half-ounce vials, each vial securely sealed in a round wooden case, with an engraved wrapper, showing the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario—plainly printed thereon. The oils sold in bulk and the many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) put out under similar name and style of package are not only ineffective, but often dangerous. It is always well to remember that the object of an imitator is to deceive. There is no known substitute for Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure.)

ASSAULT.

A local merchant pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting a young man named Rushlow. The accused, through his solicitor, Mr. O'Flynn, alleged that Rushlow was to some extent to blame. A fine of $1 and $1 costs was imposed.

ALLEGED INDECENT ASSAULT.

The case against F. W. Farrow, charged with assaulting Mrs. Wm. Kiser, was continued and lasted nearly all day. The case, as in the former proceedings, was held en camera.

After the evidence had been submitted and Mr. McMahon on behalf of the accused and Mr. Anderson on behalf of the Crown had addressed the Magistrate, His Worship gave judgment acquitting the accused.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Wanderers have lifted the Stanley Cup. They were beaten 6—5 by Kenoras last night, but won the round by four goals. The match was rough towards the close, and it seems likely that the Montrealers relied on their long lead in the first match, and did not take any chances of being hurt in the second, when they had the cup as good as won. Trustee Foran has awarded the Stanley Cup to Wanderers, as they played against Smith and Westwick under protest.

Tom Phillips in Ottawa and Eddie Giroux in Toronto is the story from Kenora of the location of these hockey stars next season.

THE WALRUS ON LAND.

It Is Just About as Helpless as a Canalboat Would Be.

As might be expected, a walrus is about as helpless on land as a canalboat. It is with no little difficulty and much hitching and floundering that he drags his huge bulk upon a sandy shore even with the boosting he gets from behind by the breakers as they roll in and dash against him. His hind flippers are of little use on land, and on sand or pebbles, where his front flippers do not hold well, the labor of floundering forward is so great that he never stirs beyond the edge of the water and usually lies with his body half awash, with the salt spray dashing over him like torrents of rain. On solid rock or ice he gets along much better, and often a herd will spread several rods back from the water's edge.

The females and younger walruses have far less development of neck to incumber them and therefore enjoy more freedom of motion than the old males, who actually seem a great burden to themselves. These creatures are strictly social in their habits and always go in herds, whether traveling, feeding, fighting or resting ashore. In the days before the slaughter of all living creatures became a ruling passion in the breast of man the Pacific species inhabited the whole of Bering sea and strait in herds which often contained thousands and even tens of thousands of individuals.

Payless Dentistry.

A Baltimore man was one afternoon seated in a dentist's anteroom, waiting his turn, when a young woman, evincing every evidence of utmost agitation at the thought of submitting to an ordeal, entered and took a seat beside him. Very shortly thereafter a series of piercing shrieks came from the operating room, whereupon the timid young woman sprang from her seat in terror and, grasping the arm of the colored attendant, gasped:

"Oh, what is that? Oh, what is that?"

"It ain't nothin', miss," the darky hastened to assure her. "It's only a patient that's bein' treated free of charge."

A Cooking Episode.

The people who know it all are so tiresome that the verdant simplicity of the novice in everyday affairs is absolutely refreshing. Here is an incident about a young woman who was making her first essay at housekeeping. A friend had sent her by mail a recipe for some new kind of bread, giving her directions to take a portion of the dough at a time and make it into the requisite form for baking. This seemed explicit enough, but what was the surprise of the friend to receive a telegram from the young housekeeper to this effect: "What shall I do with the rest of the dough? Please answer."

Polite.

Robecchi asked a friend to dinner and then returned home furious. "What is the matter?" said his wife.

"Do not speak to me! It is a shame! I always thought a politeness produced one in return, so I asked Dobelli to lunch."

"And has he refused?"

"Refused? I should think not. He has accepted."—La Caricaturista.

WITCHES AND PLANTS.

Many Legends and Traditions That Link Them Together.

In all countries in which the witchcraft delusion now exists or in which it prevailed in former times we find folklore stories connecting those mysterious bogies with the plants of those particular regions. Even the great Shakespeare causes his witches to discourse learnedly on the diabolical properties of "hemlock digg'd i' dark" and of "slips of yew silvered in the moon's eclipse." They are supposed to have had their favorite flowers as well as plants, and in England at the present time foxglove is spoken of as "witch bells" and harebells as "witches' thimbles." The common ragwort is well known as the "witches' horse," the tradition being that they mounted rank growths of that species of weed and "rode the skies," just as the dame with the pointed hat rides the broom in the familiar picture. In Germany and throughout northern Europe it is the belief that witches float from place to place on beds of hay, composed largely of witches' blossoms and "devil spikes," this last being a species of dwarfed slough grass. St. John's wort, which is now so popular for shoulder and buttonhole bouquets on St. John's eve, was formerly worn for the express purpose of averting the crafts and subtleties of the witches, bogies, ghosts and spirits which the European peasantry believed walked abroad on "that night of witching mysteries."—London Spectator.

SHAVING NAPOLEON.

It Was a Difficult Job For Constant, the Emperor's Barber.

Constant, Napoleon's barber, tells of the many difficulties he experienced in shaving the emperor. Napoleon would take his place in the chair, conversing and gesticulating. Suddenly he would call for a paper or turn rapidly to look behind him.

The utmost caution was necessary on the part of his barber to keep from cutting him, yet in spite of all these restless movements not once while Constant was shaving the emperor did he do so.

Sometimes when in the chair he would sit stiff and motionless as a stone, and Constant tells that he could not get him to move his head either way in order to facilitate the operation of shaving.

Napoleon had a singular whim of having only one side of his face lathered and shaved at a time. When he shaved himself, which was seldom, he invariably cut himself badly. This was due to his restless impatience, and, though he was scrupulously neat in his person, he would, after hewing a slice from his cheek, give up the operation in disgust and go about with part of his face unshaved until he had found his faithful barber.

The Two West Points.

The sensations of the new cadet when, after the climb from the boat landing, he finally reaches the plain—those first sensations linger a long while. There are two West Points—the actual West Point and the overarching spiritual one, of which the cadet only becomes conscious about the time he graduates. The determinate West Point that is to be his master for four years and the shaper of his destiny meets him at the top of the slope with ominous silence. He hears no voice, he sees no portentous figure, but there is communicated in some way through some medium the presence of an invisible authority, cold, inexorable and relentless. Time never wears away this first feeling. It comes back to every graduate on returning to West Point, let his years and his honors be what they may. And perhaps it is just as well that it be so; that there is one place left in our country where vanity of asserted ancestry and the too frequent arrogance of speculative and fortuitous commercial leadership find a chill.—General Morris Schaff in Atlantic.

Endurance of Migrating Birds.

The vigor and endurance that birds display upon the wing are astonishing. Nearly all the migratory species of Europe must cross the Mediterranean without resting. The little bluebird pays an annual visit to the Bermudas, 600 miles from the continent, and Wilson estimated its very moderate flight at more than a mile a minute. Remarkable stories are told of the long flights of tame falcons, one going 1,300 miles in a single day. Jewel mentions carrier pigeons that flew from Rouen to Ghent, 150 miles, in an hour and a half, and a certain warbler must wing its way from Egypt to the Baltic, 1,200 miles, in one night.

Bodily Proportions.

In the man of average stature the height of the body is ten times the length of the face, the face from the chin to the hair is as long as the hand, the arm is four times the length of the face, the sole of the foot is one-sixth the length of the body, and six times the thickness of the hand in the thickest part equals the thickness of the body.

Discretion.

He (to servant)—I understand that you have dared to drive my automobile during my absence. Servant—Don't be vexed, sir. I was very careful. I ran over two persons, but they were very old.—Jugend.

Of Course.

"Waiter, how long do you keep your eggs here?"

"Why, until some one eats them, sir, of course."—Annales.

That only is a disgrace to a man which he has deserved to suffer.—Phaedrus.

A QUEER SCHOOL.

Where Lessons Are Given in Grave-digging.

It is proposed to open in London a school for nursemaids, where girls over 16 years of age may be given lessons in the management of infants, preparing of children's food, plain sewing, laundry work, and taught the kindergarten system of education, says London Tit-Bits.

Such an institution already exists in Berlin. It was founded two years ago by a clergyman, and is in connection with a foundling hospital. The growing girls of this establishment are taught to become competent housemaids, and positions are found for them in the houses of the best families in Germany.

Russia possesses a school for policemen, where young men are trained for the force. The school is situated in St. Petersburg, and in a museum connected thereto the pupils make themselves familiar with jimmies, drills, chisels, and other tools used by professional thieves. A particular branch of the school is the Russian passport system, which every budding policeman has to study in detail.

School for Judges.

A remarkable educational establishment is the school of judges opened recently in Paris. Here make-believe trials are held by pupils under the supervision of well-known attorneys. The whole procedure, from the issuing of a warrant for arrest to the summing up and the judge's verdict, is carried through in a business-like manner.

At Monte Carlo there is a school of croupiers. It is held during the six summer months in the club room of the Tiraux Pigeons and the Salle d'Escrime, in the Casino building. Here are tables similar to those in the Casino gaming room, and each pupil in turn takes the role of croupier, while others personate players and stake money over the table. At a given instant the croupier must calculate and pay out the winning stakes. There are usually between 40 and 50 pupils in this school, and a six months' course is generally sufficient to turn them into finished croupiers.

A very odd educational establishment is the school for grave-diggers in Belgium. It was founded by the directors of the Great Evere Cemetery, and all candidates for posts as sextons in Belgium must undergo training in the school and pass an examination.

364 LABOR PAPERS.

In the United States and Canada—Reach Wide Circle of Readers.

One hundred and eighty-five monthly and one hundred and seventy-nine weekly journals in the United States and Canada are devoted exclusively to the advocacy of trade unionism.

These 364 publications, which number does not include socialist periodicals, reach a not inconsiderable portion of the laboring community and exercise an influence in it which is little suspected.

There are in North America approximately 2,500,000 working people organized into trades unions, and each of them receives the official organ of the craft to which he or she belongs and usually one or two other labor papers.

But the prestige of these journals extends beyond the enrolled membership of established organizations. They number among their subscribers many sympathizers and non-union workmen; they are placed on the tables of reading rooms all over the country, and for every subscriber there are probably two readers. It is no exaggeration to say that they reach 5,000,000 readers, perhaps half as many more.

Where Byron Is Buried.

An extraordinary series of outrages, including burglary, church incendiarism, and attempted train-wrecking has occurred recently in the district between Nottingham and Mansfield, and has aroused a feeling of panic throughout the countryside. It is the belief of the police that all these offences have been committed by the same gang and that a man of singular cunning and ferocity is directing them. Extraordinary precautions are being taken by the residents in the outlying and sparsely populated parts. Watch dogs have been let loose in gardens, mansions fitted with burglar alarms, and all the railway stations along the various companies' systems are patrolled nightly by platelayers and policemen. The churches in the district are being guarded night and day, the clergy sharing in the vigil. This is particularly the case with regard to the historic parish church at Hucknall, where Lord Byron, the poet, his mother, and his daughter Ada, Countess of Lovelace, were interred. This church, which was built in the early thirteenth century, is a centre of pilgrimage for Americans and all lovers of the author of "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage."

A Woman's Revenge.

The transformation of a woman's blind, impetuous love into vindictive hate has brought to light the true facts of an amazing human drama, and has led to the revelation of a terrible miscarriage of justice. A young man named George Henry William Lewis, was sentenced on November 24, at the Middlesex session, to three years' penal servitude on a charge of uttering a forged cheque, the evidence that incriminated him being given by a young woman named Millie Marsh, who swore to his identity, and said that he informed her that he had cashed the cheque. Lewis denied that he knew her, but his defence failed. Millie Marsh has now confessed that she committed perjury in Lewis's case in order to shield her lover, Duncan Brady, who is in custody. Brady, she says, has deserted her, and, in revenge, she has turned evidence against him.

MEMORIES.

(Carolyn Wells.)

I remember, I remember
The gowns I used to wear;
The yellow figured jaconet,
The purple sprigged mohair,
They always were a bit too long,
Or else not long enough;
And often, in the latter case,
Pieced out with different stuff.

I remember, I remember
The roses, red and white,
Upon my bayadere barege,
(It must have been a sight!)
My solferino balzarine—
My lilac satinet—
We gave that to an orphan child,
(The child is living yet!)

I remember, I remember
My magenta wool delaine;
My salmon taglioni, too
('Twas lined with satin jean,)
My lovely light blue empress cloth,
Picked out with bands of dove,
I wore the night Joe came to call
And told me of his love.

I remember, I remember
Those gowns so quaint and queer;
I wore them with a happy heart
For many a happy year.
I have an ivory satin now,
Embroidered fair with pearl;
But ah, I'm further off from heaven
Than when I was a girl.

An exchange says: Coal oil is the safest remedy for frozen feet and hands. I saw a man who was found after he had lain out all night with the thermometer fifty below zero. He was taken into camp and his hands and feet soaked in coal oil five hours. All the frost came out without his losing even a finger tip. The thing amazed the surgeons.

There are several roosters of fashionable blood priced as high as $800 each. You can buy a fine lion for $300 and a tiger for $700. By and by we shall have a craze for breeding fishes, and a fine male salmon, educated to pond life might be worth $1,000. The $8,000 cow has one calf a year, worth $4,000. The female salmon may become the mother of 300,000 little fellows in the same time, worth in the aggregate possibly as much as the calf.

Messrs. George and Howard Bishop had a peculiar experience while cutting wood in S. C. Bourk's bush, Oso township, one day last week says the Bancroft Times. They were felling a tree by the crosscut saw method when a fox arrived stealthily and unnoticed on the scene. Presently the tree began to fall and reynard beat a retreat, but with all his agility he failed to get clear. An awful scream attracted the attention of the woodmen in the direction of the tree top, when they saw a tailless fox emerge and make tracks into the woods. On investigation it was found that the falling tree had struck the fox, severing the tail close to the body, as though cut off by an axe.

Which would you rather possess, talent or tact? You may have both. But if only one, try tact. By its exercise you will make greater progress. Talent calculates clearly, reasons logically, makes out a case as clear as daylight, and utters its oracles with all the weight of justice and reason, tact refutes without contradicting, puzzles the profound, with profundity, and without wit outwits the wise. Set them together on a race for popularity, pen in hand and tact will distance talent by half the course; talent brings to market that which is wished for, talent instructs, tact enlightens, talent leads where no one follows; tact follows where the humor leads; talent is pleased that it sought to have succeeded, tact is delighted that it succeeded, talent toils for a posterity, which will never repay it; tact throws away no pains, but catches the passion of the passing hour. Talent is certainly a very fine thing to talk about, a very good thing to be proud of, a very glorious eminence to look down from; but tact is useful, portable, always alive, always alert, always marketable; it is the talent of talents, the availableness of resources, the applicability of power, the eye of discrimination, the right hand of intellect.

LOVE ADDED A GROUP.

How Pitcairn Island Became a British Possession.

There recently died in a London workhouse infirmary, poor and forgotten, a man whose one-time attachment to a young and high-spirited girl had the result of adding a whole group of islands to the British Empire.

John Strachan, the individual in question, was one of the pioneer Australian gold-miners; and having "made his pile" he went to Melbourne—as was the well-nigh universal practice amongst the "diggers" in those days—in order to spend it. There he fell in love with Lily Ambrose, the pretty daughter of a well-to-do innkeeper. He would have married her forthwith, but her parents objected, whereupon he and she set sail for the Southern Seas in a forty-foot cutter, and eventually settled on what is now known as Marion Island.

Constituted "Effective Occupation."

Here they lived many years and begot sons and daughters, and this was held to constitute "effective occupation," when, some time afterwards, the question of the ownership of the Crozet and adjacent groups (to one of which Marion Island belongs) was raised in a semi-acute form between the Governments of France and Britain.

Pitcairn Island became an appanage of the British Crown after a somewhat similar fashion. One John Adams, a mutinous sailor belonging to the Bounty man-of-war, ran away from Tahiti with the wife of a local chief, and others of his messmates followed his example. Together they sailed into the unknown, until they sighted "an island mountain that rose like a great sugar-loaf out of the sea," and thereon they settled, burning their ship after having looted her of all available stores. The mutineers remained unknown in England until 1814, when the island was accidentally rediscovered. The Union Jack was then hoisted, but it was not until 1839 that Pitcairn was formally annexed.

KING EDWARD A BARGAIN.

British Monarchy Maintained by Revenue From Nation's Land.

Prof. Masterman, of Birmingham, has pointed out that we get our monarch at considerably under cost price.

About a hundred years ago, the Crown lands, which then formed the chief source of revenue, were taken over by the nation, and they now bring in rather more than it costs the country to maintain the monarchy.

As to the curious maxim in English law that "the King can do no wrong," Prof. Masterman explains that this means that the law courts can take no cognizance of what the King does, but politically every action of the King must be sanctioned by some person who can do wrong, and who can be punished for doing wrong. The King has to act through certain definite channels, and the whole of English constitutional history lies round the contest to limit those channels.

The position of the English King of to-day differs from that of the past in the substitution of influence for authority.

Devil Bird of Ceylon.

Most people who have visited the Island of Ceylon and penetrated into the jungle fastnesses, have heard the cry of the devil bird. This awe-inspiring sound resembles nothing so much as the screams of a human being undergoing the most terrible torture. Naturalists have identified it with the brown wood owl found in Hindustan.

But the devil bird, or ulama, as the Cingalese call it, is an elusive creature, and no one has had the good fortune to kill or catch a specimen. The Cingalese—naturally a superstitious race—regard the cry of this bird with the utmost horror; they believe that its scream heard at night presages the most dire misfortune, and they are in the habit of offering sacrifices to avert the approaching disaster.

Mr. Milford, of the Ceylon civil service, studied the mysterious bird with great interest. "Its ordinary note," he writes, "is a magnificent, clear shout, like that of a human being, which can be heard at a great distance, and has a fine effect in the silence of the closing night. But the sounds which have earned for it its bad name, and which I have heard but once to perfection, are indescribable, the most appalling that can be imagined, and scarcely to be heard without shuddering. I can only compare it to a boy in torture, whose screams are being stopped by being strangled."

Find of Rare Diamonds.

Extraordinary fine diamonds have been discovered in a new mine in the Orange River Colony, South Africa, within the last few weeks. Experts are astonished and delighted at the quality and purity of the stones. The mine in question is called the Robert Victor Mine, and is situated at Boshoff, a few miles across the border from Kimberley. It is only a comparatively small property, less in extent than any of the known mines comprising the DeBeers group. But the stones are not only of quite superfine quality, equally the best Brazilian diamonds, and far better than anything hitherto found in South Africa, but they are also very plentiful. The DeBeers average is roughly a quarter of a carat per load. The average of the Premier, in the Transvaal, near Pretoria, is about a third of a carat per load, but the Robert Victor is said to work out at nearly three-quarters of a carat per load—an extraordinary and hitherto unattained result.

Australia and Canada.

"When one compares what Australia is doing with the remarkable record of Canada, the Australian accomplishment seems puny enough. Canada accommodated 100,000 new-comers last year, and is now offering work to men, 10,000 at a time, for railway construction and similar purposes. Where Australia must insist on conditions, Canada invites the healthy white practically without reservation."

FURNACES IN ENGLAND.

John Bull Prefers to See a Blaze in Open Grate.

According to London papers, Englishmen are up in arms over a threatened invasion of what they regard as one of their inherent rights, the right to keep their houses uncomfortably cold. At a recent meeting of remonstrants resolutions were passed condemning a rumored attempt to supplant open fires with furnaces. The British husbands and fathers assembled agreed that home would be anything but attractive had it always an atmosphere reminiscent of the House of Commons, or, worst still, of the reading room of the British Museum.

There is reason to believe that the house that is improperly heated possesses a number of advantages over the house that is thoroughly heated, although it is impossible to persuade people on this side of the water that any change is desirable. It costs much less partly to heat a house—to heat the ends of two or three rooms—for one thing, and that is an important consideration, surely, when coal goes up whenever the temperature goes down. Again, given an armful of logs piled near an open fireplace, and almost anybody can keep a fire going, whereas it is a very different matter to descend to the cellar and fix a furnace. The trouble with most furnaces is that they are located in the cellar.

Then, too, if callers call at all at a house in which their teeth chatter they remain only long enough to "pay their respects"; they do not accept invitations to be seated and rock the hours away chatting about nothing in particular while the members of the family on whom they are calling are waiting for an opportunity to go to bed.

It isn't surprising that Englishmen are opposed to warm houses, but why they continue to cling to open fires is a mystery. The open fire is more or less ornamental, it is true, but it merely serves to accentuate the general chill and gloom which pervade the average English "living room."

LOOSER IN MORALS.

Bishop of London So Describes Married Men.

"Taking them all round, married men are much looser in their morals than single men." This affirmation by the Bishop of London, England, quite startled his hearers at a meeting of the Council for Promoting Public Morality. Those present were pleased, however, to learn, on the Bishop's authority, that London is becoming more moral, thanks to the efforts of the police. There is still, however, much to be done. The Bishop said he would never rest content until the open sale in shops of things to make sin easy was suppressed.

Underground London.

Nearly 500 miles of sewers are situated beneath the feet of London's population, and this includes only the large sewers, several of them so large that a number of boats could float down them abreast. Some idea of the enormous cost of draining London may be gathered from the fact that the drainage works and machinery alone cost £8,000,000 sterling.

The three main sewers in London run from Fleet street to Hampstead, from Blackfriars to Abbey Mills, and from Harrow to Old Ford. Connected with these are a multitude of smaller sewers, measuring about twelve feet in diameter, which makes London one of the best-drained cities in the world.

A thousand men are employed all the year round, not even excepting Sundays, in keeping London properly drained, and the stupendous total of 1,000,000,000 tons of sewage is chemically treated every twelve months and taken away in sludge vessels to the North Sea.

At Barking, where the sludge is dealt with, there are fourteen sewers measuring thirty feet across; that is to say, any one of them would be wide enough for a small tugboat to pass down. Here the sludge, after being chemically treated, has to go through enormous iron cages, resembling gigantic colanders, which keep back solid objects, such as pieces of wood, old boots, and so forth, whilst not infrequently valuable articles of jewelery are found wedged between the bars of a cage.

The King En Route.

In the early part of the year King Edward almost always takes a short trip abroad, and the following few points about His Majesty's mode of traveling will not be out of place.

Frequently, when traveling incognito, he favors the Dover and Calais route, and on his arrival at the Gare Maritime of the latter town, partakes of a light luncheon, which invariably consists of clear soup, two poached eggs on toast, a wing of cold chicken, and a plentiful supply of fresh fruit. His Majesty rarely takes cheese, and liqueurs even more seldom.

His luncheon over, King Edward orders a huge bundle of newspapers and periodicals to be brought to his carriage, and these, together with a supply of cigars, keep him occupied until his arrival in the French capital. His Majesty is an inveterate newspaper reader.

It is an interesting and perfectly true fact that for early morning and unofficial enjoyment, the King far prefers a pipe to cigars or cigarettes.

London's Huge Appetite.

The secretary of the Public Health Committee says the total amount of foodstuffs that reach London yearly is between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 tons, of which rather more than two-thirds arrives by water and less than one-third by rail. Three-fifths of the whole quantity is consumed by the Londoners, the remainder merely passing through in the course of transit elsewhere.

The shipments include 1,000,000 tons of meat, fish, milk, butter, eggs, lard, etc.; 500,000 tons of fruit and vegetables, including sugar and preserved fruits, and 1,400,000 tons of grain and flour. It is pointed out in the committee's report that the system of inspection is inefficient and that oleomargarine is largely sold as butter.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"Yes."

"To-day you go down into Castelleno to a little posada, where you will dwell in safety until Robledo brings you the last news of me. Listen, Senor Lalor, the favor that I would beg is that you will chronicle, or cause to be chronicled, the manner of my death, you will tell the world how the greatest brigand of all ages turned at bay among his mountains, alone, as he had lived, save for 16 disloyal men, against huge odds."

"I will do so."

"I have further left you a large sum to engage an adequate illustrator. It would be a pity, senor, that so memorable a fight, as that which is about to take place, should not receive full justice. I have had much pleasure in your society, my dear nephew," Don Q. put out his slender bony hand to take Lalor's, "and I recognize in you one whom the saints sent to a lonely man to record, perhaps, his last exploit, which would have been lost to humanity had none lived who could add it to the page of Spanish history."

Lalor went down the mountains, leaving Don Q. with a priest the chief had caused to be fetched from the little chapel of San Pedro. For Don Q., in view of his possible death, desired to confess and to receive absolution from the hands of the trembling father.

The young Englishman took up his abode in a posada on the outskirts of Castelleno, where he waited for nearly a week, listening to the townspeople discussing news from the sierra, which was sensational and contradictory, and also the diversion they expected from staring at Don Q. when he should be exhibited to the public gaze in a cage on the Plaza! Lalor heard in silence, knowing well that if ever they gazed upon the fierce chief, it would be upon his dead body.

One afternoon a young woman touched him on the arm and raising her handsome eyes to his—"You have heard of Isabelilla?" she said, laying an indicative finger on her own breast and pausing a moment for his acknowledgment.

Lalor bowed and made a suitable reply.

She went on to say that the hospitality of the poor dwelling of her mother, who was a laundress, was open to him if he would follow her, for there was one come from the mountains who desired to speak with the senor.

She moved off at once and Lalor followed. At the house he found Robledo. The young brigand was very pale under his sunburn.

Isabelilla waited on them. Lalor has since said she was the handsomest woman he had ever seen. As up to the date of that memorable supper three men had been stabbed for her sake, his opinion probably only did her justice.

During the meal, which was made up of an excellent puchero, beans and fruit, Lalor asked no questions. After it, he lit a cigarette and inquired how Don Q. fared.

Robledo shook his head.

"I will tell the senor the story."

And he told it, backing his words with look and gesture, till Lalor felt he saw the scenes described.

Robledo told of the final look at the deserted valley of the Boca de Lobo, of the march to the last fastness of the brigands on an isolated peak surrounded by precipices on every side, and joined only to the mass of the sierra by a narrow bridge of living rock. Here was situated one of the dwelling caves of Don Q., and the spot was fortified by sangars craftily constructed to dominate the approach of the long isthmus.

"My lord and I walked last, for those others were not willing to go to the Punta de Lanza," said Robledo.

"But why?" Lalor asked in surprise. "It could never be taken."

"True, senor. But also one could not run away from it. Therefore, those 15 moved slowly."

He spoke of a man who tried to desert, and whom he and a companion had hurled from the cliff, and of shepherding the remainder across the rocky bridge. Having completed the preparations, a characteristic fit of gloom fell upon Don Q. The last scout had been withdrawn, the bridge strewn with stones and bowlders to make the footing treacherous. All was ready. Two days of waiting followed, while they lay cut off from all the world. Two blue golden days, that showed the glories of the sierra above, and far beneath the peaceful smoke rising from scattered chozas, and the haze that clung round distant towns on the warm and drowsy plain.

"Thus we waited watching, my lord and I and those 14, for the coming of 300." The young Spaniard stopped and sat musing with frowning brows, until Isabelilla, growing impatient, laid her arm across his shoulder. He started slightly and resumed his tale.

Once or twice, he said, the echo of a shot rang from gorge to gorge. And at last came a dawn which showed the enemy advancing. Don Q. had supplied each man with three loaded magazine rifles, bidding them reserve their fire until he gave the signal.

"My lord lay beside me in the trench," Robledo told it with pride, "and we saw that none of our foes were quick to step first upon the bridge, till a tall captain thrust out of the crowd. He had a white face under big black eyebrows, and he drove a man before him with his naked sword. It was Pablo. My lord laid his cheek to the rifle and it yelped in my ear. Pablo twirled round, screaming, and seized the captain about the middle. They twisted on the bridge as strong men twist in a grapple, and in a moment they reeled over the edge together.

"Then our great lord leaped upon a high rock, where all could behold him, and called to Don Hugo to see how a traitor died! Senor, I shut my eyes, I could hear the bullets chipping upon the rocks round my lord; I almost felt the weight of his body as it fell." Robledo rubbed himself reminiscently. "But it was only a sore thrust in the side from the butt of my lord's rifle—I doubt but it broke a rib or two—for he was angry. 'Fool! can they kill me?' he said.

"A great battle followed. The slaughter upon the narrow path was terrible. The troops tried to rush it many times, but we shot them down. The vultures wings came between us and the sun, casting their shadows on the dead. Still we held off the soldiers. My lord was everywhere—passing from trench to trench without fear.

"Shouts there were, senor, and many screaming above the loud rattling of the bullets. Men and muskets tossed like rags before a wind as they pitched into the chasm. Death I have seen many a time, senor, but not like that," the young fellow shuddered.

"By midday the governor drew off his people, and sat down to wait until starvation should begin to tell upon our courage. But though only a single man among us was wounded, those evil ones began to grumble among themselves, and concoct plans for betraying the chief.

"But one cannot deceive him, senor, when night fell he called them from the trenches, and read their hearts as a priest reads his book. They denied their treachery with oaths. Then my lord said if any would still follow him and fight, let them stand out on his side."

Isabelilla, crouched by the young robber, gazed up at him with blazing eyes.

"How many stood on his side? Tell me," she said, husky with emotion.

"But one only."

"And that one? I know him! It was you, my Robledo!" exclaimed the girl, and she flung her arms around him in a fierce caress.

"My lord laughed," Robledo crossed himself. "He laughed, but I feared his laughter. He drove those others from the cave, and bade them live or die as they would. For awhile he sat silent, senor, and then he told me to follow him. We crept in the darkness over the peak, and down upon the other side, and my lord led me by great tracks for a long time, and we came at length to a hole, and he bade me enter. In truth, I feared to enter—but I also feared my lord.

"In a little time my lord lit a lantern. We were in a tunnel under the bridge of rock, and it grew smaller till we crawled as a wildcat crawls through the underbrush, and my breathing came hard. I know not how long we crept through the heart of the mountains, my head was bursting, and I vowed an offering to the patron saint of hunters (for when I am not a brigand, senor, I lead hunting parties to shoot the ibex), if I ever escaped to the free air again. At the last I found myself lying in a hollow of deep grass with the good wind blowing over me.

"The moon was out, and through a screen of bushes we could see the bridge and the peak. The soldiers were flying a white flag and taking their wounded from the bridge, and a white flag came up out of the trenches on the Punta de Lanza. I feared for the anger of my lord. But he only laughed very softly, and pointed to one who lay on his face beside the end of the path and held talk with some of the civil guard."

"They were betraying the peak—your own men?"

"Yes, senor. But the people of the governor feared treachery, and would not pass over. In the end the civil guards rushed across, led by one Moruno, whom I know—there are men of spirit in the civil guard," Robledo remarked generously—"and by degrees nearly all the troops passed over and swarmed upon the Punta de Lanza, searching for my lord. Then I found that my lord was gone from beside me.

"Had gone!" exclaimed Lalor.

Robledo held up his hand with much the gesture of his old master.

"Listen, senor. Don Hugo himself passed over, for I saw him. Indeed, when they knew the surrender was complete all would have gone to look at the cave of Don Q., for never before in all the history of the sierra has any expedition found a dwelling of my lord's. So I thought of these things within myself and wondered what my lord would do, when I was shaken by a horrible noise. The mountain vomited a leaping flame and trembled with the pain of its torment. Great stones and rocks were hurled upwards, and for many minutes the voices that my lord of the mountains called to his aid, rang and roared in the sierra that is his."

Lalor felt his own face pale. "Go on," he urged.

"I could hear men stumbling and groaning and crying on the saints. And then, senor, I think I slept, for I was weary. When the sun rose I awakened and my lord was standing beside me in the thicket and bade me look down. I looked. Senor, it was a wonderful sight! The bridge was gone, and there upon the Punta de Lanza, upon the crags we had defended only yesterday, half an army was clinging, able neither to go forward, because of the precipices nor to return back because of the broken path across the chasm.

"After I had looked a long time, my lord spoke. 'Robledo,' he said, 'you see that none may ever triumph over me. Tell that in the plains. Many will say I am dead. You alone know I am not. Go to Castelleno and tell but two only—the senor Lalor, and your Isabelilla. If you tell the secret to any other in Spain, I will know.'"

"And your lord, where is he?" questioned Lalor.

Robledo shook his head obstinately. "I will tell my story to the end," he answered. "My lord and I sat together in the hollow to rest, and my lord said I should not see him again for a long time. 'Go you and marry your Isabelilla, and be happy if you can,' he said. 'But I do not think you will be so, for that woman has a fierce heart. And you had better sell your guitar or bury it, Robledo, for men do not serenade their wives, and such a wife as yours will not allow you to serenade others.' So spoke my lord."

Isabelilla sighed in the silence.

"My lord was the wisest of men," she murmured.

"And have you no message for me?" asked Lalor in some disappointment.

"Yes, senor," Robledo took up a package from a corner. "My lord said—Tell the senor that though for the time men think me dead, I live still. Tell him that I have bequeathed to him a little autobiography of my life which—if none hear of me again within a year—he will, for my sake, offer to the consideration of an English publisher, in order that the world may know a little more of one of its greatest and most blameless men.'"

THE END.

A CURIOUS WILL.

It Was Made By An Insane Lawyer Who Died Penniless.

Several years ago Charles Lounsberry, a Chicago lawyer, who at one time ranked high in his profession, died an insane patient in the Cook county asylum at Dunning. Although this man died absolutely destitute and penniless, he left a "will." This will was duly sent to the probate court; but, there being nothing to probate, the document was merely placed on file. This peculiar will read in part as follows:

"I, Charles Lounsberry, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order as justly may be to distribute my interest in the world among succeeding men.

"That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep bound volumes as my property being inconsiderable and of none account, I make no disposition of in this, my will. My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal; but, these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

"Item: I give to good fathers and mothers in trust for their children all good little words of praise and encouragement and all quaint pet names and endearments, and I charge said parents to use them justly but generously as the needs of their children shall require.

"Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every the flowers of the fields and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof and the odors of the willows that dip therein and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees.

"Item: To lovers I devise their imaginary world with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music and aught else they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

"Item: And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers I leave memory, and I bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poems, if there be others, to the end that they may live the old days over again freely and fully without title or diminution.

"Item: To our loved ones with snowy crows I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children, until they fall asleep."

The Modern Percheron.

The modern Percheron stands sixteen hands high and over, weighs from 1,700 to 2,200 pounds and is white, gray or black in color. He has an intelligent head of a type peculiar to the breed, rather small ears and eyes, short, strongly muscled neck; a plump, rotund body; strong back, heavy quarters and somewhat drooping croup. He usually is low down and blocky, on short, clean legs, devoid of feather, and has well shaped, sound hoofs.—A. S. Alexander in American Cultivator.

Breeding Ewe Lambs.

Old sheep men have long considered it a bad practice to breed ewe lambs so they will lamb after they arrive at one year of age. They usually disappoint their owner, and they lose growth in consequence. The ewe should have her first lamb when she is about two years old. At that time she has obtained her growth and is much more liable to do well. A flock of sheep is the best helper in keeping up the condition of land without extra expense.

Sort the Hogs Into Sizes.

Is that poor economy in hog feeding that was practiced last year and the year before being repeated again this season—that is, to feed hogs of different sizes together? It is much better to sort them into two sizes at least. The reason for this is obvious.

Somersetshire Longevity.

The Rev. H. J. Phillips, of Kingbury, South Petherton, has buried thirteen persons in his parish in the last twelve months. One was an infant seven weeks old; the ages of the other twelve give an average of 71 1-2.

When French Left His Saddle.

Gen. French, of the British army, is a man of extraordinary personal charm and espirit. It is a joy to hear him tell the story of how when he had been thrown from his horse in his subaltern days a pompous officer of the old school came fussing up and demanded: "What do you mean, sir, by leaving your saddle without orders?" One of his cherished possessions is a copy of The Standard and Diggers' News, the Boer organ, containing a full account of the complete rout of his cavalry division and winding up with the statement that Gen. French had been mortally wounded.

FICTION and FRICTION

By Margaret Murray

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague

The most popular novel and "biggest seller" of the year was "Aunt Mary Moffat," written by an unknown author, whose name and fame had suddenly gone abroad throughout the land.

Young Dr. Brandon, just returned from Europe, hastened to congratulate his successful friend, and to his amazement he found the writer in the depths of despair.

"John Hastings, what is the matter? Are you not satisfied with being the most admired and discussed man of the hour? You ought to be ecstatic, elated, delirious with joy, and you look as if you had swallowed a bad oyster."

"Why should I rejoice in success when the only reason I tried for it is gone?" John groaned.

"What do you mean?"

"I was engaged to Ethel Ransom, you remember, and only waiting for money to support her"—

"Some people consider that an insignificant detail."

"Unfortunately Ethel's father did not, but now my fortune is assured she refuses to marry me altogether."

"May I ask why?"

"She declares that I have drawn the character of Aunt Mary Moffat from her grandmother and held her up to ridicule before everybody."

"She is crazy!" Brandon exclaimed.

There are plenty of others," pointing to a pile of letters. "All those are from people who recognize themselves or one of their relatives among the characters of my book. Listen to this:

> "Dear Mr. Hastings—I was so pleased to find you made me the heroine of your book. I told the editor of our village paper, and he put a piece in the Huckleberry Junction Post about it. Please send me your autograph.

"There are more heroines, a number of heroes, and you remember the man I called the 'patriarchal parson'—the woods are full of grandfathers exactly like him, it appears. As for the Aunt Marys, their name is legion—there are at least three in every village in the states."

Brandon helped himself from the pile and read aloud:

> "Dear Hastings—Perceiving, as I cannot fail to do so, the depiction of my late lamentable aunt in the title character of your book, I suggest that it would be a thankful act for you to put a monument on her grave. Her folks can't afford it. It would be a good ad. for the book too."

Brandon laughed heartily.

"What fun it would be to get these people together! Suppose we go to my house at Knowlbridge and give a party for them. Perhaps if Ethel sees the numerous other claimants she will give up her idea about grandma."

John demurred, but was finally persuaded by Brandon, who assumed the entire responsibility, and sent the following letter to each of the originals:

> Mr. John Hastings requests the honor of your presence October the sixteenth at seven o'clock to meet the ladies and gentlemen from whom characters in his "Aunt Mary Moffat" were drawn.

"I have seen your capricious charmer and prevailed upon her to come to our party," said Brandon, a few days later. "She hesitated, but she will be there—the unmistakable glitter of curiosity was in her azure orbs."

First among the author's guests to arrive on the auspicious 16th was an alleged "patriarchal parson," personally conducted by a nephew named Samuel Bangs. The heroine was represented by a married woman (whose husband came also), a young widow and a sentimental maiden. Two clerks, a bank cashier and a commercial traveler appeared for the hero, and four Aunt Marys in various stages of senility came attended by enterprising relatives.

"I wish we had never invited them," said John nervously. "We will have a row as 'sure as sparks fly upward.'"

"Leave it to your uncle," said Brandon. "I wouldn't miss it for a golden corkscrew."

"Suppose they find one another out before supper."

"They can't break loose and wax confidential between now and 7 o'clock."

Brandon announced the guests as they entered the drawing room. Sam Bangs came last, his face radiant with smiles and soap; placing one hand on his spine, the other on his heart, he made a real dancing school bow and said:

"This is the proudest moment of my life."

John thanked him and Brandon said he was lucky to keep his heart where he could lay his hand on it so readily.

Ethel arrived and insisted on going with the housekeeper to the butler's pantry, where she stayed, looking through the door.

Brandon, opposite John at table, forced the conversation to be general, steering it off the book, until the dessert appeared, then John rose.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I have been fortunate enough to bring together a number of people represented in my book. We have the hero, Thomas Presley; the heroine, Jennie Jenkins; the patriarchal parson, and Aunt Mary Moffat herself. Will those I have named rise while I drink their good health?"

"Here is to Aunt Mary Moffat and all her friends, relatives and acquaintances!" said John, and glasses were drained amid great applause.

Then, in order to identify each character, he suggested that all should be seated except the hero and heroine, and four Thomas Presleys and three Jenny Jenkinses were left staring, first in perplexity, then in rage, at one another.

"There must be a misunderstanding," said John. "Surely there can be but one hero or heroine of a single book."

The three women talked at once, the heroes muttered bitterly, the personal conductors exchanged hasty confidences; John cast a glance toward the door, but Brandon laid a detaining hand on his shoulder.

"My friends," he said, "it is plain that Mr. Hastings has drawn composite characters, taking from each the quality for which you are best known. Is one clown in a three ringed circus less a clown because there are two others?"

Nothing could have been more ingeniously offensive, and smoldering irritation threatened to burst forth. The widow stood by John to protect him. Brandon tried again.

"We have all seen 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' with two Uncle Toms, a pair of Topsies and a brace of Evas, and none of them differeth from another in glory."

Here the butler announced that the doctor was wanted across the street.

"For heaven's sake, don't go!" whispered John.

"Talk to them yourself; make 'em laugh."

Before John could utter a word Sam Bangs rose in wrath.

"This is a nice job you have put up on us. If these ain't the real folks in the book how do we know you are the real author?"

Approaching footsteps turned attention toward the door, through which marched a lively gentleman, who saluted and addressed the company.

"I am rejoiced, delighted, enchanted to see you all," he bawled, "the creatures of my imagination—the characters of my book. I—the famous—the clever—the inimitable—the greatest of authors, greet you."

"I knew it," Sam exclaimed. "Then you really wrote 'Aunt Mary Moffat,' and he is an impostor?" pointing to John.

"To perdition with him in five minutes! Certainly I did—I wrote all the books in all the libraries—I made the world, and the people are my children."

"It's genius," said the maiden.

"It's rum," said the widow.

"It's mania," said Brandon, entering, followed by a man who, stepping behind the elated gentleman, took him by the elbows and walked him out of the house.

"That is a paretic patient of mine, who overheard me speak of this party to his daughter today, and stole away from his attendant to come."

"I don't believe he is a bit crazier than you are, with your composite clowns, your three ringed Topsies and your piratic patients," said Sam.

"There is no time to explain—I have terrible news," said Brandon. "One of the servants has developed malignant smallpox, and you must all leave the house as soon as possible to avoid infection. There is a train to New York in half an hour."

Sam made a bolt for the door, followed by all but the widow, who refused to leave John.

"You needn't wait—I will attend to him," said Ethel, confronting her suddenly.

"Who are you?" demanded the astonished widow.

"I am the girl who is to marry Mr. Hastings."

"Are you sure you are the original girl or only one of several?" asked the widow sarcastically. "But perhaps you are a composite.

Without saying goodby, she marched majestically out of the room.

"Heaven forgive that lie about the smallpox," said Brandon, mopping his brow. "Nothing less would have saved the roof over our heads."

Breaking the Chain.

In 1881 a bill was introduced in the Massachusetts senate which provided for a bounty of $5 for the killing of "a lynx or wildcat," says the Boston Herald. When the bill was under discussion Senator Rice of Essex, who had a habit of asking the committees to explain some parts of bills they had reported, said he would like to ask the committee who reported the bill whether the term "lynx or wildcat" referred to two different species of animals or whether it was the same kind of animal called by different names. Senator Rockwell of Pittsfield, who never let an opportunity to say a good thing pass, arose and said, "In the absence of the chairman of the committee who reported this bill I would say for the information of the honorable senator from Essex, who, having always lived in the eastern part of the state, is not probably aware that for years there has been a chain of wildcats roaming over the Berkshire hills, that the object of this bill is to take some of the links out of that chain."

Bank Note Paper.

The nine kinds of notes printed by the Bank of England are all on thin, white, crisp paper. The ink used is black, a hard, dry preparation, said to be made from naphtha smoke. A peculiarity of the English notes is that the engraving is simple and old fashioned, in contrast to the notes of other countries, which are most elaborately engraved by complicated machinery, the designs being difficult of imitation by hand and the lathes and ruling engines being so costly as to discourage counterfeiters. The English paper is made by a private concern, as is that in use in the United States, the pulp of the latter being a mixture of linen, cotton and silk, the silk threads coming into prominence after the printing. The French bank note paper is of similar texture, hair being used with the pulp instead of silk threads. Over 50,000 notes are issued by the Bank of England daily of an average value of £20.

HUNTER'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Marooned on Raft and Nearly Swept Over the Falls.

The wild northern woods offer many peculiar dangers to the lumbermen, hunters, trappers, and fishermen who sojourn there, but few men have had a more hair raising experience than the cashier of a bank, who was marooned on a raft and all but swept over the falls of a branch of the Chippewa river.

It was during the spring floods, and the Chippewa was a raging torrent, filled with floating logs and cakes of grinding, smashing ice. The banker and two friends were about six miles above the falls and attempted to ferry the river on a raft made of five pine logs. The raft proved unmanageable when it was caught by the current, and the men found themselves swept down the river, the heavy raft sweeping the lighter driftwood and ice before it like bits of straw.

Whirling Over the Rapids.

"Three miles down, at a bend in the river," says the banker, "my companions succeeded in jumping off, but I was too late and soon found myself in the middle of the stream again and fairly whirling over rapids that ever became faster and rougher. Suddenly above the roaring of the rapids and the creaking of the raft I heard the dull, heavy thunder of the distant falls, where logs and ice were pouring over and churning the water into columns of hissing vapor.

"The thought of going over into this seething inferno of splintering logs and cracking ice nearly froze me with horror. When I found the raft running more smoothly I knew that I had reached the backwater of the dam, and now if ever was my chance for guiding the raft nearer the shore. I worked my 20 foot pike pole with the frenzy of a madman, but every minute brought the raft several rods closer to the falls and scarcely inches nearer the shore.

Escapes Dash Over the Falls.

"Startled by a quickening of the speed, I looked up to find the raft scarcely a hundred feet from the brink and fully seventy-five feet from the nearest shore pier. Somehow the great noise and my exertion had given me complete self-control, and, while I resigned myself to almost certain death, I was ready to take advantage of the chance of escape which presented itself.

"A long log floated beside the raft. With a push on the front end I started the log out endwise toward the pier. Running along the log, I planted my pike pole near the end and threw myself twenty feet through the air into the water at the brink of the dam and within two feet of the pier, where by chance a watchman fished me out, wet and cold, but thankful to be alive. Just as I struck the water my raft went over the falls and was completely wrecked."

Learn Dressmaking.
IN TWO WEEKS.
We teach you everything from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate toilette that can be found in the fashion books. We show you how to put together not only the lining but all the outer goods in coats, skirts waists, wrappers, sleeves, children's dresses, collars, etc. Why spend months at a shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and then after you have served your time there, what do you know about cutting? Absolutely nothing! For you will know no more how to cut out a dress at the end of a year than you did the first day you went there; so why spend your time there; you can come and try for a week and see for yourself what it's like, and as there is nothing to be paid in advance, you certainly would not lose anything by trying.
We have taught over 2,000 in this way within the past six years, and all recommend it very highly; we teach you how to use a chart the first day you are with us; also guarantee that the waists made by this chart will not draw nor pull out of place when raising arm.
Charge for full course is only $10, to be paid when course is completed, if satisfied, including one of the most perfect fitting systems in use, which we give free.
We will teach at Belleville from April 8th to April 20th. Hours for day class from 8.30 to 5. All wishing to learn or for full particulars, be sure to see us at the KYLE HOUSE, on Saturday, April 6th, between 10 and 5 o'clock. An evening class will also be taught; in this class we teach shirt waists, sleeves and dressing sacques only. Terms $4 and hours from 7 to 9. Remember there is no pay in advance, you can all come and try.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables About Steady—Chicago Easier for Cattle, Lower for Hogs.

London, March 25.—Liverpool and London cables are steady, at 11c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 8½c to 9c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 25.—Cable advices from Liverpool and London on Canadian cattle were stronger and prices show an advance of ½c per lb., with sales at 11½c to 12c. But even at these prices exporters say that they will lose $7 to $8 per head. Exports from Portland last week were 1130 cattle. At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 23, were 2643 cattle, 77 sheep and lambs, 1881 hogs and 2012 calves, while offerings for local consumption to-day were 1200 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 400 calves. This being Easter market day the quality of the cattle displayed was generally above the average for local and outside butchers to choose from and they had no trouble in satisfying their wants. The offerings were somewhat larger than usual, but there was more than ample accommodations for all and the market was in the pink of condition in every respect. The gathering of buyers was very large and as they generally make a more attractive display of beef at Easter time than any other period the car demand for cattle was brisk and an active trade was done, notwithstanding the fact that unusually high prices were demanded for fancy Easter beeves. There were several buyers from Quebec and Ottawa present, who purchased a few loads of fancy steers and heifers at 6¼c to 6½c per lb., but there was one load of extra fancy steers on the market owned by A. W. Talbot of Beaverton, for which 6¾c per lb. was bid and 7c asked. Local butchers operated freely and paid 6c to 6½c per lb. for fancy stock, but the market for the ordinary run of cattle showed no change from a week ago, prices being firm, with sales of choice beeves at 5½c to 5¾c; good, at 5c to 5¼c; fair, at 4½c to 4¾c, and lower grades at from 3c to 4½c per lb. There was no improvement in the demand for export account, owing to the high prices ruling here and the fact that cable advices was reported slow. A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs and prices show an advance of 15c per cwt., as compared with those paid last Wednesday. This was not due to any encouraging advices from Liverpool or London on Canadian bacon, as cables on Saturday reported prices in these markets unchanged, but Bristol noted an advance of 1s to 2s per cwt., which, however, did not have much bearing on this market, for hogs, as the exports of cured meats to that market are comparatively small, as compared with the other two mentioned. The renewed strength in hogs was due principally to the small supply offered and the keen competition among local dealers for supplies, as the big packing concerns were not operating to any extent. A fairly active trade was done and sales of selected lots were made at $7.25 to $7.40 and some holders asked $7.50 per cwt., lbs., weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

HOLSTEIN BUTTER COWS.

Under the supervision of Mr. R. T. Jones, of the Kingston Dairy School, a seven day official butter test has just been concluded at Mr. Geo. W. Anderson's farm, Mountain View, which has proved very satisfactory in every respect. All these tests are conducted in the strictest manner.

After the milk was drawn from the cow, Mr. Jones took charge of it, weighed it, and tested each milking with the Babcock Test, and at the end of the seven days, according to the rules of the Holstein Association, the owner, the milker and the supervisor were each sworn before a commissioner to the accuracy and integrity of weighing connected with the test.

"Nina Dekol," a cow of the true dairy type, made in the seven days 16.8 lbs. of butter, her average per cent. of fat was 3.82.

Another and perhaps more pleasing one than the former was a three-year-old heifer, "Princess Daisy," that made 17.18 lbs. of butter in the same time. This is remarkable considering her age. She is a very promising youngster and her owner expects great work from her in the future. Each of these cows gave over sixty pounds of milk in a day. At the head of the herd is the imported bull "Velstra Triumph," whose dam and sires dam have each given over one hundred pounds of milk in a day. At present there are a number of fine bull calves from this great sire for sale at Mr. Anderson's farm; among the rest is one from the above named heifer "Princess Daisy." Those who leave the selection of a future sire for their herd until the animal is of serviceable age, are at a disadvantage, as there is always a choice even among the good ones.

There will be other individuals of this herd tested in the near future. Visitors are always welcome.

EXPERT DAIRY RULES.

All Danish creameries issue rules for the general treatment and milking of cows. That concerning milking is interesting. At the top of the card are the words "Good Advice" beneath which is a drawing of the udder and teats of a cow with the hand of the milker placed in proper position. On either side of the card are columns shaded to indicate the percentage of fat present in the first milk drawn from the cow, and in the last milk drawn. The rules on the cow are as follows:

The cow is a living machine. Kindly treatment entails less labor and gives more milk. Good work improves the living machine.

Milk clean. Clean milking develops the udder and increases the quantity of milk and you receive richer milk. Remember that the milk last drawn is by far the most valuable. You should wear tidy and clean clothes. Have the pail clean as well as the creamery can. Thoroughly clean the udder by rubbing with a piece of linen. Wash the hands thoroughly before milking. Let the udder be quite dry before you begin to milk.

Milk with dry hands. Seize the teats with the whole hand. Keep a gentle pressure on the udder. Milk as fast as you can and never cease working until the milk is wholly drawn. Don't strain the teat beyond its natural length. Remember the value of the last drops.

If there be soreness or lumps in udder or teats, stoppage in milk canal or unnatural colored milk, don't mix that milk with any other, and don't send to the creamery.

Begin milking always at fixed time. Milk the same cows in the same order. Regard this excellent work as one of honor. Clean the cows. Have good air in the stalls. Light should be freely admitted. The above rules, which are faithfully carried out, tell why Danish butter is ahead of all the world in all the markets of the world.

THE WINTER CALF.

Calves dropped in the fall are more easily raised and pushed. Spring calves do not receive much benefit from grass the first season, because for some time after birth the ruminating stomach is undeveloped, not to mention the effect of flies and the summer heat. When getting a good start, winter and dry food come and the growth is checked. In the fall there is more time to be given calves. Fed mostly on milk, they are easily managed in barn or shed. When spring comes the fall calf is large enough to make good use of the pasture, and so of the dry food when the next winter arrives.

Take the calves away from the cows when they are two or three days old. At first give them warm, fresh milk. Afterwards feed them sweet skimmilk, to which may be added a little boiled linseed oil cake. Keep before them a little bright, sweet, clover hay until grass comes.

Disease and no end of germs lurk in the feed bucket. Look there if your calves are not doing well. They should be washed and scalded every day.

FATS AS MILK FEEDS.

It was formerly believed that the fat in the food was the main source of the fat in the milk. A good cow, however, will produce in a year a much larger amount of fat in the milk than she consumes in the food, showing that the fats are in part produced from other nutriments. Investigations that have been made show that it is not possible to increase either the percentage or the total amount of fat in the milk for any appreciable time by the feeding of fats or oils. Where fats have been fed to cows, even at the rate of two pounds or more per day of tallow, cotton-seed oil, or other fats, the fat content of the milk was not permanently increased.

NOTES.

The farmer of the future may come to live in town and drive out to his fields every day.

There is no milk or butter in ice, snow and shivers. Get the barn ready for winter.

After all, it is not the cow with the big record so much as the ten months a year cow that the farmer wants.

With some farmers the times are always hard, while others claim that trade panics do not affect them at all. Which is it chiefly, the times or the man?

Some farmers are too fond of guessing. It is easier to guess a great deal than to know a little; but guessing is a lottery, while knowledge is money in the pocket.

Life is hardly worth living if one is to have the grip at 104, as did the poor old Vermont woman; but it is a conundrum that few of us want to give up, even at an advanced age.

Are the harnesses in good order for spring work? Better fix them so that they will not keep breaking down everyday or two. Mend them, clean them up and lay in a stock of rivets, wire harness menders and sewing tools. It will save valuable time to have everything right at hand when needed.

The apple tree borer attacks the trees near the ground. The insect may be punched out with a wire in the same manner as the peach borer. If the rough bark is scraped off and the tree washed with some preparation like lye or whitewash, the egg of the moth, which produce the worm, will be destroyed.

THE HORSE.

The Mare and the Foal.

While a brood mare is suckling her foal an eye must be kept on her bodily condition. If she loses flesh to an appreciable extent, and falls away in condition in consequence of the drain on her system, that shows that her food is inadequate to meet her requirements, and that she ought to receive some additional dry food. A mare which is put to the horse while she has a foal at foot experiences a double and very severe drain upon her system, as not only has she to feed her foal, but she has also to meet the demands of the foetus within her. Pregnant brood mares, which are suckling a foal, need a great deal of sufficiently nourishing food if they are to keep in satisfactory condition, and to do their foal well.

When a brood mare with a foal falls off in condition to an appreciable extent, owing to the food not being plentiful enough, or owing to its lacking the necessary amount of nourishment, it is not the mare alone that suffers, but the foal also, because of the scarcity of milk. This aspect of the question is very often lost sight of by careless horse breeders, who think that it does not matter if the mare loses flesh and falls away in condition while suckling her foal.

Straw exercises a drying effect on the flow of milk, and it is therefore highly undesirable to feed much straw to a brood mare when she is suckling her foal. Heating foods, too, are bad for such mares, as they heat the system and may have an injurious effect upon the milk. A brood mare which is worked before her foal is weaned, must receive an extra allowance of grain, in addition to the usual ration of working horses, otherwise she cannot nourish her foal properly, and she will also lose condition. Mares with a foal should never be worked very severely, as this has a bad effect upon the flow of milk, and interferes with the milk secretion. When they are worked, their work should be of a light and moderate character. It will not do to keep a mare, when she is doing work, away from her foal for too long a space of time, as the foal will then get unduly hungry, and take too much milk at one time, with the result that it is upset. Moreover, very long fasts are not at all good for a suckling foal; it requires to feed at pretty frequent intervals. This must be borne in mind by the breeder, when he works his brood mares, and he should be careful to see that mare and foal come together again in due time, when the former is performing work. It is bad for a foal to suck its dam when she returns from work in a very heated state. Over-exertion of the mare must be avoided, as this has a deleterious effect upon the milk.

When running on a pasture mares and foals require shade, and this point should receive due attention from the breeder. For foals belonging to the light class of horses, fairly high lying pasture is most suitable, as on the very low lying and mushy pastures the feet become more or less soft and spreading, and they do not get so hard or tough as in the case when the foals are reared on the former kind of soil.

Breeders' Notes.

It is a great mistake to overfeed or pamper a horse beyond a certain stage.

Give the foal first-class care throughout the winter.

Never allow the foal to follow the mare when working, but keep it in a well built, roomy box.

Never expect the foal to eat with the mare, but always provide a small box in the opposite corner to feed the foal in.

Accustom the colt to being handled by having a halter on and occasionally taking hold of it when feeding the mare.

Never wean the foal too quickly, but by degrees. It is best for both the mare and foal to take two or three weeks to do it. Feed foal often, both during the time of and after weaning.

Never allow two foals to feed out of the same box. One is sure sooner or later to become master and secure the lion's share.

Always be careful to give the mares plenty of exercise in the late fall and winter after the work on the farm is done.

Believe in always working the brood mare. There is no reason why a mare if properly hitched and properly driven should not work right up to the time of foaling; in fact, I have taken the harness off mares to allow them to foal, and have never had a loss by so doing.

If the mare is to foal early, before grass time, give her a few boiled oats, and a liberal supply of bran with a little flaxseed occasionally. If she is getting plenty of grass, nothing of this kind will be needed.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

Chestnut Salad.

Shell one pint of large, good chestnuts, throw them into boiling water for five minutes and remove the brown skins; then boil in salted water till tender. When cool cut them in halves. Add an equal quantity of sour pickles and diced celery. Mix well together with a boiled salad dressing. Serve in apple cups.

Braised Tongue.

Select a fresh tongue for braising. Place it in a kettle, cover with boiling water and simmer two hours. Remove tongue from water, skim it carefully and trim the roots. Place in a deep pan or earthen dish and surround with a quarter of a pound of salt pork cut in dice, half cup each of carrot and celery cut in dice, one-third cup of onion cut the same, a spray of parsley, a bit of bayleaf, a quarter teaspoonful pepper-corns, two cloves; pour over two cups brown stock, cover closely and bake in oven two hours, turn once after cooking one hour. Let cool in the liquor in which it braised; serve cold.

Toffee.

One pound brown sugar, two ounces butter, half teacupful milk. Boil for twenty minutes; do not stir it; add essence of vanilla or lemon. Pour on buttered plates or roll into balls.

Apple Ginger.

Two pounds hard apples, two pounds crystal sugar, one-fourth pint water, two ounces preserved ginger. Boil sugar and water till it forms a thick syrup; then peel apples and cut into quarters, and boil with ginger in syrup till transparent.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Paint can be removed from glass by rubbing it with hot, strong vinegar. Stains on hands can be removed by acetic acid or salts of lemon, and ink marks will soon yield to pumice stone.

Carrots are good for those having a tendency to gout.

The juice of lemon is excellent as a gargle for sore throat, but must not be swallowed.

A little parsley eaten immediately after onions will remove the odor from the breath.

Three pints of water daily should be drunk by the average man.

To destroy insects and vermin, dissolve two pounds of alum in three quarts of water; let it remain till the alum is dissolved, then with a brush apply boiling hot to every joint and crevice in the place where bugs, earwigs or other insects infest; brush all the joints and crevices of bedsteads; keep it boiling whilst using. A strong, boiling hot tea of cayenne, used with a brush, is also a capital remedy.

Furniture needs cleaning as much as other woodwork. It may be washed with warm soapsuds quickly, wiped dry, and then rubbed with an oily cloth. To polish it rub with rottenstone and sweet oil. Clean off the oil, and polish with chamois skin.

Lettuce has a soothing effect on the nerves, and is excellent for sufferers from insomnia.

HOW BILEANS PURIFY THE BLOOD.

Spring pimples, boils, skin rashes and eruptions are just now rampant. The most scientific corrective and blood purifier is Bileans, the herbal remedy. Mr. Thos. Hesselwood, an employee of the Consumers' Gas Co., Toronto, says: "Bileans are the best blood purifier and liver corrective I have ever met with. Pimples and boils broke out all over my neck. My blood seemed absolutely filled with impurities and poisons. My liver was disordered, too, and I was dull, weak and ailing. Bileans purified my blood and cured the boils and pimples; they also toned up my system—gave me vim and energy, and filled me with life and vigor."

Reader, Bileans can do the same for you! All druggists and stores sell them at 50 cents a box, or from Bilean Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50. Send one cent stamp for sample box.

Douma Fights Court-Martial.

St. Petersburg, March 26.—The question of drumhead courts-martial, the institution of which forms the bitterest grievance of the Liberals against the Stolypin Ministry, was raised in the Lower House of Parlament yesterday on a motion of the Constitutional Democrats for the appointment of a committee to draft and submit immediately a bill providing for the abolition of this summary procedure.

Several Opposition orators narrated the heroic deaths of various persons condemned by drumhead court-martial and a Cossack deputy demanded that the army "be no longer used for hangmen's work."

Belcourt For Senator.

Windsor, March 26.—It is reported on good authority that N. A. Belcourt of Ottawa has been tendered the Senatorship made vacant by the death of Senator Casgrain.

The appointment will not meet with the approval of Liberals in this section. It is felt there are men in Essex who have rendered services to the party entitling them to preferment in this instance.

Hon. Adam Beck May Talk On Power Question Here

City Council Appointed a Committee Last Night to Invite Him To Do So--Some Warm Talk on the Back Tax Question--An Illuminating Gas Story --Shall There Be a Free Market Day?--Notes Of Lively Session.

It looked last night, when the City Council went into session, that the meeting would be a short one. But you never can tell. A couple of deputations arrived on the scene, and were heard. Then some of the aldermen had a few remarks to make for the good of the order, and, between one thing and another, though nothing of startling importance was done, it was 10.30 before "Orders of the day" was reached. A large number of free and independent electors were in the back seats. Evidently more interest is being taken in civic affairs.

All members of the Council were in attendance.

WANT TUESDAY TO BE A FREE MARKET DAY.

A petition was presented, signed by many Front St. merchants, asking that Tuesday be declared a free market day for farmers. The petition set forth that, at present, Saturday was the only real market day, and the attendance at the market was so large that congestion took place. It would be better for all parties concerned if some of the farmers could be persuaded to come in on Tuesday. Perhaps, if the Tuesday fees were taken off, this could be brought about.

Mr. A. R. Wallbridge, who circulated the petition, was heard in reference to it. He said the plan might be tried for a year, and, if so, some of the merchants had told him they would put on special sales on Tuesday.

Ald. Green asked if there was not a question of losing revenue by making Tuesday a free day.

Mr. Wallbridge said the Council might well afford to lose $200 to benefit the whole city.

Ald. Green referred to the fact that the country is now about flooded with buyers, who go around buying from the farmers, and the latter do not need to come to the city so often as they did. Then they buy at the country stores.

Ald. Panter said the question was a serious one, and the Council should do nothing hastily. He moved the matter be referred to the Market Committee.

Ald. Ackerman said that, if the petition were granted, it would undoubtedly make a difference in the size of the tenders for market fees.

Ald. Butler said the tenderers might put in two sets of tenders, to cover the case.

Ald. Marsh pointed out that some market gardeners and others came in and sold their produce round the city, paying no market dues. Was there no way to stop that?

Ald. Starling thought the by-law forbidding forestalling might cover the case. It was peddling, and was not fair to the market lessee.

The City Clerk and Solicitor said the practice could not be prevented so long as the parties did not go within a certain distance of the market.

The motion carried.

TO HOLD A SALE.

Mesdames Sprague and Hunt wrote on behalf of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., asking for the use of the City Hall to hold a sale.

The matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the Market Committee, with power to act.

THE G.T.R. CROSSINGS.

Mr. W. W. Pope wrote on behalf of the G.T.R., stating that they would be willing to instal electric bells at the three crossings complained of. Would this be satisfactory to the city.

Ald. Starling said they had asked for much more. Nothing was said about cutting down high banks, so that the view of the tracks would be unobstructed.

Ald Marsh moved that the matter be referred to the Railways and Parks Committee.

Ald. Panter—"And in the meantime take great care of that letter of Mr. Pope's."

The motion was carried.

WANTS HIS WATER.

Mr. O'Flynn wrote on behalf of his client, Mr. Geo. A. Barragar, Albion street, who had had no city water for over a month, and had been put to much inconvenience thereby. The city was notified that it would be held responsible.

Ald. Vermilyea said the two-inch main on Albion street had been frozen up. There was no help for it. Many others were in the same boat. One facetious alderman remarked that in this case the boat must have run aground, for it had no water.

The matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the Water Committee.

THE MATTER OF CHEAP POWER.

Mr. R. J. Graham wrote, stating that he had written Mr. M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., asking him to take up the matter of cheap power for Belleville with Hon. Adam Beck. Mr. Morrison had replied, stating that Hon. Mr. Beck was now ready with a company to undertake the development of power for this city. The cost would probably be $20 a horse power for Belleville: if Kingston and other places came in on the deal the cost might be reduced to $15 for Belleville.

There was much conversation, a good deal of it informal, over the matter.

Finally Ald. Marsh moved that the City Clerk write the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, asking if that body had arrived at any definite conclusion in regard to power for Belleville, and that a committee consisting of the Mayor, Ald. Butler and Ackerman be appointed to act in conjunction with a committee of the Board of Trade, the object of the joint committee being to invite Hon. Adam Beck to visit Belleville and give an address on the question of power for this city.

The motion was carried.

WANTS TO TRIM SHADE TREES.

Mr. P. F. Canniff wrote on behalf of the G.N.W. Telegraph Company, of which he is local manager, asking that permission be given the employees of that corporation to trim shade trees, the branches of which interfered with their wires.

Ald. Marsh moved that the matter be referred to the chairman of Parks.

The Clerk pointed out that the by-law covering the case provided that the trimming be done under the supervision of the Public Works Committee.

Ald. Marsh said he knew that, for several years, the matter had been left in the hands of the chairman of Parks. The Council must have been acting illegally.

Ald. Starling—"That's not the only illegal thing you've done in recent years."

The matter was finally referred to the chairman of Parks and Street Surveyor, the trimming to be done under their supervision.

THE MUSKOKA FREE HOSPITAL.

Mr. Earngey, a travelling representative of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, was heard in reference to the good deeds and needs of that institution. He concluded a long address by asking that the Council endow a bed in the hospital, at a yearly cost of $300.

The best part of an hour was spent in listening to Mr. Earngey and asking him questions, when he was told the Council would deal with the matter at the proper time. The institution was finally, on motion of Ald. Burrows, granted $25.

OTHER MATTERS.

The Board of Education's estimates for the present year were presented.

The reports of the various standing committees were read and passed with little discussion.

TO CLEAN FRONT STREET.

Ald. Panter said that, since the committee met, he had given orders to the Street Surveyor to clean Front street.

Ald. Starling said it might be in order to take away the mud piles on other streets which had been frozen up and left over from last year.

THE HOSPITAL GRANT.

The grant to the Hospital this year was fixed at $1000.

SALE OF SUPERFLUITIES AT GAS WORKS.

Ald. Green said it had been resolved that the city sell the electric light plant at the Gas works. Some people said that, through neglect, it was now only fit for sale as scrap. However, some tenders for it were in, and the matter might be dealt with at a special meeting of the Council.

The tenders were referred to the Gas Committee, with power to act.

THE NEW HOSE.

The Mayor was authorized to sign the agreement and contract with the Canadian Rubber Company, re the 1000 feet of new hose purchased at $1 a foot by the city.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE.

The Mayor said the city's accident insurance expired on April 1st. The matter of its renewal had been left with him, and he had notified the insurance agents of the city to put in their tenders. Two had been received, and the representatives of the companies were present. They did not, however, wish their tenders opened unless definite action was taken at once.

Ald. Marsh moved that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee.

This was carried, and immediately at the close of the Council meeting, the Executive Committee met to deal with it.

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Just before the Committee of the Whole arose,

Ald. Marsh made some warm remarks about things in general and the question of tax collections in particular. He said he had been criticized for not bringing down his estimates to-night. There were several reasons why he had not done so. He had, three meetings ago, asked the different chairmen to tell him what money they would need to carry on the work of their committees this year, and none had responded. Then he had been unable to obtain information from City Clerk Mikel which was necessary, and had been forced to go to the Assessor, Mr. Thomas, for it, which meant that Mr. Thomas did some of Mr. Mikel's work. If the estimates were not down in time it was not his (Ald. Marsh's) fault. If the estimates were to be passed at a special meeting of the Council on Thursday night, as he had heard, then he must have the information he desired to-night. Then the Chairman of the Executive branched off on another matter. We had heard a lot lately, he said, about the poor way of making gas collections. To his mind the lax collection of taxes was more serious than the lax collections of gas accounts. The city was paying 5 per cent. interest on money borrowed from the bank, while it could not obtain taxes due it. There had been, this year, nearly $6,000 less collected than was collected in the same time last year. He had asked the Tax Collector to get the 1905 tax rolls returned by last Thursday, but Mr. Diamond said he could not return them before the end of March. The Tax Collector had told him, three months ago, that only $300 remained unpaid on the 1905 rolls. He knew that $288 had been paid on them since the 1st of March. Why were they not returned? The speaker said he could not get the Tax Collector to return the rolls, no matter what pressure he brought to bear on him. He (Ald. Marsh) claimed he wanted the support of the Council in this matter. If other aldermen, as he was told, were working against him, he could do nothing. He was told that other aldermen told the Tax Collector not to be harsh. "Don't push that fellow, he's hard up," they were reported as saying. All this time the city was paying 5 per cent. interest for borrowed money because people would not pay their taxes and the Tax Collector would not make them do so.

Ald. Burrows thought that delinquent taxpayers should be made to pay up, and the Tax Collector must be given to understand that he must insist on the payment of back taxes.

Ald. Starling said the Tax Collector had his sympathy: he had been there himself. Mr. Diamond was a good official.

The Mayor said Mr. Diamond was a good official. The back taxes were now less than at any time in the city's history.

Ald. Marsh said he wanted the Council to back him up, for he was going to do something, and do it right away. As matters were now, some people were paying their own taxes and a share of other people's, too.

Ald. Panter said it was the old story. The city received 5 per cent. interest on back taxes, in toto, while it borrowed money on which it paid 5 per cent. per annum. He did not see why the tax roll for each year could not be returned before the roll for the next year was issued. This was what Ald. Marsh desired, and it was right, too.

FRANCE AND MOROCCO.

Troops to Occupy Oudja Until Reparation Is Made.

Paris, March 26.—The Moroccan situation, which has been forced into the background for a year past by acute internal problems, has been brought to the front by the assassination in Morocco City of Dr. Mauchamp.

Members of the chamber from the department of Saone et Loire, where Dr. Mauchamp lived, will interpellate the Government to-day. M. Fernand Rubiel, Radical Socialist, will read a number of letters from the doctor, in which he complains bitterly of his abandonment by the French authorities, giving instances of their slackness and inactivity.

Furthermore, the Socialists are able to seize this opportunity to attack the Government in retaliation for their recent defeat in the matter of the strike by the electricians of Paris.

The ministry is fully alive to the importance of the situation and is ready to offer a full explanation to the chamber.

The decision of the Cabinet yesterday to send French troops to occupy Oudja, in Morocco, was unanimous. The occupation of this point will be continued until full satisfaction has been accorded.

The French demands include the punishment of the murderer of Dr. Mauchamp, indemnity for the family of the victim and the appropriation of a large sum for the foundation of a charitable institution in Morocco in memory of Dr. Mauchamp.

DUEL IN MONTREAL.

Unknown Men Exchanged Shots On Sunday Night.

Montreal, March 26.—A duel was fought between two unknown men on Sunday night in a vacant lot in the centre of the city, corner Dorchester and Sanguinet. The sleepers in the neighborhood were awakened by four shots and saw four men leave the lot and enter a cab and drive rapidly away. They were apparently the worse of liquor and had quarrelled. The snow told the tale, for there were two stations fifteen paces apart. The police from the station a block away came and investigated, but there was no clue, and the cab number is not known. There were no blood marks on the snow.

The Speaker's Condition.

Toronto, March 26.—At an early hour this morning Hon. Mr. Speaker St. John lay very critically ill.

Perfectly conscious, but hardly noticing anything around him, the Speaker lay fighting a grim life and death struggle at close quarters with the inevitable dark angel.

Not before 7 a.m. will the physicians, who are gravely watching the case, be able to even prognosticate the result.

"Very critical, but not hopeless," is the utmost the doctors can say.

Dr. Bruce said immediately after the operation that a man of Speaker St. John's physique would be in a very critical state for 48 hours, but it is hoped that Mr. St. John's regular life and habits will help him through the ordeal.

England to Get Red Hat.

Rome, March 26.—In addition to the consistory to be held April 15, at which seven cardinals are to be created, the Pope will hold another consistory at the end of the year to appoint foreign cardinals.

England having been without a representative in the Sacred College since the death of Cardinal Vaughan, will have one cardinal, the candidates being Archbishop Bourne of Westminster and Bishop Hedley of Newport, England, and the Right Rev. Francis Aiden Gasquet, abbot president of the English Benedictines.

Strong claims are being made on behalf of the United States for two more cardinals, one in the east and the other in the west, but nothing has been decided on this subject.

Justice pleaseth few in their own house.—Herbert.

McINTOSH BROS.

SIR WILFRID MAY NOT GO

Mr. Bourassa Says His Duty Is to Canada First.

Some Dramatic Moments in the House—Suggestion of a Six Weeks' Adjournment — "Saw-Off" Is Indignantly Denied—Mr. Bourassa's Motion For an Investigation Into the Fowler Charges.

Ottawa, March 26.—There were dramatic moments in the House yesterday. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's announcement that he might not attend the colonial conference; R. L. Borden's proposition to adjourn the House for six weeks on Wednesday next; Mr. Bourassa's trenchant charge that the Premier's duty was to remain at home until he had redeemed the honor of Parliament; Mr. Foster's half humorous and audacious retort that if Mr. Bourassa got too gay (the word he used was "rusty") they (the Government and Opposition) might combine to squelch him, promptly repudiated by R. L. Borden's indignant denial that any "saw-off" had been arranged, or was contemplated, followed each upon the other in quick succession, and fairly flashed in the tense atmosphere of the Chamber, electric with apprehensions of to-day.

The House settled back with a sigh of relief when at last the orders of the day were called, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved the address for the increase in provincial subsidies.

Isinglass Post Cards In Mail.

Dr. R. W. Walsh (Conservative, Quebec) called the attention of the Government to the fact that postcards made of isinglass were going through our mails, to the great danger of postal clerks and to the public generally. Mr. Lemieux, the Postmaster-General, promised attention.

Mr. Templeman introduced a bill to create a department of mines. This department will include the mines branch of the interior department and the geological survey, now connected with the Department of Inland Revenue. One of the present Ministers is to act as Minister of Mines. As a matter of fact, Mr. Templeman, the Minister of Inland Revenue, will be appointed.

Bourassa's Motion.

Hon. George E. Foster interpolated the member from Labelle, Mr. Bourassa, who had given notice of bringing up certain matters to-day affecting members of Parliament; how did he intend to proceed?

Mr. Bourassa said that he proposed to bring up the matters referred to upon motion to go into supply. The first Minister had stated that the report of the insurance commission had made no charges respecting the member for North Toronto, Mr. Foster, which required the attention of this House. Mr. Bourassa could not agree to this. He would, however, offer an amendment to-day, upon going into supply, which would quote from the report of the commission and the comments of the press thereon. The amendment would refer to Messrs. Foster, Fowler, Bennett and Lefurgey, and also to the statements made by Mr. Fowler respecting the connection of Ministers and members with "women, wine and graft."

Mr. Foster: You are taking a leap in the dark.

Mr. Bourassa: Perhaps.

May Not Go.

R. L. Borden asked the Prime Minister whether there was any foundation for the newspaper reports stating that he might not attend the colonial conference.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier feared that he might be unable to go. He desired to go, but owing to the slow progress of the business of the House, he was "contemplating the possibility of cancelling the trip."

Mr. Borden then moved the adjournment of the House so as to discuss this matter. It would be a great misfortune, he said, for Canada not to be represented at the conference.

To obviate this possibility, the opposition would make almost any sacrifice or concession. He suggested that when the House adjourned Wednesday next that it stand adjourned for six weeks.

No Saw-Off.

Mr. Borden emphatically denied that there was any saw-off respecting the Fowler charges and other scandals. Any such charges was false and unwarranted. The House should not prorogue until these charges were disposed of. He feared that Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not wish to attend the conference and had always intended to send some Minister in his place.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier resented this insinuation. He was anxious to do his duty, but his duty might be in Ottawa, instead of in London. He hoped to get away. He believed that he could get away by the 5th if the Opposition co-operated with him in hurrying up prorogation.

Hon. George E. Foster thought it important for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be promptly on hand. No Government bill embodying any question of policy remained undisposed of, except Mr. Oliver's Dominion Lands Act. It would do no harm if that bill was laid over.

Canada First.

Mr. Bourassa continued: I think if any enthusiasm is exhibited by our Prime Minister or any one else, that the Campbell-Bannerman Government can be safely trusted to stamp it out. The British Government would be just as pleased if all the Premiers remained at home. A former Government issued the invitations, and the present Government, as a matter of courtesy, merely did not recall them. The duty of the Canadian Premier is to Canada first and the Empire afterwards.

"Just now," said Mr. Bourassa, "the most important question before Parliament is the honor of Parliament, Ministers, ex-Ministers and members are under grave suspicion. Let us redeem the honor of Parliament."

Col. Sam Hughes made the novel suggestion that there be no recess for the Easter holidays. Let the House sit on Good Friday and every day from now on until April 5. He did not believe in so many holidays.

Dr. Sproule made a vigorous speech. No friend of the Empire could but lament the failure of Canada to attend the colonial conference. It would have a tendency to put an end to all future conferences.

Mr. Borden's motion to adjourn the House was lost without division, and the House then took up the address to the King, moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, praying for an amendment to the B. N. A. Act so as to increase provincial subsidies.

Mr. Crockett (Conservative, N. B.) claimed that the increase to New Brunswick was only apparent; indeed, it would mean a loss. The increase in all the subsidies would cost New Brunswick 42 cents per capita.

Mr. Martin (Conservative, P.E.I.) criticized the inter-provincial conference. It had not attempted to deal with any question before it except the financial question. The question of representation should be settled.

He offered an amendment that all railway debts charged against the province be cancelled and that all interest upon such debts be refunded.

Mr. Roche (Halifax) advised concessions from all sides. Probably no province could ever be entirely satisfied.

Upon the Martin amendment the House divided and the same was lost; years 34, nays 96, a party vote, except that Pacquet (Conservative, Quebec) voted with the Government, as did Hughes, the Liberal member from P. E. I.

TROOPS DRIVEN BACK.

Peasants In Roumania Outnumbered Them In Fight.

Bucharest, Roumania, March 26.—There have been several serious conflicts between peasants and troops, notably at Bacess, where 2,000 armed peasants attacked a company of soldiers. The troops fired several volleys, killing 40 peasants and wounding large numbers, but the soldiers were so greatly outnumbered that they finally were obliged to retreat.

At Teleoraman, Wachia, peasants sacked the synagogue and burned 40 houses. The rioters also demolished and pillaged Zimnicea.

The army reserve men are fraternizing with the marauders and participating in the plunder.

Thousands of peasants surround Bosieri De Vede, with the intention of looting if a favorable opportunity arises. The troops there are few.

The total number of troops now in Moldavia is 32,610, but large reinforcements are still required.

Let another praise thee and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.—Book of Proverbs.

24 Hurt In Theatre Panic.

Greenfield, Ind., March 26.—Twenty-four persons were injured, some seriously, and a two-storey building, occupied by a five-cent theatre with moving pictures, was wrecked last night by an explosion of natural gas, used to heat the building.

About 200 persons were in the theatre and in the panic that followed men, women and children rushed for the doors, trampling on one another.

Falls Dead On Hot Stove.

Brockville, March 26.—While moving about the kitchen at the home of his brother, John Avery, living near Mallerytown, was stricken with apoplexy and died almost instantly yesterday.

He fell across a hot stove, and the body was slightly burned before members of the household noticed him. He made no outcry.

Avery was about 55 years of age.

Piles Cured Quickly At Home

WITHOUT PAIN, CUTTING OR SURGERY INSTANT RELIEF.

We Prove It. Sample Package Free.

Seven people out of ten are said to have Piles. Not one man in a million need have them and we are proving it every day at our own expense. We send a sample package of the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure to any person absolutely free.

We don't do this as a matter of amusement or philanthropy, but because it is to our interest to do so. We know that the sufferer from piles tormented and driven almost crazy by this wretched trouble, will find such immediate relief that he will go at once to his druggist and buy a box and get well.

We know that we have got the greatest remedy in the world for piles, and we are ready and willing to stand or fall by the verdict of those who make the trial. We have been doing this for some years now and we never yet have had occasion to regret it.

And the remedy at the drug store is exactly the same as the sample we send out. As, for instance, here is a man who got such immediate relief from the sample that he at once bought a box. Was it just the same? Undoubtedly, since it cured him after all sorts and kinds of things had failed.

Here is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

"Received your sample of Pile Cure and have given it a fair trial and it has proven the best I ever tried and effected a complete cure. I can recommend you highly in this vicinity. Have used your sample and one box and it has been a complete cure. It has been worth $100 to me. Thanking you for the sample and the cure, I will recommend you to everybody. Yours respectfully, Julius Mayer, dealer in feathers, ginseng and hides, Bedford, Ind."

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale at every druggist's at 50 cents a box or if you would like to try a sample first, you will receive one by return mail by sending your name and address to The Pyramid Drug Company, 53 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

THE SPEAKER'S ILLNESS

Sympathetic References by Members in the Legislature.

Mr. J. S. Duff Chosen As Acting Speaker—First Time Since Confederation House Has Been Called Upon to Do This—University Arbitrators—Agricultural and Horticultural Societies.

Toronto, March 26.—For the first time since confederation the Ontario Legislature was called upon yesterday to choose an acting Speaker, owing to the illness of its presiding officer. Once before, during the presidency of Speaker Ballantyne, that gentleman was absent one day, when Mr. Baxter, his predecessor, was selected.

On the assembling of the House the clerk notified the members of the Speaker's absence through illness, and asked them to select a substitute.

The Prime Minister, Hon. Mr. Whitney, expressed great regret for the reason for the Speaker's absence. "It is," he said, "the fervent wish from the heart of every member and of every person in the Province who know him that he may have an early recovery. He holds a very high position in the regard of all members of this House."

Mr. Whitney pointed out that it was necessary under the rules of procedure to elect a member to act as Speaker for the day, and on the morrow to elect a member to act for that day. On the third day a member of the House would be selected to act for the balance of the session.

The Prime Minister then moved, seconded by Mr. Foy, that Mr. James S Duff (West Simcoe) be appointed Speaker for the day.

Mr. Graham joined in the Prime Minister's expression of sincere regret. The Opposition appreciated to the full the Hon. Speaker's abilities and were filled with admiration for him. Every member held him in the highest esteem.

Mr. Duff Called to Chair.

Mr. Duff was then called to the chair, and slowly read the prayers, following which he announced the return for the Carleton bye-election.

Hon. Mr. Whitney asked the suspension of the rules to introduce a bill providing for the incorporation of the village of Newstadt, Grey county. By some oversight evidence of the publication of the bill had not been tendered to the standing orders committee and it was important to the municipality in question that the bill should go through.

A second time the Prime Minister asked that the rules be suspended—this time to introduce a bill respecting the town in request. By mistake a large amount of territory had been taken into the town of Cobalt, which was not intended. The bill was to rectify the error.

Both bills got their first reading.

A bill of purely formal character respecting the University of Toronto was introduced by Mr. Whitney. It provides for the appointment of an arbitrator or arbitrators to replace the official arbitrator, who in this case is an interested party.

Hon. Mr. Monteith's bill to separate agricultural and horticultural societies was read a second time.

Bills Finally Passed.

The following bills were read a third time:

Respecting the town of Seaforth—Mr. Eilber.

Respecting the Huntsville and Lake of Bays Railway Company—Mr. Mahaffy.

To incorporate the Current River Power Company—Mr. Smyth.

Confirming tax sales in the townships of Etobicoke—Mr. Lennox.

Respecting fines, penalties and forfeitures—Hon. Mr. Foy.

Replying to Hon. Mr. Graham the Provincial Secretary said that between March 1, 1904 and March 1, 1905 there were 18 prosecutions instituted by the license inspector for South Renfrew against the hotelkeepers of Arnprior. The fines imposed netted $310. For the corresponding period of 1905-06 there were seven prosecutions, and the fines reach $170. For the corresponding period of 1906-07 there were three prosecutions and the fines imposed were $20.

Famous Surgeon Dead.

Wiesbaden, Germany, March 26.—Prof. Von Bergmann, the famous surgeon, died here yesterday. He was operated upon Sunday for appendicitis. He presided at a special meeting of the Berlin Medical Association last July to discuss the treatment of that ailment. He served in the Austrian-Prussian War of 1866, the Franco-Prussian War, and the Turko-Russian War, and last year attended the Sultan of Turkey and his daughter. Early this year he treated the late Shah of Persia, and received a fee of $22,000. He had charge of the surgical clinic at Berlin.

Measles Scourge On Warship.

Newport News, Va., March 26.—The outbreak of measles on the United States battleship Georgia, which will delay the departure of that vessel for Guantanamo, scheduled for to-day, has developed into an epidemic. More than 50 men have been taken to the naval hospital at Portsmouth.

Windsor Man Held Up.

Windsor, March 26.—James McClory, a Windsor man, was held up near the C. P. R. bridge last night by two men and $54 was taken from his pockets. McClory refused to deliver on first demand, and the highwaymen followed him.

Booth At Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, March 26.—General Booth was the guest at a banquet given the Canadian Club last night.

More than 600 of the professional and business men assembled to honor the veteran leader of the Salvation Army.

Appoints A Commission.

Will Examine Thaw As to Present State Of Mind.

Men Who Will Decide Thaw's Fate--Evelyn Weeps On Learning Judge's Decision--Thaw Has No Doubt of the Result--Jury to Be Excused Indefinitely--Affidavits Were Too Much at Variance.

New York, March 27.—Justice Fitzgerald yesterday unexpectedly handed down a decision ordering a commission in lunacy to enquire into the present state of mind of Harry K. Thaw. The decision of the three disinterested men named to conduct the enquiry will guide the future action of the court as to ordering Thaw to an asylum for the insane or directing that the indefinitely interrupted trial for his life shall proceed.

Justice Fitzgerald announced the appointment of the commission privately in his chambers. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was there with the lawyers, and it became her task to break the news to her husband in the Tombs. Tearful when she left the judge's rooms in the criminal courts buildings, the young woman, who has been such a conspicuous figure in the trial from first to last, was smiling and cheerful when Thaw was brought from his cell to the hospital ward of the prison to meet her.

Thaw accepted the court's decision philosophically and once more declared he had no doubt the commission would declare him a sane man.

The personnel of the commission named by Justice Fitzgerald lends a new distinction to this already notable case.

Personal of Commission.

The men who will determine Thaw's mental capacity are Morgan J. O'Brien, former justice of the appellate division of the state supreme court; Peter B. Olney, former district attorney of New York County, and a lawyer of high legal attainments, and Dr. Leopold Putzel, a practicing physician and authority on mental disorder.

Former Justice O'Brien is one of the trustees, with Grover Cleveland, of the Hyde Stock in the Equitable Life Assurance Society purchased by Thos. F. Ryan, just prior to the insurance investigation. When he was a candidate for re-election to the bench in 1901, as a Democrat, Justice O'Brien was unopposed. President Roosevelt made a trip from Washington to Oyster Bay to cast his ballot for him.

Before being elected district attorney of New York County in 1883, Mr. Olney had been a member with Wm. C. Whitney of the commission appointed in 1879 to revise the laws of the state affecting public interests in New York City. He is a graduate of Harvard.

Dr. Putzel is a graduate of the Bellevue Hospital medical school, and has had a long experience in that institution. He is qualified before the state medical board as an examiner in lunacy.

Will Excuse Jury To-Day.

The Thaw jury was ordered on last Friday to report before Justice Fitzgerald to-day at 10.30 o'clock. At that hour there will be a brief court procedure, the jury being excused indefinitely.

No date has been fixed for the first meeting of the commission. There probably will be some definite announcement on this matter to-day, as the law under which the commissioners appointed directs that they proceed with their enquiry forthwith.

It is probable that Thaw will be asked first of all to submit to a rigid physical examination. Having undergone several of these since his incarceration, he is somewhat nervous on this subject, but it was said last night by his counsel that he would do everything in his power to aid the commission with its work, and that he hoped for an early opinion as to his sanity.

Justice Fitzgerald based his decision on the conflict of affidavits as presented by the opposing counsel, saying they were too diametrically at odds to permit of a decision other than in favor of an impartial enquiry.

ESCAPES THE GALLOWS.

Sentence On Regina Murderer Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

Ottawa, March 27.—An order-in-Council has been passed and approved by Lord Grey yesterday, changing the death sentence passed upon Josiah Gilbert, of Regina, sentenced to be hanged on April 5, for the murder of B. Henderson, a farmer, to imprisonment for life.

Gilbert was sentenced to be hanged in November, but has had three respites to permit his case being taken to the Supreme Court. The last respite was to April 5th.

Cannibalism In China.

Shanghai, March 27.—The famine-stricken Chinese have been practising cannibalism in localities where the distress is most acute. Authenticated cases have been few, but it is feared cannibalism will spread unless relief can be more speedily and more widely distributed.

The spread of fever continues and the heavy rains are increasing the general misery. Spasmodic rioting has occurred, but the outbreaks have not been serious.

Large orders for grain have been placed in America, Australia and Manchuria, with the stipulation that they must be filled as promptly as possible.

Helped Him Suicide.

New York, March 27.—With the innocent aid of his little six-year-old daughter Violet, Theodore Schmidt, a painter, who was partially paralyzed, committed suicide Monday with illuminating gas. Schmidt instructed the child to bring a piece of rubber hose from the kitchen, attach it to a gas jet, wind the other end around his neck and place it in his mouth. He then told her to turn on the gas and go to play.

U. S. AND CANADA.

Reciprocity Not to Be Negotiated By Bryce.

London, March 27.—Replying in the House of Commons yesterday to a question of Mr. Arnold Forster, a former war secretary, Foreign Secretary Grey said the general regulations respecting commercial reciprocity between the United States and Canada, which had been left unsettled in 1898, had not been re-opened in the recent negotiations of Ambassador Bryce and would form no part of them.

Secretary Grey had not heard that Secretary Root proposed the adoption by Canada of the United States tariff against Great Britain and all other countries and then the establishment of free trade between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Bryce had been empowered to do his best to settle the outstanding questions between the United States and Canada. Negotiations respecting commercial reciprocity would technically form part of such outstanding questions, but neither the United States nor Canada, so far as Great Britain was aware, had shown any desire to reopen the matter.

TROOPS INVADE PERSIA.

Russian Soldiers Sent to Quell Enraged Natives.

Teheran, Persia, March 27.—Serious disorders have broken out at Sebzewar, necessitating the intervention of Russian troops.

The lawless natives of the vicinity have risen, and are attempting to force an entrance into the city. Two Russians have been killed and a number wounded.

The lives of all the Russians are in danger.

Reinforcements of Russian troops are reported to have started for Sebzewar.

What Russian troops were doing in Sebzewar has not been stated. Recently it was denied that Russian troops were entering Persia. Sebzewar is a city of 18,000 people, in the Province of Khorazan, and is about a hundred miles from Russian territory. Great Britain has been reported to be very closely watching developments in Persia, where Russian aggression is feared.

Kills Prohibition Bill.

Halifax, March 27.—The prohibition liquor bill came up in the House of Assembly yesterday for a second reading. The galleries were packed and great interest was taken in the anticipated debate.

Things took a quick turn, however, and the bill was killed by the Speaker, who ruled it out of order as unconstitutional.

Shot a Chinaman.

Port Arthur, March 27.—The coroner's jury in the case of the Nepigon shooting returned a verdict in effect that Ching, the Chinaman, came to his death from a bullet fired from a pistol in the hands of one Derome, but that in the opinion of the jury the shooting was accidental and without intent to do harm.

Mr. St. John Improving.

Toronto, March 27.—Hon. J. W. St. John, Speaker of the Legislature, who underwent an operation for appendicitis in the general hospital Sunday night, made splendid progress yesterday and at midnight was resting easily. It was stated that he was out of danger, unless unforseen eventualities occur.

Two Cent Fare Bill Passed.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 27.—The Senate yesterday passed finally the House two-cent railroad fare bill.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Good evening. Have you begun your statute labor in the garden yet?

• • •

Talking about noiseless phonographs, says the man on the next block, how would a few noiseless buglers catch you about now?

• • •

It is to be hoped that the scrapings of Front st., which are now being taken off in such large quantities, will be deposited on Queen Victoria park, as usual. Many low places on the park still need filling up. It would not pay to neglect Q. V. park, which is, beyond a doubt, the sweetest, coolest and most refreshing spot in this city in the good old summer time.

The west bank of the park needs looking after, and the roadway, last summer, would have stood quite a bit of repair, it not being so smooth as could be looked for in a place of public recreation. Many stones stuck up on the roadway, causing keen anguish to aged citizens whose corn crop was a large one. No doubt Ald. Butler will look after the park, and it is to be hoped his orders will be better obeyed than are the orders of some of the other chairmen. For instance, Ald. Panter, chairman of Public Works, told us four days ago that he had given orders for the foot-bridge gangway to be thoroughly cleaned out, and all the ice and dirt taken away. The orders were not obeyed, and the gangway at present is anything but a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Considering that many ladies pass through it several times a day it is far from being in either a creditable or sanitary condition.

A gentleman hands us a copy of the Santa Monica, Cal., Daily Outlook, which contains an interesting article on the "oil paved streets" of that city, which are claimed to be dustless, wear resisting and waterproof. In fact, the Santa Monica people claim that they have, after many experiments, discovered a plan which will almost revolutionize the noble art of road-making. Inasmuch as Belleville is deeply concerned in the road-making problem, it may be timely to outline the process which is used in Santa Monica. Fuller information could, no doubt, be obtained by correspondence, but this is how the Daily Outlook describes the process:

Roughly speaking, the present method of oil-paving in use in this city provides for the street being plowed to a depth of six inches and thoroughly pulverized. Then a coating of oil is applied, and well mixed with the pulverized earth of the road by plowing and harrowing. Then a second application of oil is made, and after each application the road is thoroughly tamped with the heavy tamping roller. After the last coat of oil has been applied, in addition to the tamping, the road receives a thorough rolling, which, with the tamping, forms a perfect surface, wear resisting and waterproof, as well as dustless.

The result of the above process, it is claimed by experts, is that Santa Monica has the best and most economical system of road-making in existence.

A local debating club discussed last night, the question, "Resolved, that Ontario does not furnish a young man with as good opportunity for advancement as the West." The majority of those present at the meeting decided in the affirmative, but for us, we emphatically decide in the negative. Ontario is good enough for any young man who wants to work and get on. If he doesn't want to do that, he can starve here as peacefully as anywhere. But it's his own fault if he does.

A citizen who was at the Council meeting the other night let fall a few remarks which may prove illuminating to the City Fathers, who, as we all know, have many times expressed the wish that more public interest was taken in their meetings. "Why," said this citizen, "I could hardly hear a blessed word that was said. If the aldermen want people to go and listen to them, why don't they speak so that they can be heard." Our esteemed friend says he will attend no more Council meetings till either he has taken a course in lip-reading or the Council is equipped with megaphones.

Easter, the "Queen of Festivals," is coming. Easter Sunday is close at hand, and the impressive anniversary, which means so much to all Christian people, will be observed by special services in Belleville churches, with appropriate music and sermons. The origin and meaning of the glad Eastertide is interesting. The word "Easter" is derived from the name of a Saxon goddess, "Ostarra," or "Osterr." She was the personification of the East, of the morning and of spring. The month of April was dedicated to her and was called "Easter month" among the Angles and Saxons. Her worship struck deep in Northern Germany, and was carried to England by the Saxons. Among Christian Germanic peoples the name was adopted as the name of the Christian Passover — the atonement wrought by the death of Christ on the Cross—and of the festival commemorating the resurrection of Christ. At first this Christian Passover was celebrated on the same date as the Hebrew, the 14th day of the month Nisan, but later a change was made to the following Sunday, doubtless primarily to accentuate the difference between Judaism and Christianity. The way in which Easter day is now determined is that of the first Sunday after the paschal full moon (14th day of the calendar moon, or the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st of March). If the full moon happens on a Sunday, then Easter day is the first Sunday following. Good Friday is commemorative of the crucifixion.

A bill for the establishment of high schools in the province of Saskatchewan now before the Legislature is held by some Catholics to be an infringement on their not very extensive privileges as set out in the bill creating the province. The threat is made that, if it is passed, the measure will be fought in the courts. The Catholics would do well, however, says the Montreal Gazette, to try moral suasion on their representatives to get what is objectionable removed from the bill. The precedent of Manitoba indicates that the courts will not be able to do much for them.

Though the New York Herald is not the best authority for the statement that Mr. Rockefeller is planning, with the approval of his son, to bestow on education and charity, two hundred and fifty million dollars, the story is one that will evoke more interest than any other news of the day, and, whether he seeks it or not, the man of millions will certainly become the target of much advice. All observation seems to show the difficulty of, even with the best intentions, making satisfactory use of immense sums of money. The possessors almost always fall back on the endowment of education and, to a lesser extent, to charity.

SOLVING A RACE PROBLEM.

(Rochester Post-Express.)

A careful observer tells us that "cocaine is doing more to solve the race problem in the South than anything else, and that within a few years negroes will die like flies, as about six years are required for the "rope" to destroy an able bodied man, and the craze began about two years ago. The observer knows of a dozen drug stores in a single city "where practically nothing but cocaine is sold; every morning fifty or more negroes are in line waiting for the stores to open. They get the drug in liquid or in powder form in quantities costing from 5 cents to 25 cents, and the effects of daily use of it are frightful." It is easier to carry it about, and it is easier to take. Great alarm is felt by Southerners who know what is going on, and none has yet been able to suggest a practical means of stopping the sale and use of the drug.

At last. During the election contest in 1891 Sir Wilfrid, then Mr. Laurier, pledged himself to Mercier, premier of Quebec, that if returned to power, he would increase the subsidies then payable to the provinces. That is only sixteen years ago. He is now fulfilling the pledge, or more properly speaking, asking Parliament to do it. Think of that Nathanael! Ten years only have rolled round since you were promised the Senatorship. Six years more probation, and then. Well it's not safe to prophesy.

It is marvellous how scoundrels who deliberately set themselves to work to see how they can swindle thousands, get, when found out, the sympathy of those by whom they are surrounded. Here is a case well put by the Toronto News:

"Friends of Joseph Phillips, former president of the York Loan Company, say that the Crown authorities had promised him immunity from any serious punishment because he had restored to the liquidators property to the amount of $58,000. Then because Judge Winchester sentenced him to five years at Kingston on a charge of making false returns these friends are accusing the officials of bad faith. But it is certain that all the Attorney-General and Crown Attorney could do was to lay the facts before the trial judge. Surely no one would suggest that judges are to be instructed as to their duties by Crown representatives. Judge Winchester knew the facts. He considered that in dropping the charges of theft and conspiracy the Crown had gone far enough, particularly in view of the fact that Mr. Phillips had not made restitution until the actions in the civil courts and in the Police Court were well under way. It would be a travesty on justice if Phillips had been allowed to go, particularly when he has been misappropriating trust funds. We believe the sentence was a moderate one, well deserved, and the friends of Mr. Phillips will make a mistake in attempting to rouse a maudlin sympathy for him."

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

Shipbuilding in Canada.

The proportions to which water transportation on the Great Lakes is attaining may be judged from the fact that last season 60,000,000 tons of western products were carried eastward. The fleet on the lakes is now so large that it can move 3,000,000 tons at a voyage. But the point of importance to Canada is that of this immense tonnage less than 3 per cent. is owned in Canada notwithstanding that we own as much coast line as the United States and in proportion to our population have spent an enormous amount of money in building canals. The encouragement of lake shipping would reduce the cost of transportation both east and west. United States vessels are now getting the full advantage of the Canadian canals, lighthouses and improvements to the waterways, and are also getting the best of it in our coastwise trade at the expense of the Canadian people. It comes about in this way: In the United States ships and shipbuilding for the lake trade are fully protected. More than 100 steel ships with a carrying capacity of from 8,000 to 14,000 tons each, costing nearly $50,000,000 are in course of construction on the American side. Under the existing arrangements the only part of the carrying trade that is common to both Canadian and United States vessels is the carrying of products from one side to the other. No Canadian vessel can take a charter from one American port to another.

The United States Government further protects its shipbuilding in these respects: Any vessel built in any other country cannot be registered in the United States, all repairs to American ships must be made at home or pay a duty of fifty per cent. On the other hand the Canadian-owned but American-built vessel may go to the United States for repairs and come back to Canada without paying any duty on such repairs. This of course plays into the hands of the American dry-dock owners. Not one vessel built in Canada appears in the United States register, while there are in the Canadian register 286 steamers and 172 sailing vessels that were built in the United States besides the 68 large steel steamers built in Great Britain. Last year $100,000 worth of repairs to Canadian vessels was performed in American shipyards, while not one per cent. of that was spent by American owners in Canadian shipyards.

In building a steel ship about one-third of the cost is in the iron and steel as it comes from the mills and the other two-thirds in labor. If the Government could do something by which our lake marine trade, instead of buying second-hand ships from the Americans, would patronize home industries, not only would the shipbuilding trade flourish, but it would help the allied industries whose output contributes largely to the material for ships.

The Ottawa Scandal.

During a debate in the House of Commons on the 25th inst., on the question of the Premier's visit to England to attend the Colonial Conference, Mr. Bourassa gave it as his opinion that there was no necessity for Sir Wilfrid being present at that conference, his duty being, at a time when the Fowler insinuations were unsettled, to remain at home to guard the honor of the House.

Mr. Borden, leader of the Opposition, in closing the discussion, incidentally referred to the Fowler charges of "women, wine and graft," which Mr. Bourassa intends to refer to. "I am prepared," said Mr. Borden, with great emphasis, "to insist with Mr. Bourassa that this session should not conclude until these matters have received due enquiry and investigation, and it was somewhat on this line that I suggested we should adjourn, and not prorogue."

"I want to say," Mr. Borden went on, "that, although it has been said in the press that there is some arrangement between the Opposition and the Government with regard to what Mr. Bourassa intends to bring up, there is no arrangement whatever, and there never has been any suggestion of one. The statement made is as false as ever proceeded from the pen or from the lips of any man in this House or elsewhere. I want to make myself clear upon that point. There never was a statement more unjustified or more unwarrantable.

"I have had no communication with anyone on the other side of the House in regard to this matter. I have had no communication, except a slight conference with Mr. Bourassa, who is perfectly at liberty to stand up and declare from the housetops as to what took place at that conference. There was no arrangement between us as to what should be done."

Mr. Bourassa—Quite so.

Mr. R. L. Borden—I say, also, that I did not suggest to him in any way that he should withdraw or minimize in any way anything which he had to say in regard to any member on this side of the House.

Mr. Bourassa—Oh, yes; I concur in that entirely.

It is well that Mr. Borden gave the insinuated charge against the Opposition pointed and positive denial. The rumor was no doubt put in circulation for the purpose of enabling the supporters of the Government to cry out, "O, you are worse than we are. You made insinuating charges and then were glad to have them hushed up."

Those who have watched the public course pursued by the leader of the Opposition know full well that he is in every sense of the word too honorable a man to be a party to such Grit tactics. Let's have all the facts, no matter who they may hit.

NEW PUBLIC OWNERSHIP THEORY

ONE OF THE LIVE ISSUES OF THE DAY TAKING ON A NEW PHASE.

The multiplicity of investigations being held and commissions appointed to look into telephone grievances, License Board matters, railway affairs and power transmission and control, is evidence that the people are wide awake to public interests. The one thing about which no marked excitement is experienced in Canada, but is attracting very earnest attention in many other countries, is the question of the public health. In the United States, England and European countries, this question occupies the same position in the public mind that the public ownership question does in Canada. The question arises, "Why is Canada not more alive to the importance of public health?" One of the most wide-awake concerns of the day upon matters of public health is the Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, who are truly accomplishing a great work in the interests of this vital question. Their remarkable remedy, Psychine, one of the most scientific and valuable remedies ever placed on the market as a disease and germ destroyer, is certainly making for itself a great record, if we may judge by the number of people who are giving the most emphatic and honest testimony of what this remedy is doing, not only in breaking up stubborn coughs and colds, but in curing bronchitis, catarrh, la grippe, pneumonia, chills, night sweats, stomach troubles, run-down conditions and consumption. Its mission is to overcome disease germs in the blood, and build up a strong, vigorous body that will be disease-resisting and proof against the attacks of the bacilli that everywhere float in the air.

"Several years ago my wife was so seriously ill of lung trouble as for months to be unable to walk, at which time a noted physician told me that the next dress that I would buy for her would be a shroud. She used Psychine and is now reasonably well. It is a great disease and germ destroyer.

Bade Them Good-by

The members of Third Line Church, Canifton circuit, met at the residence of C. W. Badgley, Third Con. Thurlow, on Friday evening, to show their appreciation for the faithfulness and zeal which they have manifested in the church Sunday School League for so many years. The ladies, as usual, came with well-filled baskets of delicious refreshments of which all partook to their satisfaction. Social converse, music and games were the order of the evening, which passed away too quickly. Before the company dispersed the class teacher, Mr. James Clark, took the chair and asked the friends to be seated. He said he could not think of leaving the home of Bro. Badgley, probably for the last time, without expressing to him and his wife the loss we would sustain on account of their departure, and he knew many others felt as he did. He regretted the leaving of Bro. Badgley and family, and hoped they would be as faithful and useful in their future places of abode as they had been while living here. The chairman then called on Mr. Cooley, Mr. Godden, and others, who all very much regretted parting with Mr. Badgley and family, as they would miss them in the church, the Sunday School and in social circles. Mr. Badgley occupied the position of Sunday school superintendent for some time. At the present he is steward and trustee for the Methodists at this appointment.

Mrs. Badgley has been actively connected with church work also. She has occupied the position of organist, giving general satisfaction. Mr. Badgley made a very suitable and feeling reply.

Mr. and Mrs. Badgley will take up their residence in Belleville.

CANIFTON.

A concert under the auspices of the Home Circle was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday, the 19th inst. The weather being unfavorable the attendance was not as large as the good programme deserved. In the absence of the chairman, the duties were performed in a very graceful manner by Mr. A. E. Thrasher, of Sidney. The Sidney Harmony Club gave some fine selections, which were appreciated, as they always deserve to be. The Misses Goldsmith sang two duets, which were well received. The Misses Titterson, of Peterboro, contributed recitations, songs and piano solos, which added much to the enjoyment of all present. Last, but certainly not least, was a mother goose drill by the little folks.

Rev. R. H. Leitch, of Belleville, and Rev. H. W. Foley, of Bayside, who were to campaign our League on Thursday evening, failed to put in an appearance. In spite of the hastily prepared programme a profitable time was spent.

The "breaking up" of the ice in the Moira usually causes as much excitement as the first robin or the first run of sap. On Sunday afternoon the ice above the Corby dam came down and everybody who could run did so in order to secure a good vantage point to view the truly grand spectacle. A few forgot themselves and followed the jam to the city.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. R. E. Sparrow, who died March 19th, 1907, Aged 49 Years.

Thy course is run, beloved one, thy soul has winged its way
To realms where troubles ne'er annoy, and night is turned to day;
The voice that spoke thy Saviour's praise, e'en with a fleeting breath
Thy love-lit face once wreathed in smiles, reposes now in death.
But who can say that you have either lived or died in vain,
For tho' thy form is lost to view,
thy works shall long remain,
Like patient Job, tho' sorely tried,
your features drawn with pain,
You did not once deny your Lord, nor let your strong faith wane.
Blessed is the soul that thro' God's grace the privilege is given,
To leave it's mortal house of clay,
and soar away to heaven,— Accept with thanks God's loving gifts, regard them as a loan;
Should we demur when he decides to claim again His own?
Can we discern His depth of love? or desecrate His plan?
When God sees fit to call His child,
"how vain the help of man."
Then let us strive to emulate our dear departed friend,—
When trials come may we like she, prove steadfast to the end.

THISTLES AND DANDRUFF.

An Interesting Parallel and a Valuable Deduction Therefrom.

Cutting down thistles no more relieves the land of thistles than does scouring the scalp cure dandruff. In each case permanent relief can only come from eradicating permanently the cause. A germ that plows up the scalp in searching for the hair root where it saps the vitality, causes dandruff, falling hair and baldness. If you kill that germ, you'll have no dandruff but a luxuriant suit of hair. Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation in the world that cures dandruff and falling hair by killing the germ. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to the Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes 50c and $1. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Rough on Whitcroft.

The Montreal Star, in its report of the match at Winnipeg on Monday night, says:

Johnston was hit by Whitcroft. The bell had rung for full time, and the players were starting for their dressing room when Whitcroft started towards Johnston and deliberately struck him over the head.

Johnston fell to the ice in a heap, and was carried to the dressing-rooms, where a doctor dressed his wound. The totally uncalled for attack of Whitcroft, was the most cowardly thing ever seen on the Winnipeg ice, and if anything has ever happened to take any of the sympathy away from the Kenora team which Winnipegers have almost looked upon as their own, it was that. The question of laying information against Whitcroft was seriously discussed in the Wanderers dressing room, but it was decided to leave him to work out his own punishment, which if he continues in his present course is sure to come sooner or later.

Since the Thistles have lost the cup the opinion is prevalent here that Kenora's greatness as a hockey town will have departed for some time at least. From the fact that though their team held the cup, the town did not see a game in its defence the people will not in future feel so much inclined to support the club. Then there is also the probability, which is practically a certainty, that Smith and Westwick will return to Ottawa, and that Whitcroft will go back to Peterboro, and will never get any very strong coaxing to return. Without Smith and Westwick, the Kenora team at present would be in pretty bad shape. It has been stated that Smith and Phillips will play together next year.

RIBBON CORSETS.

They Are Dainty to Wear and Are Delightfully Comfortable.

Ribbon corsets are dainty to wear and give a youthful figure to almost any one, besides being delightfully comfortable. You can make your own at home, any color you like and to match other garments.

While it is possible to use old but good quality ribbon as an experiment, it pays to purchase new material, double satin or heavy taffeta, four inches wide.

Get five yards and in pale pink, blue or violet, for white soils easily, and black stains the linen. Dresden patterns or brocaded in jacquard weave results in a pretty pair if the quality is not too cheap and the design is artistic. Thin ribbon will pull terribly and prove no support.

Be sure to follow the fullness of your old corsets carefully when smoothing and pinning the two other ones.

Attempt one side of the corsets at a time, and when all seems right take them gently off the model and stitch the side bones and steels, trying, if possible, to pass the ribbon between the upper and lower coverings on each side, as it makes a prettier effect. End it all by inserting the four bones in each hip casing, finishing top and bottom by folding and overhanding and making a rosette of ribbon in front and adding silk laces to match.—Philadelphia Press.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE CARELESS POET.

(Brooklyn Life.)

A poet wrote some verses to a girl
he'd lately met,
He rhapsodied through stanzas three her witching eyes of jet,
Her curls that mocked the raven's wing, her slenderness petite,
And strung in phrases metrical all synonyms of "sweet."
He read it o'er when finished, and his pride it much regaled,
Then, being young and callow, he the verses straightway mailed
To her who stirred his passion, after which he sat and dreamed,
Of an answering note, and scented that with naive ardor teemed.

But he failed to get an answer in the next mail, or the next,
And for two long days he waited,
growing querulous and vexed,
Since he felt a heart of marble would by verse like his be stirred—
He'd remained two days in darkness when light dawned upon the third!
'Twas on the street he met her, and she scorned to look his way,
But he noticed, though evasive, that her "eyes of jet" were gray,
That her hair was straight, not curly,
and as brown as brown could be!
He wasn't as observant as he should have been, you see.

POOR OLD KINGSTON!

(Kingston News.)

Referring to a published statement that "Kingston is not growing," the Hamilton Times thus pertinently remarks.

"What's the matter with Kingston? Almost every other city in Canada complains that it is too prosperous—that is to say, building is so brisk and factories so busy that it is impossible to get hands to do the work. Wages are better than they ever were, and notwithstanding the rush in the building line there is a house famine all over the country. Why is Kingston left behind? Her situation on the water front should be in her favor. Her business men are not less pushing or public-spirited than those of other cities. What's the matter?"

This is a question that many have wrestled with, and are now trying to solve, "Why, O why, doesn't Kingston grow?"

TEACHERS TO QUALIFY

Government Deals Very Fairly With Separate Schools.

Amendments to Public School Act—Levies for Salaries of Teachers—Mr. Crawford Appointed Deputy Speaker—Sunday Car Question—Government's Policy Is for Sabbath Observance.

Toronto, March 27.—In a brief address which breathed the broad spirit that characterizes the Government in educational matters, Hon. R. A. Pyne, Minister of Education, yesterday introduced two important measures to the Legislature.

In his address Hon. Dr. Pyne expressed the hope that matters of educational policy would be approached apart altogether from party feeling. He trusted the sentiment which would pervade both Government and Opposition members would be a desire to best serve the interests of the education of the youth of Ontario. "The bills may produce much discussion," declared the Minister, "but it is my desire that it will redound in every way possible to the encouragement and success of the schools in the rural districts of the Province."

Qualifications of Teachers.

Regarding the measure to require qualification of certain teachers, the Minister said that the recent decision of the Privy Council had come suddenly upon some of the Separate School teachers. It was for this reason it was proposed to give present teachers just and ample time to qualify.

The act to amend the Public Schools Act provides that every corporation, society, etc., having in its custody any child shall be entitled to send it to the public or separate school in the locality in which the child resides. It further provides that where boards of trustees establish continuation classes, or unite with other boards for such purpose, that they may levy according to the equalized assessment of each municipality. The township council shall pay to the trustees their actual disbursements for maintenance and transportation of their pupils, and shall receive such legislative and county grants as may be determined. The act also provides that the outlay may be made to cover dental and medical inspection and to maintain free evening lectures for the citizens at large. The trustees may permit the school house to be used for any educational or lawful purpose which in their discretion they think proper. Urban school boards may spend such sums as they see fit on encouraging gymnastics and athletic exercises, not to exceed $200 where the annual registered attendance does not exceed 3,000, and $50 additional for each additional thousand in attendance.

Levies For Salaries.

Section 12 as amended provides that the county is to levy an amount equal to the amount of the legislative grant. Where a township in an organized county has an equalized assessment of $30,000 for each public school section, the township is to raise $300 for each teacher or principal teacher, and an additional sum of $200 for each assistant teacher. In townships in the territorial districts the amount is $150 for each teacher and $100 for each assistant. The sums so levied must be applied to teachers' salaries only.

The act respecting the qualifications of certain teachers provides that on proof satisfactory to the Minister of Education, the Department may grant permanent professional certificates valid in the Roman Catholic schools to persons belonging to religious and educational communities, who, prior to July 1, 1907, have had not less than seven years' experience in teaching—five of which must have been in Ontario—provided that the competence of such person is attested by the provincial inspector, or that before Dec. 31, 1908, they shall have completed one summer session of training of four weeks' duration, provided by the Department of Education. Third class certificates may be granted to persons who have not before July 1, 1907, had at least three years' experience in Ontario, but such persons before December, 1909, must have obtained the academic standing prescribed for third class certificates, and shall by September, 1909, have completed the term of professional training at a model school or one summer term of professional training. Similar conditions surround the granting of second class certificates, the time being extended to corresponding dates in 1911.

The provisions made shall also apply to public schools in which the French, English or German are the languages taught.

Those requiring first-class certificates must complete the examinations by 1912 and until that time they are legally qualified to continue teaching under the conditions specified.

Mr. Crawford Deputy Speaker.

Immediately on assembling the Prime Minister informed the House that he was glad to say that it was reported that the Speaker was progressing favorably. He moved, seconded by Hon. Mr. Foy, that Mr. Thomas Crawford (West Toronto) be elected Speaker for the day.

Mr. Crawford ascended the dias amid applause and read the prayers.

The Government benches applauded vigorously when Hon. Mr. Whitney and Mr. Ferguson entered with Mr. R. H. McElroy, the member-elect for Carleton, who was introduced by the Prime Minister. Mr. McElroy sits at the end of the front row, next to Mr. Bowyer.

Hon. Dr. Reaume introduced a measure to amend the act for the improvement of Public Highways. It provides that as the county councils are now composed of the reeves and deputy reeves of townships, a county council bylaw shall suffice for the adoption of a road system under the act, instead of thus depending, as is now the case, of getting the consent of all the township municipalities. Provision is also made whereby towns and villages not separated from counties may take advantage of the act and become partners with the Government in securing good roads in their own boundaries.

Sunday Street Cars.

Dr. Smellie (Port Arthur) protested against the Prime Minister killing the Sunday street car clauses of the Port Arthur bill. "I know Mr. Whitney is consistent," said he, "and that consistency is a jewel, but Port Arthus isn't in the jewellery business."

Hon. Mr. Whitney said the Government was there as servants of the people. A large majority of the people of Ontario were opposed to Sunday cars. "If we act in hostility to the known desire of the people we represent," he said, "we must expect severe censure." The action of the Government in this matter had been endorsed by hundreds of letters and telegrams.

Mr. Sam Clarke (Northumberland) said it was easy for some people to talk. Ninety per cent. of them had no need for cars, anyway. He thought the Alliance was overworking itself.

Dr. Smellie opined that it was an injury to the church in some cases.

Hon. Mr. Whitney said there might be room for honest difference of opinion on the matter, but he defined the Government policy as opposition to Sunday cars.

NO HOME RULE FOR IRELAND.

Lord Rosebery Says Irish Are Disloyal People.

London, March 27.—Presiding at a meeting of the council of the Liberal League, held here yesterday, Lord Rosebery said Great Britain would never tolerate a separate Irish Parliament. Such a proposal went far beyond anything the late Mr. Gladstone intended.

"A system suitable for Canada and Australia," Lord Rosebery added, "would be different in a contiguous island, which, in its public declarations, prided itself on its disloyalty."

Continuing, the speaker said he doubted if the Government's promised measures for Ireland would go to extremes, but it was a pity the Government's principal men were making speeches leading the country to believe that something radical was intended.

He, Lord Rosebery, owed no allegiance to the present Government, nevertheless he congratulated it on its success thus far.

He feared, however, it was promising too much. If it made any general attack on property, as was threatened, its existence would be speedily ended.

Cigarette Kills Paralytic.

Philadelphia, March 27.—Campbell A. P. Snodgrass, a helpless paralytic, 56 years old, was burned to death in his bed here yesterday. He was an inveterate cigarette smoker and accidentally set fire to the bed clothing.

THE SPHINX.

Nothing by Which We Can Accurately Tell Its Age.

The great sphinx of Gizeh bears no inscription by which we can tell its date. In 1816 Caviglia, who in modern times was the first to clear away the sand, found between its paws a stela of the reign of Thothmes IV., and therefore it was believed that the sphinx was carved by that monarch. But in 1858 the excavations of Mariette uncovered a stela bearing the name of Cheops, on which is a reference to the sphinx. The inscription is evidently of a late period, but is supposed to be an exact copy of an ancient carving, and the translation seemed to place the sphinx earlier than the pyramids and consequently to prove it the most ancient piece of work in the world. Still there remained four lines carved on the base which could not be read, but M. Daressy deciphered them, and it appears that the inscription is in two parts. In the earlier lines there is no mention of the sphinx, but the lines which date from the Persian occupation mention the repair of the sphinx. There is, therefore, nothing by which we can tell the date of the monument, and the only evidence we have is the headdress of the Colossus. Its hood is ornamented behind with three bands, a large one between two smaller bands. Now, this is a fashion which only existed toward the end of the twelfth dynasty in the reigns of Usurtesen III. and Amenemhet III. As this family showed much zeal for the god Harmakhis, whose portrait the sphinx is, it is probable that the monument is the work of Amenemhet III.—London Globe.

SUSPICIOUS BIRDS.

Easy to Make Sparrows Show Their Fear of a Trap.

One winter day I made an experiment with sparrows to see exactly how far their natural suspicion would hold out against hunger. I had often noticed that if one put a little bit of string, a large button or any strange object among breadcrumbs the sparrows would not touch the bread. They feared a trap. Starlings are less suspicious in this way. If they care about the bread at all, they are more trustful and do not make any fuss about some small foreign object. But I thought hard weather might make all the difference even to sparrows.

So I put a long piece of apple peel among the bread. It looked quite good to eat, but might be taken by a very suspicious bird for something of the nature of string or tape, which sparrows seem to regard with particular distrust. Can they regard it as an emblem of captivity? Directly the bread was thrown on the ground about fifty sparrows perched in a tree above it. They looked at it very glumly, and not one ventured to come down. Generally they would be devouring the bread within a few seconds. For a little over three hours a crowd of sparrows watched the bread with the terrible piece of apple peel lying among it, but it remained untouched. Then one sparrow made up his mind to take the risk. He was soon followed by all the others. In twenty minutes the bread was gone. But they had wasted over three hours.—St. James' Gazette.

DOWN IN THE FIRE ROOM.

Raking the Ashes From the Furnace of an Ocean Liner.

My "watches," four hours long, began at 8 in the morning and at 4 in the afternoon. The rest of the time was mine excepting when it was my turn to carry water and help clean up the mess room.

The first descent into the fire room of an ocean liner is unforgettable. Going down that series of ladders into the bowels of the old Elbe, the heat seemed to jump 10 degrees a ladder. At last the final ladder was reached, and we were at the bottom—the bottom of everything was the thought in more minds than one that afternoon. The head fireman of our watch immediately called my attention to a poker, easily an inch and a half thick and twenty to thirty feet long. "Yours!" he screamed. "Yours!" And he threw open one of the ash doors of a furnace, pantomiming what I was to do with the poker. I dived for it madly, just barely raised it from the floor and got it started into the ashes and then dropped none too neatly on top of it. "Hurry up, you sow-pig!" the fireman yelled, and I struggled again with the terrible poker, finally managing to rake out the ashes.—Josiah Flynt in Success Magazine.

What Rules the World.

Many years ago John Brougham, Lester Wallack, Artemus Ward and others used to meet after the play at Windhurst's, in Park row, in New York. One night the question, "What rules the world?" arose, and various opinions were expressed. William Ross Wallace, who was present, retired before long and some time later called Thomas J. Leigh from the room and handed to him a poem which he had just written. Mr. Leigh read it aloud to the company, and Mr. Brougham made a happy little speech of acknowledgment. The thing was entitled "What Rules the World," and the first stanza ran:

They say that man is mighty,
  He governs land and sea.
He wields a mighty scepter
  O'er lesser powers that be,
But a mightier power and stronger
  Man from his throne has hurled,
And the hand that rocks the cradle
  Is the hand that rules the world.

The Hiss Polite.

The Japanese prince drew in his breath with a hissing sound as he bent over the young girl's hand.

"Prince," she said, "I have been up against a lot of Japanese, and they all hiss like that when they meet you. What's the reason, anyway?"

"The reason is politeness," the prince answered. "I hiss—like this—I draw in my breath—I keep on drawing it in as long as I remain near you. For if I blow any out some of it might be blown in your fair face. What an offense! Shocking! And so we Japanese always hiss in exchanging greetings. Out of politeness we hold our breath."

The Teeth.

The accumulation of tartar on the teeth makes them unsightly and is often the cause of a bad breath. If the teeth are properly brushed each day tartar will not have the chance to accumulate, but if it has already been allowed to do so it can be removed by a very simple treatment. Moisten the toothbrush in warm water and dip it into magnesia. Rub on the teeth, and after three applications the tartar will have entirely disappeared.

Well Meant Prayers.

Great Naval Basin Opened.

At Davenport, England, the new Keyham docks, which in connection with the artificial basin thirty-five acres in extent form the greatest naval dockyard scheme in the world, were opened Feb. 21. From this basin entrance is made into three docks 740 feet long and forty-five feet deep.

GREAT NAVAL DISPLAY.

Great Britain Will Send Its Famous First Division of Modern Cruisers.

The naval display in connection with the Jamestown Exposition, it is now assured, will be one of the most—if not the most—impressive affair of its kind since the beginning of time. Kiel and the Victoria Jubilee were once considered the most brilliant gatherings of the forces of naval warfare ever brought about; but naval architecture has made such strides in the last few years, and such flattering promises of warships have been made to this Government by foreign nations, that the Kiel and Victoria Jubilee affairs are certain to be surpassed both in the number of vessels on hand and the brilliance of the holiday amenities which will accompany their rendezvous.

Nearly every country in the world which boasts a navy will send ships, and the total will be somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred vessels.

At no time during the progress of the Exposition (which is to be opened by President Roosevelt on April 26) will there be less than thirty warships anchored in the famous channel, within sight of the Exposition grounds.

The United States will, of course, lead in numbers. Second in importance will be the British display, which will consist of the First Cruiser Division, made up of six of the best types of armored cruisers—the Good Hope, the Antrim, the Argyle, the Devonshire, the Hampshire and the Roxburgh. Germany, Italy, France, Spain, Sweden, Russia, Japan and the South American republics will be represented.

There will be a camp on shore opposite the anchorage, where the marines of the various nations will be landed and paraded.

An extensive program of manoeuvres as well as of visits, balls and illuminations, is being arranged. Incidentally, the farmers and commission merchants are anticipating a rich harvest from the sale of provisions to the fleet. The amount of food necessary for an armada like this can only be expressed in large figures.

TERROR TO THE BENCH.

Eccentric Lawyer's Death Recalls Some Curious Episodes.

Mr. E. Justinian Stanbury-Eardley, who was one of the most eccentric lawyers in the country, died a Frogmore, Henley-in-Arden, Warwickshire, recently. Twenty years ago he plaited his long black hair, which fell in ample masses over his shoulders, and either tied it up in the form of a queue or kept it in position by means of a velvet cloth. It is questionable whether he ever made a speech under two hours' duration, even if he were only defending a man charged with being drunk and disorderly, and more often than not he would talk to the magistrates for five hours at a stretch. If the magistrates dared to interrupt him he would immediately quote a case recorded hundreds of years ago and proceed to show in a most laborious manner that the magistrates were compelled to listen to him, whether they liked it or not.

He Refused to Go.

Some years ago he was arrested for an offence he had committed at Solihull. It took half a dozen policemen to remove him from the police station. When he was brought before the magistrates he kicked the dock to pieces, and finally, when he was sent to jail for four months, fourteen policemen were required to remove him. He refused to wear the prison garb, and remained naked in his cell. Eventually he was held down by nine warders and clothed, and then a straight waistcoat was put on him. He also declined to eat the prison food, and announced his intention of starving. He was then held down and fed with a pump. He had a passion for cold baths. He formerly lived at Yardley, and every morning, winter and summer, he went to a mill pool near his house and plunged in. If ice covered the water he broke through it.

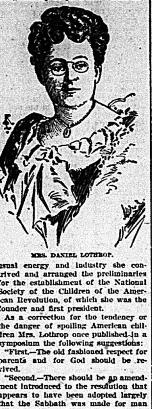
WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. DANIEL LOTHROP.

Founder of the Society of Children of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, who under the pen name of Margaret Sidney is widely known as the author of many books for children, is intensely interested in the little ones. Mrs. Lothrop's maiden name was Harriet Mulford Stone. She was born in New Haven.

It was Mrs. Lothrop who first perceived the assistance which would be derived for the furthering of the elevating spirit of love of country by the establishing of a society to be composed entirely of juveniles. With her usual energy and industry she contrived and arranged the preliminaries for the establishment of the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution, of which she was the founder and first president.



MRS. DANIEL LOTHROP.

As a correction for the tendency or the danger of spoiling American children Mrs. Lothrop once published in a symposium the following suggestions:

"First.—The old fashioned respect for parents and for God should be revived.

"Second.—There should be an amendment introduced to the resolution that appears to have been adopted largely that the Sabbath was made for man to make a worse day out of it than out of the other six.

"Third.—That ill doing should be execrated and punished.

"Fourth.—That American children should always hear from American citizens expressions of loyalty to their country, which their lives bear out.

"Fifth.—That American children should be bred to the idea that next to disowning one's country is the aping of manners and customs observed by other nations."—Boston Globe.

Living and Dining Room In One.

If any one chooses to have his living room and his dining room in one, he has only to make up his mind to it and then look about to see how it may be done without first showing elegance and comfort to the door.

The only absolute requisites for such an arrangement are a large room and proximity to the kitchen. There must be room enough to leave the field clear for setting the table, and this there never will be if there is room for only one table, which must serve the family for all its needs.

Such is the unconscious perversity of human nature that so sure as there is but one table the children will get their books or their toys on it or the husband will get out his writing or spread out a map for reference as near as possible to the dinner hour.

The best plan probably is to have either a table reserved exclusively for eating from or else a table that is only a table while it is wanted.

In one house is a table twelve feet, perhaps fifteen feet, long. And this offers a spacious field for all household forces. It is modeled after the Jacobean design. The cloth often is laid at one end of it and dinner served without obliging those who have been working along its generous length to strike their tents and retreat with bag and baggage or scup and scuppage.

This, however, scarcely might be a good thing to do as an everyday thing. One advantage in having a dining room separate from the living room is that the household gets variety and unbends from the too stiff stretched cord of daily work. But in this particular instance the big room in which the table stood was little used during the day and only at night became the great center of the family gathering. Certainly it was a pleasant rallying ground and the scene of much hospitable intercourse and cheer.—Washington Star.

The Picture Problem.

According to "A Bachelor's Cupboard," pictures should never be hung so high that it becomes necessary to mount a chair in order to see them. Hang them so the center will be on a level with the line of vision of the person of average height, or about five and one-half feet from the floor. Every one must consult his own taste as to the grouping of pictures. In hanging pictures the stock in hand should be looked over and a general scheme decided upon.

Oil paintings and water colors should never be allowed to become intimate companions, but the latter may hobnob with etchings, pastels, drawing, photographs and even engravings without losing their dignity. An oil painting of exceptional excellence should be given a special position.

Water colors and pastels in delicate tints and black and white and soft etchings should properly be placed in wall spaces where the light is strongest. The darker and more heavily shaded pictures should hang farther away from the light. From the faintly colored pictures in the clearest light the glance should be involuntarily but skilfully led to the deeper toned pictures farther back in the room.

Sometimes, however, a dark corner that needs brightening may demand a lighter picture or a spot of brilliant coloring may be risked. A pen and ink sketch with white mat fills in well in such a case. Harmony must be studied and the position of a picture well considered before its place is decided. One with broad white mat should never be hung next to a carbon in a heavy black frame. The eye must be led, not jerked, from one picture to another.

Wash Lace In Milk.

An almost infallible method of cleansing lace which has been much stained through age or other causes, says a writer in Good Housekeeping, is to stew it in milk. Place the lace in a jar and cover with milk. Then set the jar in a saucepan of water, after the manner of cooking beef tea. An hour or two are usually sufficient. The water in the saucepan will boil, but not so the milk. By allowing the milk to boil the stains would be more firmly fixed than ever. The writer tells of an old piece of brussels which had been lying on a fan for twenty years and was marked with brown stripes. All ordinary treatment had failed to remove the stains, but the lace came out of the hot milk treatment as white as snow and entirely uninjured.

Canned Foods.

Bright colors should be regarded as a flag of danger in the selection of canned foods, for they invariably indicate artificial coloring. A bright green color, such as is seen in canned peas and beans, indicates the presence of copper or iron. The brilliant red of catchup and canned tomatoes and fruits usually comes from aniline dye. A bright yellow, such as is found in mustard, extract of lemon and noodles, is also aniline in its origin as a general thing. The abnormally white color of canned corn and other foods indicates bleaching.—What to Eat.

Brass In a Room.

Brass can make a wonderful difference in a dreary room. A large jardiniere with a plant in it placed in a dark corner will lighten up marvelously. The andirons, too, will give a cheery reflection. Even candlesticks help, and little trays and bowls, be they ever so small. The importance of brass in a sunless room cannot be too strongly emphasized. Mirrors brighten up, and so do pictures with well polished glasses and gilded frames. But these little points are too seldom taken into consideration.

Kitchen Walls.

To clean the kitchen walls first pour some kerosene in a basin, then take a soft cloth and dip it in the kerosene and wash a part of the wall with it, then wring another cloth out of nice hot water and go over the spot just cleaned with kerosene and lastly wipe with a clean dry cloth. You wil be surprised at the results. It is the easiest and most satisfactory way of washing painted kitchen or bathroom walls.

Invisible Patches on Curtains.

Cut a piece of the required size out of an old one, and dip it in starch. Then press it on the curtain with a hot iron, and you will have the defective spot well mended until washing day, for it comes round again. Do not iron your curtains, for ironing breaks the threads. Instead, mangle and shake them out. Any creases which remain will soon disappear when they are hung up.

Skimming Soup.

Grease may always be skimmed from hot soup with a small piece of ice. This is very useful when making broths for invalids or children for immediate use. The grease hardens immediately when touched by the ice and clings to it long enough to be removed to a cup or basin, when it slips off and the ice may be used again.—Good Housekeeping.

Don't Slump.

Don't slump. By this is meant a position when sitting in which the back gets bowed and the spine more or less bent. It does not really rest the body, and it brings about a bad figure and worse carriage. So called "easy" chairs help people to slump. A soft cushion should be used to lean against and fill in the natural hollow of the back.

Repairing a Mirror.

A mixture of three ounces of bismuth, a half ounce each of tin and lead melted together and three ounces of mercury added when the first mixture is cool applied to the back of a looking glass which needs renewing will make it as good as new. Apply with a hare's foot.

Do not sew too much. Don't embroider too many hours a day. Don't do one thing exclusively and all the time, for this means a strain upon the eyes and headaches.

A plain girl who carries a large line of smiles hasn't much to fear from the pretty girl with the solemn face.

AILING WOMEN
How Many Perfectly Well Women Do You Know?

MISS GRACE E. MILLER　MRS. W. S. FORD

"I am not feeling very well," "I am so nervous it seems as though I should fly." "My back aches as though it would break."

How often do you hear these significant expressions from women friends. More than likely you speak the same words yourself, and there is a cause.

More than thirty years ago Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass. discovered the source of nearly all the suffering endured by her sex. "Woman's Ills," these two words are full of more misery to women than any other two words that can be found in the English language. Sudden fainting, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, backaches, headaches, nervousness, sleeplessness, bearing-down sensations, displacements and irregularities are the bane of woman's existence.

The same woman who discovered the cause of all this misery also discovered a remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs holds the record for a greater number of absolute cures of female ills than any other one remedy the world has ever known and it is the greatest blessing which ever came into the lives of suffering women.

Don't try to endure, but cure the cause of all your suffering. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. The following letters prove this:

Mrs. W. S. Ford of 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md. writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, suppression, terrible dragging sensations and extreme nervousness. I had given up all hope of ever being well again when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended. It cured my weakness and made me well and strong."

Miss Grace E. Miller, of 1913 Michigan St., Buffalo, N. Y. writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was in a very bad condition of health generally; irritable, cross, backache and suffered from a feminine weakness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, cured me after all other medicines had failed."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ford and Miss Miller it will do for other women in like condition. Every suffering woman in the United States is asked to accept the following invitation. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

AERIAL NAVAL WARFARE

TITANIC CONFLICT IN CLOUDS TO TAKE PLACE IN 1913.

German Writes Book Describing How England Will Become Dependency of His Country—Navy Will Be Futile—Weird Dream of Aerial Warfare—Drop Bombs From the Sky—Battles In the Air.

Recent progress in aerial navigation has greatly stimulated the imaginations of those authors who delight in waging bloody wars — on paper. When in "Locksley Hall" Tennyson, many years ago, "dipt into the future far as human eye could see" his prophetic vision beheld "the nations' aerial navies grappling in the central blue."

But, accordng to the poet, that awful conflict is to bring about the era of universal peace—"the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

According to Prof. Rudolf Martin of Berlin, it is to make Germany the mistress of the globe. He has just published a book entitled "From Berlin to Bagdad; the German World Supremacy in the Coming Era of Aerial Navigation," in which he tells how it is to be done. The perusal of it ought to afford some little solace to the thousands of the Kaiser's poorer subjects who yearn to exchange a diet of horse flesh and dog meat for the roast beef of old England. For, of course, it is England which is to suffer most at the hands of the German despoiler.

Make English Navy Futile?

When airships can travel faster than railway trains now move Great Britain, the professor says, will be deprived of the present strategic advantages of her geographical position. The British navy will be reduced to comparative insignificance. The Himalayas will no longer protect India from land attack.

The professor admits that England and America may build aerial navies that, ship for ship, may be quite as good as those of Germany, but they will have no armies fit to cope with Germany's highly trained legions with which, conveyed by aerial transports, she will overwhelm hostile countries.

The narrative of events which the professor relates takes place between 1913 and 1930. Germany adopts an improved form of the airship invented by Count Zeppelin, who thus far has merely succeeded in spending a large fortune in abortive attempts to conquer the air. The Zeppelin airship consists of a cigar-shaped balloon, with an aluminium deck, and fitted with powerful motors and steering apparatus.

His Airship Dream Weird.

In the death dealing, perfected form it takes in Prof. Martin's book the balloon has a capacity of from 60,000 to 100,000 cubic meters, is divided into something like 150 airtight compartments, carries 600 men on its aluminium deck, and, among other weapons of destruction, is provided with 400 or 500 aerial torpedoes. The professor predicts that by 1916 Germany will have 2,000 of these fighting airships in commission. Without armament, he figures it out that they will cost only $75,000 each — about what it now costs to build a torpedo boat.

In addition Germany is to be supplied with aerial trains, consisting of four airships linked together, the front airship alone being supplied with motors, and towing the other three after it at a prodigious rate of speed. Each train will suffice to transport 1,000 fully armed and equipped German soldiers.

1913 to Witness World War.

The universal shindy starts in 1913 with another war between Japan and Russia, in which the Japs administer a crushing defeat to the colossus of the north by means of their magnificent aerial fleets. It is followed by a revolution in Russia, in which the Romanoff dynasty is overthrown. The Czar, besieged in his palace, appeals to the Kaiser by wireless telegraphy to save him from the mob which clamors for his life. The Kaiser responds to his appeal by carrying him off in one of his matchless airships.

Anarchy ensues in Russia. Out of the chaos emerges a second Napoleon in the person of Suvaroff, a young Russian engineer, who is a master of the art of aerial navigation. He is made president of the Russian republic, and goes in for airships by the wholesale. By their means Russia again becomes a mighty power, which threatens to dominate Europe. Suvaroff gets himself proclaimed Czar of Russia under the name of Michael, and sets about preparing to subjugate the rest of the world.

Awful Battles In the Air.

Then the Kaiser takes a hand in the game by declaring war on Russia. The imagination of the most lurid dime novelist never depicted such awful battles as take place between the flying warships of Germany and Russia. From dizzy heights they drop destructive bombs on hostile armies. They riddle one another with shells, they ram each other in midair, and, the wrecks, falling from heights of 10,000 feet, are smashed to smithereens. The combatants are provided with parachutes in lieu of life belts, and thus many of them, after their airships are destroyed, succeed in reaching terra firma safely and renew the struggle there.

One scene describes the raid of a Russian air fleet in Berlin, led by the usurper Michael, who pulverizes the German capital by raining bombs of tremendous explosive power upon it and destroys thousands of German troops.

But, of course, the new Napoleon ultimately meets his Waterloo through the superior courage and skill of the German warriors of the air, and Russia has to accept the terms of peace dictated by the Kaiser. Then, having walloped Russia, the Kaiser proceeds to make himself master of the world. England, stripped of her colonies becomes a mere dependency of Germany.

Australia's Products.

Mr. Deakin, the Federal Premier, of Australia, speaking at the Foundation Day luncheon at Melbourne, recently, said that, according to the official estimate for 1906, there were 12,000,000 acres under the plough in the Commonwealth, the grain yield was over 100,000,000 bushels, the wool yield was worth £20,000,000, agricultural products totalled £21,000,000, mineral products £25,000,000, manufactured products £30,000,000, the oversea trade £113,000,000, and the inter-State trade £80,000,000, of which £24,000,000, the increase since 1900, was directly due to federation. The trade returns of the Australian Commonwealth show that the total value of merchandise imported during 1906 amounted to £42,590,527, an increase of £5,685,460 compared with 1905. The merchandise exported during 1906 reached a total value of £52,926,097, an increase of £7,141,362. The total volume of Australia's trade in 1906, including imports and exports of gold, amounted to £114,597,023, being an increase of nearly £19,500,000.

BREAKFAST.

Having the Morning Meal Served In One's Bedroom.

The china for a morning meal, when served in the bedroom, according to Dress, should be dainty in every particular. Coffee sipped from a delicate cup seems improved in flavor, and daintiness in all the breakfast appointments adds a charm to the delicacies that they contain and give an added delight to a comfortable breakfast.

The matter of the proper tray to use in the bedroom is an important item that should not be neglected in the consideration of this subject. Favor leans toward the one made of papier mache. When painted white with a gold band, it supplies a neutrally tinted background, which harmonizes with a setting of almost any style of china. It has the added advantage of lightness also, weighing less than a pound. China trays of the same proportions are heavy and cumbersome, sometimes weighing several pounds.

There is still another factor of this dainty service that demands thoughtful consideration. It is the means of serving the breakfast—the table or other receptacle that is used to hold the tray. Many women are adopting the hospital system, as it is distinctly the most convenient and expeditious way. The table is so made as to swing out over the bed when in use and to fold down against the metal standard when it has served its purpose. By this means of adjustment it may be put away when not in service, a feature that recommends it strongly, for it cannot be considered a sightly article of furniture. For this special purpose, however, there is nothing more strictly suitable, even though it be not beautiful, for it is compact, easily taken care of, and, on account of the little appliances that are used to adjust it, it forms the most comfortable sort of bed table.

HOUSE FURNISHING.

Young Wives of Limited Means Should Start Slowly.

"One of the most frequent mistakes made by young wives," said a matron known for her sensible advice on topics of the household, "is that of filling the house with furniture at the outset of their married life.

"They like to feel that their friends find nothing wanting, and they forget that, starting out with too full an equipment, they must necessarily keep that unchanged for several years. There is no room to add new things, and to dispose of old furniture that is not worn out is a serious loss. The proper thing to do is to start out with just enough to be comfortable.

"From time to time little things may be added as they are found necessary. In that way one never feels like a back number. At the same time one does not have to turn everything topsy turvy in order to be up to date. Another important thing in this connection is to resist the temptation, frequent when a young woman has everything she needs in furniture, to spend on entertainment money and time she can ill afford. Many young matrons have become broken in health from that."

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Before applying a poultice cover the skin lightly with glycerin to prevent any particles from adhering.

If troubled with pleurisy, apply flannel cloths wrung out of hot water, to which a small quantity of mustard has been added. Change the cloth often.

Hot milk sipped slowly is efficacious for relieving the throat irritation that frequently follows a severe cold, or is an accompaniment of a bronchial cough.

Two ounces of boric acid crystals dropped in a glass quart jar and the jar filled with water makes a saturated solution. It is useful in cases of burns and is an effectual antiseptic.

The old time formula for sulphur and molasses blood tonic is: Two ounces of sulphur, an ounce of cream of tartar, a pint of molasses. Take a spoonful three mornings, skip three, then take three more.

A Perfect Hanging Skirt.

To insure a perfect hanging skirt finish the top of the skirt and put it on the one who is to wear it. Now put on a stiff belt directly over the band. Have it tight enough so it cannot sag. Take a strip of cloth or stiff paper longer than you want your skirt, loop it over the belt and fasten. Have loose enough so it will slip on the belt. Now make the strip the desired length of the skirt, slip this around on the belt, putting pins in the skirt at the end of the strip, not more than six inches apart. Take the skirt off, turn the hem by your pins and baste. Now take a piece of pasteboard the desired width of the hem, measuring every few inches. Baste again and stitch. Your skirt will be the same length all around.

Use a Tray.

It saves many steps if when putting dishes away you carry them to the china closet in a tray, as it accommodates so many more dishes than one can carry in the hands. A tray should be used also when removing them from the table. This is so frequently neglected and so many extra steps have to be taken that it is worthy of being mentioned.

For Cut Flowers.

Pretty receptacles for flowers that are inexpensive are goldfish bowls. A small one costs but 10 cents and will be found most artistic. The nasturtium, rose, mignonette or any dainty flower with pretty stem is at its best in the clear glass bowl.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS LYDIA GOULD WELD.

A Boston Girl Will Very Likely Plan Our Biggest Battleship.

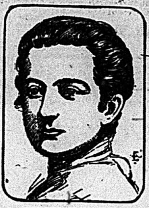
There is one girl who may look the part of a secretary for some home for stray cats, but who is building battleships.

She is Miss Lydia Gould Weld, of a famous and wealthy old New England family. She is employed by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Construction company.

When just budding into womanhood Miss Weld concluded to be of some use in the world. A little story is told concerning Miss Weld and Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, sometimes termed "a temporal vicegerent of the Prince of Peace." Miss Weld had announced her intention of learning to build battleships. Mrs. Mead was horrified.

"My dear Miss Weld," declaimed Mrs. Mead, "one battleship costs as much as an entire university. One is educational, and the other is totally destructive. I am astounded."

"My dear Mrs. Mead," responded the girl, "your mathematics are correct, but I question your logic. Frequently there are occasions in the onward march of civilization when one good battleship properly handled is worth more to God and humanity than forty average universities."



MISS LYDIA GOULD WELD.

So Miss Weld fitted for technology and matriculated. Donning her leather apron, baring her well bred arms, greasing, oiling and blackening her pretty fingers, she worked at the bench, the forge, the lathe, the anvil and at her books. After three years of savage plugging at naval architecture Miss Weld graduated at the head of her class.

Miss Weld one day amazed the millionaire owner of a big steam yacht by running the pilot house out and the engine room in on a cruise in a heavy sea.

President Orcutt of the big Newport News company is very proud of his fair employee, who helps him build some of the biggest battleships.

The Wife's Allowance.

Should the married woman have an allowance?

Well, rather.

The husband who will make his wife run to him before he will give her $5 ought to be sent to the rock pile.

Said one man:

"When my wife wants her pet terrier to bark she gives him candy. I train her the same way."

It is the old harem idea brought down to date.

Many a man will write out checks to pay a $100 bill and not give the matter a thought, but watch him grunt when his wife asks him for a little $5 piece.

The really independent woman nowadays is not the wife of the prosperous merchant nor the petted daughter of the real estate man—no, indeed. The woman who can afford to buy two—two—well—er—lemonades and not have to give an account for the item is the woman who is out in the world earning her own living. Then men growl because the girls nowadays want to get away from home to earn a living.

And every once in awhile some fellow rises up before the world to have his say about woman's little evasive ways. Who teaches her to do this if not the man who trains her to go on her pretty knees every time she wants to have two bits of her own?

"What do you want money for? Isn't my credit good?" asks her lord and master pompously.

How would he like to be compelled to charge every ten cent cigar and the drinks for himself and the other fellow?

On allowance? Well—just ask any married woman.

No man who has the least respect for himself or his wife will force her to beg for money or even humiliate her by compelling her to ask for it.

Pony up, Mr. Husband. Treat her as you would like to be treated.

Cultivate Good Manners.

Good manners must not be mistaken for "mannerisms," which should ever be avoided. The former spring from a constant regard and thought for the feelings of others, from habitual self denial, from a love of gentleness and peace, while the latter is merely affectation.

There can be no true politeness where there is no consideration for others. Good manners are shown in small deeds rather than the big actions of life, in the everyday intercourse rather than at occasional parties.

There is no woman so respected, so sought after and so admired as the woman whose easy, gracious manners put every one at ease—the woman who never forgets what is due to others rather than to herself, who is always ready to help with voice and deed. To such a one doors open quietly; employers recognize her worth and reward her by quick advancement; while those who serve under and with her forget their churlishness or bad temper in her pleasant smile and gracious bearing.

It has been said that "money is a key to open every door," but there are occasions when gold has no avail and when manners alone are able to effect an entrance. True politeness cannot be too early taught, and it is best taught by example rather than precept. If the housewife and mother possesses that great virtue, servants, children and all those who come under her sway will soon fall into the same way of speaking and acting.—Philadelphia Ledger.

When Buying Gloves.

"In selecting a pair of gloves," said a glove saleswoman, "the best plan is to test the kid by stretching it. Take the side seams between the thumbs and fingers and pull. If the kid is soft and pliable, the pores small, even and not specially noticeable and the glove immediately takes on its original shape it gives evidence of not only being elastic and therefore full of new life, but of being of a fairly good quality. The heavy walking gloves can be tried in the same way, but as sure a test as any is in smelling them, and if there is a rather fragrant odor like that of Russian leather they, too, should be all right. The stitching in the seams should all be carefully examined to see that it is perfect and that there are none sewed so close to the edges that they will tear out. If well made, they should have a small gore between each of the fingers."

The Girl With Thin Arms.

A private pointer for the long, slender armed girl:

Don't fall into the snare of dressing your bony elbows with what the fashion books call "softening frills of lace."

Don't you believe it.

That frill will fall over the very curve you wish to display and fall away from the hollow you wish to hide.

Fix the bottom of your elbow sleeves with a close band of black or dark colored ribbon. Let it be quite snug, so that what little flesh there is there will swell out impressively.

The plain turn back elbow cuff gives the same effect, and there is bound to be some taper to your arm if the outlines are clearly defined.

Try it and see.

How to Make Starch.

To make boiled starch, allow one tablespoonful of starch to two tablespoonfuls of cold water, then add half a teaspoonful of borax and a small piece of wax candle. This keeps the iron from sticking. Pour on boiling water, stirring carefully all the time until these ingredients are well mixed and creamy looking and the starch is cooked. It should then be strained through a piece of muslin and the basin be covered with a plate to prevent a skin forming. If the starch is too thick, it may be diluted with cold water, and this should be added as soon as possible after the starch has been made.

Three Things to Beware.

A writer in Good Housekeeping says: "Beware," said my doctor, "of three things—beef which is so rare as to be actually raw, which may be the breeder of tapeworms; old potatoes from which the sprouts have not been properly extracted, which contain a poison which may cause illness, and any green salad vegetable, such as lettuce, cabbage, celery, chicory or cress, unless you know it has been most scrupulously cleaned. In the stems and under the curled up leaves are frequently to be found germs, tiny worms or the eggs of insects, that cause trouble if they get into the human stomach."

How to Black a Stove.

Wash off all the grease spots with soapsuds, and if there are any rough, rusty places or spots where something has burnt on the stove rub with a piece of coarse sandpaper. Mix the blacklead to the consistency of cream with vinegar or water. Apply this to the stove when cool, and when nearly dry rub it with a stiff brush until it shines. If stoves are blackleaded while they are hot, the blacking burns on and will never take a really good polish.

Quenelles With Spinach.

Make a force meat of two pounds of veal, season with mace, salt and pepper, add one-quarter pint of cream, mix well and poach in clear soup. Drop a soupspoonful at a time in the boiling soup, take out and keep hot. Have ready some well chopped and seasoned spinach, pile in the center of the dish and place the quenelles around. This makes a very nice and dainty entree.

Mildew can be removed from linen by a preparation of soft soap, powdered starch and salt, used in equal proportions, and to which the juice of a lemon has been added. Paint both sides of the linen with this and put linen out in the air until stain is removed.

A good formula for eye wash is fifteen drops of spirits of camphor, one teaspoonful of boric acid and two-thirds of a cup of boiling water. It is perfectly harmless.

Gutta percha clotheslines are much stronger and last longer than cord. They are not affected by the wet and can be kept absolutely clean with a damp cloth.

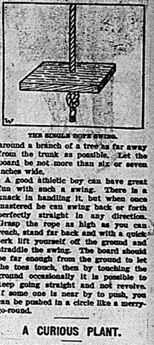
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

SINGLE ROPE SWING.

How to Make One and the Way to Start and Operate It.

Sometimes a rope will be found lying about the barn or back of the house which could be used to make a swing, but it is not quite long enough for the purpose. That is the time a single rope swing may be made which will furnish enough fun to suit any boy.

The end of a soap box makes a good seat. Bore a hole in the middle of a board, pass the rope through and tie a knot in the bottom. Tie the other end around a branch of a tree as far away from the trunk as possible. Let the board be not more than six or seven inches wide.



THE SINGLE ROPE SWING.

A good athletic boy can have great fun with such a swing. There is a knack in handling it, but when once mastered he can swing back or forth perfectly straight in any direction. Grasp the rope as high as you can reach, stand far back and with a quick jerk lift yourself off the ground and straddle the swing. The board should be far enough from the ground to let the toes touch, then by touching the ground occasionally it is possible to keep going straight and not revolve. If some one is near by to push, you can be pushed in a circle like a merry-go-round.

A CURIOUS PLANT.

It Eats Up Flies and Insects That Alight Upon It.

One of the most curious plants is found in the vivarium of the Pennsylvania university. The name of this wonderful plant is the Pinguicula caudata, and the name is as long as the plant is small. The plant is small and modest and has a pretty flower and pretty leaves.

Despite its innocent looks and small size it is an object of terror to all insects, for it has the qualities of fly paper, and should any guileless insect stop upon its sticky leaves it could never get away, because the leaves have a sticky substance upon them which retains the insect. As every insect passes this plant its inviting looks tempt the insect to spend a few minutes of recreation upon its pretty leaves.

But, alas, it never leaves the surface of the leaves until it is absorbed by this fly catcher, when it goes to enrich the constitution of the plant. As the leaves are always covered with insects, the plant flourishes into one of the most thrifty plants. This "insect catcher" of Dame Nature would be a boon and a blessing to many housewives who are troubled with mosquitoes and flies, for if a few of these plants were placed on a table in a room infested with the above named insects the room would soon be free from these little pests, which are so abundant during the warm weather.

Woodpeckers.

The woodpeckers have so long been looked upon as the good friends of mankind that it would seem impertinent to bring any charges against them, and yet the good they do is of very doubtful quantity. As they peck around the trees in the fields and orchards to devour the worms and insects they make no distinction between the destructive and the nondestructive creatures. In fact, their choicest morsel of food is a small creature that spends its entire life in eating the most injurious tree insects that we have. Unless the woodpeckers can make up for the loss of these beneficial insects by keeping down the injurious ones the birds must be classed among the nuisances rather than the friends of mankind.

The Magic Tumbler.

Fill a saucer with water, place a small coin in it. Then ask some one to take the coin out of the saucer with his fingers without getting them wet. He will, of course, say that it is impossible and will perhaps ask you to do it.

Take a tumbler and a piece of crumpled paper. Light the paper and place it burning in the tumbler, then immediately invert the latter in the saucer. The water is immediately sucked up into the tumbler, and the coin can be taken out without wetting the fingers.

The Dreamland Train.

When I would go to fairyland,
  Upstairs the station lies.
Just after dark the good train leaves;
  An early start is wise.
I take a special sleeping car;
  There is no fare to pay.
But mother dear collects a kiss
  Before I start away.
And then she tucks me in my berth
  And turns the light down low.
I always fall asleep before
  The train begins to go.
Through all the night the train flies on;
  It is a famous run.
And when the morning comes at last
  I'm wakened by the sun.
And then I find I'm somehow home
  And in my little bed.
Do you suppose 'twas all a dream,
  As my big sister said?
—Paul Pinkerton in Youth's Companion.

Farewell Banquet To Mr. McClatchie.

PLEASANT AND INTERESTING AFFAIR AT WALLACE'S RESTAURANT LAST NIGHT.

Last evening the Men's club of Bridge St. church gave a banquet at Mr. James Wallace's in honor of Mr. Grant A. McClatchie, president of the club, who is about to leave this city in a few days for Toronto.

There was great regret felt and expressed at the loss of Mr. McClatchie, and nothing could have shown better the esteem in which he is held than the fact that every speaker expressed his keen regret at his departure and hoped that he would soon again return to Belleville.

Mr. Henry Pringle was the chairman, and proved to be a model toastmaster in every way.

The speeches were bright, and the good results of the training received in the club were clearly shown by the ease and grace with which the toasts were responded to.

After ample justice had been done to the supper the following toasts were proposed and responded to:

"The King"—God Save the King.
"Our Country"—K. B. Conger, G. Berkley.
"Our City"—D. Holton, E. O'Flynn.
Solo—F. Sprague.
"Our Club" — B. Chown, E. Wallace, B. Moore, B. E. Sills.
"Our Guest"—G. A. McClatchie.
"Our Church"—Wm. Johnson, Rev. J. P. Wilson.
"The Ladies" — Peckitt, Dr. Day, H. Frost, T. Byam.
"Host and Hostess"—Mr. Wallace.

"Old 81" At Home.

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION GIVEN BY BELLEVILLE LODGE, I. O. O. F., LAST NIGHT.

Under the auspices of Belleville Lodge, No. 81, I.O.O.F., an at home was held last evening in their lodge room, Bridge street. A large number of the members of the triple link fraternity, with their wives and lady friends, were in attendance and a most enjoyable time was spent. Bro. Geo. T. Woodley, a past grand, was chairman, and filled that position most acceptably. A programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music was furnished, and the various selections were well rendered and heartily received. A quartette composed of Messrs. S. Burrows, K. Taylor, V. Doyle and H. Wrightmyer, sang twice and were loudly applauded. Miss K. Bawden sang sweetly and Messrs. Burrows and Wrightmyer also rendered solos. Mrs. E. Fairfield delighted those present with two recitations. The band at intervals gave selections which were much appreciated. At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served. Miss Chalaupka was an efficient accompanist.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

A "MERRY MUSICAL MIX-UP."

Under the alluring description of a "merry musical mix-up," "My Wife's Family" is announced for the attraction at the Carman to-morrow night. There is nothing serious about this piece excepting its determination to give those who see it some new and good reason for laughter. With this end in view Stephens and Linton, the authors, have taken the old and familiar theme of a hen-pecked husband with a wife who has many relatives who always visit her, and with this framework they have done what would seem almost impossible — devised a play which has been pronounced everywhere to have all the elements of success, namely, originality and ginger.

A thrilling serial story, "No. 101," will commence in The Intelligencer Saturday next. It is a tale of love, intrigue and fighting. Don't miss the opening chapters.

Picton Jail Officials.

Picton Gazette: The rumor that there would probably be a change almost immediately in the officials at the jail, has partly been verified, as Mr Ezekiel Harris has already tendered his resignation, which, of course, has been accepted. The jailer Mr. Wm. Patterson, had not, up to last night, responded to the letter from Sheriff Gibson, inviting him to resign, but will probably do so in a day or two. No appointment has yet been made to the position of turnkey. The present officials, in any event, will hold their respective positions until the end of the present quarter.

Everybody likes a romantic story, such as "No. 101," which starts in The Intelligencer next Saturday. Don't fail to read it.

Joseph Phillips Was Disappointed.

EXPECTED MUCH LIGHTER SENTENCE THAN THAT GIVEN HIM BY JUDGE WINCHESTER.

Toronto, March 26. — "Were there negotiations with officials of the Crown that would lead Joseph Phillips, former President of the York County Loan & Savings Company, or his counsel, Mr. J. E. Jones, to believe that if Phillips made restitution so far as he could to the shareholders of the York County Loan he would be allowed to go on suspended sentence, or at most be given a very short term of imprisonment?"

That Phillips and his counsel were astonished at the sentence of five years imposed was apparent, and it is authoritatively stated that when Phillips went before Judge Winchester and pleaded guilty to making false returns to the Government, he expected that the matter would be quietly arranged and that he would once more be a free man. Mr. Jones claims that there was an implied understanding and points to the correspondence read to Judge Winchester by County Crown Attorney Drayton just before sentence was passed. Phillips' friends claim that when last year negotiations were conducted at which Mr. R. Home Smith, acting for the National Trust Company, the liquidators, and Mr. J. W. Curry, K. C., then Crown Attorney, were present, under which Mr. Phillips gave up $58,000, it was with the understanding that the prosecution would not be proceeded with.

Judge Winchester stated yesterday that the Attorney-General had not interfered in any way in the case. His Honor explained that in imposing sentence he can take any matter into consideration, and he believed that in the case of Joseph Phillips he had done enough when he permitted other charges of theft and conspiracy to be dropped. Judge Winchester observed that the proper time for Phillips to have made restitution was when he was before Investigator Cross, and not to have waited till his case had been well begun in the Police Court and civil actions had been entered to recover the securities which he eventually turned over to the liquidators.

The McMaster Band

EVANGELISTS ARE HAVING FINE SUCCESS IN THIS CITY.

The results of the visit of the McMaster Band to this city have been, we are told, very gratifying so far. Yesterday, at the noon hour, the Band held a service at the rolling mills, which was attended by over 100 men. The service was deeply earnest in character and very encouraging to the young evangelists.

Last night the service in the Baptist church was very largely attended, and there were many bright features. The choir was large enough to nearly fill the platform, and under the direction of Mr. Williamson, sang in fine style. It is expected that the choir will be largely augmented before long. The male quartette sang "The Wayside Cross," in a most harmonious way. Mr. Warner gave a brief and pointed address from the text:

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son," etc.

The love of God for mankind was emphasized, and the speaker defined God as a personal worker, who must be accepted in a personal spirit. The leader, Mr. Cameron, also gave a brief address, and by his witty and timely remarks kept the interest of the service up to a high pitch. At the close of the service many made a public profession of faith. Rev. Messrs. Laidlaw, of St. Andrew's, and Emerson, of the Baptist church, took part in the service.

Important Question Is Settled At Last.

At a regular session held last evening, of the Brotherhood in connection with Holloway St. Church, an interesting and profitable debate took place. The subject under discussion was: "Resolved, that it is more profitable and of more advantage to a young man to go to the Northwest than to remain in Ontario." The affirmative side of the debate was taken by Messrs. G. Vandevoort, leader; H. McKay, C. Wills, A. Steele and H. Duffin. Those on the negative side were Messrs. W. Hill, leader; R. Duffin, P. F. Canniff, C. McMechan and R. Leitch. Some excellent points were brought out by both sides, but the judges, W. W. Simmons, H. Butterfield and D. Leitch, voted that the affirmative were the victors. The proceedings were presided over by Mr. D. Leitch, Acting President of the Brotherhood.

Contract For Accident Insurance Awarded.

The Accident and Guarantee Insurance Company of Canada will, during the ensuing year, carry the city's insurance in so far as accidents are concerned. Three tenders for this insurance were received, namely, from the Ontario Accident Co., $1,500; The Accident and Guarantee Co., $1,000, and a company represented by Mr. C. Ashley for $925. In the latter tender an important property clause was omitted. The committee to which the matter was referred decided in favor of the Accident & Guarantee Co. In the six years during which the Ontario Accident Co. had the policy, premiums to the extent of $6,025 had been paid by the city. The company have paid out in that time $5319.18, and there are at present four suits pending.

Headaches Mean Your Blood Is Poisoned

If your bowels, kidneys or skin are not ridding the system of waste-matter, the blood is laden with impurities, which inflame the nerves. It is these irritated nerves that make the head ache.

Powders and pills won't cure, they merely drug the nerves into unconciousness and relieve for a short time.

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Headaches, Neuralgia and Nerve Pains because they purify the blood. They act directly on the three great eliminating organs—Bowels, Kidneys and Skin—and restore them to healthy action, thus ridding the system of all poisons.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices—chemically changed, by the process of combining them, into a far more effective medicinal compound than the natural juices. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. At all dealers' or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FEMALE SPY MURDERED.

Illicit Distillers of Liquor Attack Two Women.

Danville, Va., March 27.—A special to the Register from Stuart, Va., which is about 75 miles from Danville, says that as a result of an attack by a mob of men on Sunday night, Annie Hall, a white woman, residing near Charity, Patrick County, was shot to death, and her sister, Jane Hall, seriously wounded.

The accounts of the murder are very meager, and it is supposed to have been the work of illicit distillers of whiskey. The murdered woman and her sister lived in a cottage with their nephew, and it is alleged that they had been acting in the capacity of spies and had been reporting to the revenue officers the whereabouts of the illicit distillers and the names of the operators.

Saskatoon, March 27.—From twenty-five to thirty cars of settlers' stock and general effects are being unloaded at the present time at the yard here. Monday a train of twenty-three cars came in from Minneapolis. On board were men and families from Southern Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska. The day on which the party pulled into Minneapolis there were 150 cars of settlers and effects gathered in later cars waiting to be sent along to destinations in Western Canada. All these who have arrived declare themselves but the advance guard of many hundreds and thousands of good American farmers who are preparing to follow this spring from a dozen States.

London Daily Comments On His Possible Absence From Conference.

London, March 27.—(C. A. P.)—The Evening Globe, discussing Laurier and the coming conference, says excuse would willingly be made for Sir Wilfrid were Canada faced with any grave public crisis or any extraordinary pressure of political business, but the Dominion barometer has indicated set fair for some time past, and it will not pass unnoticed that the debate which first showed Sir Wilfrid's hand was not brought about by his own initiative palm. It says if there were any real possibility of Laurier being absent from the Colonial Conference it would go far to frustrate the whole purpose and potentialities of that gathering.

McINTOSH BROS.

ENQUIRY VOTED DOWN

Mr. Bourassa's Motion In Regard to Fowler Charges.

Severe Criticisms In the House—Great Crowds Hear Labelle Man Drive Cabinet Into Hurried Conference—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Refuses to Investigate—Mr. Fowler Says Insurance Report Is Wrong.

Ottawa, March 27.—Great crowds waited in the corridors yesterday afternoon and filled and overflowed the galleries as soon as the doors were opened. The members, too, were promptly in their places, and all eyes were turned to where, side by side, sat Henri Bourassa and Armand Lavergne.

There was some slight delay as Mr. Fielding wished to put through a proportional vote on supply, the fiscal year ending on Saturday next.

It was 3.30 when, upon motion to again go into supply, Mr. Bourassa rose to propose his amendment, moving for a complete investigation of all the charges and scandals respecting Ministers and members of Parliament, including Mr. Fowler's famous charge of "women, wine and graft."

Mr. Bourassa spoke from a non-partisan and almost a judicial standpoint, and at various times received applause from the Opposition.

Mr. Foster Interrupts.

Duncan Ross (Liberal, B. C.) shut off any discussion as to the charges against him, by invoking the rule that a member is not permitted to quote from a past debate. No one else got behind this rule, and the Speaker was not interrupted, except by Mr. Foster, who repeatedly protested that the findings of the Insurance Commission were "deliberate misrepresentations."

Mr. Bourassa finished his speech at 5.30, and the Government was so deeply impressed with the gravity of the occasion that Sir Wilfrid Laurier made no attempt to reply, and after a somewhat embarrassing pause, Mr. Carvel (Lib., N. B.) was evidently put up to talk until 6 o'clock.

Between 6 and 8 o'clock there was a Ministerial conference.

Bourassa's Speech.

When Mr. Bourassa arose, there was slight applause, so slight indeed that both sides were inclined to greet the speaker with a loud guffaw.

"I am well aware," said Mr. Bourassa, "that I am not very welcome to either side of the House to-day, but it is not my mission to do the work of the man with the muck rake. I have no personal enmity against any member of this House, nor have I any political motive. Both parties, as at present constituted, are indifferent to me."

He then traced the history of the Royal Insurance Commission. The Commission had heard witnesses and reported its findings to Parliament. These findings affected certain members of Parliament so seriously that it was full time for them to be indicated or to have their guilt established. These gentlemen were Messrs. Foster, Fowler, Lefurgey and Bennett.

The matter had come acutely to public attention by an episode between one of these four (Mr. Fowler) and Mr. Ross (Yale-Cariboo), Mr. Ross having referred to this report of the Insurance Commission.

Mr. Fowler had replied, "If any attacks are made upon my private character from your side of the House I will show up your connection with Jim Hill. I will tell the inside truth about the Hyman story, and I will expose the connection of certain Ministers and Ministerial members with women, wine and graft."

Fowler's "Notice."

This was a notice served upon the Government that the findings of the Insurance Commission respecting certain Conservative members must not be alluded to.

What had been the effect of that notice? Was the Government frightened by Fowler's threat? Apparently so.

"Under the pretence of the Premier's trip to England, under one pretence or another," he said, "the two parties are hurrying up prorogation and steering clear of any discussion of the report of the Insurance Commission. Is it any wonder that the press and the public are agreed that a saw-off has been arranged between the Government and the Opposition?"

There could be no reason, continued the speaker, why an investigation should be resisted. The Premier on this occasion had stated that the session could not close without Mr. Fowler's charges against his Cabinet being investigated. R. L. Borden had declared that no opposition would come from his side against any investigation against any Conservative member. Indeed, he had protested that he favored the immediate investigation. Mr. Bennett of East Simcoe had very manfully asked, and even demanded, investigation. Why, then, has no one moved for a committee? Clearly it was up to the Government, up to the Prime Minister, to see that a committee was appointed.

Such committee to have power to employ and hear counsel, to send for persons, papers and records, to examine witnesses on oath or affirmation and to report to the House during the present session.

Sir Wilfrid Replies.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that Bourassa's resolution was unique in character. It was in form an amendment to a motion to go into supply. It could, therefore, not be amended. It must be adopted, if at all, holus bolus, the proper with the improper, the true with false.

Mr. Bourassa had protested that he wished to clear the air, to separate the honest from the dishonest men in Parliament.

"Sir," exclaimed the First Minister, theatrically, "every man in this House is an honest man—(applause) and his character cannot be taken away by the tittle tattle of the street or by the reckless talk of any man not brave enough o make a charge."

"We cannot investigate mere rumor. Let charges be made against any member, and I will guarantee a full and speedy investigation."

The Premier denied that there was any saw-off. Had not the leader of the Opposition entered his solemn denial?

Facts In Report.

The Premier, examining the Bourassa resolution in detail, declared that there was no occasion to investigate Messrs. Fowler, Foster, Lefurgey and Bennett. All the facts had no doubt been brought out before the Insurance Commission. The findings of that Commission might be right or wrong. Personally he had no opinion; he had not made up his mind. He hoped that there might still be time to discuss that report at this session.

If Mr. Bourassa had any charge to make, let him make it and it would be investigated if it kept Parliament sitting for three months. But in the name of the dignity of Parliament he protested against such a speech as the member for Labelle had made today.

Borden Criticizes Laurier.

R. L. Borden severely criticized Sir Wilfrid's course, in not making his speech and announcement immediately after Mr. Bourassa's speech and having connived at Mr. Carvell's intervening with an unfair attack on Mr. Foster.

Borden Will Support It.

Mr. Borden evidently sprung a surprise upon the Government when he announced in closing that, while wishing that the resolution of Mr. Bourassa had been drafted differently, he would vote for it.

The House divided upon Mr. Bourassa's statement, and the same was defeated, yeas 66, nays 109—a party vote, except that Bourassa, Armand Lavergne and Robitaille (Liberals) voted for the amendment, and Foster and Fowler (Con.) declined to vote.

The House adjourned at 12.20 a.m.

Threw a Bomb.

Bialystok, Russia, March 27.—A bomb was thrown yesterday at Governor-General Bogslevski while he was out driving. The Governor-General was uninjured, though the force of the explosion broke all the windows in the street, and his coachman was slightly wounded. The bomb-thrower escaped.

A Voice From The Stomach.

A BLOODLESS FIGHT BETWEEN A TABLET AND A HABIT—THE TABLET WINS.

At the age of 22 Clarence had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn apple-skins into good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be profuse about the waist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds appetite—and every good thing is abused.

His pictures showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on.

At the age of 26 Clarence married and went to boarding. On top of all this, he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16 1-2 to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarence began to hear an inward voice—a warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a heavy thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit down at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat.

He would often feel a gnawing unsatisfied "still hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And he suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-of-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c box at a drug store, and took the whole box. When he started he had little faith—and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith — and more appetite, and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, nausea, eructations, bad memory, or loss of vim and vigor.

Remember, one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarence.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating, and how lusciously good everything will taste to you.

Heed the call of the stomach now! There's a world of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets—at any drug store, 50c.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 84 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Toronto Live Stock.

Toronto, March 26.—Receipts of live stock at the city market as reported by the railways since Friday last were 54 car loads, composed of 831 cattle, 480 hogs, 480 sheep, 277 calves and 6 horses.

Exporters.

Not many offered and few wanted, as space on ocean boats is scarce. A few lots weighing 1200 to 1300 lbs. each sold at $4.90 to $5.35, the latter price being paid in only one or two instances for extra choice Easter cattle. Bulls sold from $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

There were some odd cattle of prime quality, as will be seen by prices given below, brought Easter market prices, but these were the exception and not the rule, as regards prices paid. Best loads sold at $4.65 to $5 per cwt; fair to good $4.30 to $4.60, medium butchers' and good cows $3.85 to $4.25, fair cows $3.40 to $3.75, canners and common cows sold at $1.50 to $2.75 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

Harry Murby reports little doing, as there are not many offering, altho there is considerable demand springing up for both stockers and feeders. Short-keep feeders are quoted at $4.60 to $4.85 per cwt. Steers 1000 to 1100 lbs. each are worth from $4.30 to $4.60 per cwt. Stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, are worth from $3.25 to $3.75, according to quality.

Milch Cows.

About 40 or 50 cows were on sale, none of which were of extra quality. Market was slower than usual and prices ranged from $30 to $55 each. One car load was sold at an average of $39 each.

Veal Calves.

Deliveries large, the bulk being of the common kind, few choice veal calves being on sale. Prices ranged from $3.50 to $6.50. A prime new milk-fed calf would bring $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices for good quality were firm. Export ewes $5 to $5.50, rams $4 to $4.50 per cwt., yearling lambs, ewes and wethers sold from $7.25 to $7.60 for the bulk, and one choice lot $7.85 per cwt., common stuff sold from $5.50 to $6.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts light, prices steady, at about $6.90 for selects and $6.65 for lights and fats

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 26.—Cattle, receipts, 300 head; slow and easier; prices unchanged. Veals, receipts, 250 head; active and steady; $4.50 to $10.50. GUELPH WRECK VERDICT.

Train Was Going Sixty Miles An Hour, "a Dangerous Rate."

Guelph, March 27.—The finding of the jury, empannelled to examine into the recent wreck on the G.T.R. near Guelph, shows that the train was going at the rate of sixty miles an hour, which they considered "a dangerous rate of speed, considering the season, the weight of the rail and the engine."

Rebel Defeated.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, March 27.—A letter received here yesterday by the Venezuelan Consul from Caracas says that Gen. Juan Pablo Penalosa, who was reported early in the month to have started a serious rebellion in the State of Tachira, Venezuela, has been defeated; that he is being pursued by the Government troops, and that his capture is shortly expected.

Held for Robbery.

Windsor, March 27.—Norman Livingston, the wayward son of a Canadian clergyman, is held by the police on suspicion of being implicated in a highway robbery which occurred after midnight on London street west, when James McClory, a tunnel employe, was held up and robbed of $45 by two men.

Child Labor In The Shops

Committee Recommends Fourteen Years of Age As Limit.

Mr. Preston Gives Some Startling Statistics--Important Amendment to the Insurance Act--The Soo Loan--Danger to Private Legislation--Law Reform Motion--Mr. Crawford to Be Deputy Speaker.

Toronto, March 28.—Mr. Thos. Crawford (West Toronto) was chosen at yesterday's session of the Legislature as Speaker for the House for the balance of the session, and will henceforth don the robes, hat and gloves of that functionary. Hon. Mr. Whitney, who submitted the resolution for his appointment, assured the House that the news from the Speaker's bedside was now encouraging.

Hon. Nelson Monteith presented the report of the special committee appointed to consider the question of child labor, and it was ordered on his motion to provide for the printing and distribution of the report. It recommends the uniform age for shops, factories and the truancy act of 14 years. The report will probably be followed by legislation on the lines of the report.

Serious Statistics.

Speaking of the report Mr. T. H. Preston (Brant) directed attention to the serious statistics it recorded. They showed the total enrollment of children under 14 years of age in the Province to be 327,000, while the average attendance was only 232,000. Of the 250 municipalities whence the report of the truancy officers were obligatory under the statute only 75 had reported. He (Mr. Preston) hoped the report would have the early consideration of the House.

Mr. E. Dunlop (North Renfrew) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Ontario Insurance Act. In a brief address Mr. Dunlop set forth the advantages of his measure, which provided that on the expiration of a policy the company is required to keep it in force by borrowing against the cash surrender value of the policy. The bill found endorsement from Hon. Mr. Graham, the Opposition leader, and Col. Hugh Clark and on the suggestion of Hon. Mr. Foy got its reading, and was sent on to the legal committee.

Hon. Dr. Pyne presented a measure "to amend the Department of Education." This bill, the Minister of Education explained, was designed simply to give the department power to dispense the increased grant to the rural schools which is provided for this year in the estimates.

Hon. Col. Matheson made an important announcement relative to what is known as "the Soo loan". The Government guarantee for the $1,000,000 still outstanding falls due on Monday, April 1st. Owing to the condition of the money market the Canadian Improvement Company had been unable to carry out the sale or arrangement which had been planned to relieve the Government. Accordingly they had been granted a six months' extension, the parties who signed the bonds all consenting to renewal of the loan.

Rules Amended.

On motion of the Prime Minister the rules of the Legislative Assembly were amended as follows:—

1. By adding at the end of rule 53 the following words:—"If the application is for authority to issue debentures to a municipal corporation, the notice shall set out the particulars of the municipality's existing debenture debt and the reasons for requiring a further issue of debentures."

2. By inserting after the word "bill" in the second line of rule 61 the following words:—"or a bill providing for the consolidation of a floating debt or for the consolidation or renewal of debentures (other than local improvement debentures) of a municipal corporation."

3. By adding the following as rule 61a:—

61a. Every private bill, in so far as it provides for the consolidation of a floating debt or for the consolidation or renewal of debentures (other than local improvement debentures) of a municipal corporation, when the bill has been read a first time, shall without special reference stand referred to The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board for their report; and a copy of such bill and of the petition on which the same is founded shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the House to the board in order that the board may, after an enquiry into the allegations set out in the bill, and into any other matters which the board may deem necessary in connection therewith, report to the House whether or not it is reasonable that such bill or the part thereof relating to the matters aforesaid, should be passed, and what alterations, if any, should be made in the same, and the board shall make such enquiry accordingly and shall sign the same; and the said report, bill and petition shall be transmitted to the clerk and the report shall be read by the clerk at the table and shall be entered on the Journals of the House, and the bill together with the report shall stand referred to the Standing Committee on Private Bills.

Municipal Debts.

Hon. Mr. Whitney, speaking on his motion, said the Legislature daily was subject to the greatest possible danger in private legislation getting through which should not be allowed to pass. He therefore thought the Railway and Municipal Board should pronounce on its propriety and desirability.

Mr. Graham concurred. Some municipalities, he said, were up to the limit in indebtedness and carrying illegal overdrafts from year to year. The proposal would not divest the Legislature of the ultimate responsibility.

Law Reform Motion.

The first "want of confidence" motion is promised by the following notice:

Mr. Cameron (West Huron) gives notice that he will on Thursday next, the 4th day of April, move that this House regrets that His Majesty's advisers have not introduced in the House any measure respecting the subject of law reform.

The House adjourned for a week for Eastertide.

TROOPS WILL OCCUPY OUDJA.

Germany Approves Action—Sultan Expected to Yield.

Oran, Algeria, March 28.—French occupation at Oudja is probable today, as Gen. Liautey, the commander of the column of occupation, has had to consult with Gen. Serviere, commander of the Nineteenth Army Corps, who is in the south of Algeria, in order to draw up a plan of action. Telegraphic communication with the south is slow. The French mission, now at Oudja, under Capt. Mangin, has been recalled.

Proper and Inevitable.

Berlin, March 28.—The occupation of Oudja, Morocco, by French troops is regarded at the Foreign Office here as being a proper and inevitable step, if it be confined simply to punitive measures for the murder of a French citizen, and is without ulterior objects. It is assumed here officially that France will fully observe her arrangements entered in at Algeciras. The German attitude is one of alert observation. Any modification of that attitude will depend on the development of the French plans.

Sultan Expected to Yield.

Paris, March 28.—The Sultan of Morocco is expected to yield promptly to all the claims formulated by the commander of the French armored cruiser Jeanne D'Arc, now at Tangier, as soon as he is convinced that the French attitude is inflexible and that France has the unanimous support of the powers.

C. P. R. MAIL CONTRACT.

Criticized as a Waste of Public Money —Each Voyage Costs $17,305.

London, March 28.—The House of Commons, by a large majority yesterday, ratified the contract with the Canadian Pacific for the conveyance of mails between Liverpool and Hong Kong.

Harold Cox, Liberal, and other members, severely criticized the contract as a great waste of public money, each voyage costing $17,305. They declared that the result of the contract was simply to provide the American rivals of British merchants with easier access to the far eastern markets.

It also was suggested that there was some underlying, strategical reasons justifying the payment of a heavy subsidy.

Mr. Runciman, Parliamentary Secretary of the Treasury, and Premier Campbell-Bannerman, while admitting that it was not profitable, defended the contract as being a temporary arrangement pending the discussion of the matter by the colonial conference, after which a new contract would be made.

THROWN FIFTY FEET.

Youth Killed By Train At Vaudreuil Station.

Montreal, March 28.—A. Rousseau, nineteen years of age, whose home was at Isle Perrot, was killed yesterday at Vaudreuil Station by being run over by the International Limited. Rousseau tried to run across the tracks in front of the train, but miscalculated the speed. He was caught on the centre of the track and thrown 50 feet. He struck against a board fence, and when picked up and carried to the platform it was found that nearly every bone in his body had been fractured. He was also badly cut and mangled.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Good Friday to-morrow, and please remember that
It's quite correct to have a bun, but it's different with a bat.

• • •

The city school rooms, we hear, are being nicely decorated. The teachers must not make them look too nice, or the dear little boys and girls may refuse to take their holidays at mid-summer.

• • •

By all accounts, the choirs are going to give us something fine next Sunday.

• • •

We hate to give up our gas, even if it is Lent.

• • •

Water and oil won't mix, and water and gas don't seem to mix very well, either.

• • •

Everybody is hoping, now, for fine weather for the millinery openings next Sunday.

• • •

It may be none of our business, of course, but is there any truth in the story that Ald. Butler, chairman of Parks, being a lineal descendant of Brian Boru, may instruct the caretaker of Queen Victoria park to lay out a bed of Shamrocks on that beautiful spot this summer.

• • •

Many a man in this town would be mad, too, if he had a lawyers' bill to pay like Harry Thaw has.

• • •

To-morrow being Good Friday, it will give people a good chance to take their double windows off.

It would appear that at least one letter posted in this city made good time, anyhow. A paper published in Lethbridge says: "It usually takes the Edmonton papers about five days to reach here, and we know of one instance where a letter, mailed at Belleville on the same day one was mailed at Edmonton, reached here along with the Edmonton letter. It is time the postoffice department wakes up to the needs of the country and gets busy and improves the service, before a hundred or more new towns come into existence."

Easter eggs, Easter hats, Easter chickens, Easter presents, Easter picture post cards—in fact, everything for Easter, but a big fat Easter pocketbook.

Here is a little sermon worthy the attention of many young men in this city: If young men wish to succeed in business, they must not spend their time and money in simply having a good time. They must not be discontented with the little place in which they are in because they think they are too big for it. The way to get into a large place is to outgrow the one you are in, grow until it is so small that it will not hold you any longer. A man who sits shrunk up and worthless in a little place, because he thinks it is not worth while to grow enough to fill that, has little prospect of getting into larger ones. Fill the place that you are in. Fit yourself for higher usefulness. To do that you must do something besides play, though that may be innocent in itself.

• • •

A citizen requests The Intelligencer to ask if some kind of a celebration could not be gotten up for Victoria day, in order to try and keep the citizens at home. It would be a good thing to keep Belleville money in Belleville, no doubt, but would it not be a good plan, this year, to concentrate all our powers on making Dominion day a big success? Arrangements for that celebration are already well under way. Could we make a success of two celebrations? There is considerable truth in the saying, "An interest divided is an interest lessened." Let us hear what other people think of the matter.

The authorities of McGill University have set other institutions a good example in punishing with severity the students who had by their heartless pranks inflicted serious injury on other students. The line must be drawn somewhere between fun and mischief, and the offending students drew it at the wrong place.

• • •

The resistance which the Germans and French are encountering from African natives is causing some anxious questioning as to the power of kindness and just treatment on savage tribes. Nothing is more likely to awaken moral and conscientious ideas among predatory powers than a good, strong resistance on the part of the inferior races.

• • •

It seems to us a fair question to ask if there is any necessity of appointing total strangers to positions in the local post office? Would it not be better, from the standpoint of better service to the public, to appoint young men who know something about this city and district? To be sure, the supply of available young Grits may have run out, but it might be possible to find a few young Tories in this city who would take the job. The West Hastings Reform Association might think it over.

• • •

The Easter decorations in some of the store windows deserve more than a passing word of praise, and have added to the already high reputation of more than one "slick" local window dresser. Some of the windows are even more attractive now than they were at Christmas.

• • •

"Never touched us!" as Sir Wilfrid Laurier said, after the brick thrown by Mr. Fowler had knocked his friends nearly off their feet.

• • •

The usual road to wealth is a slow one, but some of the wise ones caught in the recent slump, realize that it is much safer than dealing in stocks.

• • •

Prof. Pickering, of Harvard, says the earth is at least a billion years old. No wonder there are so many ciphers in the world in that case.

• • •

Now that winter is over a Pennsylvania cobbler has discovered a process that enables him to produce from the ashes of half a ton of coal more heat than from 14 tons burned in the ordinary way. It might be advisable to hang on to that kopje of ashes you have in the back yard.

• • •

The Fort Dodge, Ia., council has passes an ordinance making it unlawful for a man between 25 and 40 years of age to be unmarried. One would have thought that Tom fool resolutions of that kind would be confined to a few Canadian towns or the Russian Douma.

• • •

There has been a severe hurricane in Italy. It must have given the organ grinders quite a bad turn.

• • •

A servant who remained with a family forty-five years has been awarded a medal. A long service one, of course.

• • •

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a bold fellow. He can now go to England to attend the Colonial conference, he and his full force of supporters in the Commons having VOTED DOWN a motion to enquire into the "wine, women and graft" charges. Partyism has reached its zenith, when men can be found to boldly vote to stifle such investigation. Has the country become politically demoralized? It seems so.

• • •

It will be gratifying to every member of the Conservative party, to know that not a single member of the Opposition in the House of Commons, voted against Bourassa's motion for a committee to enquire into the "Women, wine and graft" charges.

• • •

Conservatives have cause to be proud of their leader's course in demanding and voting for a motion to appoint a committee to ferret out the wrongs of public men who are charged with crimes which, if true, should drive them from public life.

It is now announced that York Loan liabilities will be four millions and the assets half that. This looks like 50 cents on the $, but the sufferers have not yet received it.

Mr. Frank Arnoldi, K. C., has sent in a bill for $7,500 for defending Mr. G. R. R. Cockburn, former president of the Ontario bank. It looks as though Mr. Arnoldi was not among the almost extinct class of lawyers who err on the side of not charging their clients enough.

Geo W. Fowler, M. P., who kicked up all the row in Parliament, is president of the company which publishes the Fredericton, N. B., Gleaner. That paper yesterday, according to a telegram from Fredericton, N. B., published in the Toronto World of to-day, openly charged that Hon. Mr. Emmerson, Minister of Railways in the Laurier Cabinet, was, not long ago, turned out of the St. Lawrence Hall, Montreal, with two women. Will Mr. Emmerson prosecute?

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Carnhan of Foster avenue, are spending Easter at Deseronto.

Mrs. James W. Warham, of this city, is spending a few days in Kingston with relatives.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

IN THE GOOD OLD-FASHIONED DAYS.

Powdered Wigs Formed an Important Adjunct to a Gentleman's Apparel.

It is safe to say that the majority of bald men of to-day would gladly revive the old, dignified custom if they could. But, they can do the next best thing to it; that is, hold on to what hair they have.

In cases where the hair root or hair bulb has not been completely destroyed by parasites that infest it, Newbro's Herpicide will do wonders in the way of encouraging a new growth of hair. Destroy the cause, you remove the effect. That is the successful mission of Herpicide.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample, to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

U. S. Secretary Root's Proposals.

First among Mr. Secretary Root's list of questions to be submitted from Washington to the Canadian Government is that of "tariff reciprocity." In few words it proposes an exchange of United States manufactures for Canadian raw products. It is an echo of the political campaigns in this country fifteen or twenty years ago, when trade with "the continent to which we belong" was the shibboleth of the men who now rule the Dominion's destinies, assisted by the late Erastus Wiman and Mr. Congressman Butterworth. On these lines Mr. Secretary Root on his recent Ottawa visit could not have received encouragement. The chance knocked loudly at the door in Washington after 1896, but the United States rulers of that period hearkened not, as was to be looked for. The Senate had refused to renew the treaty of commerce, which would have settled outstanding questions, including reciprocity. That body refused to ratify the Hay-Bond treaty, which would have once for all settled the fisheries question in which Gloucester was concerned. There seemed a disposition to ignore any proposal for better relations with the British countries this side of the ocean.

It was enough. Both Canada and Newfoundland set out upon an independent course, each in its own way. Our line was closer Imperial intercourse, that of the island colony special legislation to guard the fishery. Canada has seen no occasion to regret the turn of events. This country has continued to prosper, unhindered by any of the outstanding questions which Mr. Secretary Root now formulates as desirable to be settled and removed from dispute.

One thing is pretty certain, that no suggestion that the "bonding privilege" is of exclusive value to us, and might be abrogated on six months' notice, no issue of pelagic sealing should divert our rulers from the path that has been taken with regard to the tariff. Any hint that our tariff should be readjusted on reciprocal lines antagonistic to the Mother Country is to be put aside once for all. Our trade, our industries and our patriotism are not to be subordinated at one swoop to the need of our Republican neighbors for "raw products."

If they want our timber, pulpwood and mineral ores, the way to get them is in their own hands, to lower the bars and let the trade which they find indispensable take its natural course. And in regard to manufactured goods, they can obtain fair reciprocity by reducing their average scale of duties 25 per cent. That would bring things to a level. To propose a scaling down on both sides of five or ten per cent would be no reciprocity, but would leave the position relatively as it is.

The number and capacity of the lake gunboats we need not consider on our side of the lakes as a "vexed question." All we desire is fair fishing and no poaching. There is no probability of collision on any other point. Nor is there any complaint on our neighbor's part of Canadian aggressiveness. They want the old treaty allowing one gunboat revised to favor the lake shipbuilding interests; that is all. Little complaint is made that our cruisers exceed their duties as protectors of our lake fisheries; none whatever that our fishermen are trespassers.

These and other issues linked together make a chain in Mr. Root's "bill of particulars," but the principal link is of the tariff. It is that upon which interest will centre in any pour parlers that take place as an incident of the British Ambassador's visit to Ottawa.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Belleville Man And Zam-Buk.

SENSATIONAL PROOF OF ITS HEALING POWER.

Local opinion of the value of Zam-Buk, the herbal healer, is well illustrated by the testimony of Mr. W. B. Gibson, of this place. He says: "We have tried Zam-Buk on cuts and sores, and honestly believe there is nothing can equal it! It is really an excellent balm."

ECZEMA CURED. Mr. J. E. Cusick, of 349 Wilson St., Hamilton, says: "Every winter I used to have eczema on the back of my hands. Last winter I was especially bad—so bad that I had to be off work for three weeks. While suffering acutely I was advised to try Zam-Buk and did so. I could not have believed anything could have healed so quickly! It just seemed to dry up and clear away the sores, and in a wonderfully short time my hands were quite cured."

PILES CURED. Mr. Neil Devon, of Webbwood (Ont.), says: "For eight years I tried all kinds of things for piles, but got nothing to do me any good until I struck Zam-Buk! That quickly worked a complete cure."

Zam-Buk heals cuts and bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ulcers, spring pimples, scrofulous ailments, poisoned wounds, swollen glands, boils, spreading sores, bad leg, varicose, ulcers. It also cures piles and fistula. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1c stamp for dainty trial box.

Literary Notes

THE DESIGNER.

So many people have come to regard The Designer as the most reliable authority in matters of dress that it is with added interest we note the coming of the May number. That the cover design is by the famous French artist, M. Mucha, lends a particular value to the Standard Fashion costume in which he has the graceful figure clad.

Mary Kilsyth has for the time left the realm of interiors in the home decoration and taken up the subject "Attractive Gateways." She says:—"If the real importance of the entrance-way to a home were appreciated there would be more attention paid to investing it with some attractive quality."

Women who are casting about for a way to make their own living—women who have no business training—had better read about "The Mail Order Business" in the "Interest of Bread Winning" series for May. This same series has started a number of women we actually know of on their way to independence.

Grace Aline Luther tells you how to make for yourself "A Short Lace Coat of Fancy Braid." You may not be a lace maker, but you can become one, professional or amateur, by reading these articles of instruction in detail.

The diction and general articles in the May number are above par for entertainment and usefulness.

EASTER GOWNING.

No Hard and Fast Styles, Says Mrs. Osborn.

The incongruity of turning Easter into a dress carnival has become as widely recognized as the absurdity of receiving callers indiscriminately on the first day of January, writes Mrs. Osborn, the famous arbiter of styles, in The Delineator for April. Easter gowning as a general observance, an annual outburst hard on the heels of religion, met its death at the hands of this fine decade of ours, a decade in which every breath is individuality, independence.

Now, while of itself interesting, the change in Easter customs is only a phase of conditions far more significant. For these conditions prove conclusively that woman as a sex is increasingly courageous in matters of dress.

Daily I see evidence of this gratifying development. There is no longer any hard and fast law as to styles for women, and the intelligent are aware of it, indeed are responsible for the new condition.

Let me illustrate; Extravagant dress is possible only to the comparatively few. The average woman is obliged to limit her wardrobe. Now there was a time when the average woman's conformity to the familiar would have made her select her few garments so as to be in keeping with the so-called fashionable. Her clothes were often extreme, and soon tired of.

To-day it is very different. One frequently meets women who appear smartly dressed and who possess only one costume that may be strictly called "everyday." The smartness of these women is not induced by chance. Rather it is the result of intelligent planning. They realize that because they have only one dress, it must be strictly correct.

"WELFARE WORK."

The above is the title of a pamphlet issued by the Williams, Greene & Rome Co., of Berlin, Ont., which describes conditions in the model factory of the above firm, employing 430 persons. The principle of the firm, "Welfare Work," it would appear, is to "Do good and make money," and the way they bring that about is by arranging conditions so that Capital, Labor and Management may work together for each other's benefit. A perusal of the pamphlet shows that well-nigh ideal relations exist between employers and employed in the Williams, Greene & Rome Co.'s factory.

A Pioneer Gone.

THE LATE FRANCIS ALLORE, OF BOGART.

Stoco, March 19.—In the death of the late Thomas Francis Allore, at his home near Bogart on Saturday morning, March 16th, another of the links of the past has been severed. Mr. Allore was one of the pioneers of this district, having resided in the township of Hungerford for about a period of 70 years, for 40 of which he had been a resident of the farm occupied by him at the time of his death. The deceased was born in Montreal in 1819, so that at the time of his death he had reached the advanced age of 88 years. Although the deceased gentleman had been confined to his room for some time still it was scarcely expected that the end was so near at hand, as he was of a robust constitution, scarcely ever knowing what it was to be sick. On Friday, however, a decided change for the worse set in.

In his early years in Hungerford township, Mr. Allore had been engaged more or less in lumbering operations, principally carried on by the late Felix Gabourie. Mr. Allore had witnessed great changes in his adopted township. The Hungerford of to-day with its railroads, gravel roads telegraph lines, thriving villages, and prosperous farming community, contrasts strongly with that of the early settlement.

That the late Mr. Allore was popular among all classes of the community, was amply attested by the large cortege, consisting of seventy vehicles, which accompanied his remains to the Roman Catholic cemetery at Stoco, on Monday. He was a sincere Christian, whose marked characteristic was simplicity. He was a kind father, and an upright citizen.

The surviving members of the family consist of his wife, seven sons, Felix, of Foxboro, Louis, of Stoco; Frank, of Kingston; Alfred, of Hungerford, and Charles, Edward and Peter at home, and two daughters Mrs. John Labarge, Hungerford, and Mrs. Duffy, of Rochester, N. Y.

Women and Missions.

ANNUAL THANKSGIVING OFFERING MEETING OF THE BRIDGE ST. AUXILIARY OF THE W.M.S. —A BRIGHT FUNCTION.

The annual Easter thank offering meeting of the Bridge St. Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the parlors of that church on Tuesday of this week. Much interest was evidenced by a good attendance. The officers of the Auxiliary were seated on the platform, which was prettily decorated with plants and flowers.

The pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, presided with his usual grace, while an interesting programme was rendered.

Mrs. H. Pringle gave a very fine synopsis of the work of the Society during the twenty-five years since its organization.

Mrs. Elliott, in an address on "Why we should all be interested in Missions," told of the wonderful change which Christianity had wrought in the Islands of the Seas.

Solos were rendered by Miss L. Holton, Miss E. Price and Mrs. P. Allen.

A most interesting feature of the evening was a series of surprises arranged by the ingenious and active president, Mrs. C. D. Wartman. The first was in honoring Mrs. Roblin, one of the charter members, by presenting her with a Life Certificate of the Society, in recognition of her loving, faithful services.

Mrs. Deroche, who has recently come to reside in the city, became a life member also, but most unique was the sight, when little Miss Helen Reid, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Reid, ascended the platform to receive her certificate of Life Membership from the hands of the president. This is thought to be unparalleled in the history of the Society.

A brief report was given by the secretary, Miss F. Adams, of the year's work, after which Miss Bogart, treasurer, stated that, in all, over $500 had been raised this year by the Auxiliary. We thank God and take courage.—Com.

A very pretty gem of a ballad entitled, "When the Robins Nest Again," will be rendered by Belleville's popular tenor singer, Mr. Harry Brown, at the Minstrels, Wednesday evening, April 3rd. This beautiful, tuneful ballad will be one of the hits of the show. Don't forget the date.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"MY WIFE'S FAMILY" TO-NIGHT.

Comedy is the essence of all stage success, and the great demand of the theatre-going public is to be amused. This demand on the part of the local theatregoers can be satisfied fully with "My Wife's Family" which comes to the Carman tonight. This is one of the newest and most original of the production of the musical farce comedy variety, and into it Stephens and Linton, the authors, have injected some of the essence of ginger and originality which is necessary to make this art of piece a success. As the title suggests, "My Wife's Family" is the story of a husband with a charming wife, but whose charms are dammed by the fact that she has too many relatives who always visit her. "My Wife's Family" is, in short, one of the most varied and pleasing affairs ever conceived for amusement.

Thos. Topping's Body Has Been Recovered.

The body of Thomas Topping, of Deseronto, the second engineer of the ill-fated barge Resolute, which went down outside of the western gap, Toronto, on November 22nd, 1906, was picked up in Toronto Bay Sunday afternoon by Capt. Kingston, of the tug Roy Mack. The Roy Mack was breaking ice in the bay when the captain noticed the corpse imbedded in the ice. The corpse was taken to the morgue.

Although the features were scarcely discernible, Michael Haney, the mate of the Resolute, and two brothers of the deceased, residing in Toronto, identified the body.

Mr. Topping was a native of Westport, says the Brockville Times, and the body passed through here yesterday afternoon to that place for burial. It was accompanied by the widow and her child of Deseronto; Messrs. James and Michael Topping, Toronto; Myles Welsh, Mount Pleasant, Mich.; Miss Topping and Messrs. George and John Topping, Deseronto.

Plaster of Paris Bananas.

Bunches of bananas that are absolutely unfit for food hang out in front of the wholesale produce commission houses. Some of them have remained there until they have grown rusty with age.

"Couldn't get a finer looking bunch than that," said one of the dealers the other day, "even if it is plaster of paris. We used to put out the real article for a sign, but the peddlers who came down here had a way of pulling one or two out of the bunch that happened to be hanging there on the hook. The small boys, too, had a way of making a grab for a banana or two. By the time the bunch was on duty under the awning for an hour it was no longer presentable to the aesthetic sense. So we began to cultivate the make believe article, which is not quite so palatable, but just as good for advertising. And even at that some youngster in his haste will grab plaster of paris fruit and get away with it before he realizes that he has made off with something bad for his digestion."

A Meal of Locusts.

In the West Indies the negroes eat freely of the big grub found in palm trees. The fat, white morsel, which they call "grugru," is not cooked or salted. The aborigines of Australia live almost entirely on a butterfly known as the bugong. The flies appear in batches on the rocks, and the natives smother them with smoke from fires built below. It is said that a Hottentot, with an appetite made sharp by the simple life, can devour 300 fat locusts at a sitting and feel better satisfied than if he had paid $8 for a ten course dinner. The Arabs dry the locusts and pulverize them into flour for breadmaking purposes. The Moors make a stew of them, and after boiling in water for a few minutes they are eaten with salt, pepper and vinegar. The locusts found in Central Africa are enormous, and the native negroes cut them in two and fry them in fat and find them not only appetizing, but nourishing. A flight of these big locusts is a matter of tribal thanksgiving.

Snakes With Two Heads.

I have lately been assured by more than one of my friends that they have seen in northern India snakes with two heads—i. e., without a tail, but with a second and perfectly formed head in the place where the tail ought to be. They assure me that there are specimens in northern India museums and that these freaks of nature are frequently found by the natives. The rider is added that the natives declare that each head lives and performs active service for six months in the year in turn. The snakes are said to grow to about three feet in length. I myself have killed a small snake with two heads, but these were both at the same end of the reptile, a very different matter, which is, I believe, a well known freak and in the same category with two headed calves.—Pioneer.

Man and His Dress.

The well dressed man wears clothes that no one ever notices; at business, except in the very warmest weather, usually dark. No one ever notices clean linen, while linen soiled ever so slightly is very conspicuous. No one ever notices a hat unless it is of ultra shape, dirty or shabby. No one ever notices shoes unless they are loud or need blacking or are run down at the heels or shabby. No one ever notices clean finger nails, while those needing attention are always conspicuous. The man should not be lost sight of by the conspicuousness of his clothes, either from being overdressed or shabbily dressed.

The One and the Naught.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once sent two poetical letters to the "postoffice" of an Episcopal fair at Pittsfield, Mass. In one of them the first stanza was:

Fair lady, whosoever thou art,
Turn this poor leaf with tenderest care
And hush, oh, hush, thy beating heart.
The one thou lovest will be there.

On turning the "poor leaf" there was found a dollar bill, with some verses beginning:

Fair lady, lift thine eyes and tell
If this is not a truthful letter.
This is the one (1) thou loveth well,
And naught (0) can make thee love it better (10).

Occultism.

It is noteworthy that supernaturalism prevailed just as strongly at the other side of the globe among the aborigines of the new world. The coming of the Spaniards had been prophesied to the Mexicans by their caciques, and the prophecies were sung amid loud lamentations at their festivals.—London Onlooker.

The Hot Wind From the Desert.

"Khamsin" is the hot wind from the desert which blows out of the Sahara upon Egypt. The word means fifty, from the idea that it lasts for fifty days. The "khamsin" is terribly hot and dry, and sometimes brings pestilence with it.

Her "No."

Tom—Bess said "No" to me last night, but I don't think she really could tell why she did it. Nell—Oh, yes, she could. She told me. Tom—Did she? Nell—Yes: she said she didn't think you'd take "No" for an answer.

About the Only Place.

A company of settlers in naming their new town called it Dictionary, because, as they said, "that's the only place where peace, prosperity and happiness are always found."

The notion of God which makes him a manufacturer of footstools, our enemies being the raw material, is still popular in some quarters.—Puck.

TIMELY TOPICS.

TEMPORA MUTANTUR.

(Harper's.)

A book of verses underneath the tree
Served Omar V. Khayyam right handy.
Your modern Omar, on the other hand,
Is scarce content with anything so wee.

He wants a hammock swung from limb to limb,—
And at his side, when Father Sol grows dim,
To keep his eyes unstrained, he culleth for
A pocket Edison Electric Glim.

And on the bough, beneath which he doth plan
To lie and take whatever ease he can,
To keep him cool and shoo the flies away,
He has a brazen-winged dynamic fan,

When these are set, his idle fancy roams,
Not thro' one volume of some maiden's poems,
But all The World's Best Letters he demands
Put forth in forty-'leven quarto tomes.

As for the Jug, and single loaf of bread,
'For which our simple Omar one-time fed,
O'er that I draw the veil. Omar to-day
Appears to have a better appetite—and head.

And finally, as for that item "Thou"
That Omar wished for, sitting 'neath the bough,
Let it remain. In these days 'tis the same,
For "thou" 's a synonym for "thousands" now.

THE CARE OF RUGS.

How to Sweep Large Ones and to Dust Small Ones.

Some housekeepers have concluded that they prefer two or three small rugs in a room to one large one which is too heavy for a woman to handle and beat. A great single rug covering the center of the room looks well, even if of no better quality than a good Smyrna. But smaller rugs must be of better quality to prove satisfactory. Provided there is a large rug down and no man willing or to be hired to beat it, by care it can be kept in fair condition for several weeks. Of course it must be swept where it is. Having dusted the movable ornaments and chairs and carried them to another room and dusted and covered other things that are conveniently moved, sweep the rug in the direction of the warp in short strokes and take up the dirt along the edges on the floor. Now sweep the rug again in the opposite direction after scattering over it bits of dampened newspaper pressed as dry as possible. Turn the edges up and brush out underneath for a few inches. Now sweep the bare floor with a dust brush, and after the dust has settled wipe the floor with a slightly damp cheesecloth and the rug with another cheesecloth dampened in water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. In this way the rug will look bright and be quite free from dust.

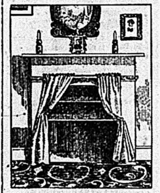
Tea leaves when used to take up dust are apt to stain delicate colors. The above method of cleaning a rug may seem troublesome to one who would prefer to attack it with a broom and give it a vigorous digging, but it would be no cleaner by her treatment, and the walls and furniture would be loaded with dust, to say nothing of discomfort to the sweeper in breathing the dust.

If small rugs are used, do not allow them to be taken out and shaken by one end or, in fact, shaken at all, for this is the way to break them into rags, along the edges at least. Hang over a line and beat with a rattan, or, better yet, have the rugs laid on the grass and beaten on the wrong side first and then turned.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A FIREPLACE CLOSET.

It Makes a Convenient Place to Keep Hats and Shoes.

A fireplace that is not in use and that does not present as nice an appearance as the room surroundings demand may easily be improved by transforming it into a closet, as shown in the accompanying illustration. Remove all the interior fixtures and put in their place a set of small shelves. Then arrange a silk or tapestry curtain in front. Suspended from a brass rod it looks artistic and acts as a screen. The interior makes a very convenient shoe and hat closet.



FIREPLACE CLOSET.

One Sided Girl.

"She has pretty hair," the athletic girl admitted, "but it is never dressed evenly. The right side always looks much better than the left."

"That is because she never moves her bureau," said the wise girl. "Her room is so small that she can't haul things around, so month in and month out her looking glass stands in the same corner by the window, and month in and month out she dresses with her right side to the light and the left in shadow.

"Consequently one half of her face and hair is well groomed, while the other half gets only a lick and a promise. Any girl who would avoid looking one sided must dress one week with her right side to the window, the next week with her left side to the light."

Get Lightweight Hats.

Never buy a heavy hat if it is possible to get a light one. Insist that hats if made for you are made with the minimum of weight. Heavy hats cause headaches, gray and falling hair by impeding the circulation. A heavy hat worn only two or three hours a day is responsible for the feeling of heaviness that attacks so many and that disappears as soon as the cause is removed or within half an hour afterward. It is well to have hats differing in their point of pressure on the head so that in changing from one chapeau to another the head may be rested, in sections at least.

Home Sewing.

The tissue paper patterns and sewing machines have placed the possibilities of dainty underwear within the reach of every woman. Of course handwork is to be preferred, but very beautiful work may be accomplished by the machine, especially if the saving of time is an object or many pieces are to be made. Hemstitching may be done on some machines by placing several layers of paper between the pieces to be stitched, and then, after stitching, pulling the paper away.

HINDOO HEAVENS.

Four Degrees of Bliss to Which the Departed Spirits Pass.

The Hindoos believe in four special abodes of the righteous after death. The first is called Sara-loga, "God's world;" the second, Sameeba, "Near to God;" the third, Sarobam, "God's image," and the fourth, Sayutcheyam, which signifies "to be absorbed in him."

To Sara-loga, the first degree of bliss, go the souls of all of those who have ever made a pilgrimage to a holy place or who have paid for the temple lights for one month. In Sara-loga there is great happiness and no work or sickness. The inmate is allowed to read the five sacred books, drink ambrosia and hear the houris sing.

To Sameeba go the spirits of all Keerikarar, or workers in the Brahman cause; also those who forego the comforts of life, such as sleeping in a recumbent position, eating sufficiently, etc. Their happiness consists chiefly of continually praising God.

To Sarobam, the third heaven, go the souls of such as never spoil God's model by shaving or paring the nails. These are the Brahman Yogis. They wander about the earth, always going from left to right. They eat nothing but nauseous food and live in a constant state of abstraction on divine subjects.

The fourth heaven, Sayutcheyam, is the coming abode of the "nyane," or philosophers. These nyane pay no attention to heat or cold, never bathe and often go for weeks without food. If they are sick, no one knows it but themselves. They are the stoics of the world of today and believe that in Sayutcheyam they will eventually be absorbed in the deity.

TRAINING ANIMALS.

Obeying the Word Regardless of the Tone and Manner.

It is true that animals can be taught to obey a tone alone—that is, a mere sound having no place among the lists of words. So may a human being. Therefore that proves nothing. It is likewise true that you may say a thing in a tone that contradicts the word, and the animal may or may not respond to the tone only, but the same effort will produce the same effect on any sensitive child, woman or man. Again, horses and dogs are the most sensitive of all brutes, the most easily offended, encouraged, discouraged. Therefore, need one be surprised if he finds it takes a long lesson to teach a horse or dog to obey the word regardless of the tone and manner? That either can be so taught, however, thousands of people know from their own experience.

I can say to my little Gipsy, "Come here and let me whip you," in the quietest, softest, most smiling style, and she comes cringing, trembling and ashamed, showing unmistakably that she considers the word "whip" humiliating and hateful, yet hopes I do not intend to inflict any punishment. Then I can frown my worst and shout out as savagely as I please, "No; you're a good dog!" and she frisks about joyfully, although she dislikes harsh tones even in sport.—Forest and Stream.

Cleaning Brass.

Here is the government recipe for cleaning brass. It is used in all the United States arsenals and is said to be the best in the world. This is the recipe: One part of common nitric acid to half a part of sulphuric acid. Keep the mixture in a stone jar, having ready a pailful of fresh water and a boxful of sawdust. Articles to be cleaned must first be dipped in the acid mixture, then into the water and dried with sawdust. This process of cleaning will change the brass immediately to a brilliant color. If the metal is greasy—as candlesticks would be—dip first in a strong solution of potash and soda, in warm weather. This cuts the grease and permits the acid to work. This method of cleaning brass is entirely harmless and is very satisfactory.

Nicknames.

"It's funny how a nickname, given to one during one's boyhood, will stick to one throughout a lifetime," said a man recently. "The variety of nicknames is also amusing. If I were asked to explain the conditions, I should say that it was because the 'rest of the kids' didn't like the real names and just substituted others to suit themselves. For instance, a boy comes to school with a lengthy name that a fond mother has given him with no doubt in the world that he will bear it all his life. Usually her fond hopes are shattered and the little 'dear' will come home from school the proud possessor of such a 'hang-on' as Tip, Rip, Bull or Buck. And it sticks too."

A Powerful Salve.

A man in Nebraska invented a new powerful double acting salve which shows powers never before exhibited by salves of any kind. The inventor accidentally cut off the tail of a tame wolf, and, immediately applying some of the salve to the stump, a new tail grew out. Then, picking up the old tail, he applied some of the salve to the raw end of that, and a wolf grew out, but he was a wild wolf and had to be shot.

The Emerald Isle.

Ireland is called the Emerald Isle because of the richness of its verdure, the term being first used by Dr. William Drennan, the author of "Glendalloch" and other poems, published in the latter part of the eighteenth century.

"Treatyse of Fysshynge With an Angle" was the first book on angling printed in English. It appeared in 1440.

Learn Dressmaking.

IN TWO WEEKS.

We teach you everything from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate toilette that can be found in the fashion books. We show you how to put together not only the lining but all the outer goods in coats, skirts waists, wrappers, sleeves, children's dresses, collars, etc. Why spend months at a shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and then after you have served your time there, what do you know about cutting? Absolutely nothing! For you will know no more how to cut out a dress at the end of a year than you did the first day you went there; so why spend your time there; you can come and try for a week and see for yourself what it's like, and as there is nothing to be paid in advance, you certainly would not lose anything by trying.

We have taught over 2,000 in this way within the past six years, and all recommend it very highly; we teach you how to use a chart the first day you are with us; also guarantee that the waists made by this chart will not draw nor pull out of place when raising arm.

Charge for full course is only $10, to be paid when course is completed, if satisfied, including one of the most perfect fitting systems in use, which we give free.

We will teach at Belleville from April 8th to April 20th. Hours for day class from 8.30 to 5. All wishing to learn or for full particulars, be sure to see us at the KYLE HOUSE, on Saturday, April 6th, between 10 and 5 o'clock. An evening class will also be taught; in this class we teach shirt waists, sleeves and dressing sacques only. Terms $4 and hours from 7 to 9. Remember there is no pay in advance, you can all come and try.

A WISE HOUSEKEEPER.

She Mixes Brains With Humanity In Dealing With Her Servant.

Brains and humanity—those are two qualities every man and woman needs to possess before it is given to either of them to have supervision over others.

The wise housekeeper starts out with a servant in perfect understanding.

She lets the girl know what is expected of her, and she keeps faith with that girl in any promises she may make.

She does not begin by saying, "It's just nothing at all to do the work here," and then bring four women in to luncheon on ironing day.

She realizes that the kitchen is the most important room in her house and that when she has everything there running smoothly the rest of housekeeping is a sweet and simple dream.

She realizes that the person who feeds a family acceptably and keeps it comfortable 365 days in the year is entitled to some consideration.

Therefore she sees that there is a comfortable room, with plenty of air, a good bed, a cheery, pleasant, homelike place, ready for the girl when her work is done.

She arranges her work systematically.

It is a woman like this that keeps the same help in her home for years and makes them say of her, "She's a real lady, she is."

The girls say that lack of consideration on the part of the women who employ them is the reason for the revolt against unspecialized housework.

They say that the general housework girl is supposed to combine the duties of cook, waitress, chambermaid, parlor maid, laundress, lady's maid, nursemaid, bellboy and errand girl.

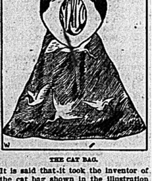
She is never supposed to be too tired to respond to the buzz of a bell, and she is expected to put up with whatever accommodations are left after the rest of the family is comfortably provided for.

And I believe there is a fairly good foundation for her complaints. A whole lot of incompetent, selfish, inconsiderate women are so placed in the scale of fortune that they can keep house and "have a girl." Women of this type have the idea that the placing of a girl in the kitchen and paying her so much a week end their responsibility as far as housekeeping goes.—Exchange.

LAUNDRY BAG.

Novel and Attractive Receptacle For Soiled Linen.

Even so commonplace and humble a member of the family of household conveniences as the laundry bag may be so wrought as to combine attractiveness with utility, and there is no reason why the receptacle for soiled linen should present an unlovely appearance every time it is disclosed to view.



THE CAT BAG.

It is said that it took the inventor of the cat bag shown in the illustration a whole year to perfect her idea. The bag is one result, and the same feline is noted in furry round pincushions and other useful and ornamental articles. The cat in this case is of flat but very heavy pasteboard or cut from thin wood and covered with white canton flannel, the black portion being of black velvet pasted on top. The eyes and whiskers are drawn or painted in, and the nose is a piece of red flannel cut the proper shape. The bag is reached through the mouth, the interior being lined (preferably with red silk), while the bag itself is of fancy Japanese silk.—Exchange.

Rugs From Scraps.

Probably everybody knows that very pretty rugs can be made from bits of colored silks and ribbon, but in case some one has a lot of pieces and does not know what to do with them we make this suggestion: Select only bits of harmonizing shades—pink and brown, red and dull green and black, yellow and dark green, purple, black and cream color—and cut the pieces into strips of even width, sewing the ends together firmly. Roll into balls and send them to a weaver of carpets, with instructions not to use any discordant color for binding them together. You will be surprised at the soft, artistic effect of old scraps. A really charming portiere or couch cover will be the reward of a little patience and very little expenditure.

Loose Chairs.

Loose rounds on chairs are annoying besides giving the pieces of furniture the appearance of cheapness and general disability. They may be easily made tight by filling the grooves into which they are fitted with a good glue. As soon as this dries and the rounds are made secure the glue that has run down on the outside may be chipped off with a knife. A loose arm to a rocker or the runners on a rocker may be tightened in the same way.

The Fourth Lady In Waiting.

By EDITH J. HULBERT.

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.

"A herald from his imperial majesty the czar of Russia!"

There was a flare of trumpets, an eager swaying of the lines of courtiers, a soft ripple of laughter and then silence.

Before me stretched an interminable path of red velvet, flanked on either side by rows of smirking, bowing creatures clad in rainbow hued satins, velvets and glittering with jewels. At the farther end, on a throne of ivory and gold, sat a regal, white robed woman, crowned and girdled with diamonds. Behind her stood two dusky giants majestically waving fans of peacock feathers. At her feet knelt two tiny pages attired in blue and silver.

She was the queen of Bodalva and one of the most beautiful women in the world. I was a nobody. It was my province to deliver into her royal hand the scroll intrusted to my keeping by my gracious master. For weeks I had been looking forward to this audience with feverish eagerness. But now, at the crucial moment, when grace of bearing and fluency of speech would perhaps serve to win me a smile from those perfect lips, I stood gaping like a clown in the midst of her lackeys.

My feet refused to move, my knees trembled, the scroll in my hand shook, my tongue clove to the roof of my mouth. There was a muffled giggle on my right. Then a clear, exquisitely modulated voice smote the air like the notes of a golden harp.

"Methinks," said the queen, flashing laughter from her violet eyes, "that the messenger of our fair cousin, the czar, is unduly overawed by our presence. Be not afraid to approach, Sir Herald. We are quite harmless."

Again came that subdued giggle, all the more maddening that it had about it a baffling familiarity, but at a frown from the queen it was quickly suppressed.

Summoning all my will power, I plunged desperately forward and in a moment was kneeling at the foot of the throne between the two pages.

"The humble as well as the great, your majesty," I faltered, "are overcome by the spell of beauty."

She smiled and, indicating by a gesture that I was to rise, took the scroll and, unrolling it, hastily scanned its contents.

A change, swift and terrible, came over her countenance. Her eyes flashed. Her cheeks paled. Her lips straightened to a scarlet line. Tearing the parchment thrice across, she cast it at my feet and hissed in a low tone of concentrated fury: "That, varlet, is my answer to your master! See that you deliver it to him with all possible haste! Out of my sight! Begone!"

Then again her wonderful voice rang out in all its clearness.

"Men of Bodalva," she said, "never while Sylvia lives shall you bend your neck beneath the yoke of the Russian tyrant!"

"Long live Queen Sylvia!" shouted the courtiers. And from somewhere in the distance came the sounds of tumultuous applause—clapping, stamping and cries of "Brava! Brava!"

Mechanically I backed down the red velvet path, unheeding the hisses and black looks which beset me on either side, and presently found myself in a small anteroom, the walls of which were hung with doublets, hose, cloaks, plumed hats and various articles of armor. Almost immediately I was confronted by a tall, thin, flashily dressed man, who eyed me with an expression of extreme disfavor.

"See here," he said. "We don't want supers in this company to forget their cues and occupy the center of the stage for ten minutes, and we don't want any lines thrown in either. The man who wrote that play can attend to that."

"But," I stammered, "the queen—Miss Elsworth—said something to me that wasn't in"—

"What's that to you?" he interrupted sarcastically. "You're not a star just yet, are you? Who are you, anyway? One of them young chaps from the college, ain't you?"

I nodded.

"First time on?"

Again I nodded. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, I won't report you if you look sharp for the rest of the performance. Luckily for you the boss is away tonight. What are you doing it for, anyway? Stage struck or Elsworth struck?"

I did not deign to answer, and, with a derisive guffaw, he went out, slamming the door behind him.

I had been alone scarcely a minute when that irritating giggle again fell upon my ears.

"Who's there?" I cried, flinging open the door and peering into the dimly lighted corridor.

"Sh! Go back!" whispered a feminine voice. And as I obeyed its command the doorway framed a petite golden haired damsel, resplendent in pink satin and a court train.

I seized her hands and drew her to the center of the room under the electric light.

"Elfrida!" I gasped. "What are you doing here?"

She dropped me a stately courtesy.

"The Countess Olga, fourth lady in waiting to her majesty Queen Sylvia, at your service," she said, with dignity. Then she giggled and blushed.

"It was you, then, who kept laughing all the time I was on the stage," I said reproachfully.

Elfrida looked penitent.

"It was mean of me," she admitted. "But you did look so funny!" She giggled again at the recollection.

I made no reply in words, but I let her see that I forgave her.

"Where did you come from? How did you get here? Why haven't you written to me in all these weeks?" I asked as soon as I felt sure she thoroughly understood my mental attitude regarding her.

"Mme. Brenner's, New Haven. Skipped with the show Saturday night. Couldn't write. Watched every minute," she answered with unwomanly lucidity and brevity.

Elfrida always was different from other girls. This was why I made such a fool of myself over her last summer after my junior year that the governor was afraid I never would stand for the senior grind at Harvard. If he had remembered that I was on the crew, he wouldn't have been so scared. "I could not love thee, dear, so much loved I not honor more," I had quoted solemnly to Elfrida the night we said goodby.

That was why she was packed off to that beast of a Brenner when she should have been queening it in Albany society. She was so original that when there was no immediate danger of her eloping with me her father was afraid that she might take up slumming or typing or insist on going to the Philippines to nurse the soldiers. Brenner had doubtless been apprised of these contingencies, but apparently the possibility of Elfrida succumbing to the ordinary schoolgirl variety of stage fever had occurred to no one.

Consequently with her power of resource it was mere child's play for her to "break jail," as she expressed it, during the relaxed vigilance of the Saturday evening recreation hour and subsequently to coax her way to the manager's presence. As far as he was concerned, to see was to engage. Did I mention that Elfrida was a ripping, tearing beauty? Well, such is the case, and she confided to me that she was paying for her own costumes.

"You must go back at once," I said sternly as soon as we had compared notes on the numerous exciting events which had occurred since our parting.

"And give up earning my own living," demanded Elfrida indignantly, "just when I have proved how easily I can do it?"

"You've only been at it two days," I remarked, "and as it is the 4th of the month I suppose you still have most of your allowance."

Instantly I saw my mistake. Elfrida turned her back on me, and for fully two minutes every one of my usual methods of effecting a reconciliation failed utterly. At length a brilliant idea came to me.

"If you will leave the company tonight, I will," I said in the tone of one making the sacrifice of a lifetime.

Elfrida displayed signs of interest. She didn't of course know that my engagement, like that of a dozen other fellows who were members of the queen's guard, was only for the current week.

"You are willing, then, to forego the pursuit of the queen?" inquired Elfrida, quoting from the play with much intensity. I detected, however, an undercurrent of real anxiety in her voice and hastened to reassure her.

"Anything that I gave up for your sake would be the next moment forgotten," I replied dramatically.

She allowed me to kiss her.

"I will do it," she said after a moment's deliberation. "But we will both have to forfeit our salaries."

I glanced at the clock. It was quarter after 9, and I knew by the noise outside that the first act was just over. Seizing the fourth lady in waiting unceremoniously by the arm, I hurried her down the corridor to the ladies' dressing room.

"Borrow a long dark coat if you haven't got one," I whispered, "and pin that flummery under it. I will have a cab here in five minutes, and you can get the 9:40 for New Haven."

She obeyed my directions, and twenty minutes later I stood alone on the station platform disconsolately watching the rapidly disappearing train that was bearing her Brennerwards.

I got back in time for the third act all right, but I didn't succeed in meeting Miss Elsworth after the performance, nor any other time, for that matter, for I kept my promise and quit that night.

In this case, however, virtue met with a substantial reward, for when the episode came to the ears of my father and of Elfrida's they were so impressed by my masterly handling of the situation that they permitted our engagement to be announced.

French School Meals.

In some of the rural districts of France every boy or girl takes to school in the morning a handful of vegetables and puts them in a large pan of water. They are then washed by one of the other pupils, who take turns at performing this duty. Later the vegetables are placed in a kettle with water and a piece of pork and are cooked while the lessons are going on. At 11:30 each scholar has a bowl of hot soup. To cover the cost of fuel and meat the richer pupils pay a small sum each month.

Both Beating It.

"Mr. Gags! Mr. Gags!" exclaimed the musical director, stopping the orchestra in the middle of the low comedian's song. "You're miles ahead of the time." "Eh, what?" jerked out the merchant of comedy. "Well, you're beating it too!"—Ally Sloper.

Cupid's Bargain

By LESLIE HOLMES.

Copyright, 1907, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"But, my dear"— interposed Aunt Ella, reaching for her handkerchief.

Beth Graham resumed her interrupted monologue.

"I never saw an advertisement which balanced so tidily with one's qualifications—'Wanted, services of a capable young woman for few hours daily. Must be well educated, have pleasant manners, a gift for conversation and make a good appearance. No experience necessary, but large acquaintance desirable. Apply to the Interborough Realty Co., —— Street.' Now, I have the education. Behold my diploma from Mme. Collingwood's select school. Thanks to my bringing-up by the best aunt in the world, I have the reputation of being well mannered. I am considered chatty without being a bore. My new tailored suit gives me the good appearance demanded. Certainly I have no experience, but a lot of acquaintances."

Mrs. Graham mopped her eyes diligently.

"I cannot bear to think of you, a Graham of Graham Center, going into business. Now, there are my cameos—cameos are in style again. Beth"—

The girl laid a slender white hand over her aunt's trembling lips and spoke with sternness not entirely affected.

"Aunty, dear, never again speak in that way of our precious family heirlooms. So long as they are in the safe deposit vault I shall feel that the Graham honor is saved. I intend to answer that advertisement."

An hour later the secretary of the Interborough Realty company looked with relief into the fresh, high bred face of the last of the Graham Center Grahams, who, thanks to the collapse of the —— bank, was looking for a position in which experience was not demanded. The secretary of the company, like all men of his class, questioned the girl so cleverly that she had told the story of her inexperience and needs long before he unfolded the requirements of the position. Then he leaned back in his chair and remarked:

"I think you'll do, Miss Graham. We have plotted ninety acres on the Chester turnpike, and we're going to boom the site as the Hollingworth Terrace. We've got the Transit Construction company interested in the deal, and they will build houses on the installment plan. We have some wide awake chaps on the ground, but we are planning a series of excursions, and we think a bright woman with the gift of saying the right thing at the right minute could put through many a sale, particularly with men. Now, such work is generally done on a commission basis, but you're rather up against it, and we'll pay you fifteen a week and expenses and give you a month to make good."

He touched an electric button and said to the answering boy:

"Send in Mr. Langhorne. He's the working head of the Transit Construction company and a promising young man. You'll probably have considerable dealing with him. Langhorne, this is Miss Graham. She's going to help us out at Hollingworth Terrace."

And thus, with a sweeping gesture, did the secretary of the Interborough Realty company settle Beth Graham's entrance into the business world.

Fifteen dollars a week! Why, they would have to let even Emma, the cook, go. She would probably wear out many shoes, too, tramping over Hollingworth Terrace. And then a mellow masculine voice broke in upon her reflections, and she found a very good looking young man, with Irish blue eyes that smiled right into hers, standing at attention, some pamphlets in his hand.

"Perhaps you would like to look over some of our literature before you join us on the first excursion tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" echoed Beth. It seemed so dreadfully near, this earning of daily bread for herself and Aunt Ellen.

But she smiled and accepted the books. Half an hour later it seemed to her as if Hollingworth Terrace must be a sort of paradise for small salaried people and that she, in selling homes to them, would be a veritable angel of mercy.

The next day she felt differently. The first excursion was not exactly a success. The air was heavy with mist, and Hollingworth Terrace seemed a wilderness of surveyors, steam rollers, sewer pipes and tired teams, dragging great loads of building materials through unfinished streets.

In one of the half finished houses a colored man served hot coffee and sandwiches to the few excursionists who had braved the elements, but no deals were consummated. After the bus had taken the few visitors back to the station Beth, seated on a plasterer's horses, studied critically the tiny reception hall, while Langhorne, perched on a window seat, studied the girl and wondered why some women looked smart and trig even in a cravenette coat and a soft felt hat.

"These early spring days are so uncertain," she was saying. "I wish there was a fireplace in that corner. You could just as well build one, for the chimney runs up there from the parlor. Then we'd have a snapping, sparkling fire that would make the whole house seem charming. I believe we'd make a sale, rain or shine."

"But the fireplaces would add to the cost of the houses," said Langhorne doubtfully.

"And make prospective customers overlook some other defects in your houses. I noticed you have no back stairs. Now, every suburban housewife likes separate stairs for her one servant. She is much more punctilious in such matters than the city housekeeper."

"Eh—what?" exclaimed Langhorne curiously.

"Yes, and you should have utilized that wasted space for a closet for rubber coats, umbrellas, overshoes, etc. A woman will fall for a couple of convenient closets when stained glass windows and artistic tiling are lost upon her."

Langhorne was all attention now.

"I didn't suppose that a city girl would notice things so closely."

"I began life in a village," said Beth quietly. "Besides, if I am to help you sell these places I must believe in them, and I cannot believe in them unless they are right."

Before the next excursion day rolled around Beth had examined every house under way, and her suggestions for small alterations that would appeal to the feminine mind were received with respect. Furthermore, all plans for new houses were brought to her before the work was commenced.

Hollingworth Terrace became the center around which everything moved, and Aunt Ellen studied plans and offered suggestions to young Langhorne, who had taken to bringing drawings to the cozy Graham flat. So far simple cottages costing $5,000 or less had been erected. Now they were planning more ambitious residences and plotting the most valuable site of their holdings, a broad knoll that overlooked the river and surrounding country.

Here in the heart of a cluster of pines was to be a house of old English design, with high gables, sloping roof and quaint interior finish. Beth watched those plans grow with jealous care. She selected the timbers for finishing the ceiling of the reception hall, living room and dining room. The fireplaces she and Langhorne designed from pictures of English country houses.

The excursions were heavily patronized now. Sales were made while Beth's back was turned. Hollingworth Terrace was booming beyond the fondest hopes of its founders. Beth often came in from her calls on prospective customers to ask anxiously, "Has The Lodge been taken?"

They had named the house of their own planning The Lodge, nothing more, and somehow she felt that she should hate the man who bought it.

One night when Langhorne dropped in to call he did not look her in the eye. He talked about any and every subject but Hollingworth Terrace, and Beth knew that The Lodge had been sold.

"You might as well fess up," she said, with pretended gayety.

He nodded his head.

"Yes. We withdrew The Lodge from the market at 4 this afternoon"—

"Who bought it, and, oh, do you think they will dare to put Turkish rugs in that old English living room?"

"Oh, no. I assure you he'll have nothing but hand woven rugs, just as you suggested"—

"Well, that is some comfort," the girl murmured. "If he has taste I can forgive him. What sort of a man is he, married or single?"

"Single, but he bought it hoping that a certain girl would share it with him."

"Was she with him? Is she a nice girl? Do you think she will appreciate it?" demanded Beth breathlessly. "You know I simply love that fireplace in the hall!"

Langhorne rose abruptly and paced the floor. Suddenly he paused before her chair, his lips firm, his blue eyes ablaze with a light she had never seen there before.

"Do you think—could you make up your mind—to sit beside that fireplace—always—with me?"

She looked up at him, her breath coming in short, nervous gasps, her eyes wide and startled.

"Oh, I know it's no end of cheeky in me, but when that bloated barrel of a Hopkins (you remember you disliked him so) offered me $8,500 today for The Lodge I told him it was sold. I simply had to buy it myself and take chances on you. You're the certain girl."

"Oh, Teddy! Teddy Langhorne!" said Beth, with a glad little cry. "We'll have hickory logs to burn in the fireplaces—and yes, yes, I love you! Of course it isn't all the house, silly, but it does count some. You know, we built it together."

* * * * * * *

"But to refuse $8,500 for it! Oh, Teddy! That was downright reckless!" she murmured later.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Langhorne, regaining possession of her hand. "Personally, I think I got a pretty good bargain."

Moors and Morocco.

Moor and Morocco are words unknown to the people of that troubled land. These people know themselves as Arabs and descendants of those valiant upholders of the prophet's green standard who swept like a flood across north Africa at the time of the hegira. The Morocco of the present day they found possessed by a sturdy race who claimed descent from the people who were cast out of Canaan by Joshua, the son of Nun. Their country, so far as its plains were concerned, was taken from them by the Arabs, and their fighting strength was made to serve the Arab cause in the conquest of Spain. They themselves gradually took to the mountains, to the great Atlas. Here they have remained ever since, speaking their own language, maintaining their own customs and racial attributes and obstinately refusing to be absorbed by the Arab dwellers on the plains. These people are the Berbers. Their tongue is called Shilhah. Literature they have none, in the ordinary sense of the word, but they have a rich store of oral tradition, myth, legend and folklore.

The Man With the Wooden Hat.

A young Scotsman was shown into the office of a great engineer at Birmingham. He was wearing a hat of extraordinary shape, and at his nervousness at meeting the man of fame he let the hat slip. It fell with a hollow thud upon the floor. The engineer looked with astonishment at the thing. The owner picked it up and apologized for the noise it had caused. It was of wood, he explained. He had made it himself, turning it with his father's lathe. The engineer thought that there must be something in a man who could think out and make such a thing as this. He forthwith engaged him, kept an eye upon him and gave him work of responsibility. The engineer was Boulton; the new man, William Murdock. The man with the wooden hat was sent away to Cornwall, and when he returned it was to light up his master's premises with gas. The mind which first practically applied the coal gas to the purpose of lighting lived inside that wooden hat.—St. James' Gazette.

Good Manners.

A friend of yours and mine has very justly defined good breeding to be "the result of much good sense, some good nature and a little self denial for the sake of others, and with a view to obtain the same indulgence from them." Taking this for granted—as I think it cannot be disputed—it is astonishing to me that anybody who has good sense and good nature can essentially fail in good breeding. As to the modes of it, indeed, they vary according to persons, places and circumstances and are only to be acquired by observation and experience, but the substance of it is everywhere and eternally the same. Good manners are to particular societies what good morals are to society in general—their cement and security. And as laws are enacted to enforce good morals or at least to prevent the ill effects of bad ones, so there are certain rules of civility, universally implied and received, to enforce good manners and punish bad ones.—Chesterfield.

Made For Fat Men.

One of the narrow arches in the gallery of the chapel at Columbia university is not exactly symmetrical, although the defect is not noticeable to the casual observer. The reason for the widening of the arch after its original construction had rise in a somewhat humorous occurrence. One of the early visitors was a remarkably fat man, who found himself wedged into the arch when he tried to squeeze through and was extricated with some difficulty. The builders, recognizing the possibility of other fat people being numbered among the future visitors, decided to widen the arch, sacrificing symmetry and harmony to practical need, as the pier was so constructed as to bear no loss of width on one of its sides.

Caribou Horns.

Not one out of every ten female caribou has horns. When they do have them, they are much smaller than those of the bull. The horns of the female have, however, in general many more branches than those of the bull, and they are much more regularly and finely formed. The cows carry their horns much longer than the bulls. They have been seen with their horns in the month of April. The old bulls shed their horns from the 10th to the last of November. They hardly ever carry them after the month of November. The young bulls shed theirs from the first of December until the middle of February. The younger the animal the longer he retains his horns.

Mountain of the Sacred Footprint.

Adam's peak, or Mount Samanala, a rugged mountain in the island of Ceylon, is known throughout the orient as the "Mountain of the Sacred Footprint." In a flat, rocky basin at the foot of this mountain in stone as hard as blue granite there is the perfect imprint of a gigantic human foot, five and one-half feet long by two and one-half feet wide. The Ceylonese Brahmans have a legend to the effect that the imprint was made by Adam, our first parent, but the Buddhists declare that it could have been made by no one but Buddha.

Water Needles.

So penetrating is water at high pressure that only special qualities of cast iron will be tight against it. In the early days of the hydraulic jack it was no uncommon thing to see the water issuing like a fine needle through the metal, and the water needle would penetrate the unwary finger just as readily as a steel one.

Cash or Credit.

Women should not get credit. Neither should men. Cash is the cure. Tradesmen maybe would have a bad time for six or twelve months, and many a lady would have to "lie low," but in the end we would get both our trade and our money, and she would get her dress and at far less cost.—London Opinion.

The Vice Presidency.

"It's sthrange about th' vice prisidincy," said Mr. Dooley. "Th' prisidincy is th' highest office in th' gift iv th' people. Th' vice prisidincy is th' nex' highest an' th' lowest. It isn't a crime exactly. Ye can't be sint to jail f'r it, but it's a kind iv a disgrace."—"Dissertations by Mr. Dooley."

His Hope For Revenge.

CUTTLEFISH FARMS.

Where the Queer Creatures Are Cultivated to Be Milked.

Does any one know that cuttlefish are cultivated on farms to be milked? These cuttlefish farms are located on the coasts of Great Britain, and the cuttlefish are kept in tanks or ponds to be milked of their ink. The pond or tank is connected with the sea by a pipe, and a thousand or more cuttles are kept in a single one.

They form a most curious sight as they move about, trailing their long arms and staring out of their bulging eyes. They are guarded by screens which prevent them from being scared, for if they are suddenly frightened they will squirt their milk into the water, and it would therefore be lost. This fluid or milk is very valuable, and a cuttle will yield about $3 worth a year. It is secreted in a bag which can be opened and closed at will, the cuttle ejecting the fluid to darken the water so that it may escape unseen when attacked.

The best cuttlefish are procured in China, where for some reason or other they produce the best quality of milk. When the farmer considers it opportune to milk the cuttles he proceeds by opening the sluices of the pond and gently agitating the water. The cuttles then swim around the pond, and as soon as one passes through the sluice is closed. The cuttle passes down a small channel into a basin or metal receptacle, and as soon as it is securely there the water is drained off. It is then frightened and at once squirts the fluid from the bag. When it is exhausted it is lifted out, the milk is collected and the basin prepared for another.

MODERN CIVILIZATION.

Its Complexity, Hurry and Worry Shortening Our Lives.

Not long ago while traveling I chanced to stop at a village on the river Rhine, where I found an astonishing number of old people. There were a dozen over a hundred years of age and many from eighty years old up to the century mark, yet straight and vigorous. One woman nearly a hundred years old was earning her living by picking hops. Her grandchildren were middle aged. It was quite wonderful. But there was no mystery about it. It was merely the effect of a simple life spent largely in the fields, with plain diet, consisting of a few vegetables and fruits, little meat, and native beer and wine for beverages.

Nothing can be more obvious than that the very complexity of our modern civilization is shortening our lives. But of all the evils that afflict us the worst and most destructive are hurry and worry. Hurry drives the body machine beyond its capacity, while worry racks it inwardly. Of the two worry is probably the worse. This might indeed be called the age of worry. Because of the intense nervous strain to which we are subjected we do vastly more worrying than did our forbears. The average man of today is continually surrounded and pursued by phantom troubles, which, though few of them ever materialize into realities, haunt him continually, ruining his peace of mind and injuring his health.

Getting Married.

I don't know myself what getting married feels like, but it cannot be much more exciting than watching other people getting married. Indeed, I always get something like palpitation of the heart just before the priest utters the final fateful words, "I declare you man and wife." Half a second before you were still free. Half a second after you were bound for the term of your natural life. Half a second before you had only to dash the book from the priest's hands and put your hands over his mouth, and, though thus giddily swinging on to the brink of the precipice, you are saved. Half a second after—

All the king's horses and all the king's men
Cannot make you a bachelor again.

It is the knife edge moment betwixt time and eternity.—From Le Gallienne's "His Quest of the Golden Girl."

The Name "Fife."

The origin of the name Fife is not known. One historian tries to show that it comes from the Celtic word veach, a Pict, and means that the district was inhabited by Picts, but that is obviously absurd, as Fife was not specially the home of any of the Pictish nations. The tradition that finds greatest favor is related by a monk, who states that the first known possessor of the district which has since grown into the kingdom of Fife was one Fifus Duffus, a famous chieftain whose date is lost in the mists of antiquity.

He Cheapened Pens.

Sir Josiah Mason was, according to his biography, walking in Bull street, Birmingham, in the year 1828 when he saw some steel pens, price 3s. 6d. each. Josiah was a hard up maker of split rings. No sooner had he seen the pens than he went home, made some better than those in the shop, sent them up to London and got a large order by return. At thirty years of age Mason's capital was 30 shillings. At sixty he had given away £400,000.

Hard Luck.

"Why does Baron Hoffman look so dejected lately?"

"Haven't you heard? He married a rich widow not long ago, and now a banker has absconded with all her money."

In Egypt the cat was sacred to the moon, and when a cat died its master shaved off his eyebrows in sign of mourning.

FURNITURE POLISH.

Use It Sparingly, but With Plenty of Elbow Grease.

As a rule, furniture in these days suffers from too much furniture polish rather than too little. The delicate surface for which old pieces are famous, known as "eggshell gloss," was obtained by a minimum of furniture polish and a maximum of elbow grease.

There is an art in applying furniture polish of which only the best trained servants are aware. First carefully remove all dust and dirt, stains, etc., then with a flannel apply a very thin film of furniture cream to the wood. Take a duster in each hand and rub up the wood, the way of the grain, till on touching the surface with your hand it leaves no mark. The reason for the two dusters is that your left hand may not mark the wood as you rest upon it.

For the last polish use a clean old silk handkerchief.

Of course if it has been once neglected wood takes a long time to recover its condition, but once this is attained it takes relatively but little trouble to keep it in good order.

Furniture polish applied too thickly will smear and become a regular dust trap, requiring far more time to keep in condition, even if this is possible, than if cleaned properly at first.

NURSERY NOTES.

A little girl three years old should have her hair washed every week.

An ill ventilated nursery is a frequent cause of babies being restless and fretful at night.

When bread is given to children under a year and a half old, it should be sliced very thinly, buttered lightly and given in small quantities.

A baby should be kept out of the wind and in the sunshine as much as possible. Protect the eyes from the sun always with a dark umbrella.

Hot water is a good cure for a bumped forehead, and witch hazel or arnica patted on takes the sting out of bruises by the time the child has stopped crying.

Cocoa is the best beverage for children next to plain milk, and often, when they cannot properly digest the latter, cocoa prepared with half milk and half water is invaluable. It is one of the best articles of diet for all except young infants.

Morbid Women.

When people have trouble, and real trouble, they don't sit down and analyze all their emotions and remember whether this person and that person looked to the right or to the left when they spoke to them. Morbidness should be counted as a wicked demon that can be driven out. Healthy companionship, plenty of laughter, good long walks in the sunshine and work will drive out the wicked little imp—discontent—and make you the happy, healthful, hopeful woman you ought to be. Form a band against self analysis, against the inclination to consider what every inflection of the voice and every look of the eye means, and you will be surprised to discover how much of good there is in the world and how little, comparatively speaking, of that which is really bad.

Dress Linings.

It is a very poor plan to economize on the linings of dress either in money or the care with which it is made. A cheap little dress made with absolute simplicity frequently looks better than one costing twenty times as much if the slip for the cheap dress has been well made of good silk. The waist and skirt should be fitted with as much care as the other dress, and the skirt must hang perfectly. Many costumes are spoiled by the underskirt hanging in loops and scallops that are noticeable whenever the dress is lifted.

For Dandruff.

Put 5 cents' worth of flowers of sulphur and a quart of soft water in a clean glass bottle big enough to admit of violent shaking. Shake several times a day for a week, then let stand until the water is clear. Pour it off, strain and bottle. Rub well into the scalp with the tips of the fingers. This is a sure cure for dandruff, and it also gives the hair a beautiful gloss.

Where Life Is Dull.

"The terrors of a great city are something dreadful."

"Maybe so, but they don't begin to compare with the horrors of a small hamlet."

He Had the Most—Perhaps.

A comic actor who had been engaged to entertain a family party proposed at the conclusion of the performance a little game of his own. Each of the company, himself included, was to stake half a crown, and the pool would be taken by the person who possessed the most of the articles which he (the comedian) would inquire for. On his assurance that he would take no mean advantage, but run the same risk as the rest, all the members of the party consented, and between £3 and £4 was soon laid on the table. The actor added his piece to the pool, with a cunning smile, and then said:

"Now, which of you ladies and gentlemen happen to have the greatest number of false teeth?"

Deathlike silence reigned for about a minute, then a burst of laughter, both hearty and in some cases forced.

"I have three," continued the actor. "Who has got more?"

The comedian took the pool.—London Tit-Bits.

Senator Bate's Authority.

The late Senator William B. Bate of Tennessee was a major general in the Confederate army and never quite reconciled himself to the defeat of the south. Soon after he came to the senate he formulated a set of rules which he called "Rules for my proper legislative guidance." Whenever a proposition came up about which he was undecided he would take the printed slip containing these rules from his pocket and study it carefully.

"Bate," said a colleague one day, "what is that slip of paper to which you refer so frequently?"

"That," said Senator Bate, "is a little reminder of my belief on constitutional questions."

"Where did you get it? Think it out yourself?"

"No, suh," replied Bate, with much dignity; "I found most of those immortal truths in the constitution of the Confederate States of America."

"Orchestra" and "Noise."

In Shakespeare's time no musical dictionary could have distinguished between "orchestra" and "band," for the simple reason that neither word was then English in a musical sense. "Orchestra" did not arrive before the eighteenth century and even "band" not until the latter half of the seventeenth, when Charles II. had a "band of violins," in imitation probably of Louis XIV.'s "bande." The old English word for a band of music was "noise." "See if thou canst find out Sneak's noise. Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music," says one drawer to the other at the Boar's Head tavern. And just so Ben Jonson has "a noise of fiddlers" and "a noise of trumpets." The old word is wanted for many a gathering of musicians outside this writer's flat.—London Chronicle.

Writing on a Train.

"No matter how fast and rough the pace," said a brakeman, "you can write with perfect ease and comfort on a train if you hold a cushion on your lap. You rest your tablet and your arm on the cushion, and somehow or other neither jolt nor jar disturbs you. The soft cushion nullifies every tremor. Your writing is as legible as if it had been done at your desk at home. We railroaders have a good many accounts to make up while traveling, and hence we usually have a cushion handy. Drummers and other experienced travelers are great hands to borrow our cushions from us when they have a little correspondence to attend to."

"Talesman" in English Law.

A talesman, according to English law, is a juror summoned to fill a gap, and formerly, at any rate, this was often done by taking any suitable person who was present in court. "Tales de circumstantibus" ("such of the bystanders") were the first words of the order directing this process. Good Pickwickians may remember that, as only ten special jurymen were present on a memorable occasion, Mr. Serjeant Buzfuz "prayed a tales," whereupon two of the common jurymen, one of whom was the unfortunate chemist, were pressed into the service.—London Standard.

The Very Worst.

Douglas Jerrold was seriously disappointed with a certain book written by one of his friends. This friend heard that Jerrold had expressed his disappointment and questioned him. "I hear you said —— was the worst book I ever wrote."

"No, I didn't," came the answer. "I said it was the worst book anybody ever wrote."

Where It Snows In Summer.

Snow, it appears, only falls in the antarctic in summer and on those rare occasions at other seasons when the wind blows almost due south, and, strange to say, these south winds are warm winds, raising the temperature to 50 or 60 degrees F. They seem akin to the snow melting Foehn winds of the Alps.

Fully Posted.

"Could you do the landlord in 'The Lady of Lyons?'" asked the manager of a seedy actor.

"Well, I should think I might. I have done a good many landlords."

It Might Speak.

The Artist—Oh, so madam has ze grand face. I shall make ze speaking likeness. Henpeck—Er—well, old man, you needn't go so far as that, you know.

Traitor.

"They say that he fell overboard as the ship rolled on its side."

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 27.—(Special.)—Receipts were 600 cattle, 2500 calves, 200 sheep and lambs and 800 hogs. A feature of the market was the continued strength in hogs, and prices advanced 10c to 15c per 100 lbs., owing to small supplies and keen demand. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.40 to $7.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Among the cattle offered there were 125 milch cows, which sold at $45 to $70 each. A fair trade was done in cattle, and prices ruled firm. Choice sold at 5½c to 5¾c; good, 5c to 5¼c; fair, 4½c to 4¾c, and lower grades at from 3c to 4¼c per lb. The bulk of the calves offered were only medium in quality, and sold at $2 to $4 each, but a few choice ones brought 8c to 8½c per lb. Demand for sheep and lambs was keen, and prices advanced. Sheep sold at 5c to 5½c, and spring lambs at $8 to $10 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 150 head; fair demand and steady prices, unchanged.

C. P. R. Steamer Overdue.

St. John, N. B., March 28.—Many enquiries are being made for the C. P. R. steamship Lake Manitoba, which is due here on Saturday from Liverpool.

The ship has a large general cargo and 1,388 passengers. Of this number, 59 are first cabin, 139 second cabin and 1,190 steerage.

The Lake Manitoba sailed from Liverpool on Wednesday, March 13, and is 15 days out.

It is thought the ship has experienced adverse weather.

Floods Near Montreal.

Montreal, March 28.—The water in the Montreal harbor is rising rapidly. Harbor officials believe that this year the ice will break up rapidly, and in consequence it is anticipated that the water will reach a very great height, though hopes are entertained that there will be no flood. The little village of Chateauguay, farther up the river, and Chateauguay Basin, are already badly flooded.

Madibi Gold Fields Open.

Cape Town, March 28.—It is announced that a proclamation will be issued about the end of April opening the Madibi gold fields to public digging.

Explosion on Torpedo Boat.

Cherbourg, March 28.—An explosion occurred yesterday on board torpedo boat No. 147. Two men were severely scalded.

Investigates Telephones.

Regina, Sask., March 28.—The following resolution, dealing with Government-owned telephones, has been adopted unanimously by the Legislature.

"That, while the House favors the principles of Government-ownership and control of a telephone system for the province, it is of the opinion that, before any active measures are taken for the inauguration of such a system, the province should make a thorough enquiry into the working out of a similar system in Canada and elsewhere, and that steps already taken by the Government with this object in view, should be continued in order that the Legislature, at its next session, may be in a position to deal with this important question."

GARDENVILLE.

March 25.—The funeral of Mrs. Frank Brumel took place here in the Gospel Hall on Monday, March 25, and was largely attended. Service was conducted by the evangelist, Mr. Slomans, of the West Indies, who gave a very impressive sermon. The deceased lady died in Buffalo, where she had resided for the past two years. Mrs. Brumel had been ailing from lung trouble for the past five years. She was the youngest twin daughter of Mr. A. Young and was highly respected by all. She was thirty-one years of age, and was a Christian for a number of years. She leaves a husband and three little girls to mourn her loss. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Trouble In Local Gas Department.

A strike took place this morning in connection with the employees of the local Gas department. The story is that Mr. Thomas Gardiner, the new manager, attempted to establish order out of chaos, and the employees struck, saying they intended to leave the employ of the city. This they did in a body. The new manager says he thinks he will be able to keep things running. He, we are told, has the full support of Ald. Green, chairman of Gas. None of the strikers will be re-employed. Good will result from this little rebellion.

No Gas This Morning.

BUT MATTERS IMPROVED LATER ON, AND SUPPLY IS NOW NORMAL.

The Intelligencer was this morning face to face with the disagreeable possibility of having no gas for its type-setting machines to-day. When the time came to light up it was found that the gas supply was nil. It seems that, about 12 o'clock last night, the gas lights in the city went out. This was shown by the police record. This, it appears, was caused by water in the gas mains. Work was at once started pumping the water out of the mains—how it got in there nobody seemed to know. There are some surmises, however. Ald. Green chairman of Gas, says the water was in the pipes; that's all he knows about it.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock this morning the gas supply was again all right and has since then been normal.

Mr. Thomas Gardner, the new manager of the Gas department, arrived on Tuesday and at once took up his duties. He seems to have been confronted by a fairly difficult problem before he had much time to find his bearings.

Deseronto Purchases Gas And Water Plants

In Deseronto, yesterday, voting took place on a by-law to empower the Town Council to purchase the Gasworks and Waterworks from the Rathbun Company for $50,000. The vote stood: For, 217; against, 52. Majority for, 165.

They Said Farewell.

A pleasant social hour was spent last evening, at the close of the midweek prayer service at Holloway St. church, in the spirit of farewelling to several old and respected members of the church and community, who are shortly leaving to join their families or establish for themselves homes in the ambitious atmosphere of the Western provinces. Mrs. Lewis Grills joins her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. E. Lawrence; Mrs. T. Foley joins her husband at Kamsack, Sask; Mr. and Mrs. M. Dulmage and family are destined for North Battleford, where they have taken up homesteads; Mr. Jas. Zebedee returns to his homestead at Humbolt, and Mr. G. Woolan leaves for one of the Alberta towns shortly.

Many of the above being present, heard very kindly words and wishes for their future, and chatted farewells over the toothsome refreshments provided by the deft hands of West Belleville ladies.

Presented With Gold Watch And Address.

STAFF AND STUDENTS OF O.B.C. KINDLY REMEMBERED A DEPARTING TEACHER LAST NIGHT

Yesterday afternoon, at Ontario Business College, a pleasing event took place, when Mr. G. A. McClatchie, who is severing his connection with the O.B.C. staff, was presented with an address and a beautiful gold watch.

The proceedings began with the reading of the address by Mr. I. L. Moore. The presentation of the watch was made by Miss Maud Fleming. Just at this point the students broke into singing "For he's a jolly good fellow."

When quiet was restored, Principal J. W. Johnson said that he and others desired to make a few remarks. He proceeded to express his appreciation of Mr. McClatchie and his splendid services as a member of his teaching staff; Mr. McClatchie's work there had always been well done. Growing reminiscent, Mr. Johnson referred to former members of his staff—men and women of ability, who did first-class work and who now occupy high positions. He said Mr. McClatchie belonged to the same class and would achieve great success. He expressed the hope that he might at some future time again secure Mr. McClatchie's services.

Brief addresses were also made by Col. W. N. Ponton and Mr. I. L. Moore.

Mr. McClatchie, taken very much by surprise, made a brief reply, in which he spoke of the pleasant memories he would carry with him. He regretted to break his connection with the O.B.C., and he was leaving for the purpose of obtaining experience necessary to qualify himself for the requirements of the Institute of Chartered Accountants. He thanked all for their kind words and their handsome gift.

Again the boys started their song, after which cheers for Mr. McClatchie, the principal and staff, brought the proceedings to a close.

Below is a copy of the address:

To Mr. G. A. McClatchie:

Dear Friend, — We, the principal, teachers and students of Ontario Business College, have learned with deep regret of your decision to sever your connection with the teaching staff of this institution. We highly esteem, and shall always remember, your excellent services as a teacher and your worth as a friend. We extend to you our sincere wishes for good health and success in the future, and ask you to please accept, at parting, the accompanying gold watch as a slight token of our esteem and friendship.

Died On Mill St.

Miss Mary J. Bryce, aged 55 years who resided at the residence of Mr. P. Milne, Mill street, died this morning. Deceased had been for many years a resident of this city. Miss Bryce was a member of St. Michael's church.

The Market.

There was a fair market to-day, and considerable produce was offered for sale. Prices were about the same as on Saturday last. The ruling price for eggs was 20 cents per dozen, butter 28c per pound, and dressed chickens sold at from 90c to $1.40 per pair.

Kennel Feeding At The Penitentiary.

(Kingston Whig.)

Considerable stir has been created over "kennel feeding at the penitentiary," as the Frontenac grand jury was pleased to call it in its report after a recent visit to the federal institution. The report called for meals in dining-halls instead, as now, of each man carrying his food to his cell and eating alone.

It was alleged that the change was brought about owing to an assault on a guard, which threatened to involve the 500 convicts. This statement is wholly gratuitous. The facts are that the better convicts really asked for the change and they had good grounds for the request. In the penal institution distinction cannot be made as one criminal is regarded the same as another. To show distinction would be disastrous to discipline and hence under the old order of things the men filed into the dining-room according to gangs, the men of each workshop, and outdoor men, sitting together. As a result many a man of refined tastes and of good breeding found himself alongside a foul smelling negro, or a man full of disease, or a fellow who "ate like a hog." The upshot was that dinner was a nightmare to many men. The sight of neighbors eating in disgusting fashion completely drove appetite away. This led many convicts, about twelve years ago, to petition for relief and they suggested that they be allowed to take their meals in their cells. The matter was fully investigated, considered and approved and has been carried on all these years without complaint. The system has done away with gossip, jibing and insult. The convicts eat quietly and contentedly and give every evidence that they prefer this form of dining to the promiscuous association that formerly prevailed. If a half dozen halls were used and men were graded, the distinctions would still exist and a convict, though of good breeding would still be associated with the foul, the ill-bred and the man reeking with disease.

The upshot of the grand jury's report may be the prohibition of its visits at the penitentiary. It is only by courtesy, it is allowed, as the institution rightly does not come under its purview as it is Dominion, and not Provincial, in control. The facts might easily have been obtained by the grand jurors if they had been anxious to rightly interpret the change made a dozen years ago.

Mrs. Gulliver's Funeral.

The remains of the late Mrs. John Gulliver were yesterday afternoon interred at Canifton. Services at the house, Canifton Road, were conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church.

BIG BLAZE AT IROQUOIS.

Two Stores and Two Hotels Burned—Loss About $40,000.

Morrisburg, March 28.—A disastrous fire broke out in the village of Iroquois at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, in the store of Assaly & Co., completely destroying the store and contents of Assaly's, as well as J. W. Lowe's general store, lately purchased from C. & M. Mills, the largest and oldest established business in town. The Powell House and Commercial Hotel and outbuildings were also consumed. The town hall and J. W. Tindale's block were saved with great difficulty. Estimated loss about $40,000.

Kings to Confer.

Madrid, March 28.—It is officially announced that when King Alfonso shall go to Cartagena, in a few days, to meet King Edward, he will be accompanied by his brother-in-law, Prince Charles of Bourbon.

Cartagena is being magnificently decorated. Five warships will be in the harbor. It is probable that the Queen Mother, Christina, will go to Cartagena to greet Queen Alexandra.

Elevator Accident Fatal.

Hamilton, March 28.—William Morton, the young man who was crushed by an elevator in T. C. Watkins' store on Tuesday last, died at the City Hospital early yesterday morning. He was conscious after the accident, and it was thought he would recover, but the internal injuries caused his death.

British Fleet Sails April 3.

London, March 28.—The first cruiser squadron, which will represent the British navy at the naval review to be held in Hampton Roads in honor of the inauguration of the Jamestown Exposition will leave England April 3 for Bermuda, whence the squadron will sail April 23 for Hampton Roads.

Servia Shaken.

London, March 28.—Prof. Belar, the seismologist, reports that an earthquake occurred at 12.40 p.m. yesterday 6,250 miles from Laibach, Austria, where Prof. Belar is located. There was also a moderate shock in Servia 24 hours earlier.

Trujillo Recaptured.

New Orleans, March 28.—A private cablegram received here states that the Hondurans have recaptured the fort of Trujillo. This was the first Caribbean seaport of Honduras taken by the Nicaraguans.

New York Central Indicted.

New York, March 28.—Indictments charging manslaughter in the second degree were returned yesterday against the New York Central Railroad; Ira A. McCormick, general superintendent, and Alfred H. Smith, vice-president, in connection with the fatal wreck of the Brewster express on the Harlem division last month.

McCormick and Smith entered pleas of not guilty, and were released on $10,000 bail each.

The grand jury also recommended many restrictions upon railroad operation in this state.

Falls Into Boiling Water.

Lindsay, March 28.—James Graham, an employe of the Rider & Kitchener Co., while working around a tank of boiling water, slipped and fell in. He is in the Ross Memorial Hospital, in a critical condition.

Miners Fail to Agree.

Calgary, March 28.—The failure of the operators and miners to reach an agreement after a prolonged conference makes it probable that there will be a strike. The conference is expected to end to-day.

SIR WILFRID WILL GO

Premier Announces He Will Attend Colonial Conference.

Bourassa Still on the Warpath—Will Ask the House to Compel Fowler to Make Charges Good or Withdraw Them—Car Needs of G.T.P. —Hon. James Bryce Present During the Session.

Ottawa, March 28.—The fact that Hon. James Bryce occupied a seat upon the floor of the House gave additional interest to a discussion upon the coming colonial conference, and the general questions that group about imperialism and the upbuilding of the Empire.

The Premier distinctly intimated that he would attend the conference.

An echo from yesterday was a notice by Mr. Bourassa that on Thursday, April 4, he would move that Mr. Fowler be compelled to make his charges good or withdraw them.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier preferred next Wednesday.

Mr. Bourassa desired a vote. The House on Wednesdays adjourns automatically at six. The motion might be "talked out."

Sir Wilfrid assured him that hereafter the House would sit in the forenoon and on Wednesday evenings.

Wants Beddoe Committed.

Mr. Monk (Conservative, Quebec) called the attention of the House to the refusal of C. H. Beddoe of the Interior Department to answer certain questions before the committee of agriculture and colonization, respecting the membership of the North Atlantic Trading Co. He gave notice that on April 4 he would file and discuss a formal motion on this subject.

Mr. Beddoe was the auditor who visited Amsterdam last summer and satisfied himself that the company had expended the sums required under its contract. The motion concludes with an order for Mr. Beddoe to appear at the Bar of the House and show cause why he should not be committed for contempt.

One or two of the questions during the question hour brought out some interesting information.

Car Needs of G. T. P.

Mr. Emmerson stated that the G. T. P. had placed an order with all the car factories of Canada for their full capacity, i.e., 5,000 a year, and they were being delivered before the road was built, as the G. T. P. would require 20,000 cars to begin business. Meanwhile the G. T. R. is using the cars and paying the usual per diem.

Mr. Oliver read the famous interview with W. T. R. Preston, published in The London Daily Express. It seems to be harmless enough and the Government sees no necessity for any action, although it does contain the statement that South Africa can support a larger population than can the country between Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains.

Not Significant.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier denied that any negotiations were pending between Canada and the United States or that Ambassador Bryce's visit to Ottawa is significant.

"No doubt Mr. Bryce may refer to Canada in his despatches to the Foreign Office," said the Premier, "but I have no access to that correspondence."

"Has there been any correspondence with the Government?" asked R. L. Borden.

"No," said the Premier, in reply.

Colonial Conference.

On the motion to go into supply R. L. Borden brought up the subject of the colonial conference. Mr. Borden criticized the policy of the Government in failing to make a single suggestion to the conference, while important questions for discussion were submitted by all the other colonies. There was the question, for instance, of preferential trade, as to which the Canadian delegates had introduced resolutions at the conference of 1902.

The next resolution, as proposed by Australia, has reference to the Panama Canal, in which Canada, too, had an interest. Another suggestion was with regard to British immigration, which the Australian Government thought should be directed to British possessions. Canada had paid too much attention to immigration from the continent of Europe.

Mr. Borden thought Sir Wilfrid Laurier should have given this expression to his opinion on the proposal of New Zealand that the making of reciprocal trade treaties by the colonies should be freed from the embarrassment of Britain's treaty obligations to foreign countries. When approached on the subject of imperial defence Sir Wilfrid's reply to the imperial authorities had been that Canada was establishing a local naval force in the waters of Canada. Mr. Borden would like to know how far the Government had progressed with its naval scheme.

The Cattle Embargo.

He would like to have known what was Canada's attitude on the cattle embargo? It was known the embargo had been instituted and maintained, not because of disease in Canadian cattle, but as a measure of protection to the British farmer. The British Government could protect as they liked, but it was not fair that that protection should be effected by an embargo which casts discredit on Canadian cattle.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in reply, said the very fact that Canada had offered no suggestions to the conference was the best evidence that the relations between Canada and the Empire were so satisfactory that they could not be improved. He was ready to go to London, not to make suggestions, but to receive those of the Home Government and the sister colonies.

He did not view with favor a permanent imperial council. The only question in which Canada was particularly interested was the trade question, and in this Canada had nothing to offer.

Her position had been laid down at the conference of 1902, namely that Canada had already given a preference, and if the British people would reciprocate, Canada would go one step further than she had done. But this policy had not found favor with the British people, and it was for them to make up their own mind without dictation from Canada.

The British Empire could only be maintained upon the principle that every one of the nations which compose it shall be allowed to determine for itself what is best for it. Sir Wilfrid's own view was that the ideal condition would be to have free trade between all parts of the British Empire. But at present that was not possible.

Will Not Consent.

As for imperial defence, he did not know that existing conditions could be improved upon. Certainly Canada would never consent to be drawn into the vortex of European militarism. In the way of immigration he thought the present policy a good one. Owing to it an increasing number of immigrants were coming from the British Isles.

When in London he could take up with Premier Deakin the question of preferential trade with Australia, and would doubtless accomplish an arrangement.

The cattle embargo did not seem to be a proper matter for the conference, but the Government would continue to press upon the imperial authorities the advisability of its withdrawal.

LANDLORDS ARE BURNED.

Revolting Cruelties By Peasants In the Balkans.

Bucharest, Roumania, March 28.—The measures proposed by the Government to meet the demands of the revolted peasantry, and end the civil war, which is devastating Moldava and Wallachi, were announced in yesterday's issue of the official Gazette, in the shape of a proclamation issued in the name of King Charles. The royal proclamation appeals for the patriotic co-operation of the people to secure the re-establishment of tranquility, and announces that the Sovereign has agreed to the immediate suppression of some of the heavy taxes, while hereafter the farm lands will be cultivated by the State, or leased direct to the peasants. Not one of the larger syndicates hitherto engaged in farming vast tracts of land will be allowed to hold more than 2,000 acres.

Burned Their Victims.

Forty peasants were killed March 25 in a hard fight with troops in the Mozazi district. The insurgents in that section cut to pieces and burned some of their victims.

A stubborn encounter occurred Tuesday at a point on the Guigovo road, about 60 miles from Bucharest, where 4,000 insurgents met a strong detachment of troops. The latter attacked the revolted peasants with cavalry, as well as infantry, but the military commander ultimately was obliged to use artillery before he was able to force the peasants to retreat.

Hacked to Pieces.

London, March 28.—A special despatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, says that, according to some of the Roumanian refugees who have arrived on the Bulgarian side of the Danube, the insurgent peasantry has been guilty of the same ruthless cruelties which usually mark the feuds in the Balkans. Many of the landlord class have been burned to death, after their bodies and limbs had first been rolled in thick twists of hay or straw. Even children, the refugees add, have been hacked to death by the revolted peasants.

Lewis Harcourt In Cabinet.

London, March 28.—Lewis Harcourt, son of the late Sir William Harcourt, the first Commissioner of Works, has been promoted to Cabinet rank, retaining his post.

Piles Cured Quickly At Home

WITHOUT PAIN, CUTTING OR SURGERY INSTANT RELIEF.

We Prove It. Sample Package Free.

Seven people out of ten are said to have Piles. Not one man in a million need have them and we are proving it every day at our own expense. We send a sample package of the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure to any person absolutely free.

We don't do this as a matter of amusement or philanthropy, but because it is to our interest to do so. We know that the sufferer from piles tormented and driven almost crazy by this wretched trouble, will find such immediate relief that he will go at once to his druggist and buy a box and get well.

We know that we have got the greatest remedy in the world for piles, and we are ready and willing to stand or fall by the verdict of those who make the trial. We have been doing this for some years now and we never yet have had occasion to regret it.

And the remedy at the drug store is exactly the same as the sample we send out. As, for instance, here is a man who got such immediate relief from the sample that he at once bought a box. Was it just the same? Undoubtedly, since it cured him after all sorts and kinds of things had failed.

Here is a sample of the kind of letters we get every day and we don't have to ask for them:

"Received your sample of Pile Cure and have given it a fair trial and it has proven the best I ever tried and effected a complete cure. I can recommend you highly in this vicinity. Have used your sample and one box and it has been a complete cure. It has been worth $100 to me. Thanking you for the sample and the cure, I will recommend you to everybody. Yours respectfully, Julius Mayer, dealer in feathers, ginseng and hides, Bedford, Ind."

Pyramid Pile Cure is for sale at every druggist's at 50 cents a box or if you would like to try a sample first, you will receive one by return mail by sending your name and address to The Pyramid Drug Company, 59 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

THAW GETS FIRST PEEP

At the Commissioners Who Will Decide His Fate.

Commissioner Resigns and David McClure Is Appointed In His Place—Jury Excused Until Next Week—Prisoner Greets His Family In Court—Lunacy Proceedings to Be Open—Private Conference.

New York, March 28.—After the Thaw jury was excused yesterday until next Monday morning and the members of the lunacy commission selected Tuesday by Justice Fitzgerald to enquire into Thaw's present state of mind had been sworn in, it was suddenly announced that ex-Supreme Court Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, chairman of the commission, had resigned.

In a letter to Justice Fitzgerald, Mr. O'Brien explained that he was forced by the condition of his health and his professional engagements to decline to serve.

Justice Fitzgerald made a new order, appointing David McClure, a member of ex-Police Commissioner McAdoo's advisory committee of citizens, to fill the vacancy.

Mr. McClure met the other members of this commission yesterday afternoon and was elected chairman. He stated that the first session will be held to-day at 2 o'clock in the courtroom where the trial has been in progress. The enquiry in general will be open, although there will be executive sessions from time to time.

After Justice Fitzgerald administered the oath of office, Thaw was brought into court and found all the members of his family there.

He looks exceedingly well, and smiled a greeting to his mother, his wife and his sisters and brothers. He then turned to where the three commissioners sat and gazed fixedly at them for several minutes.

Justice Fitzgerald, in discharging the jury until next Monday, warned them to be careful not to discuss the case in any way nor to read any newspaper accounts of what is taking place.

TRAIN WAS WRECKED.

Passengers Escaped But Trainmen Were Killed.

St. Paul, March 28.—The Northern Pacific passenger train for Duluth, which left St. Paul at 11 o'clock was wrecked at Carlton, Minn., early yesterday. The engine, mail and combination cars were derailed and the engineer and fireman were killed. Meagre reports received at Northern Pacific headquarters here do not indicate that any passengers were killed.

NEW POSTAL TREATY.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux Going to Washington In Regard to It.

Ottawa, March 28.—Hon. Mr. Lemieux is going to Washington to confer with the postal authorities there in regard to arranging a new international postal treaty. The present treaty expires on May 7, and arrangements are now being made in connection with postal matter coming under the classification of second and third class mail.

LOST CONFIDENCE.

Canada Said to Have Lost Faith In Jas. Bryce.

London, March 28.—(C. A. P.)—The London Globe says it is abundantly clear that Mr. Bryce has lost the confidence of Canada during his first few weeks.

The St. James' Gazette says it would be nothing short of a misfortune if Sir Wilfrid Laurier had been an absentee from the Colonial Conference.

Carnegie Warns Railroads.

Washington, March 29.—Andrew Carnegie yesterday said:

"I absolutely endorse the President's attitude toward the railroads. He is the best friend they have, and they ought to realize it. The railroads had better stand with him.

"If they do not accept his moderate measures, they may be confronted by a man in the White House who will approach the question of the railroads from an entirely different standpoint.

"I regard the President's influence as to the railroads as wholesome and conservative."

Poison In Porter.

Toronto, March 28.—Under suspicious circumstances pointing to poison, Mrs. Honor Gregg, aged 82, of Sandfield, Ontario County, died after drinking a glass of porter. A greenish sediment was found at the bottom of the glass, and Coroner Mellow of Port Perry has ordered an inquest. The intestines of the dead woman have been sent to Dr. Ellis, provincial analyst, for examination, on the advice of a physician, who said an irritant poison was found in the stomach.

Essex Liberals In Revolt.

Windsor, March 28.—The possibility of outside men receiving the appointments as county judge and Senator has caused unrest among the Liberals of North and South Essex.

Men who have been prominently identified with the party do not hesitate to say that, unless at least one of the appointments goes to a local man, there will be a split in the ranks when the time for the next Federal election comes.

Extra Boat For Immigrants.

London, March 28.—The pressure of emigration is so heavy that the Allan Line yesterday despatched the Carthaginian as an extra sailing, six hundred railways laborers being sent to Canada. J. A. Smart sails by the Carthaginian.

Mr. St. John Better.

Toronto, March 28.—Speaker St. John passed a restful night and continues to improve.

Harry Thaw Replies Calmly

His Answers to Lunacy Commissioners Were Rational.

Prisoner Was Under Fire of Questions For Two Hours--Scope of Enquiry Limited to Thaw's Present Condition--Counsel Pleased With Result So Far--Report to Be Made by Monday.

New York, March 30.—Harry K. Thaw for two hours on Thursday submitted to a running fire of questions by the three men appointed by Justice Fitzgerald as a commission in lunacy to determine his present state of mind.

The examination was exhaustive and, when adjournment was taken until Saturday morning, no one connected with the hearing would discuss the details of the enquiry.

Thaw went willingly and confidently before the commission and, when the two-hour secret session was over, his attorneys appeared with smiling faces and declared they were more than satisfied with the course of the proceedings.

District Attorney Jerome hurried away from the criminal court building, declining to discuss the commission's work.

Limit Scope of Enquiry.

The most important feature of the proceedings was the decision of the commission to limit the scope of its enquiry to the exact language of the statute—to determine solely the question whether or not Harry Thaw is able to understand the nature of the court proceedings against him and to advise his counsel rationally.

To put Thaw thoroughly at ease, the commissioners addressed their questions to him in a conversational tone and in a casual manner, as though he were in conference with them.

Counsel Well Satisfied.

It is said Thaw answered the questions calmly and went into lengthy explanations.

Referring to the day's proceedings, Mr. Hartridge said:

"Harry came out with flying colors. He remembered more about the case than I did. We are confident of the outcome."

It is said the commission purposes to make Thaw narrate the trial from its beginning to test his memory of what has occurred in court. To this end, it was said he was questioned about the part he took in the selection of the jury.

Report On Monday.

The commission may finish its work to-day and be ready to report to Justice Fitzgerald by Monday.

The jury will report in court once more at 10.30 o'clock Monday morning, and it is the hope of the presiding judge and that of the commission that the matter of the defendant's sanity will be disposed of by that time.

If the commission should submit a report to the effect that Thaw fully understands the nature of the proceedings against him and has rationally advised his counsel, Justice Fitzgerald will simply direct that the trial proceed without making public the commission's findings.

If the report is against Thaw, Justice Fitzgerald will announce the fact from the bench, and if he deems the prisoner's release dangerous to the public peace and safety he will sign an order directing his confinement in some state hospital for the insane, probably Mattawan.

Yesterday being Good Friday, there was no session of the lunacy board, and Thaw spent a quiet day in the Tombs preparing for a renewal of his mental test this morning. The session of the commission will again be private.

Any medical advice which the commission may desire will come from Dr. Leopold Putzel, one of its members.

Thaw's counsel are so sanguine of the outcome of the lunacy enquiry that yesterday they were making plans for the resumption of the trial next week. It seems now that, if the trial is resumed, the defence will probably announce that it rests without further testimony.

If the trial goes on it should not last more than three or four days.

Hamilton, Alienist, May Testify.

From sources assumed to be authentic, it was announced late last night that Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, alienist, would be called upon to testify to-day before the lunacy commission which is to determine whether Harry K. Thaw is competent to understand the nature of the proceedings in his trial for killing Stanford White and to rationally advise his counsel.

France Warns Morocco.

Tangier, March 30.—M. Regnault, French Minister, accompanied by the commander of the French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc, Thursday presented to Mohammed el Torres France's demands for reparation in the case of the murder of Dr. Mauchamp.

Mohammed el Torres was warned that he would be held fully responsible for the carrying out of the French demands and for any anti-European movement which might result therefrom. The representative of the Sultan offered no objection.

Town Wiped Out by Fire.

Laurens, S. C., March 30.—Driven by a stiff wind, fire yesterday swept both the business and residential sections of Newbery, a town of 8,000 population, 30 miles southeast of here, and caused a loss that may reach $500,000. Approximately fifty residences were destroyed, and a score of business houses in the heart of the town are in ruins.

Two hours after the fire broke out the entire city water supply was exhausted and the town was left practically at the mercy of the flames.

Strike Shuts Beer Tap.

200 FAMILIES HOMELESS.

Serious Floods at Janesville and Clarkstown.

Ottawa, March 30.—The Rideau river is in serious flood, and 200 families are homeless in Janesville and Clarkstown. Communication with Ottawa is cut off.

A funeral car attempted to cross the river and was swept away, with the corpse. The mourners jumped off and saved it.

The heavy rains are not improving matters, and there is fear for the safety of some of the bridges above Ottawa.

Yamaska River In Flood.

St. Hyacinthe, March 30.—The Yamaska River overflowed its banks in the lower part of the city Thursday night, through the breaking of the ice at the rapids. The water was over the first floor of the houses on a few streets, but the damage was not serious.

The ice began to move about four o'clock, near the Grand Trunk bridge, and about two o'clock yesterday morning it was at Rapid Plat, five miles down, where the Light & Power Co. have their works. This will save the city from any damages.

Landslide Buries Cars.

Quebec, March 30.—There was quite a landslide at Montmorency Falls just to the north of the elevator yesterday. A great body of earth, heavily soaked with water, broke loose about half way up the cliff and crashed down on cars on the siding.

Reports from all stations from Cape Rouge to Montreal state that the ice bridge is still solid, with the water remarkably low for the season.

The ice is in the same condition as La Prairie, where there is no flood as yet.

The ice is still hard at Yamaska but the water is getting higher.

At Three Rivers the ice is solid. The water rose 6 inches since Thursday.

CANADA AND MAIL MATTER.

Dominion and United States Postal Representatives Hold Conference.

Washington, March 30.—With a view if possible of arriving at a satisfactory adjustment of questions affecting second-class mail matter entering Canada from the United States, representatives of the Dominion were in conference yesterday with Postmaster-General Meyer, Second Assistant Postmaster-General Shallenberger and other officials.

The action of the Canadian authorities in giving notice of their desire to withdraw from the postal convention with this country, with respect to second-class matter, was the principal topic of discussion.

Various propositions were advanced on both sides, which it is believed will have the effect of bringing the two countries together in an arrangement more acceptable to Canada.

Yesterday's conference was supplemented to one recently had with the Canadian postal officials in Ottawa by Gen. Shallenberger. The Canadian officials here are Postmaster-General Lemieux, Deputy Postmaster-General R. M. Coulter and Mr. Smith of the Canadian Department of Posts.

A MURDEROUS ATTACK.

Old Inmate of Elgin House of Industry May Die.

St. Thomas, March 30.—Wm. Brannon, an inmate of the Elgin House of Industry, was attacked by Patrick Murphy, another inmate, who is subject to "brain storm," at the institution Thursday night, and received injuries which, coupled with his advanced age, may result in his death. Murphy has been locked in a room every night on account of insane outbursts, and Brannon was closing the door for the night when attacked. He received cuts and bruises on the head and his hip was fractured. He is in a precarious condition. Murphy has been arrested and will be sent to the asylum. Brannon, who is a veteran of the Indian mutiny and went through the siege of Lucknow, belongs to Springfield, Ont., and Murphy to Bayham.

TWELVE MEN'S AGE 1,086 YEARS.

Austrian Emperor Washes Their Feet and Feeds Them.

Vienna, March 30.—Emperor Francis Joseph performed the usual Maunday Thursday ceremony, before a gathering of archdukes, diplomats and state officials. Before washing the feet of 12 aged men, the emperor and the archdukes personally served them with a repast of several courses.

The ceremony was concluded with the bestowal of silk purses containing 30 silver pieces, which the Emperor hung around the neck of each of the old men.

The ages of the 12 men totaled 1,086 years.

Three Killed On Car.

Somerville, Mass., March 30.—Three men, two of them dead and the other fatally hurt, were found in a heap on top of a freight car at the local Boston & Maine Railroad station yesterday.

Apparently while riding on top of the car, the men had struck an overhead bridge.

The unconscious man revived sufficiently to state that his name was Thomas Donovan, and that he and the other men had robbed a tobacco store is the Pure, Concentrated Essence of Prime Beef. Being solid, it cannot be adulterated, and is more economical, because it goes four times as far as other brands.

Armour's Solid Extract of Beef

(POTTED IN CANADA)

Other extracts and fluid beefs lack strength and quality. Fluid beefs contain water, salt and other ingredients.

Insist on Armour's, and you have what is best and most economical.

"CULINARY WRINKLES" is a booklet which tells numberless ways in which to use Armour's Extract of Beef. Send for it. It's free.

TIMELY TOPICS.

EASTER MORN.

Again the Lord of Life and Light
  Awakes the kindling ray,
Unseals the eyelids of the morn,
  And pours increasing day.

Oh, what a night was that which wrapt
  The heathen world in gloom!
Oh, what a sun, which broke this day
  Triumphant from the tomb!

This day be grateful homage paid,
  And loud Hosannas sung;
Let gladness dwell in every heart,
  And praise on every tongue.

Ten thousand differing lips shall join
  To hail this welcome morn,
Which scatters blessings from its wings
  To nations yet unborn.

The powers of darkness leagues in vain
  To bind his soul in death:
He shook their kingdom, when he fell
  With his expiring breath.

And now his conquering chariot wheels
  Ascend the lofty skies:
While broke beneath his powerful cross
  Death's iron sceptre lies.

Exalted high at God's right hand,
  The Lord of all below:
Through him is pardoning love dispensed
  And boundless blessings flow.

And still for erring, guilty man
  A brother's pity flows:
And still his bleeding heart is touch'd
  With memory of our woes.

To thee, my Saviour and my King,
  Glad homage let me give:
And still prepared like thee to die,
  With thee that I may live!

When it is considered that English people conquered and settled and defended this country and spent British taxes on it for a hundred years before it blossomed into the Dominion of Canada, Hon. As they flash, flash, flash,

Were the hats, hats, hats,
  Hats, hats, hats—
The fearful and the cheerful string

Sinclair's

gambols into the limelight with the assertion that no one will dare to dispute that Adam was the best husband in the world at that time. It is certainly a fact that he took what his wife gave him to eat without complaining, and no proof has ever been put forward that he kicked up a row about Eve's Easter bonnet. Old Adam seems justly entitled to the belt.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has assured the Commons that he will attend the conference in London. Certainly, he has caused his mechanical majority to vote down Bourassa's motion to investigate Fowler's scandal charges, and thinks he has now nothing to fear. What about Emmerson? Is not the charge against him an "Eye-opener?"

The end is not yet, after the Easter holidays Mr. Bourassa has given notice of his intention to call Mr. Fowler to account. If Mr. Bourassa directs his attack upon Mr. Fowler, and the Opposition, omitting any reference to misdeeds of Ministers, he will find Ministers and their mechanical majority falling into line. He must not touch the anointed.

• • •

Who would not be a counsel learned in the law? Frank Arnoldi, K. C. has sued Geo. R. Cockburn, whom he defended in the Ontario Bank suits for the modest sum of $7,528 and 58 cents. Is it any wonder Cockburn fights it?

• • •

How "childlike and bland" was Sir Wilfrid when he, with the coyness of a modest maiden, innocently informed the House of Commons "that he had questioned Mr. Hyman as to certain unpleasant rumors which were current last October and November, and that the Minister of Public Works declared that they were unfounded." Is it possible that the innocent Sir Wilfrid expected the gallant minister to acknowledge it?

• • •

A remarkable feature in the debate on the Bourassa motion, is that not one of the Ministerialists, from Sir Wilfrid to Carvell, said one word against Fowler, who made the damaging threats, but confined themselves to abusing Foster. Why?

• • •

The case of the local policemen, who as will be seen by the article in another column, have made a demand for more pay, has two sides to it. In the first place, there is no doubt at all that the men, at present, are not being properly paid. Four hundred and fifty dollars per annum is not, in these days of expensive living, a fair wage. The Intelligencer pointed this out when the men were appointed to the force last June.

• • •

On the other hand, as the Police Commissioners pointed out, the men knew just what they were engaged at, and cheerfully agreed to serve a year at the salary named. The time to talk about salaries, the Commissioners say, is when the year has expired. There is force in this contention. The Intelligencer is not condemning the men for asking more pay, but, as they agreed to serve a year at a stated figure, they should do so. Public opinion, we believe, can be depended upon to see that they receive more adequate wages next year.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

HOW THEY DID IT IN OTTAWA.

After two weeks of a strenuous campaign the efforts of the Y.M.C.A. building fund committee to raise within the fortnight $200,000 for a new Y.M.C.A. building in Ottawa was brought to a successful close Thursday midnight. Thursday noon there was $37,651 still to be raised. The most strenuous efforts were put forth and the whole city was canvassed by over 200 active workers of all ages. The last $5,000 needed was subscribed by cable by Lord Strathcona. Over $60,000 was raised the last day. This is the largest day's record of this kind in America.

Our juniors had a sweet taffy pull yesterday.

The Waverleys had a delightful trip to Port Hope. The way our boys shot the ball in the basket fairly dazed the spectators. They scored five baskets before Port Hope got one. The return game will probably be played next Friday.

Every day ladies are calling with their Easter thank offering strips. They are all numbered. Will those having strips kindly send them in empty or filled next week?

The McMaster Band will hold a mass meeting for men in the Carman opera house Sunday at 4 o'clock under Y.M.C.A. auspices.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

The Metric System in England.

The metric system has been rejected by a decisive vote in the British House of Commons. English merchants and manufacturers are evidently too firmly wedded to their idol to be ready for so radical a change in standard accounting. It would mean to them a heavy bill of expense to alter their patents and processes to conform to the French enumeration.

The same reasons exist for opposition in the United States. Although the metric system is there in vogue for all purposes of official weighing and measuring, there is a strong feeling against its general adoption on account of the trouble and expense which every one would be put to in changing the method of enumeration. The decimal system is thought good enough.

That the metric system has been brought into use in most of the British colonies was used as an argument for its adoption in Britain. But it seems to have had little effect in convincing the British commercial public that it is needful "at home."

In view of the prospect that the change would be made in the United States at this Congress, steps were taken last year to educate the Canadian public on the subject, under the impression that were the metric system adopted in general practice by the Republic this country would find it useful or expedient to join the procession. For this purpose Prof. McLennan, director of physics at Toronto University, was employed to deliver a series of fifty lectures in explanation of the metric system. He addressed boards of trade in every city of Canada, including Belleville. But it does not appear that the people of this country have become aroused to any great extent to the necessity of changing their mode.

The schools do not take kindly to the radical alteration that would be called for, or recognize the need for it. Meanwhile the official method in Canada is the one which the British House of Commons has declined to adopt. It is supposed to simplify calculations and be more suitable for the work of the revenue officers than any other.

Suppressio Veri.

Suppressio veri is the worst way of misleading a reader. The Globe of Toronto justifies the rejection of the Bourassa motion for investigation into Ministerial misconduct on the ground that the motion was made on going into Supply, and therefore "had to be accepted or "rejected in its entirety," and "that "as it now stands the vote means "nothing."

Constitutionally, The Globe is not so ignorant of Parliamentary usages as not to know that its position is incorrect. Motions have often been made on going into Supply and accepted by the Government of the day, it being distinctly understood by both mover and the Government that the acceptance of the motion was not to be considered as one of a vote of want of confidence in the Government. Precedents to justify this course can be found in the Imperial as well as in our own Parliament.

This was a case in which such a course should have been adopted and would have been had not Sir Wilfrid been determined to smother things up. In addition to this, The Globe suppressed the fact that Sir Wilfrid was consulted by Mr. Bourassa as to the proper course to pursue, and that he advised the making of the motion on going into Supply, and not to bring the question before the House as one of Privilege.

It is true that when Mr. Bourassa gave this information to the House after a complaint had been made that he should not have made the motion on going into Supply, Sir Wilfrid rose and stated that he had afterwards suggested its being brought before the House as one of Privilege, so that an amendment could be made.

To this Mr. Bourassa properly objected, knowing that an inconsequential amendment would be moved, meaning nothing, and that the majority supporting the Government would vote for it.

This policy of The Globe's of telling just half the truth is one of its old tricks to deceive.

DOCTORS EXCITED OVER OLD THEORY

A "NEW THEORY" THAT WAS DISCOVERED A QUARTER CENTURY AGO BY GREAT SCIENTIST.

The Toronto General Hospital is making a series of tests of a "new theory" in medical science, which they claim will revolutionize the theory and practice of medicine. The system is, find the germ of any disease, then by a method of increasing the patient's ability to digest or kill off the microbes by increasing the white corpuscles of the blood, and filling it with a serum, make his recovery possible. This is in reality Dr. T. A. Slocum's theory of thirty years ago. Dr. T. A. Slocum said: "The white corpuscles of the blood are the foe of disease. If I can sufficiently increase these and strengthen digestion and circulation, I have solved the problem of overcoming disease." Dr. Slocum devoted his life to the working out of this problem. When, after innumerable experiments through days and nights and months and years of patient labor, he discovered that wonderful remedy, Psychine, he exclaimed "Eureka, I have found it." For a quarter of a century this remedy has been doing exactly what the authorities at the General Hospital are at present racking their brain to accomplish. Psychine is exactly what they are looking for. It enables the white corpuscles of the blood to overcome bacteria and disease of every kind. Speaking of a number of cases that came under their observation, J. R. Andrews and Co., of Bishop's Crossing, says:

"The party whose case was most remarkable, having been given up by several doctors, among them consulting experts from Montreal, and who, so far as can be determined, was restored to comparatively good health by the use of Psychine, most of which I supplied. I have to direct you to their new home in Edmonton, Alta., formerly Cookshire, Que. This woman was past audible speech except a whisper, was only given ten days as a possibility, friends had been to say good-bye, and so forth. No other remedy, so far as I know, was used. Well known case, prominent family, well-to-do also. Yours in haste, (Signed) "J. R. ANDREWS & CO.,

To-day's Market.

As was anticipated, the Easter market to-day was a large one in every respect. During the forenoon buyers and sellers filled the interior of the market building, whilst the square outside was well filled up with vehicles. Prices, as a rule, were good for all products offered for sale, and there were but few changes to note.

Butter, whilst offered for sale in considerable quantities, sold at 27c to 30c per pound, the latter price being exceptional.

Whilst the supply of eggs was apparently large the price for the same kept up. Towards the close of the market they sold at 16c and 17c, the ruling price, however, was 18c per dozen.

Dressed poultry was not plentiful, and in consequence good prices were obtained. Chickens sold as high as $1.20 to $1.40 per pair.

Some maple syrup was offered for sale and 40 cents per quart was the ruling price.

Our quotations are as follows:

Eggs—16c to 19c.
Butter—27c to 30c lb.
Hay—$9 to $10 ton.
Fall Wheat—70c bus.

HEALTH IN SPRING.

NATURE NEEDS ASSISTANCE IN MAKING NEW HEALTH-GIVING BLOOD.

Spring is the season when your system needs toning up. In the spring you must have new blood just as the trees must have new sap. Nature demands it. Without new blood you will feel weak and languid; you may have twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia, occasional headaches, variable appetite, pimples or eruptions of the skin, or a pale pasty complexion. These are sure signs that the blood is out of order. A tonic is needed to give new energy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best tonic in all the world. They make new, rich blood—your greatest need in spring. They clear the skin, drive out disease and make tired depressed men and women bright, active and strong. Mrs. John McAuley, Douglastown, Que., proves the great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in building up people who have been weakened and run down. She says: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of great help to me. My blood was weak and watery and I was badly run down. But through the use of the pills my health was fully restored. I always recommend them to my friends who may be ailing."

There are fraudulent imitations of Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and to protect yourself see that the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around each box. Do not take any other so-called pink pills. If your dealer has not got the genuine send to The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and get the pills by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

A Hindoo mahout was employed with a working elephant in Bangkok, Siam, and frequently used a steel goad in defiance of all warnings. The result was that his elephant made frequent attempts to kill him, and finally the man was discharged. Nearly four years afterward, by a most remarkable coincidence, both elephant and mahout met again in Maulmain, Burma, and no sooner was the big tusker out of sight of the sawmill and well into the forest than he curled his trunk up backward, seized his old persecutor by the neck, hurled him to the ground, and in an instant a mighty forefoot had crushed out his life.

Bewitched.

Morrison, an English traveler of the seventeenth century, while at Dantzic, Prussia, says he "saw a mill which, without the help of human hands, did saw boards. It had a great iron wheel, which did not only drive the saw, but which did also hook in and turn the logs on to the saw." Dr. John Dee must have seen a similar mill at Prague. Of it he says, "I saw me a mill at Prague of which I verily believe the devil himself was master."

Literary Notes

BACKWARD CHILDREN AND CRIME.

One of the most interesting phases of this work is its effect upon the education, and therefore, upon the future welfare of the backward child, the mentally deficient child, and the truant.

It has been shown that 95 per cent. of "backward children" and of mentally deficient children have physical defects which can be remedied, thus improving their mentality as well as their physical health. According to the City Superintendent of Schools, 40 per cent. of the children of the schools of New York are below the grades in which they should be, according to their ages. The Department of Health has found that 2 per cent. of all the children thus far examined were mentally deficient, and in nearly all these cases adenoid growths, defects of vision, or other remediable disabilities existed. In the special classes for defectives in Public School 110, 95 per cent. had adenoid growths in the throat.

When the backward child and the mentally deficient child shall receive the special attention which they require at the hands of physicians and teachers, especially when such children shall be taught in special classes or schools by specially trained educators, then only can we say that we have done all that is in our power for these unfortunates. The physical examination of backward or mentally deficient children, therefore, is but one step in the right direction. — From "The Doctor in the Public School," by John J. Cronin, M. D., in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April.

"Safe Lock" Shingles can't leak.

They are the original interlocking metal shingles and the only ones which leave absolutely no nail holes exposed to the weather. They are proof against lightning, fire and water.

When we first brought out the "Safe Lock" Shingle, other makers were selling cleat shingles. Several imitations have appeared, but they have not solved the vital problem of concealing all the nail holes.

Remember that "Safe Lock" Shingles are nailed above the lock. Others are nailed through the lock, thus leaving nail holes exposed to the drifting snow and moisture.

Being heavily galvanized, "Safe Lock" Shingles will never rust. No dust or dirt can lodge on their smooth surface, and the result is clean rainwater in the cistern. Besides, our galvanized "Safe Lock" Shingles may be counted upon to outlast a generation, without one cent for repairs.

Don't take our word for this, alone. Ask our customers in your neighborhood, how they like our goods and our liberal treatment.

THE RADIANT CHRIST.

The new religion lies in being kind;
Faith works for men where once it knelt to pray,
Faith knows but hope where once it reckoned loss.
Ascending paths its patient feet have trod
Man looks within and finds salvation there,
Release the suffering Saviour from the cross
And give the waiting world its radiant God!

It is dangerous to snore loudly or have a coughing spasm in Oregon where a man has killed a roommate because he snored so loudly that the murderer could not sleep. He arose at 5 o'clock in the morning after a sleepless night and battered in the head of his victim with an axe. Not many years ago a diminutive cook of a logging camp was seized by one of the loggers and held head downward in a water-butt until he was drowned, because he had a bad cough which prevented the murderer from sleeping. Of all the strange excuses that have been given for the commission of crime, these instances would appear to be about the strangest. It is dangerous to cough and it is dangerous to snore in Oregon.

In granting a judgment for the insignificant sum of $2 a Buffalo judge recently remarked sarcastically: "I am compelled to find for the plaintiff for a small amount—far too small to justify a litigation between two busy men; but they have both had the satisfaction of employing lawyers and trying the case a full day, and now the court hopes they will have the pleasure of paying them."

America leads the world as a maker of false teeth. This product is sent to Japan, China, India — all over the world. Indeed, it is not beyond the limit of possibility that cannibal feasts are conducted with the aid of American-made artificial teeth. Within a few years every dentist made false teeth for his customer in a back office now they are turned out by millions in big factories.

To one of London's fairest and youngest peeresses, who became wildly insane almost from her honeymoon, which followed one of the most brilliant pre-Lenten weddings of 1906 has been traced what is called the mysterious document known as the "Snowball Prayer," which has agitated the minds of hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the United Kingdom. Each person who received a copy of the prayer by mail was requested to copy it and post it to nine friends within nine days from its receipt. Those who did not comply were threatened with some dire misfortune, while those who complied were promised great joy. Newspapers and the leading clergy, including bishops, publicly recommended that warned recipients burn the prayer. This is not unlike the Endless Chain prayer which was sent to residents of Belleville and elsewhere in this province, with a request that after reading it they pass it on to someone else. Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, was mentioned as the originator of "The Endless Chain," but he denied the honor and recommended those who had received it to burn it.

A wayward pig once nearly brought on a war between Great Britain and the United States. The incident occurred on San Juan Island, one of the Canal de Haro archipelago. The pig had wandered upon the property of the Hudson Bay Co. and rooted up some potatoes. The animal was impounded and the settler, an American, was assessed for the damage by a British justice of the peace who was stationed on the Island. The ownership of the island was in dispute at the time and the settlers appealed to the United States military commander who was stationed up Puget Sound. The commander landed a company of troops on the island and then the "war" began. A fleet of 18 British warships was sent over from China and matters looked threatening when commissioners were appointed and arranged for a joint occupation of the island until the dispute could be settled by arbitration. Strange to say, the difficulty that has brought on the trouble between the tin-pot governments of Central America arose over a mule, which the soldiers of one nation stole from a farmer of the adjoining nation. Fierce state papers tions are likely to be involved because of the stolen mule. Great events from small beginnings often flow. A pig and a mule! It would seem that there is no animal so insignificant or humble that it may not play an important part in shaping the destiny of a nation.

To Owners Of Bad Breath—

FOUL ODOR OF INDIGESTION, SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING STOPPED AT ONCE WITH STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odors which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 53 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Really Worth Reading.

At certain times in the year, and particularly a month or two before the Christmas holidays, new books come into newspaper offices for review faster than any one man can possibly read and review them with justice either to himself or the books. He glances through them hastily, unless they are by noted authors, gets a salient point here and there and "writes them up" as best he can. Then he forgets all about them.

"A friend came to me one day and expressed his gratification at the way I had written up a new novel by a comparatively unknown author," said the literary editor of a Chicago paper.

"'You expressed my idea of it exactly,' he said. 'It is one of the remarkable books of the year. The plot is absolutely unique, the treatment of it is bold and original and the dialogue crisp and delightful. It will make a great hit.'

"'Well,' I said, 'if it is as good as all that I'll read it.'"

How the Gems Rank.

In the gem kingdom the ruby, the diamond, the emerald and the sapphire constitute "the big four" and take precedence—and in the order named—of all other precious stones. The pearl is of course not a stone. It has a standard of its own. The expert test of the gem is its color, its degree of clearness and its perfection of cutting. Upon the last depends its brilliancy. In the diamond the "brilliant" cutting holds first place. The other stones are cut altogether differently—they are crystallized in different systems—in fact, they differ in another respect, the diamonds being a mineral carbon, the finer ruby (the oriental) a variety of corundum, the emerald a variety of beryl and the sapphire a colored variety of corundum. What is technically known as the "step cut" is an essential to bring out the fire of the last three.

How the Pulse Varies.

The human pulse has rather a wide range, but the general average may be put about as follows: At birth, 140; at two years, 100; at from sixteen to nineteen years, 80; at manhood, 75; old age, 60. There are, however, great variations consistent with health. Napoleon's pulse is said to have been only forty-four in the minute. A case is also related of a healthy man of eighty-seven whose pulse was seldom over thirty during the last two years of his life and sometimes not more than twenty-eight. Another man of eighty-seven years of age enjoyed good health and spirits with a pulse of twenty-nine, and there is also on record the curious instance of a man whose pulse in health was never more than forty-five, and, to be consistent in his inconsistency, when he had fever his pulse fell to forty instead of rising, as is usual.

Wrestling For Exercise.

Wrestling, the "microcosmos of gymnastics," is a fine form of bodily exercise for those who enjoy hard muscular work after the tedious business hours of the day and may be practiced—adapting it to circumstances—by the man of a ripe age as well as by the boy of ten or twelve, especially the form known in this country as catch-as-catch-can (which is about identical to one form of Swiss wrestling). I exchanged the Greco-Roman (or German gymnastic) style for this one about twelve years ago, and I was then over forty years old, and still enjoy it much if my opponent is of my own weight or a little lighter and if it is deprived of its potential roughness by a gentlemanly spirit of the partners.

Precautions of Old Time Doctors.

It was formerly the practice among physicians to carry a cane having a hollow head, the top of which was gold, pierced with holes like a pepper box. The top contained a small amount of aromatic powder or of snuff, and on entering the house or room where a disease supposed to be infectious prevailed the doctor would strike his cane on the floor to agitate the powder and then apply it to his nose; hence all the old prints of physicians represent them with canes to their noses.

A Marriage Warning.

In Germany all marriages have to be contracted before a register previous to the ceremony in church, which is optional. The law requires public notice to be given of the match, and this notice is generally exhibited in a box hung up at the town hall or other municipal building. The following official announcement appeared lately in a small town: "From today there is fixed at the town hall the new box, in which all those who intend to enter the married state will be hung."

Not Labor Lost.

The safe bore a paper stating that there was nothing of value within. Nevertheless the burglar blew the receptacle open, finding the statement correct. "Well," he remarked, gathering up his tools, "it's worth something to ascertain that there are still people who tell the truth."

The Opportunity.

Opportunity has all her hair on her forehead, but when she has passed you cannot call her back. She has no tuft whereby you can lay hold on her, for she is bald on the back part of her head and never returns.—Francois Rabelais.

Learn Dressmaking.
IN TWO WEEKS.

We teach you everything from the plainest shirt waist to the most elaborate toilette that can be found in the fashion books. We show you how to put together not only the lining but all the outer goods in coats, skirts waists, wrappers, sleeves, children's dresses, collars, etc. Why spend months at a shop where you do nothing but hem, overcast, sew on hooks and eyes, and then after you have served your time there, what do you know about cutting? Absolutely nothing! For you will know no more how to cut out a dress at the end of a year than you did the first day you went there: so why spend your time there; you can come and try for a week and see for yourself what it's like, and as there is nothing to be paid in advance, you certainly would not lose anything by trying.

We have taught over 2,000 in this way within the past six years, and all recommend it very highly; we teach you how to use a chart the first day you are with us; also guarantee that the waists made by this chart will not draw nor pull out of place when raising arm.

Charge for full course is only $10, to be paid when course is completed, if satisfied, including one of the most perfect fitting systems in use, which we give free.

We will teach at Belleville from April 8th to April 20th. Hours for day class from 8.30 to 5. All wishing to learn or for full particulars be sure to see us at the KYLE HOUSE, on Saturday, April 6th, between 10 and 5 o'clock. An evening class will also be taught; in this class we teach shirt waists, sleeves and dressing sacques only. Terms $4 and hours from 7 to 9. Remember there is no pay in advance, you can all come and try.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

[There was a real "No. 101." Unpublished M.S. despatches now in the Record Office of the British Museum reveal the interesting fact that on more than one occasion the British Government obtained important French state secrets through an agent known to the British Ministers as "No. 101." Who this mysterious agent was, whether it was a man or a woman, why and how he or she so successfully played the part of a traitor, have not, so far as is known to the present writer, been discovered by historians or archivists. The references in the confidential correspondence supply no answer to such questions. If the British Ministers knew all the truth they kept it to themselves and it perished with them. Doubtless there were good reasons for strict secrecy. But it is more than possible that they themselves did not know, that throughout they simply dealt with a cipher, whose secret they never penetrated. It is, however, clear that "No. 101" was in a position to discover some of the most intricate designs in the policy of the French Court, and that the British Government, through agents, was satisfied of the genuineness of the secrets for which it paid handsomely.—W. C.]

CHAPTER I.

One evening in the January of 1745, the critical year of Fontenoy and of the great Jacobite rising, a middle-aged gentleman, the private secretary of a Secretary of State, was working as usual in the room of a house in Cleveland Row. The table at which he sat was littered with papers, but at this precise moment he had leaned back in his chair with a puzzled expression and his left hand in perplexity pushed his wig awry.

"Extraordinary," he muttered, "most extraordinary." The remark was apparently caused by an official letter in his other hand—a letter marked "Most Private," which came from The Hague, and the passage which he had just read ran:

"I have the honor to submit to you the following important communication in cipher, received, through our agent at Paris, from 'No. 101.'" etc.

On the table lay the cipher communication together with a decoded version which the secretary now studied for the third time. In explicit language the despatch supplied detailed information as to certain recent highly confidential negotiations between the Jacobite party in Paris and the French King, Louis XV., a revelation in short of the most weighty state secrets of the French Government.

"'No. 101,'" the secretary murmured, scratching his head, "always 'No. 101.' It is marvellous, incredible. How the devil can it be done?"

But there was no answer to this question, save the fact which provoked it—that closely ciphered paper with its disquieting information so curiously and mysteriously obtained.

"Ah." He jumped up and hurriedly straightened his wig. "Good evening to you."

The new-comer was a man of about five-and-thirty, tall, finely built, and of a muscular physique, with a face of considerable power. Most noticeable, perhaps, in his appearance was his air of disciplined reserve, emphasized in his strong mouth and chin, but almost belied by the glow in his large, dark eyes, which looked you through and through with a strangely watchful innocence.

"There is work to be done, sir?" he asked as he took the chair offered.

"Exactly. To-day we have received most gratifying and surprising information from our friend 'No. 101'—and we have the promise of more."

"Yes." The brief monosyllable was spoken almost softly, but the dark eyes gleamed, as they roamed over the room.

"The communications from 'No. 101' have begun again," the secretary pursued; "that in itself is interesting. The Secretary of State therefore desired me to send at once for you, the most trustworthy secret agent we have. In a very few minutes Captain Statham of the First Foot Guards will be here—"

"Sent, I think, from the Low Countries at the request of our agents at The Hague?"

"Ah, I see you are as well informed as usual. You are quite right. Are you," he laughed, "ever wrong?"

The spy paused. "The communications then from 'No. 101' concern the military operations?" was all he said.

"Not yet. But," he almost laughed, "we have a promise they will. You know the situation. This will be a critical year in Flanders. Great Britain and her allies propose to make a great, an unprecedented effort; his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland will have the supreme command. Unhappily the French under the Marechal de Saxe apparently propose to make even greater efforts. With such a general as the Marechal against us, we cannot afford to neglect any means, fair or foul, by which his Royal Highness can defeat the enemy."

"Then you wish me to assist 'No 101' in betraying the French plans to our army under the Duke of Cumberland?"

"Not quite," the other replied; "we cannot spare you as yet. But you have had dealings with this mysterious cipher, and we ask you to place all your experience at the disposal of Captain Statham."

"I agree most willingly," was the prompt answer.

"This curious 'No. 101,'" continued the secretary slowly, "you do not know personally, I believe?"

The other was looking at him carefully but with a puzzled air.

"I ask because—because I am deeply curious."

"I am as curious as yourself, sir. 'No. 101' is to me simply a cipher number,—nothing more, nothing less."

"I feared so," said the secretary. "But is it not incredible? The information sent always proves to be accurate, but there is never a trace of how, why, or by whom it is obtained."

"That is so. Secrecy is the condition on which we get it. We pay handsomely—we obtain the truth—and we are left in the dark."

"Shall we ever discover the secret, think you?"

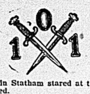
"I am sure not." The tone was conviction itself.

At this moment Capt. Statham was ushered in, a typical English gentleman and officer, ruddy of countenance, blue-eyed, frankness and courage in every line of his handsome face and his athletic figure.

"Captain Statham—Mr. George Onslow of the Secret Service—" the secretary began promptly, adding with a laugh as the two shook hands: "Ah, I see you have met before. I am not surprised. Mr. Onslow knows everybody [illegible] tlemen, I will leave you to your business." He bowed and left the room.

Onslow took the chair he had vacated and for a quarter of an hour Captain Statham and he chatted earnestly on the position of affairs in the Low Countries, and the war then raging from the Mediterranean to the North Sea, on the vast efforts being made by the French for a great campaign in the coming spring, the military genius of the famous Marechal de Saxe, the Austrian and Dutch allies of Great Britain, and the new English royal commander-in-chief who was shortly to leave to take over the work of saving Flanders from the arms of Louis XV. Onslow then briefly explained what the Secret Service agents of the Duke of Cumberland were to expect and why.

"Communications," he wound up, "from this mysterious spy and traitor, 'No. 101,' invariably come like bolts from the blue. They are, of course, always in cipher and they will reach you by the most innocent hands—a peasant, a lackey, a tavern wench—sometimes you will simply find them, say, under your pillow, or in your boots. No one can tell how they get there. But never neglect them, however strange or unusual their contents may be, for they are never wrong—never! The genuine ones you will recognize by this mark—" he took up the ciphered paper and put his fingers on a sign— "two crossed daggers and the figures 101 written in blood—you see—so":



Captain Statham stared at the sign, entranced.

"A soldier," Onslow remarked with his slow smile, "can always distinguish blood from red ink—is it not so?" Statham nodded. "Remember, then, those crossed daggers with the figures in blood are the only genuine mark. All others are forgeries—reject them unhesitatingly. Let me show it you again." He produced from his pocketbook a paper with the design in the corner, which, when compared with the one on the table, corresponded exactly.

"I warn you," Onslow added, "because the existence of this 'No. 101' is becoming known to the French—they suspect treachery—their Secret Service is clever and they may attempt to deceive you. As they do not know the countersign, though they may have guessed at the treachery of 'No. 101' they cannot really hoodwink you. Cipher papers which come in the name of '101' without that remarkable signature are simply a nom de guerre, of politics, of love, of anything you like, but they are either a forgery or a trap; so put them in the fire."

Statham sat pondering, his eyes riveted on the crossed daggers. "You, sir," he began, "have had dealings with this mysterious person. Is it a man or a woman?"

"Ah!" Onslow laughed gently. "Every one asks that, every man at least. I cannot answer; no one, indeed, can. My opinion? Well, I change it every month. But these are the facts: It is absolutely certain that the traitor insists on high, very high pay; absolutely certain that he or she has access to the very best society in Paris and at the Court, and is at home in the most confidential circles of the King and his ministers. We have even had documents from the private cabinet of Louis XV. Furthermore, the traitor can convey the information in such a way as to baffle detection. If it is a woman she is a very remarkable one; if it be a man he is one who controls important women. Perhaps it is both. Such knowledge, so peculiar, so accurate, so extensive, such skill and such ingenuity scarcely seem to be within the powers of any individual man or woman."

"Every word you say sharpens my surprise and my curiosity."

"Yes, and every transaction you will have with the cipher will sharpen it more and more. I have been fifteen years in the Secret Service, but this business is to-day as much a puzzle as it ever was, for 'No. 101' has taught me a very important secret, one unknown even to the French King's ministers, which, so jealously guarded as it is, may never be discovered in the King's lifetime or at all. Can you really believe that Louis, while professing to act through his ministers, has stealthily built up a little secret service of his own whose work is to spy on those ministers, on his ambassadors, generals, and their agents, to receive privately instructions wholly different from what the King has officially sanctioned, and frequently directly to thwart, check, annul, and defeat by intrigue and diplomacy the official policy of their sovereign?"

"Is it possible?"

"It is a fact," Onslow said emphatically. "But the King, 'No. 101,' you and I and one or two others alone know it. Let me give you a proof. To-day officially Louis through his ministers has disavowed the Jacobites. The ministers believe their master is sincere; many of them regret it, but their instructions are explicit. In truth, through those private agents I spoke of, the King is encouraging the Jacobites in every way and is actually thwarting the steps and the policy which he has officially and publicly commanded."

"And the ministers are ignorant of this?"

"Absolutely. But mark you, unless the King is very careful, some day there will come an awkward crisis. His Majesty will be threatened with the disclosure of this secret policy which has his royal authority,—but which gives the lie to his public policy, equally authentic. And unless he can suppress the first he must be shown to be doubly a royal liar—not to dwell on the consequences to France."

"What a curious king!" Statham ejaculated.

"Curious!" Onslow laughed softly; "more than curious, because no one knows the real Louis. The world says he is an ignorant, superstitious, indolent, extravagant, heartless dullard in a crown who has only two passions—hunting and women. It is true; he is the prince of hunters and the emperor of rakes. But he is also a worker, cunning, impenetrable, obstinate, remorseless."

"But why does he play such a dangerous game?"

"God knows. The real Louis no man [illegible]

Statham began to pace up and down. "What are the traitor's motives?" he demanded, abruptly.

"Ah, there you beat me." Onslow rose and confronted him. "My dear sir, a traitor's motives may be gold, or madness, ambition, love, jealousy, revenge, singly or together, but above all love and revenge."

Statham made an impatient gesture. "I would give my commission," he exclaimed "to know the meaning of this mystery."

A sympathetic gleam lingered in Onslow's eyes as he calmly scrutinized the young officer. "Ah," he said, almost pityingly, "you begin to feel the spell of this mystery wrapped in a number, the spell of 'No. 101,' the fatal spell."

"Fatal?" Statham took him up sharply.

"Yes. I must warn you. Every single person who, in his dealings with this cipher, has got near to the heart of the truth has so far met with a violent end. It is not pleasant, but it is a fact. And the explanation is easy. Those who might betray the truth are removed by accident or design, some by this method, some by that. They pass into the silence of the grave, perhaps just when they could have revealed what they had discovered." He paused, for Statham was visibly impressed. "Really there is no danger," he added; "but I say as earnestly as I can, because you are young, and life is sweet for the young, for God's sake stifle your curiosity, resist the spell—that fatal spell. Take the information as it comes, and ask no questions, push no inquiries, however tempting and easy the path to success seems, or, as sure as I stand here, His Majesty King George the Second will lose a promising and gallant officer."

Statham walked away and resumed his seat. "And you, Mr. Onslow?" he demanded, looking up with the profoundest interest.

"Do I practice what I preach? Well, I am a spy by profession: to some men such a life is everything—it is, at least, to me. But I do not conceal from myself that if my curiosity overpowers me my hour for silence, too, will come—the silence of the unknown grave in an unknown land."

"Then is no one ever to know?" Statham muttered with childish petulance.

"Probably not. A hundred years hence the secret that baffles you and me will baffle our successors."

Statham's heels tapped on the floor. "Perhaps," he pronounced, slowly, "perhaps the truth is well worth the price that is paid for it—death and the silence of the grave."

Onslow stared at him. His eyes gleamed curiously as if they were fixed on visions known only to the inner mind. "Perhaps," he repeated gravely. "But really," he added, with a sudden lightness, "there is no one to persuade us it is so. Come, Captain Statham, you have not forgotten supper, I hope, and that I propose to introduce you to-night to the most seductive enchantress in London?"

"No, indeed. All day I have been hungering for that supper. In the Low Countries we do not get suppers presided over by ladies as you have described to me."

"In the French army they have both the ladies and the suppers," Onslow replied, laughing. "And, my dear Captain, to the victors of the spring will fall the spoils. To-night shall be a foretaste, and if my enchantress does not make you forget 'No. 101,' I despair of the gallantry of British officers."

He locked up the papers, chatting all the time, and then the two gentlemen went out together.

CHAPTER II.

For some minutes the pair walked in silence, as if each was still brooding on the mysterious cipher whose treachery to France had brought them together. But presently Statham touched Onslow on the arm. Tell me," he said, "something of this enchantress. I am equally curious about her."

"And I know very little," Onslow replied. "Her mother, if you believe scandal, was a famous Paris flower girl, who was mistress in turn to half the young rakes of the noblesse; her father is supposed to have been an English gentleman. Your eyes will tell you she is gifted with a singular beauty, which is her only dowry. Gossip says that she makes that dowry go a long way, for she has two passions, flowers and jewels."

"And she resides in London?"

"She resides nowhere," Onslow answered with his slow smile; "she is here to-day and away to-morrow. I have met her in Paris, in Brussels, Vienna, Rome. She talks French as easily as she talks English, and wherever she is her apartments are always haunted by the men of pleasure, and by the grand monde. Women you never meet there, for she is not a favorite with her own sex, which is not surprising."

"Pardon," Statham asked, "but is she—is she, too, in the Secret Service?"

"God bless my soul! No; we don't employ ladies with a passion for jewels. It would expose them and us to too many temptations. And, besides, politics are the one thing this goddess abhors. Eating, drinking, the pleasures of the body, poetry, philosophy, romance, the arts, and the pleasures of the mind she adores; luxury and jewels she covets, but politics, no! They are a forbidden topic. For me her friendship is convenient, for the politicians are always in her company. When will statesmen learn," he added, "that making love to a lady such as she is is more powerful in unlocking the heart and unsealing the lips than wine?" "And her name?"

"She has not got one. 'Princess' we call her and she deserves it, for she is fit to adorn the Palace of Versailles."

"Perhaps," said Statham, "she will some day."

"Not a doubt of it—if Louis will only pay enough."

They had reached the house. Statham noticed that Onslow neither gave his own nor asked for his hostess's name. He showed the footman a card, which was returned, and immediately they were ushered into two handsome apartments with door leading the one into the other, and in the inner of the two they found some half-dozen gentlemen talking. Three of them wore stars and ribbons, but all unmistakably belonged to that grand monde of which Onslow had spoken. From behind the group the lady quietly walked forward and curtsied deferentially to Statham, who felt her eyes resting on his with no small interest as his companion kissed her hand. The secret agent had not exaggerated. This woman was in-

Newbro's Herpicide

BENEFITED

Miss Clutter's Hair

Read her letter about it:

"I herewith enclose you one of my latest photographs, which will show you what Newbro's Herpicide has done for my hair. Since using your remedy my hair is much longer than it was and it has that lustre to it that ones hair always has when the scalp is in a healthy condition."

(Signed) MISS MADALINE CLUTTER.
3953 Michigan Avenue,
Flat 210. Chicago, Illinois.

The immense popularity of Newbro's Herpicide particularly among the better class, is due to the fact that it never disappoints. It does all and more than is claimed for it.

Its delightful fragrance, perfect clearness and freedom from grease or oil, appeal to the discriminating, and its cleansing, refreshing and health-giving effect upon the scalp is immediately apparent Herpicide makes the hair light and fluffy and gives it a silken gloss.

Extraordinarily long hair is a gift of Nature that relatively few possess, but not many would complain if they could save Nature's head covering in its original beauty and luxuriance.

The dandruff germ is the greatest enemy of abundant hair. This is on account of the highly contagious nature of dandruff, which makes it almost impossible to escape the disease without the occasional use of a germ destroying solution.

Newbro's Herpicide is the ORIGINAL remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." It promptly eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and (except in chronic baldness) restores the hair to its former health and activity. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

MISS MADELINE CLUTTER.

SILVER BIRD is surrounded by the greatest producing mines in the Cobalt District.

SILVER BIRD is absolutely inside property, consisting of twenty acres (patented), being the west half of the northeast quarter of the north half of Lot 3, Concession 6, Coleman.

SILVER BIRD is a mine in full operation, with two 25 h.p. boilers, steam hoist, steam drills and all machinery and buildings necessary to complete an operating mine.

SILVER BIRD
WILL POSITIVELY ADVANCE TO 50 CENTS ON OR BEFORE MAY 10TH.

Recent advice received from Superintendent Gauthier states that the shaft is now down 107 feet, that he has opened up two new veins showing much higher values, and that he will immediately commence drifting. He says he expects soon to encounter the Great O'Brien and La Rose vein.

SILVER BIRD

NOW 25 CENTS PER SHARE

Have you bought any SILVER BIRD? If not you had better buy it now. You must buy SILVER BIRD now if you want it at the bottom price. It was 15 cents per share last week. It is now 25 cents per share. It will be 50 cents per share shortly, and before long everybody will be buying it at from One Dollar to One Dollar and Fifty Cents per share. Take our advice and buy now.

SILVER BIRD has advanced to 25 cents per share. Didn't we tell you it would do so? We tell you now it will be selling at 50 cents per share within the next few weeks. Watch SILVER BIRD. It has started and will not stop till it gets above par. Buy it now at 25 cents per share before it advances again. It is sure to do so. Buy it and keep it and you will be able to get One Dollar per share for it within the present year—possibly within six months.

That is our advice. We are in a position to judge. This advance to 25 cents per share is a legitimate, meritorious advance, brought about by recent developments highly favorable to the SILVER BIRD MINE. We believe that SILVER BIRD is a better and safer purchase at 25 cents per share to-day than it has been in the past at 15 cents. If you have any SILVER BIRD shares hold on to them. Don't be induced to part from them. Buy more if you can. Hold them and reap the great profits that are coming to all holders of SILVER BIRD shares.

Remember what we tell you. Everybody will want SILVER BIRD before long, and will be glad to get it anywhere at from One Dollar to One Dollar and Fifty Cents per share. Buy SILVER BIRD. Hold SILVER BIRD. Watch SILVER BIRD.

Considering the inside location of the property, development done, results obtained, low capitalization and the large amount of shares in the treasury, this is unquestionably one of the best bargains (if not the greatest bargain) that have been offered in Cobalt mining shares.

SILVER BIRD is working two shifts and is in full operation both day and night, sinking upon three veins and in the same formations identically as in the O'Brien, Timmins and Right of Way mines and lying immediately between these mines and the Green-Meehan, Red Rock, Cobalt Contact and Nipissing Extension. The veins are broadening out and are increasing in values with depth, now 107 feet in shaft.

SILVER BIRD has no indebtedness; there are no incumbrances against the property or stock of the company. The capitalization of The Silver Bird Cobalt Mines, Limited, is but $1,500,000.00, par value of the shares $1.00 each, fully paid and non-assessable, and no personal liability, with 500,000 shares in the treasury.

LIBERALS HOLD SEAT.

Suffragists and Tariff Reformers Lose Bye-Election.

London, March 30.—R. D. Holt, Liberal, was elected Thursday to represent the Hexham division of Northumberland in Parliament by a majority of 1,157 over Col. Bates, the Unionist candidate.

The vacancy was caused by the elevation of Mr. Beaumont, Liberal, to the peerage, in succession to his father, the late Lord Allendale.

The campaign was fought with great vigor and was marked by wild scenes of disorder. Many meetings were broken up by the Unionists, who hoped to reverse the decision reached at the general election. The miners of the district, however, voted solidly for Mr. Holt, with the result that the Liberals retain the seat, though their majority was cut nearly in two

The woman suffragists were active in opposing the Liberal candidate, while the tariff reformers displayed great activity for the Unionist candidate, who announced that though a tariff reformer, he was opposed to any additional tax on food.

HUMOR

A SETBACK.

Why a Denver Society Man Did Not Call on the Girl.

The gasoline runabout stopped and refused to budge. In it was a good looking young woman. She pushed levers and turned wheels, but the machine remained still. A well dressed young man quite well known in Denver society came along. He knew very little about autos, but the girl's looks attracted him. "Here's a chance," he thought, "to work a little bluff and make the acquaintance of a peach."

Raising his hat, he asked if he might not try to help her out of her predicament. To be sure he might. So he went to work. He looked in the machine, and then he talked to the girl. Next he looked under it, and then he had a little talk with the girl. He managed to kill ten minutes pretending to look for the trouble and incidentally becoming acquainted with the girl. Finally he took hold of the crank and gave it a twist. The engine began to puff, and the machine was in readiness to start.

"Oh, thank you very much," said the girl.

"It was a pleasure to assist you, I assure you," he replied. Then he grew brave. "May I ask your name?" he said.

She smiled and told him. He gave her his card. "Come and see me some time soon," she said.

"I'd like very much to," was his reply. "Where do you live?"

She gave him her number. "I'll be up tomorrow evening if you don't mind," he said.

"All right," was her reply. She started the machine and then stopped it again. "Would you mind coming around to the back door when you call?" she asked.

He was surprised. "What—the back door?" he said, looking puzzled.

"Yes," she replied. "I'm the second maid up there."

He smiled a sickly smile and moved away hurriedly. No, he didn't keep the engagement.—Denver Post.

Right Now.

The master of a large southern plantation would fire off a small cannon every evening at 6 o'clock as a signal to the people living on his land. One evening at the time for the usual boom the master was away. Two of his colored men, John and Jim, had long desired to fire the cannon, but had never had a chance to do so. They decided to make the trial on this afternoon, but thought that it would be best for them to have the cannon make no sound. It was decided that Jim should hold a water bucket over the mouth of the cannon while John did the actual discharging. Soon there was a great boom, and John looked up, to find that his friend was gone.

When the master returned, John was very busy in the field.

"John," said he, "where is Jim?"

"He went down to the spring afteh a bucket o' watah, sah."

"When is he coming back?"

"Well, sah, ef he come back like he went, he's sure due heah now."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Another Bit of Expert Testimony.

"No," said the beautiful girl, "I cannot be yours."

"Why not?" he demanded, with a good deal of dignity.

"I don't think it would be wise for me to become the wife of a man who—please don't ask me to explain it. I do not wish to hurt your feelings."

Folding his arms across his breast and assuming his proudest look, he said:

"I must insist that you finish what you were going to say."

"Well, then, if you will have it, I am afraid you have an exaggerated ego. The next time you ask a girl to be your wife don't do it as if you thought you were conferring a favor upon her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Will Know if It Burns.

The painter Paul Baudry was finishing a scene for a grand opera performance in cold weather, and there were two stoves kept going on the stage. As he left the theater one night he said to the fireman:

"Keep an eye on those stoves. That painted canvas is inflammable."

"Don't you be uneasy," said the fireman. "I know paint. It smells worse than anything when it burns."—Nos Loisirs.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

STEAMSHIP ENGINES.

A Thousand Tons of Coal Daily Feed the 192 Furnaces.

One of the most impressive manifestations of the power of the modern steam engine is the sight of an up to date freight locomotive starting a train of forty or fifty cars and gathering way until the whole mass is thundering over the rails at a speed of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour. When we attempt by our unaided strength to move a heavy piece of furniture, we understand very well what is meant by mass and inertia. To move a single loaded freight car on the level by human power it is necessary to crowd around it as many men as can lay their hands or shoulders against it in a united propulsive effort. And hence when we see not one, but forty or fifty loaded cars, started from rest and swung into their full stride by a single locomotive the latter becomes symbolical in the popular mind of majestic power.

It is for this reason that to represent the horsepower which will be necessary to drive the new Cunard liners at twenty-four and one-fourth knots an hour we have taken the average sized freight locomotive as our unit of comparison. The least amount of power which the designers of the Lusitania and Mauretania found would be necessary to drive these ships at their contract speed was 68,000 horsepower. Now, the horsepower of the average freight locomotive is about 2,100, and consequently the total thrust on the four propellers of each of these ships will be equal to the total pull exerted by thirty-two modern American freight engines. One of these locomotives could haul on the level a train of fifty cars, whose total length would be just a third of a mile. Consequently the whole 68,000 power of the Cunarder expressed in terms of locomotive work would be sufficient to haul a train of 1,600 cars, whose total length would be over five miles.

To develop a minimum of 68,000 horsepower and a maximum that will possibly run up to 75,000 or 80,000 horsepower calls for a boiler and engine plant of truly titanic proportions. Steam will be supplied by twenty-five cylindrical boilers, of which twenty-three are double ended and two single ended, the former being seventeen feet three inches in diameter and twenty-one feet long. The coal will be burned in these boilers on 192 furnaces, the total area of whose grates would be represented by a square measuring sixty-four feet on each side, containing about 4,000 square feet of surface. Night and day an army of several hundred firemen will be continuously shovelling coal into these furnaces, where it will be burned at the rate of about 1,000 tons every twenty-four hours, and to insure that the coal is burned at a fierce white heat the air will be forced through the grates continuously by means of powerful electrically driven fans, the rush of air being also assisted by the four great smokestacks, through which the products of combustion will be discharged high up in the air at about 150 feet above the level of the grate bars.—Scientific American.

Queer Mental Disorder.

A singular mental disorder is reported of a patient confined at Bicetre, France. He professes to remember nothing except the month and year in which he was born. Lest he should forget the date of each new day he fills sheet after sheet of paper with memoranda. It is not a case of true amnesia or loss of memory; otherwise he should be unable to speak or write. It is a "fixed idea" of forgetfulness, a delusion, not an incapacity to remember. It has been argued by some that all the delusions of the insane are the result of the imagination filling the gaps which exist in an impaired memory. But this is the first case which has been described of une idee fixe d'oubli.

Spokane's Ambition.

Spokane has an honorable ambition to be a state capital. To achieve it Spokane would make a new state, to be called Lincoln. To the eastern counties of Washington it would add the northeastern counties of Oregon and the "panhandle" of Idaho. Such would be the new state. To round things out nicely it would recompense Idaho with the southeastern counties of Oregon. What is left of Washington and Oregon it would turn into a single state. Up to the present Spokane only has consented to this remaking of the map.—New York Tribune.

Submarine Auxiliary.

When a submarine boat becomes disabled beneath the surface of the water and cannot rise, its crew is in a bad predicament. To remedy the difficulty an inventor has contrived an auxiliary boat to be carried in the submarine and to be a part of it, practically, until needed. In time of accident the crew of the incapacitated submarine would enter the little craft, and when the containing chamber had been flooded the bolts would be withdrawn and the vessel with its human freight would clear itself and rise to the surface.

SELECTIONS

HIDDEN WEALTH.

How Fortunes Lie In the Sweepings of Sheffield Factories.

The average person would hardly expect to find a fortune in mere dust, and yet large fortunes have been made out of the filings swept up from the workrooms of the Sheffield factories where all kinds of silver goods are made.

Many thousands of pounds have been made during the past few years out of this dust, which at one time was thought nothing of, but was thrown out on to the rubbish heap in the usual way.

It is hard to say how many men are indebted to this dust for the good fortune they enjoy at the present time owing to the general disregard of the sweepings, as they are termed, in the past, but there is no doubt that several very rich families in Sheffield have been made, financially speaking, out of the sweepings of factory floors.

There is one family in particular who keep their carriage and pair and staff of servants on the income derived from the large volume of capital made out of dust. The founder of the family fortunes used to go round with a sack and beg the dust, which he gave to his fowls, according to his own showing. In reality, however, he extracted the silver from it and sold it back to the manufacturers in clean ingots at the market price.

This he did for years and was enabled by means of working secretly and industriously to pile up a huge fortune which the present generation enjoys. Ultimately, however, it occurred to one manufacturer that where men were constantly chipping and chasing there must of necessity be a great waste of silver upon the floor.

For a long time he said nothing, but gave orders for the sweepings of the workrooms to be shot in a particular place. He then started a small smelting plant and purchased other dust, from which he extracted the silver, but his anxiety respecting the dust soon aroused the suspicions of other people, and today an average firm of silver manufacturers nets something like £500 a year from their sweepings, which not so long ago they threw away as of no consequence.

The floors of the workshops are now swept regularly and with care. The dust is put into sacks and sold to the smelters, who put it through the smelting process and extract the silver that has been wasted. The aggregate income from the sweepings of Sheffield workshop floors amounts to many thousands a year.—London Tit-Bits.

Systematic Yawning.

Systematic yawning seems to have proved highly successful in Austria as a method of vocal and health culture. Dr. Naegil advises deep yawning, with arms outstretched, thus insuring complete change of air in the lungs, and at each treatment he has his patients make six to eight yawns, each being followed by swallowing. He regards the exercise, with deep breathing, as the best means of strengthening the respiratory organs and muscles, while it gives astonishing relief in catarrh of the throat. For singers a like practice causes the tonsils and uvula to retract and harden, and the clear passage gives the voice greater volume and improved quality.

Trap For the Burglar.

A phonographic device that will call the police by telephone adds a new hazard to the dangers of the burglar's profession. When an attempt is made to force a window or door with which proper connections have been made, an electric current operates a phonograph in the garret. The machine calls up central and asks for the police station. The phonograph then informs the officers of the robbery, giving street and number, and repeats this information as long as the receiver is down. Meantime the intruder, unconscious that an alarm has been rung in, virtually walks into a trap and if the call is promptly responded to is soon in the lockup.

Italy's Dreadnought.

England and France having led the way in the laying down of naval leviathans of the Dreadnought type Italy is now to follow suit. The decision to build such a ship has already been taken, and as soon as the San Giorgio, now being built at Castellamare, is launched the new battleship will be placed in the same slips. She however, scarcely have the displacement of the Dreadnought, being of 10,000 tons, but her main armament will be eight 12.8-inch guns. She will

The Shade Trees.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—The writer noticed in your report of the last Council meeting that the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company had asked permission to trim the shade trees where they interfered with their wires. It is to be hoped that this will be allowed only under the strictest supervision. A year ago last summer while we were away from home, and our house closed up, the Trenton Electric Company took the liberty of mutilating the shade trees in front of our property on Pine street in the most disgraceful manner. They cut from ten to fifteen feet off the top of the centre stalk of several maples which we had planted and nurtured in the most careful manner for several years, and by so doing stunted the upward growth and forever spoiled the graceful appearance and beauty of the trees. We would not have consented to what they did, had they offered us several hundred dollars, and we think it a shame that any Company or individual should be allowed to destroy the beauty of our city trees to suit their convenience.

As there have been many sufferers from this same cause, we hope the authorities will see to it that the beauty of the city, as well as the individual rights of the taxpayers, are protected.

Yours truly,
C. M. REID.

THE SHOE DERELICTS.

Why They Never Have Old Shoes or Bargain Sales in a Slater Store.

"What do you do with shoes that become shopworn or out of style?" asked a customer at a Slater Shoe store. "You never have any bargain sales in your stores. Now I know something about the shoe trade, and I can't see how you overcome the difficulty of stock accumulating."

Mr. Haines overheard the query, and he answered it. "In the first place we have a standard price-stamped line to look after. We don't buy shoes from every plausible salesman and thus accumulate a stock of conglomerates. The Slater Shoe stock is carefully kept and carefully gone over every week and every month. Shoes that stay on the shelves over a year are taken away, the brand removed from them, and they go to the dealer who makes a specialty of selling shoes by lottery. He likes to get the Slater Shoe without the brand, for it is the occasional prize in the lottery. But by expert stock-keeping we seldom have to send a shoe out of the store as a derelict."

Apple Growers Held Interesting Session.

FINE ADDRESSES BY EXPERTS—HOW CO-OPERATION BENEFITS THE FRUIT MEN—MEETING WAS WELL ATTENDED.

A largely attended meeting of apple growers was held in the City Council chamber yesterday, and a great deal of interest was evinced in the different subjects discussed by the various speakers.

Mr. Alex. McNeil, Chief of the Fruit Division, whose headquarters are at Ottawa, was voted to the chair, and after a few introductory remarks as to the benefits to be derived by the fruit men in forming themselves into co-operative associations for the handling and disposal of their apples and getting a good reputation for their brand, called upon Mr. A. E. Sherrington, who is the father of the co-operative movement, to address the meeting.

Mr. Sherrington then took up the subject of co-operation, and in a very forcible and effective speech clearly proved to the meeting that the handling of the apples by co-operative associations in all parts of the country where apples are extensively grown is the correct and best way for all concerned. He said that it would only be a matter of a short time before buyers would come here from European countries and contract for the packs of the different associations in advance of the crop being harvested, thus saving the profits of several middlemen that at present share in the proceeds of the apples. He stated that he knew now of one association that had already sold its prospective crop of winter apples that is to be gathered this year at $2.25 per barrel, tree run; this association having sold their winter apples at that price to the same buyer last fall. Mr. Sherrington dwelt upon the importance of the different associations putting their apples up honestly and selling all their apples under their own brand and, in this way they would get a reputation for their apples, and that, instead of having to look for buyers, that the buyers would come to them. He said that the association he was connected with had sold a very much larger quantity of apples the past season to buyers who sought their apples than the growers connected with their association had, and that they had to buy apples from outside growers to fill their orders. Mr. Sherrington went into details of how his association carried on its co-operative work and how satisfactory the results were to its members, and said that none of them now, after four years' experience under the co-operative system, would go back to the old system of selling their apples in the orchards. He said that none of the growers in the district should hesitate to join in the co-operative movement, because the greater the quantity of fruit handled the greater would be the profits to the individual growers, and the better chance there would be of making satisfactory sales, as extensive buyers would be keen to purchase from associations, with a record for good apples, well packed, which had a large quantity to offer. Mr. Sherrington explained that co-operation in the selling of fruit was very similar in system, and along the same lines as co-operation in the cheese factory business, which has been attended with such good results to our farmer friends.

The chairman then called upon Mr. F. Wallbridge, the president of the Belleville Apple Growers' Co-operative Association, to state to the meeting the results that that association had got from its apples this year. Mr. Wallbridge read to the meeting a statement of the net prices that were paid to the members for their apples shipped last fall, which, for some of the principal varieties was as follows: Phoenix, No. 1, $1.90; No. 2, $1.52; Snow, No. 1, $2.19; No. 2, $1.41. Golden Russet, No. 1, $2.53; No. 2, $1.44. Red Seeks, No. 1, $2.07. Baldwin, No. 1, $1.99. Wagner, No. 1, $2.20. Rhode Island Greening, No. 1, $2.80. Bottle Greening, No. 1, $2.28. Spy, No. 1, $2.00. For their winter apples Mr. Wallbridge stated that one year that they shipped netted them $2.70 per barrel for first, second and thirds, another car netted them for everything, $2.25 per barrel, and the last car that they had got returns from had netted them over $3 a barrel for their car of 190 barrels. He stated that on the fall shipments the costs of the barrel would have to be paid by the members out of their returns and the costs of the barrel and about 25 cents per barrel for expenses would have to be paid by them out of their returns for their winter shipments, the members would thus receive as a net return on their winter shipments over and above expenses of every kind including the picking of the apples, upwards of $2 a barrel. Mr. Wallbridge said that the very highly satisfactory results that they had got was largely due to the energy, ability and care exercised by their manager, Mr. Frank White, and the excellent packing work that was done by Mr. White and his assistants, Mr. Stephen Eustace and Mr. Geo. Sills. Mr. Wallbridge asked the apple growers in this section of the country convenient to Belleville to join their association and make it still a greater success.

Mr. Walter Dempsey, director of the Fruit Experimental station in the township of Murray, was next called upon, and congratulated the Belleville association on its good showing, and as manager of the Trenton Co-Operative Association gave the results of the season's business of that association, which was also highly creditable.

The chairman, Mr. McNeil, who has done so much to encourage the co-operative movement, congratulated the Belleville and Trenton associations for the excellent results attained, especially in view of this being the first year in business of each association under the co-operative system. Mr. McNeil then proceeded to deal with the subjects of pruning, tillage and other orchard work, and gave a lot of valuable and timely information.

Mr. M. R. Baker, B.S.A., of the Fruit Division, Ottawa, was the last speaker, and gave a very instructive and interesting address on orchard pests and the proper way to rid the orchards of them.

Mr. Thos. Ritchie was an interested listener at the meeting, and spoke a few words of encouragement to the local association, saying that co-operation was the true principle for the growers to adopt in handling and disposing of their apples. His firm did its buying, along with other leading Canadian houses, on that principle, and the results that they obtained showed the wisdom of their policy.

The meeting was brought to a close after a hearty vote of thanks was given to the different speakers.

The Alien Labor Case.

JUDGE FRALECK SUSTAINS THE APPEALS IN ALL BUT ONE CASE, THAT OF OLIVER HIETT.

Judge Fraleck this morning handed down his judgment in the appeal of the Corby Distillery Company, Limited, against the eleven convictions registered against it for violation of the Alien Labor Act. The judgment is quite lengthy, and cannot be published in full to-day, but will be later on. Briefly, the judgment dismisses the appeal in the case of Oliver Hiett, the millwright from Peoria, Ill., and upholds the appeals in the other ten cases, namely: Isidore Cohen, distiller; W. Mathews, bottler; and the eight coppersmiths, whose names are Harry Hortell, Alexander Nieuman, Herman Frotescher, August Kuhurt, Jacob Dixions, William Wonderlich, Edward Bretzel and Alfresco Brady. In the cases of Cohen and Mathews the appeals are allowed with costs; in the cases of the coppersmiths each side pays its own costs.

St. Thomas' Church.

The "Three Hours" service at St. Thomas' Church yesterday (Good Friday), was exceptionally well attended, there being a large congregation throughout the entire service, but more especially towards the close. The service was most impressive, and the congregational singing of the Passion hymns was a notable feature. The eight addresses by the rector were of a character suited to the thoughts of the day, and were founded upon the "Seven Sayings" from the Cross. They were listened to with marked attention and earnest devotion.

EASTER DAY SERVICES.

Celebrations of the Holy Communion at seven, eight and eleven o'clock. The latter service will be fully choral, with Easter anthems and hymns and sermons.

Children's Festival service at half-past three, with object lesson, "The Sepulchre," by the superintendent Mr. S. R. Gorman.

Choral Evensong, with hymns and anthems, and sermon by the rector, at seven o'clock.

Police Constables Demand More Money

PRESENTED AN ULTIMATUM TO THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS YESTERDAY — LATTER BODY HELD A MEETING, BUT MATTER HAS NOT YET BEEN SETTLED.

Something in the nature of a bombshell dropped into the camp of the Police Commissioners of this city yesterday, when the three constables, Messrs. Hawkins, Snider and Naphin, presented a peremptory demand for a substantial increase of pay, with the ultimatum that, unless the demand was complied with, they would vacate their positions on April 1st.

It seems that, yesterday, a letter was laid on the desk of the Chief of Police, presumably by one of the constables concerned. The letter simply requested the Chief to at once notify the Police Commissioners that the three privates on the police force, Messrs. Hawkins, Naphin and Snider, were dissatisfied with the stipend they were getting, namely, $450 per years. They demanded an immediate increase of $150 per annum, and were prepared, in case their request was not granted, to quit their jobs on the 1st of April.

The Chief lost no time in submitting the matter to the Board of Police Commissioners, and a meeting of the latter body was held yesterday afternoon, between 5 and 6 o'clock.

Those present were County Judge Deroche, Police Magistrate Masson and His Worship the Mayor.

The three constables appeared before the Board, but had nothing further to say than was expressed in their letter. They did not consider the salary, $450 per year, was adequate for the duties they performed.

The Police Commissioners pointed out to the men that they had, when they joined the force on the 1st of July, 1906, engaged for a year at their present salary. When the year had expired, the Commissioners said, they would take the matter of salaries into their consideration.

The conference ended without any agreement being arrived at, and so the matter stands.

Clever Belleville Ladies

The Toronto Sunday World recently gave an appreciative notice of two Belleville young ladies, Miss Ila Margaret Landers and Miss Helen Landers, who appeared at a recital given in the Margaret Eaton School of Literature and Expression, Toronto. Miss Ila M. Landers charmed the audience with elocutionary selections from "Hamlet" and the works of Charles Kingsley, Whittier and Ingelow. Miss Helen Landers gave vocal selections, her Sudden Death Of a Popular Hotel-man.

MR. JAMES HOLMES, OF THE CITY HOTEL, PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Many were the expressions of regret yesterday afternoon when it became known that Mr. James Holmes, proprietor of the City Hotel, had passed away. But few knew that the deceased was ill, owing to the fact that his illness was of short duration. It appears that on Wednesday Mr. Holmes had a rather severe hemorrhage from the nose, but that was not considered serious. The day following he was, however, worse, his heart appearing to trouble him. Yesterday morning he appeared to be doing well and nothing serious was then anticipated. Shortly after the noon hour the condition of the deceased suddenly changed, and although medical aid was quickly summoned, death ensued in a few minutes. Heart failure was the ultimate cause of death.

Mr. Holmes was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Holmes, of this city, and was born here 23 years ago. All his life had been spent here and no young man was better known or had more friends than "Jimmy," as he was familiarly called. Two years ago the deceased became the proprietor and manager of the City Hotel, which hostelry was well conducted under his supervision. Deceased was unmarried. He was a member of Eureka Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and an attendant of St. Andrew's Church. Mr. Holmes always took a deep interest in sports of various kinds, and was always ready to assist in carrying them out.

In addition to the parents, two brothers survive. They are Harry, of Chicago, and George, of Toronto. Mr. J. V. Jenkins is an uncle of the deceased. The sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends will be extended to those who have been called upon to mourn.

The McMaster Band.

Last evening's service of the McMaster Band in the Baptist Church was very largely attended, and those who were present left in a very exalted frame of mind. Mr. Cameron, the regular leader, was in Hamilton, attending a Young People's convention, and last night's meeting was led by Mr. Ray, who did remarkably well. Messrs. Warner and Edwards gave addresses, timely and interesting, and Mr. Williamson sang two solos, "The Man of Galilee" and "We Who Believe." The management of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church are much gratified at the results, so far, of the Band's work. To-morrow there will be three services in the church, all under the auspices of the McMaster Band.

Good-Friday.

Good Friday was very quietly observed in this city. Most of the merchants closed their places of business, and the churches in the morning were fairly well attended.

PUBLIC MEETING

A public meeting in the interests of The Sterling Telephone Co., Limited will be held in the City Hall, Belleville, Tuesday evening, April 2nd, at 8 o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Alpheus Hoover, of Toronto, president of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association, and other speakers. Mr. R. J. Graham will occupy the chair. A cordial invitation is extended to the citizens of Belleville and surrounding country to be present.

The "Jolts" and "Jars" of Life are what use people up.

Most people live pretty well up to the limit of their powers, and so long as everything goes smoothly that is apparently all right; but a "jolt" or a "jar" in the shape of business worries, domestic anxieties, or an attack of La Grippe, Pneumonia, Typhoid, or other wasting disease, suddenly reveals the fact that there is a sad lack of reserve force to meet these contingencies and the result is serious, often fatal. A wise man will see to it that his system is fully fortified against sudden attack. To attain this result nothing is so sure and effective as Murderess Also Expelled From Switzerland For Twenty Years.

Thun, Switzerland, March 30.—Mlle. Tatiana Leontieff, the Russian woman who murdered a Frenchman named Muller at Interlaken in September, mistaking him for M. Durnovo, former Minister of the Interior of Russia was sentenced yesterday to four years' solitary confinement and to 20 years' expulsion from the country.

The prisoner complained she had been subjected to brutality by the examining magistrate and the prison wardens, who were unable to deny the charge.

Trying to Get a Reprieve.

London, March 30.—The movement to obtain a reprieve for Horace George Rayner, the young man who was recently sentenced to death for the murder of William Whiteley, which is being conducted here under the leadership of two or three newspapers, is growing.

Names to the petitions to be handed to the Home Secretary are beginning to come in from the colonies and the continent.

A number of women of more or less social prominence are devoting their days to the clerical work necessary to prepare the petitions.

Many of the agitators believe Rayner was insane, while others hold that he was Whiteley's son. Several prominent writers and actors have lent their names to the movement.

Million Pounds For Nothing.

London, March 30.—(C. A. P.)—An article in The Minor by a Radical member, says: "Lord Elgin must go; he has blundered from the moment he went to Downing street. His last blunder caused quite a Liberal revolt in the House of Commons "The last was the subsidy to the C. P. R. It has been paid on the express understanding that a fast mail service will be established between Great Britain and the far east across the Dominion. No such service exists, and nearly a million has been paid for nothing.

"It is an open secret that the treasury stoutly opposed the subsidy.

London, March 30.—(C. A. P.)—The Mail's correspondent at Rome says joyful news was received at the Vatican that the Archbishop of Quebec proposes to institute permanent collections in Dominion churches to help the Pope of the Holy See.

Cardinal Macchi Dead.

Rome, March 30.—Cardinal Luigi Macchi, secretary of apostolic briefs, died yesterday after a sickness of only twelve hours. He said mass Thursday and complained of illness in the afternoon and died as the result of an apoplectic stroke.

Fear Railway Strike.

Winnipeg, March 30.—There is more or less uneasiness here over fear that the Chicago strike may extend to Western Canada.

"I do not think the men of the western roads will go out," said Wm. Whyte, second vice-president of the C. P. R. "Such a step would be just as detrimental to the men as to the railways."

The officials of the local unions in affiliation with the Brotherhood of Trainmen and Order of Conductors also look for an amicable settlement. While admitting they are not seriously affected by the points at issue, inasmuch as these have practically been granted on both the C. P. R. and the C. N. R., they propose going out if a general strike is ordered.

In that event about three-fifths of the membership of 90,000 would be affected. The tie-up would be only on roads operating west of Fort William and Chicago. About 5,000 employes of the C. N. R., and 11,000 of the C. P. R. would be among members to cease work.

HUNDREDS ARE SLAIN

Roumanian Troops Use Artillery to Put Down Riots.

Drastic Steps Taken to Quell Peasant Rising—Shrapnel Mows Down the Rebels—Cannon Brought Into Play—Shops Closed For Protection—Trains Are Looted—Officers Killed and Wounded—Terrible Atrocities.

Bucharest, Roumania, March 30.—The efforts of the Government to suppress the revolt of the peasants have met with only partial success. The troops are acting with increased energy.

Hundreds of rioters have been killed in the numerous conflicts with the soldiers, but as yet there is no sign of permanent amelioration of the situation. On the contrary, the rioters appear to be becoming more bold and determined and yesterday the situation undoubtedly was aggravated.

As an indication of the nervous apprehension existing even in the capital, the new prefect of Bucharest, as a measure of precaution, ordered all shops in the city closed. This order created the impression that the rioters were approaching Bucharest and there was panic until it was learned that these fears were groundless.

At Tirgovistea, in the Argesh district, a band of peasants attempted Thursday to raid an arsenal and procure a supply of rifles and ammunition. Upon being repulsed by the troops, the rioters set fire to many houses in the town.

Brought to Bay by Troops.

The roving bands of peasants in the district of Teleerman were surrounded and brought to bay Thursday by detachments of troops.

At Vlaschka, a band of peasants were summoned to disperse, refused to do so and opened fire on the troops, whereupon the latter fired three shots at them from a field gun, killing seventy men and wounding many more. According to an unconfirmed version of the encounter, 200 of the peasants were killed.

A squadron of Hussars went to Brabova, came in conflict with a band of peasants, and it is reported that fifty of the latter were killed.

A train running between Bucharest and Komona was stopped by rioters and thoroughly looted.

There is a slight improvement in the situation at Jassy. The streets of the city are empty, and the shops still shut. The peasants there apparently were overawed by the concentration of troops.

Many Slain In Village.

A serious encounter is reported to have taken place at the Village of Papanhabestie, in which many peasants were killed or wounded.

The bombardment of the three villages in the Vlaschka district, in which rioters had taken refuge, undoubtedly resulted in a very large casualty list, but the exact numbers cannot be learned. It is known, however, that several hundred peasants were arrested there.

There have been sanguinary encounters in the district of Delj, but details are lacking. The peasants there are riotous, and rumor places the number killed and wounded in encounters with the troops at several hundred.

The authorities are beginning to use artillery to bombard the village where the rioters take refuge.

The peasants committed terrible atrocities in the Burzeo district, and the troops sent thither had orders to suppress the disturbances at any cost.

Eleven Officers Killed.

It is impossible to give even an approximate estimate of the number killed or wounded since the beginning of the disorders, but there is apparently good reason to believe that the reports have not been exaggerated, and that when the totals finally are learned they will be greater than is now supposed. Not less than eleven army officers have been killed or wounded.

It is reported that in Northern Moldavia, where the rioting was temporarily suspended, the peasants intend to recommence their pillaging during the Jewish passover, if the promises made to them by the Government are not fulfilled.

The authorities are doing all they possibly can do to restore order, and some of the measures adopted are severe. Premier Sturdza yesterday had both Houses of Parliament adopt a bill authorizing the Government, in view of the grave circumstances throughout the country, to declare a state of siege wherever necessary.

Order Restored In Moldavia.

Bucharest, March 30.—An official report just issued says order has now been restored in Moldavia, that prefects are traveling through the troubled districts quieting the agitated peasants, and that disputes between peasants and landowners are being settled amicably.

To Suppress Lotteries.

London, March 30.—(C. A. P.)—The Victorian state Parliament has passed the Gaming Suppression Act. All lotteries, whether for charities or for public or private gain, are illegal. Advertisers, sellers, printers and transmitters of tickets are made subject to the direct penalties.

As to what constitutes "a place," it is defined thus: "Any place whatsoever, whether within building or not; whether upon land or water; whether defined as to area or not, and whether private property or otherwise; any nomally private premises may under given circumstances become in the eyes of the law a common gaming house.

Betting is expressly allowed upon any licensed racecourse during race meetings.

Hunts Disabled Ship.

St. John's, Nfd., March 30.—The steamer Portia, chartered by the Government to make a search for the disabled sealing steamer Greenland, sailed from this port yesterday.

The Greenland, with 183 men on board, has been reported adrift in the North Atlantic, with her shaft disabled.

Pimples Off In 5 Days.

THE NEW CALCIUM SULPHIDE TREATMENT DOES WONDERS TO EVERY KIND OF SKIN ERUPTION

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient, the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it to-day, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggists.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 95 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WAS IT MURDER?

Englishman Found on Track With Four Ghastly Wounds.

Toronto, March 30.—With his neck on one of the rails, with four wounds in his head, and with his clothing partly torn off, Edward Elliott, an English laborer, was found dying at midnight on Thursday on the G. T. R. main line between Port Credit and Lorne Park. A few minutes after being picked up in an unconscious condition he passed away, and from the attending circumstances there are grave suspicions of foul play. The tragedy was discovered by the crew of a freight train coming into Port Credit, the engine being stopped in time to prevent running over the head and neck. While being hurried to Port Credit he died without being able to tell any of the events that led to his death.

A horrible gash in the back of the head, which bled profusely, was in itself sufficient to cause death, while a small hole in the chin had all the appearance of being the result of a revolver shot. This wound was partly probed by the coroner, but no bullet was found.

The post-mortem examination will be held at Port Credit this morning, and it is expected that this will show whether or not murder was done.

TOOK LIFE WHILE INSANE.

James Clemett Found Dead Wth Gas Turned On.

Toronto, March 30.—James Clemett was found dead by the police with the gas turned on in his home at 166 Claremont street Thursday morning. The authorities believe death was due to suicide. Every door and window in the house had been firmly fastened and the gas jet above the bed in which the man lay was turned full on. A note on a sheet of notepaper read: "Dear Myrtle, I wish you were here." and an envelope addressed "Give this to my son James." The dead man was a widower and had three small children placed in children's homes. He had some property and a bank account, and the fraternal societies of which he is a member will conduct the funeral. The neighbors say the man was at times very eccentric, and his death may have been brought about by himself during a fit of temporary insanity.

BETTER IN CANADA.

John Burns Strongly Opposed to National Relief Works.

London, March 30.—(C. A. P.)—In the House of Commons Hon. John Burns, speaking on the subject of the unemployed, said there were certain districts where the only remedy was emigration. Men sent to farm colonies generally returned to their own district, but if sent to a place like Canada they are removed morally, physically and industrially from their environment and started on a new life. Rather than adopt a national scheme of relief works, costing a million a year, as suggested by some Labor members, he would resign his portfolio.

A PURCHASE OF POISON.

Important New Testimony Is Expected In Perkins Murder Case.

Cayuga, Ont., March 30.—It is learned on good authority that at the coming trial of Mrs. Perkins, who is charged with administering poison to her husband which caused his death on Christmas Day, new and important testimony with regard to a purchase of poison will be presented by the Crown. It is understood that a Buffalo druggist will testify.

Crown Attorney Murphy, when questioned regarding the source of the poison, declined to make any statement.

MEN SWEPT OVERBOARD

C. P. R. Liner Lake Manitoba Arrives at St. John in Safety.

Was Nearly Five Days Overdue—Vessel Had Terrible Voyage—Swept by Huge Seas—Passed at Close Range 15 Icebergs—Passengers Had Hard Time—Brings Over Thirteen Hundred English Emigrants.

St. John, N. B., March 30.—After a terrible experience in one of the worst storms of the winter, the C. P. R. liner Manitoba reached port Thursday forenoon from Liverpool nearly five days overdue. The Manitoba sailed from Liverpool on March 13, having on board 1,343 passengers, which included 59 saloon, 138 second cabin and 1,146 steerage. On the fourth day out from Liverpool the storm, the worst ever experienced by Capt. Evans, was encountered. A fierce gale lashed the seas in fury, the passengers were deathly sick, and all on board put in a most miserable week. Seas continually broke over the steamer, and at times she was practically helpless. The Manitoba ran into a veritable field of icebergs and passed at close range no less than fifteen of them, the steamer during the storm having several narrow escapes. The weather cleared on Saturday last, and although Sunday was rather rough, no further hardships were experienced on the run to St. John.

On March 15, the third day out, one of the crew was lost overboard, falling from the bridge deck while engaged in cleaning. He was Richard Davies, a native of England. A repetition occurred on Wednesday night about 11.30 o'clock, while the Manitoba was off Briar Island. One of the sailors, named Crabtree, an Englishman, missed his footing and was never seen afterwards. A boat was quickly manned and beat about the vicinity for two hours, but without results. Of the total passenger list only 75 are for the United States.

With hardly an exception the passengers are English people of the right class, and look as if they would make valuable citizens.

On arrival here they presented a pitiable appearance, all showing effects of violent attacks of seasickness.

TRIED TO FOLLOW BABY.

Demented Mother Tries to Squeeze Through Port Hole Into Sea.

New York, March 30.—A demented mother threw her 14-months old baby infant into the sea and then attempted to follow, according to the officers of the steamer Konig Albert, which arrived here yesterday from Genoa.

Mrs. Florena Aquila embarked with her husband and five of her eleven children, at Naples. One son already was in America.

Early in the voyage Mrs. Aquila and the infant daughter contracted measles and were sent to the ship's hospital.

The mother's mind became affected, and Wednesday last she thrust the infant through a port hole and attempted to follow.

A seaman saw the body of the child fall from the porthole, and, while the ship was being stopped, attendants found Mrs. Aquila trying to force her body through the port hole. She was rescued.

No trace of the infant's body was found.

LOCOMOTIVE BLEW UP.

Engineer Missing—Believed He Was Blown to Pieces.

Youngstown, Ohio, March 30.—A locomotive attached to an ore train on the Pittsburg, Youngstown and Ashtabula road, a branch of the Lake Shore, exploded at Lockwood, 30 miles south-east of here, yesterday. The engineer, H. H. Watson, of Maroningtown, Pa., cannot be found, and it is supposed that he was blown to pieces. The fireman and brakeman and a tramp were badly hurt.

When the engine boiler blew up, the locomotive and twelve cars of ore went down an embankment. The engine was demolished.

Trampled By Team.

Brockville, Ont., March 30.—A possibly fatal accident is reported from Potland, the victim being Joseph Ready, of Perth, who had gone to that place on a visit to relatives. Ready is an invalid from rheumatism; and, after being helped out of a wagon, stood holding the horses while the driver went inside with his grip. The horses, one of which was a colt, became unmanageable, and getting him under their feet trampled him before the driver succeeded in rescuing him. One leg was broken and his head and face a mass of cuts and bruises. His recovery is doubtful.

Fell With Legs On Rail.

London, Ont., March 30.—John McAndrew, a Detroit traveler, had a narrow escape from death Thursday afternoon. In attempting to board a moving passenger train he slipped and fell, with his legs across the rail. The force of his fall raised his feet from the rail, and the trucks, striking them, threw him to safety.

Hit Wife On Head.

London, March 30.—Thomas Garrett is under arrest, and his wife in the hospital suffering from concussion of the brain, the result of a fight, in which her husband is said to have hit her on the head with a chair.

Fifty-Four Killed by Explosion.

Johannesburg, March 30.—Four white men and fifty natives were instantly killed and three whites and sixteen natives were injured by the explosion Thursday night of two cases of dynamite at the Driefontein mine.

Tornado Sweeps Over Texas.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 30.—A tornado passed over Cooke County, Texas, Thursday night, doing much damage at Midway, Muenster and Myra. One person was killed and several injured.

THE MEDICINAL VALUE OF FRESH FRUIT JUICES

One of the Greatest Wonders of the Age.

Hundreds Have Been Made Well by Taking Advantage of an Ottawa Physician's Discovery.

Everyone knows how beneficial fruit is, when eaten regularly. Fruit is nature's laxative—the finest kidney regulator—and the ideal skin tonic. Unfortunately, the medicinal principle of fruit occurs only in minute quantities. In order to consume enough fruit to relieve Biliousness, one would also consume a large amount of woody fibre or pulp, which would upset the stomach and impair digestion.

An Ottawa physician discovered a way to get around these difficulties. He pressed the juice from apples, oranges, figs and prunes—and then forced one more atom of the bitter principle from the discarded orange peels, into the concentrated juices. This formed a new compound, having all the curative effects of fresh fruit—and in a highly intensified degree. Then valuable tonics and internal antiseptics were added and the whole pressed into tablets.

These are "Fruit-a-tives" the wonderful Liver Tablets you hear so much about. "Fruit-a-tives" cure the most obstinate cases of non-action of the bowels, biliousness, headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia. They are the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world, while their action on the skin, in clearing and beautifying the complexion, is nothing short of marvelous. Ask your druggist for "Fruit-a-tives" and see that you get them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. By mail, postpaid, from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa. 112
